Breach after Death of Partner—Before other Change.]—Action by A., surviving obligee of a bond, against a surety. The condition of the bond recited that A., B. and P. had entered into co-partnership, and that it had been agreed that P. should be the acting partner, and that he and his surety should become bound to A. and B., and it was conditioned for the performance by P. of the covenants on his part to be observed in a deed of co-partnership of the 1st of January, 1830, and made between A., B. and P., and also for the delivery to A. and B. by P., during such time as he should continue the acting partner in the trade of the co-partnership, of a true account of all moneys which should come to his hands. A plea averred performance by P. in the words of the condition, to A. and B. during the life of B., and to A. since the decease of B. The partnership deed provided that the parties would, from the day of date of the deed, and up to the 1st July, 1841, be partners; that P. should be sole acting partner, and that he should, during the term of the co-partnership, discharge the duties of acting partner; that once every year the parties thereto would meet and settle accounts relative to the co-partnership; that if any of them, the parties thereto, their executors and administrators, should wish to withdraw from the co-partnership at the end of the seventh year of the co-partnership, he might do so on giving notice, and that the deed of co-partnership should determine as to the party giving such notice. The deed provided that any of the partners of the joint trade or business should be at liberty to transfer in his lifetime his share therein or any part to any one or more of his sons, and to dispose of his share by will to any person or persons whatsoever, and that the son or sons, or other person or persons to whom any such transfer or disposition should be made, or in case of the death of a partner without such transfer or disposition, that the executors or administrators of such partner so dying, should be deemed a partner or partners in the joint concern during the residue thereof. The replication assigned as a breach of the condition that P., after the decease of B., one of the partners, delivered false accounts. At the trial a breach was proved to have been committed as assigned after the death of B., but before any other change in the firm had taken place:—Held, that as the condition in the bond for P.'s accounting to A. and B. applied merely to the co-partnership by the three parties to the deed, the obligation of the surety had determined on the death of B. Chapman v. Beckington, 3 G. & D. 33; 3 Q. B. 703; 12 L. J., Q. B. 61; 7 Jur. 62.

—— Separate Securities of Deceased Partner.]—A partnership composed of three persons, A., B. and C., gave a joint and several bond to a bank, to cover advances to be made to them by the bank on a cash credit; and in that bond two estates held by A. were especially named as part securities for these advances. A. died:—Held, that, by his death, the partnership was dissolved, and the security, so far as his estates were concerned, was no further continued; no arrangement between the surviving partners, or between them and the bank, for the purpose of settling the general accounts, being capable of affecting the security. Bank of Scotland v. Christie, 8 Cl. & F. 214.

After the death of A., the bank continued as before its dealings with the partnership, constituted by B. and C.; and at a certain period payments made to the bank balanced the debt due to it at the time of A.'s death:—Held, that the separate liability of A.'s estates was thereby discharged. Ib.

Action, by whom.]—An action may be maintained upon a bond expressed to be payable to a mercantile firm, by the persons who actually constituted the firm when the bond was executed. Moller v. Lambert, 2 Camp. 548; 11 R. R. 795.

Construction.]—A company guaranteed a firm consisting of two partners in trade, against loss in respect of their gross annual returns. The guarantee was subject to the following conditions: "If a member of this company shall die, or if any member guaranteed with respect to his gross or particular trade debts shall cease to be such trader, his guarantee or contract shall become void upon such death, or (if such trader) on his retiring from such trade":—Held, that under this condition the guarantee became void upon the retirement of one of the two partners from the trade. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Freeman, 7 H. & N. 17; 31 L. J., Ex. 197.

A guarantee was addressed in the alternative "to Messrs. A. & Co., or the person or persons for the time being carrying on the business" of that firm:—Held, no variance, no change in the firm having in fact taken place. Boyd v. Moyle, 2 C. B. 644.

A declaration by A. against B. upon a guarantee stated, that in consideration of advances already made by A., and that A. would from time to time make advances to C., B. promised to repay A. the last-mentioned advances. The consideration on the face of the guarantee was "in consideration of advances made and to be made by A., or by any other persons of whom A.'s firm might from time to time consist":—Held, a variance. Chapman v. Sutton, 2 C. B. 634; 3 D. & L. 646; 15 L. J., C. P. 166.

A guarantee given in these terms, "In consideration of advances made and to be made by A. and B., or by any other persons of whom their firm may from time to time consist, in the way of loan, we jointly and severally hereby guarantee to A. and B. the repayment of the advances, and to indemnify them against any loss by reason of such advances, our liability not to exceed 1,000*l.*; this guarantee to be a continuing guarantee, and to be a security to A. and B. to the extent of 1,000*l.*, for the whole of any balance which may from time to time or at any time become due to A. and B., or to the persons for the time being constituting the firm," discloses a sufficient consideration for the promise, though there has been no change in the firm. Ib.

A guarantee for the future debt of a firm is not to be construed as a continuing one, so as to bind a party to it in the event of an alteration in the firm, unless the intention of the parties shall so appear either by express stipulation or by necessary implication from the nature of the firm, or otherwise. Backhouse v. Hall, 6 B. & S. 507; 34 L. J., Q. B. 141; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 562; 12 L. T. 375; 13 W. R. 654.

The following guarantee, given to a banking firm, "In consideration that you have, at our instance and request, consented to open an account with the firm of G. W. and W. J. Hall, shipbuilders, Monkwearmouth, we, and each of us, do hereby guarantee the payment to you of the moneys that at any time may become due, not exceeding 5,000*l.*, such payment by us not to be made at a shorter date than twelve months from this date," does not come within the proviso in the above enactment, as it does not appear, either by express stipulation or necessary implication, that the guarantee was to continue, notwithstanding a change in the persons constituting the firm. Ib.

The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 4, is simply an affirmance of the law as it previously stood. Ib.

An acte de cautionement made in Lower Canada by C. and others recited, that M., who had been a member of the firm of C. & Sons, required pecuniary assistance to meet the engagements of that firm, which was agreed to be afforded by a bank, and by such acte, C. and others agreed to become sureties, and made themselves jointly liable for all debts theretofore contracted, and generally, for all the then present and future debts and liabilities of M. with the bank. M. for some time after this agreement traded alone. He afterwards traded with other persons, and contracted debts with the bank, which had no reference to the firm of C. & Sons, or to M.'s sole trading:—Held, first, that there was no difference between the French law, as administered in Lower Canada, and the English law, upon the question of suretyship. Bank of British North America v. Cuvillier, 14 Moore, P. C. 187; 4 L. T. 159.

Held, secondly, that although the recital in that instrument was special, yet it did not control the generality of the subsequent operative words, so as to exclude from its operation the liability of the sureties for the advances made by the bank to M. Ib.

7. Giving Time.

General Rule.]—If after a right of action accrues to a creditor against two or more persons, he is informed that one of them is a surety only, and, after that, he gives time to the principal debtor without the consent and knowledge of the surety, the rule as to the discharge of the surety applies. Overend, Gurney & Co. v. Oriental Financial Corporation, L. R. 7 H. L. 348; 31 L. T. 322. Affirming 41 L. J., Ch. 332; 20 W. R. 253.

A creditor giving the principal debtor further time for payment discharges the surety. Nisbet v. Smith, 2 Bro. C. C. 579.

Holder of a bill giving time to the acceptor discharges the drawer. Wilson, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 410; 8 R. R. 194.

By giving time to the principal, the grantee of annuity exonerates the surety for past and future arrears. Eyre v. Bartrop, 3 Madd. 221; 18 R. R. 216.

Surety by Bond.]—It was not any defence at law, to an action on a bond against a surety, that by a parol agreement time had been given to the principal. Davey v. Prendergrass, 5 B. & Ald. 187; 2 Chit. 336; 6 Madd. 124.

A court of equity will not relieve a surety by bond upon the ground of the creditor having given time to the principal debtor, unless there has been an express and positive contract between them for that purpose. Heath v. Key, 1 Y. & J. 434.

Meaning of.]—Giving time to the principal, means, giving such time, without the consent or knowledge of the surety, as prevents the creditor from resorting to the principal on the day appointed, and thus puts the surety, who expects that this resort will be made in the first instance, in a worse situation than he was before. But an arrangement between the creditor and principal, of such a nature as may induce the creditor to give time, but does not, by its terms, bind him to do so, is not such "giving time" as renders the surety's situation worse than it was before. A mere voluntary abstaining to pursue to judgment is not giving time. Bell v. Banks, 3 Scott (N.R.) 497; 3 Man. & G. 258.

Taking New Security.]—Merely giving an additional security by a principal will not discharge a surety, but if the giving of such security is really a consideration for giving time to the principal, it will do so. Overend, Gurney & Co. v. Oriental Financial Corporation, supra.

Obligee in a bond with a surety, without communication with the surety, takes notes from the principal, and gives further time, the surety is discharged. Fordyce v. Ford, 2 Ves. J. 539.

Where there are two co-sureties, and the creditor grants a further loan to his principal debtor, and takes a new security for that and the former loan, and gives further time to him and one of the sureties only, without specially reserving his remedy against the other surety, he by so doing discharges the latter. Vyner v. Hopkins, 6 Jur. 889.

Where the surviving obligee in joint and several bonds extended the time of payment of the bonds for three years, and on a further advance took a collateral security, reserving his right against the executors of the deceased obligee, but the arrangement was concealed from them:—Held, that by such indulgence they were discharged. Oakeley v. Pasheller, 4 Cl. & F. 207; 10 Bli. (N.S.) 548. See S. C., 1 L. J., Ch. 204.

A promissory note was made by A. and B., payable to C., to secure advances from C. to A.; after the note became due, it was agreed between C. and A., without the privity of B., that A. should execute a warrant of attorney to D., as trustee for C., to secure the amount of the note and a further advance made by C. to A.:—Held, that the acceptance of the new security by C., unaccompanied by any binding engagement on his part to give time to A., did not discharge B. Bell v. Banks, 3 Man. & G. 258; 3 Scott (N.R.) 497. S. P., Bell v. Shuttleworth, 10 L. J., C. P. 239.

C., being indebted to a bank on foot of the overdraft of his current account in a considerable sum, indorsed to the bank a bill of exchange for 2,000*l.*, accepted by the defendant and payable three months after date. Before the bill arrived at maturity C., without the knowledge of the defendant, executed a deed of mortgage to the bank to secure the sum of 8,800*l.*, which was the total amount then due by him on foot of his overdraft. The deed recited a previous equitable mortgage by deposit by C., to secure overdrafts of his current account, and contained a covenant by C. for the payment of the principal sum of 8,800*l.* and interest on a day three months subsequent to the date of the mortgage:—Held, that the taking of the mortgage by the bank constituted a giving of time to the principal debtor, and therefore that the defendant was discharged from liability. Munster and Leinster Bank v. France, 24 L. R., Ir. 82—C. A.

Taking Bill for Portion of Debt.]—The defendants were sureties to the plaintiffs for H. D., on a continuing guarantee for the value of goods to be supplied by the plaintiffs to H. D., not exceeding 300*l.* in all. The plaintiffs, without the defendants' knowledge or consent, having taken from H. D. a bill at three months still current for 45*l.*, on account of portion of the sum due for goods supplied to H. D., the actual amount due having been previously ascertained:—Held, that the defendants were not released from liability to pay the balance of the sum due for the goods supplied to H. D., under the guarantee, but were only discharged to the extent of the 45*l.* for which the bill was taken. Dowden v. Leris, 14 L. R., Ir. 307.

Consolidation of Securities.]—The defendant, by a deed dated the 4th of September, 1857, covenanted to pay on the 4th of March, 1858, the sum of 450*l.* and interest advanced to one B., and secured by a mortgage on certain property. By a deed dated the 15th of December, 1884, to which the defendant was not a party, given to secure an advance of 3,200*l.* made to B. by the plaintiff, and by which the mortgage of 1857 and mortgages on other property were consolidated, the mortgagees of the deed of 1857, in consideration of the payment of their debt, conveyed to the plaintiff the full benefit of the covenants and other powers in their mortgage-deed for securing the payment of the sum of 450*l.* and interest, and of all securities for the same; and B. covenanted to pay the whole sum of 3,200*l.*, with interest, on the 19th of January, 1885:—Held, that the covenant in the deed of 1884, fixing the date of repayment of the whole sum of 3,200*l.* was inconsistent with the covenant in the deed of 1857 as to the date for repaying the 450*l.*; and being equivalent to giving time to the principal debtor, the defendant was therefore discharged from liability as surety. Bolton v. Buckenham, 60 L. J., Q. B. 261; [1891] 1 Q. B. 278; 64 L. T. 278; 39 W. R. 293—C. A.

Consenting to Payment by Instalments.]—A father gave a bond to secure the repayment in four years of a simple contract debt due by his son. Upon the death of the father, the creditor commenced proceedings against his estate for the recovery of the debt, but afterwards stayed those proceedings upon obtaining from the son, who was heir to the father, and the widow, who was his personal representative, a joint bond for the payment of the same debt by instalments:—Held, that the estate of the father as surety was discharged, both on the ground of time given to the son, and because the second bond was to be considered as given in substitution for the first. Clarke v. Henty, 3 Y. & Coll. 187; 2 Jur. 918.

A. and B. entered into a joint and several bond for securing a sum of money advanced to A. by his bankers. Some years afterwards, A.'s account being overdrawn, an account was settled between A. and the bankers, in which the money secured by the bond was treated as remaining due from A. The bankers then took a warrant of attorney from A. for securing payment of the balance found due, by instalments at distant periods. Before all the instalments were paid A. became bankrupt. It being proved that B. was privy to the settlement of accounts and to the warrant of attorney:—Held, that he was not discharged by the time given to A. Tyson v. Cox, Turn. & R. 395; 24 R. R. 79.

In an action by the payee against the maker of a note, the plaintiff proved a joint and several note made by the defendant and another person. The defendant then proved that he was a mere surety, having become a party to the note at the request of the other person who was indebted to the plaintiff, and that the note not having been paid when it became due, the plaintiff, in Hilary term, 1828, brought an action against the principal, which being about to be tried at the spring assizes, 1828, the plaintiff took a cognovit for the debt payable by three instalments, the first on the 28th of April, the others in May and June; but if the defendant failed in payment of any of these instalments, the plaintiff was to be at liberty immediately to enter up judgment and issue execution for the whole sum. The first instalment was not duly paid:—Held, that as the plaintiff, if he had proceeded in the action, could not have obtained judgment and issued execution before the 28th of April, the plaintiff did not, by taking the cognovit, give any time to the principal debtor. Price v. Edmunds, 10 B. & C. 578; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 119.

By Judgment or Order by Consent.]—A. and B. were indebted as principal and surety to C. B. dies, and C. in a creditors' suit obtains a decree against his estate. Afterwards C. sues A., and takes a judgment by arrangement, giving time, without the knowledge of the surety:—Held, that this did not discharge the surety. Jenkins v. Robertson, 2 Drew. 351; 23 L. J., Ch. 816.

S., as principal, and the defendant, as his surety, were jointly and severally indebted to the plaintiffs in the sum of 1,096*l.* upon three promissory notes. S. carried an arrangement in the court of bankruptcy with his creditors for 20*s.* in the pound, payable by four equal instalments in four, eight, twelve and sixteen months respectively, the last instalment to be secured by S. lodging the amount thereof with the official assignee on or before a certain date. S. made default to the extent of 715*l.* in lodging the amount of the fourth instalment, and the plaintiffs, to whom 4,850*l.* was then due, including the amount of the said promissory notes, consented that the moneys in court should be appropriated to paying in full the last instalment to the other creditors before paying them, and that S. should have further time to lodge the 715*l.* An order was made by the court of bankruptcy, grounded on the plaintiffs' consent, so appropriating the moneys in court, and extending the time for lodging the 715*l.* S. never lodged or paid this sum. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendant on the promissory notes, the defendant contended that by this consent of the plaintiffs he was discharged. The plaintiffs having waived their claim to one-fourth of the amount secured by the promissory notes, judgment was entered for them for the remaining three-fourths:—Held, that the extension of time for the lodgment by S. of the last instalment, although made upon the plaintiffs' consent, was a judicial act and did not discharge the defendant from liability for at least the three-fourths, for which judgment was entered. Semble, even as to the one-fourth waived by the plaintiffs, the proceedings in question would not have operated as a discharge to the defendant. Provincial Bank v. Cussen, 18 L. R., Ir. 382—C. A.

Replevin—Reference to Arbitrator—Enlargement of Time for Award.]—Where action in replevin is by agreement referred to arbitration, and without consent or privity of surety in bond, time for award is enlarged, surety becomes discharged. Bowmaker v. Moore, 7 Price, 223; 21 R. R. 758.

Court will grant injunction to restrain landlord from proceeding at law on assignment of replevin bond against the sureties, if there has been an agreement to refer, and a reference between landlord and tenant (the debtor) without concurrence of surety, whereby performance of condition of bond (to proceed with effect) has been suspended. S. C., 3 Price, 214; 21 R. R. 758.

Staying Execution.]—Creditor sues the principal by direction of the surety, but without his privity agrees to stay execution, the surety is discharged. Rees v. Berrington, 2 Ves. J. 543.

Course of Business—Renewing Bills.]—R. and H., being in partnership, were in the habit, through the plaintiff's firm, of consigning goods to B. and S., in China, for sale; the proceeds were remitted to the plaintiffs in London, against which they accepted bills drawn by R. and H. and which they discounted. If the remittances did not put the plaintiffs in funds when the bills became due, the defendants were bound to make up the deficiency. By long practice, though there was no actual agreement, if the goods were not sold at the maturity of the bills, the plaintiffs accepted fresh bills, which the defendants negotiated, and handed the proceeds to the plaintiffs, who were thereby enabled to take up the first acceptances, and so to let defendants have the benefit of the advance for a further time without being under cash advance. In 1873 the partnership of R. and H. ceased by efflux of time, and it was agreed between them that H. should take over the whole stock of the old firm. The plaintiffs had notice of this. At the dissolution of the partnership there were acceptances of the plaintiffs running, and they, after the notice, renewed the bills, according to the old practice, by accepting fresh drafts of H. alone. When the goods were sold, the remittances were not sufficient to meet the plaintiffs' advances, and they brought an action against R. and H. to recover the balance. R. raised as a defence, that he had, by the agreement between him and H., become only a surety for H., instead of a principal joint debtor; and that the plaintiffs, by giving H. time after notice of this, had discharged R.:—Held, that R. and H. could not change their position with regard to the plaintiffs without their assent, and so deprive them of the right they had to treat both R. and H. as principal debtors; that R. was therefore not discharged by the giving time to H. by means of the fresh acceptances. Swire v. Redman, 1 Q. B. D. 536; 35 L. T. 470; 24 W. R. 1069.

Semble, even if the giving fresh acceptances would have otherwise discharged R., that, as it was only a continuance of the old practice to which R. was a party, it would not have discharged him. Ib.

A. guaranteed the payment of any goods to be supplied by B. to C. between the 2nd of April, 1814, and the 2nd of April, 1815. Although no period of credit was specified, this could not be taken as a guarantee for an unlimited period, but to be restrained by the usual course of trade; and C. having accepted bills for the amount of the goods delivered, which B. permitted him to renew when payable, without any communication to A. on the subject of such renewal:—Held, that A. was discharged from his guarantee, by virtue of the rule that a creditor, giving further time to the principal debtor, without the consent of the surety, releases the surety; and that, although it was proved that the renewal was given only in consequence of C.'s inability to pay, and that no injury could accrue to A., the surety being himself the fit judge of what is or is not for his own benefit. Samuell v. Howarth, 3 Mer. 272; 17 R. R. 81.

The following guarantee was given in January, 1825, to certain bankers: "Please to open an account with and honour the cheques of B., on mill account, for whom I will be responsible." The account having been opened, the bankers made advances to B. from time to time till February, 1827, when they ceased; a large balance was then due to them from B., who, in October of that year, paid a sum into the bank on account of it; in February, 1828, the bankers took an acceptance from B., at three months, for the balance of his account, with interest, without the guarantor's knowledge; in several previous instances the bankers had taken similar acceptances from customers who had overdrawn their accounts; but though the guarantor had been consulted by them as their attorney on the dishonour of several of them, it was not shewn that he was aware of the practice of the bank in that particular:—Held, that the taking the acceptance from the principal debtor by the parties guaranteed, without the knowledge or assent of the surety, was a giving time to the principal, which altered the situation of the surety, and therefore discharged him from liability on the guarantee. Howell v. Jones, 4 Tyr. 548; 1 C. M. & R. 97; 3 L. J., Ex. 255.

A guarantee was given by the defendant, in consideration of the plaintiff's giving A. a current credit, to make good, upon the event of his failure, any deficiency, not exceeding a certain sum; a short time after the guarantee was given, a bill which had been previously given by A. to the plaintiff was dishonoured, and the plaintiff permitted him to renew it without giving any notice of the transaction to the defendant:—Held, that this was not such a failure of the principal as to entitle the surety to a notice of the renewal of the bill. Carr v. Brown, 12 Moore, 62.

If a surety of a bill assents to its being renewed, he is not discharged. Torrance v. Bank of British North America, L. R. 5 P. C. 246; 29 L. T. 109; 21 W. R. 329.

A. at the request of B., and on his promises that he would share any loss or liability which he might thereby incur, accepted a bill at three months for the accommodation of C. At the maturity of the bill, C. being unable to meet it, it was agreed between the holders and A. and C. (without the knowledge of B.), that another bill should be drawn for the amount, in substitution of the former acceptance. A. having been obliged to pay the second bill, sued B. on his indemnity:—Held, that B.'s liability on his undertaking was not discharged by the renewal of the bill, the parties not standing in the position of creditor and principal and surety. Way v. Hearn, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 774; 32 L. J., C. P. 34.

See also Grahame v. Grahame, ante, col. 1163.

—— Original Debt Paid off.]—In consideration of the plaintiff supplying C. with goods, the defendant agreed to be answerable up to 200*l.* for the price of goods supplied to C. at any time due to the plaintiff on an account current after two months' credit. Some time after, 332*l.* being due from C. to the plaintiff for goods supplied, C. executed a mortgage deed to the plaintiff as security for the then existing debt, and for any future debt for goods to be supplied. The deed contained a proviso that if C. paid the plaintiff the 332*l.* in six months from its date, and all sums due for future supplies in six months from their date, without prejudice to the plaintiff's right not to give credit in respect of future supplies, the mortgaged premises were to be reconveyed to C. There was also a covenant to pay the existing debt in six months, and future debts within six months from their accruing due, without prejudice to the plaintiff's refusing to give credit for future debts. The parties in fact dealt on a two months' credit only. In the course of dealing, C. paid off the 332*l.* A further debt exceeding 200*l.* having subsequently accrued, which C. could not pay, the plaintiff sued the defendant on the guarantee. He pleaded that he was discharged by time having been given by the plaintiff to C.:—Held, that by the mortgage deed the plaintiff did not give time to C., except in respect of the 332*l.* debt, and that, as that debt had long been discharged, the giving that time did not prejudice the surety as to other and future debts due from C. to the plaintiff; and that, as in fact only a two months' credit was given by the plaintiff to C., the guarantee remained in force, and that the defendant was liable, up to 200*l.*, on C.'s failure to pay the sum due in respect of goods supplied by the plaintiff to C. subsequently to the mortgage deed. Bingham v. Corbitt, 34 L. J., Q. B. 37; 12 W. R. 1030—Ex. Ch.

—— Agreement not to press for Repayment in consideration of Higher Rate of Interest.]—The plaintiffs lent 1,000*l.* to B., one of their customers, upon the security of a joint and several promissory note, payable on demand, made by B. and the defendant, a solicitor, and also upon the deposit of the deeds of a house of which B. was the owner, together with a memorandum signed by B. that the deeds were deposited as security for any general balance, not exceeding 1,000*l.*, which might then or thereafter be due to the plaintiffs from him. The memorandum contained an undertaking by B. to execute a legal mortgage of the house, but this undertaking was not carried out. Subsequently, in March, 1875, an arrangement was entered into without the knowledge of the defendant, between the plaintiffs and B., whereby it was agreed that the plaintiffs should not press for repayment of the loan, but that B. should pay instead a higher rate of interest than that on which the loan was originally made, and this higher rate was afterwards debited to B. in his current account. The loan and current account were always kept distinct, and for some months subsequent to this arrangement the plaintiffs always had a balance exceeding 1,400*l.* to the credit of B. The plaintiffs having pressed for the execution of a legal mortgage with the usual power of sale, the defendant's partner, on behalf of and in the name of his firm, prepared a legal mortgage to the plaintiffs, another solicitor acting for B. This mortgage, which was executed by B., secured the payment to the plaintiffs of any sum not exceeding 1,500*l.*, which might thereafter be due to the plaintiffs upon B.'s general account, with interest at 6 per cent., and also contained a covenant for payment three months after demand, and a power of sale in case of default. In an action brought upon the promissory note against the defendant, after default made by B.:—Held, that the defendant had signed and was liable upon the promissory note as principal, and that as there was no evidence to shew that the plaintiffs had agreed to accept the defendant merely as surety, he was not entitled to be treated as such. Held, also, that assuming the defendant was, and had been, accepted by the plaintiffs as surety for B., the transaction of March, 1875, did not amount to such a giving of time to B. as to discharge the defendant from his liability on the promissory note. York City and County Banking Co. v. Bainbridge, 43 L. T. 732 ; 45 J. P. 158.

—— In Consideration of Payment of Interest.]—A letter written by an agent of a bond creditor to the principal obligor, giving him eighteen months' further time to pay the debt, upon condition of his paying off at once the arrear of interest, and keeping down the interest to accrue in future, is a mere promise without consideration, and not binding ; and therefore the obligor, who has joined in the bond as surety only, is not thereby discharged. Tucker v. Laing, 2 Kay & J. 745.

In an action on a note payable on demand, the defendant pleaded as an equitable defence, that he signed the note only to secure a debt due from S. (one of the makers) to the plaintiffs, and that they knowing this, without the defendant's consent, for a good consideration, agreed to give S. time for payment of the note, whereby he had been damnified. The only evidence in support of the plea was, that the principal had repeatedly prepaid the plaintiffs a certain sum as interest in order to obtain forbearance for successive periods of three months :—Held, that this evidence was insufficient to sustain the plea. Rayner v. Fussey, 28 L. J., Ex. 132.

Where a bond creditor by agreement with his debtor, takes interest on his debt by anticipation, to a certain time, a court of equity will restrain an action on the bond, whether brought against the principal or the surety. Blake v. White, 1 Y. & Coll. 420 ; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 48.

—— Extending Credit.]—The plaintiffs sued upon the following guarantee : "I hereby guarantee and engage to see you paid for any porter you may send Mr. A. J. of this town, until you receive notice to the contrary from me." According to the course of dealing between the plaintiffs and A. J., the latter was to have six months' credit, and then pay by a bill at two months :—Held, that an extension of the credit to nine months, and a bill at two months (without notice), discharged the surety. Combe v. Woulfe, 1 M. & Scott, 241 ; 8 Bing. 156; 1 L. J., C. P. 51.

—— Allowing Increased Overdraft.]—Where a banking company agree with a customer, to whom they already allow an overdraft, that he shall for a specified period be permitted to overdraw his account to a larger amount, the agreement may be terminated before the specified period upon notice given by the bank to the debtor. It is not, therefore, such a binding agreement to give time to the principal debtor as to discharge a surety who has become liable to the bank upon a guarantee for a part of the sum due from the customer. Oakeley v. Pasheller (4 Cl. & F. 207) and Overend, Gurney & Co. v. Oriental Financial Corporation (L. R. 7 H. L. 348) discussed. Rouse v. Bradford Banking Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 890 ; [1894] A. C. 586 ; 6 R. 349 ; 71 L. T. 522 ; 43 W. R. 78—H. L. (E.)

Semble, that when two or more persons who are bound as full debtors arrange, either at the time when the debt is contracted or subsequently, that, inter se, one of them shall only be liable as a surety, the creditor, after receiving notice of the arrangement, must do nothing to prejudice the interests of the surety in any question with his co-debtors. Ib.

Quære, whether, where a bank has agreed to give a customer an overdraft, they can refuse to honour cheques drawn upon such overdraft until after a reasonable notice to the customer. Ib.

Where Series of Payments.]—Where a surety guarantees a series of payments to be made at stated periods, if time is given to the principal debtor in respect of one payment by a binding agreement, the surety is discharged from liability in respect of that payment, but not in respect of future payments. Croydon Commercial Gas Co. v. Dickinson, 46 L. J., C. P. 157 ; 2 C. P. D. 46 ; 36 L. T. 135 ; 25 W. R. 157—C. A.

A principal (with sureties for the performance of the contract) contracted to take tar from a gas company, and to pay for each month's supply within the first fourteen days of the ensuing month, unless the company should by writing allow a longer time for payment. After the expiration of the first fourteen days of August the company took a promissory note from the principal for the amount due for July. Default was made by the principal in payment of the amounts due for July, for August, and for September :—Held, that, time having been thus given for the payment of the amount due for July, the sureties were discharged as to that amount. Ib.

But not as to the amounts due for August and for September ; the contract being separable, and the position of the sureties as to those amounts not being affected by the giving time for payment of the amount due for July. Ib.

Where Binding Agreement.]—An obligee of a bond having placed himself in such a position with regard to the principal debtor, that he could not demand payment of the bond, until an agreement entered into with third parties had been carried into effect :—Held, that this was such a giving of time to the principal debtor as discharged a surety to the bond. Cross v. Sprigg, 2 Mac. & G. 113 ; 2 Hall & Tw. 233 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 14 Jur. 634.

The rule as to the liabilities of sureties in a bond is the same in Scotland as in England, viz., that they are not to be discharged from their obligation unless the contract between them and the obligees is varied by a positive contract between the obligees and the principal, without notice to the sureties. Creighton v. Rankin, 7 Cl. & F. 325.

If a bond creditor enters into a binding contract with the principal debtor to give him further time to pay, without the concurrence of his surety, the surety is discharged, because the creditor has put it out of his own power to enforce immediate payment, where the surety would have a right to require him to do so. Bank of Ireland v. Beresford, 6 Dow, 238 ; 19 R. R. 50. And see Archer v. Hall, 1 M. & P. 286 ; 4 Bing. 464 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 79.

The indorsees of bills of exchange as a security for a floating balance due on the accounts between them and the drawer, had notice that the acceptance was for the drawer; they afterwards entered into an agreement with the latter that the existing debt should be liquidated by the drawer building for them ships, and should, in the meantime, be secured by a policy of insurance:—Held, first, that time was thus given to the principal debtor, and the surety was released in equity, if not at law also. Davies v. Stainbank, 6 De G. M. & G. 679.

Held, secondly, that a creditor who holds a floating guarantee for a surety cannot, without the surety's consent, give time to the principal debtor as to a portion of the debt without reserving the creditor's rights against the surety, and yet hold the surety liable for that portion. Ib.

In order that the giving of time by a creditor to his principal debtor, without the consent of a surety, may discharge the surety, two things are necessary: there must be a binding contract to give time, capable of being enforced, and the contract must be with the principal debtor. Clarke v. Birley, 58 L. J., Ch. 616; 41 Ch. D. 422; 60 L. T. 948; 37 W. R. 746.

By a deed made in 1872 between a coal company of the first part, six sureties of the second part, and a bank of the third part, the company and the sureties jointly and severally covenanted with the bank to pay to the bank on demand the balance (not exceeding 25,000*l.*) for the time being due from the company to the bank on their current account with interest. In November, 1880, the following guarantee, addressed to (but not executed by) the bank, was executed by three of the six sureties and one L.: "In consideration of your continuing or giving an account . . . to the company for one year from the date hereof, we, the undersigned, do hereby jointly and severally guarantee to you the due payment of all moneys and liabilities which are or have been or shall from time to time be owing to or incurred by you on account of the said company, it being agreed as follows:—1. That not more than 8,000*l.* shall be ultimately recoverable hereunder. 3. This shall be a continuing security until a notice in writing under the hand of us or any of us to determine this security as to the persons or person signing such notice shall be given to you and to the other parties to this guarantee. 9. The security hereby given is in addition to the other securities held by you for the said account": —Held, that the liability of the three sureties (who were not parties) was not released or determined by this guarantee. Ib.

—— Under Deed of Arrangement.]—By a deed of arrangement, it was proposed that P. should carry on his business under inspectorship for the benefit of all his creditors; that the plaintiffs, creditors of P., who held various securities for their debt, should be paid a certain sum in full, and a composition on the residue of their debt by instalments, they covenanting not to enforce claims against any parties to the bills in their hands who, as between themselves and P., were not then liable on the bills; but the rights of the plaintiffs against all parties to the bills in their hands (whether liable or not to P. as between him and such parties) were not to be prejudiced in the event of the proposals not being carried into effect. It was provided that the creditors (except as mentioned in the proposal) who should execute the deed, and who should hold any securities upon which any other persons should be liable, should not be prejudiced as to their rights and remedies against such persons; and that the deed should not extend to prevent the creditors, other than as provided for in the proposal, from enforcing or otherwise obtaining the full benefit of any mortgage, &c., upon any estate or effects, whether belonging to P. or any other person, or from suing any other persons who might be liable or accountable for the payment of all or any part of their debts either as drawers, indorsers, or acceptors of any bills of exchange. Under this deed, which was in force for more than two years, time was given to P., the principal debtor; he then made default in paying the first instalment. In an action against the acceptor of one of the bills of exchange, of which the plaintiffs were holders at the time when the deed was executed, and which he had accepted for the accommodation of P., though the plaintiffs had no notice of that fact:—Held, that the effect of the deed was to discharge the defendant in equity, and therefore there was an equitable defence to the action. Bailey v. Edwards, 4 B. & S. 761; 34 L. J., Q. B. 41; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 134; 9 L. T. 646. S. P., Ewin v. Lancaster, 12 L. T. 632; 13 W. R. 857.

Agreement with Stranger.]—A binding agreement for a good consideration, made by a creditor with a stranger, to give time to the principal debtor, does not operate as a discharge of the surety. Fraser v. Jordan, 8 El. & Bl. 303; 26 L. J., Q. B. 288; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1054; 5 W. R. 819.

Before Recovery of Judgment against Principal.]—A surety is not discharged by the creditor taking from the debtor a cognovit in an action he had brought against the debtor, with a stay of execution until a day earlier than that on which judgment could have been obtained in the regular course. Hulme v. Coles, 2 Sim. 12; 29 R. R. 52.

A., principal, and B., surety, gave their promissory note to C. C. sued A., and took a cognovit, payable by instalments, the first instalment to be paid on the day before that on which C. might have signed final judgment in the action if no cognovit had been given, with power to issue execution for the whole debt in case of default. A. made default at the day:—Held, that B. was not discharged. Price v. Edmunds, 5 M. & Ry. 287; 10 B. & C. 578; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 119.

When Relationship begun — Pleading.]—When two joint debtors entered into an arrangement between themselves by which, inter se, one of them became the principal and the other the surety, to the knowledge of the creditor, who afterwards, by taking a bill of exchange, gave time to him who had so become the principal:—Held, that the surety was discharged, and that these facts constituted a good answer, by way of equitable defence, to an action subsequently brought by the creditor against the surety, although the relation of principal and surety did not subsist at the time of the original contract. Maingay v. Lewis, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 229—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the equitable defence was not bad on demurrer, for want of an averment that the time was given to the quasi-principal without the knowledge or assent of the quasi-surety. Ib.

Where Surety not bound till a Certain Time after Demand.]—Where sureties are bound after a certain time's demand, creditor may make arrangements with debtor for time, &c., prior to that interval, so that it does not interfere with sureties' recourse back on debtor. Prendergast v. Devey, 6 Madd. 124; 22 R. R. 254.

Subsequent Consent of Surety.]—Where creditors whose debt was secured by certain promissory notes gave further time for payment of the debt to the principal debtor, by deed, without the consent of the surety, but afterwards, and before the notes became due, the surety consented to the giving of time:—Held, that a consent so given by the surety revived her liability upon the notes. Smith v. Winter, 4 M. & W. 454; 8 L. J., Ex. 34.

Bail.]—After a bail-bond has been forfeited, and an assignment thereof taken, time given to the principal is no discharge of the sureties. Woosnam v. Price, 1 C. & M. 352; 3 Tyr. 375; 2 L. J., Ex. 115.

If one of the bail below consents to time being given to the defendant to perfect bail above, this act is binding on both. Howard v. Bradberry, 3 D. P. C. 92.

Where a plaintiff receives bills of exchange from a defendant with an agreement that he shall not be precluded from proceeding while the bills are running, the bail are not thereby discharged. Melvil v. Glendining, 7 Taunt. 126.

Bail are discharged by time being given to their principal without their consent, although they may not have been damnified. Hannington v. Beare, 4 D. P. C. 256.

A mere honorary obligation on the part of a plaintiff not to press a defendant for payment of debt and costs is not such an indulgence to him as will release his bail. Ladbrook v. Hewett, 1 D. P. C. 488.

If a plaintiff by an agreement with a defendant expedites his remedy against him, the bail are not thereby released. Ib.

A cognovit by the principal, without notice to the bail, does not of itself discharge the bail. Hodgson v. Nugent, 5 Term Rep. 277.

Unless time is thereby given. Stevenson v. Roche, 9 B. & C. 707; 4 M. & Ry. 561; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 304.

But if a plaintiff accepts from the principal defendant a cognovit, whereby he gives him time for payment by instalments, he thereby discharges the bail, unless they are parties to the arrangement. Bowsfield v. Tower, 4 Taunt. 456.

And if a plaintiff takes a cognovit, payable by instalments, and postponing the payment of any instalment to a later date than the time when the plaintiff could, with diligence, have obtained judgment and execution, the bail are discharged. Croft v. Johnson, 5 Taunt. 319; 1 Marsh. 59.

8. Concealment and Fraud.

Non-communication of Material Facts without Fraud.]—In consideration of the plaintiff accepting one H. as his tenant of certain lands, the defendant guaranteed the payment of the rent to become payable by H. as such tenant. In an action upon the guarantee, the defendant pleaded that, prior to the making of the guarantee, H. had been tenant to the plaintiff of the lands at a rent, and had been guilty of gross irregularity and delay in payment of such rent, and at the date of the guarantee was indebted to the plaintiff in a large sum for arrears of such rent, of which the defendant was ignorant; that the plaintiff did not, prior to the guarantee, communicate to the defendant these facts, but concealed from him the said material facts, which, if communicated to the defendant, would have prevented him from executing the said guarantee:—Held, upon demurrer, a bad plea. Roper v. Cox, 10 L. R., Ir. 200.

Where an obligee at the time of the execution of a bond concealed a material circumstance from a surety under it:—Held, that such concealment was sufficient to absolve the surety from all liability. Stiff v. Eastbourne Local Board, 19 L. T. 408; 17 W. R. 68.

An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor to restrain an action on a bond against a surety, on the ground that when the bond was entered into a material fact was concealed from the surety, the Court of Appeal discharged the injunction, on the ground that the defence was equally open at law by way of plea. S. C., 20 L. T. 339; 17 W. R. 428.

Quære, how far is it the duty of the creditor to communicate to a surety any arrangements between the creditor and principal debtor which do not appear on the instrument creating the contract of suretyship? Espey v. Lake, 16 Jur. 1106.

A. covenanted to convey certain estates to B., free from all incumbrances, except those specified, B. and C. covenanting, as principal and surety, to secure the payment of an annuity to A. It afterwards appeared that part of the estates was subject to a mortgage, not included in the specified incumbrances, the existence of which had not been discovered to C., and which A. alleged he had forgotten at the time:—Held, that C. was discharged from his liability as surety. Willis v. Willis, 17 Sim. 218; 14 Jur. 404.

Sureties in a bond for the fidelity of an agent were sued by his employer for alleged defalcations and misconduct on his part. The defendants pleaded that the agent during his employment was guilty of falsifying his accounts; that the plaintiff, before the accrual of the causes of action, had knowledge of "or had reasonable means of knowing" such misconduct, but did not inform defendants thereof; and that defendants had no notice or knowledge thereof, and were thereby prevented from revoking their guarantee. Reply, that although defendants had not notice of all the particulars of the agent's misconduct, they had notice at the time mentioned in the defence that he "was a defaulter in a large amount in his accounts with the plaintiff, and as such agent":—Held, on demurrers both to the defence and reply, first, that the defence was bad for qualifying the allegation of actual knowledge by plaintiff of the misconduct by the addition of the words "or had reasonable means of knowing," and semble, also, for not alleging with sufficient distinctness that the defaults sued for occurred after such knowledge by the plaintiff; secondly, that the reply was bad on the ground that notice to the defendants merely of the agent being a defaulter in his accounts would not be sufficient to fix them with continuing liability on their guarantee, when the plaintiff knew that the agent had been guilty of falsifying accounts, and retained him in employment without apprising the defendants of the particular nature of the misconduct. Enright v. Falvey, 4 L. R., Ir. 397.

In such a case, where the employer has actual knowledge of dishonest conduct on the part of the person for whom the sureties are responsible, justifying immediate dismissal, and nevertheless retains him in employment, the sureties are discharged from liability for subsequent default, unless informed of all such circumstances as are material to enable them to decide whether they will require the employment to be terminated, or will assent to its continuance, and for that purpose notice in general terms of his being in default, consistent with his being merely a debtor on foot of his accounts, is not enough; but distinct information of any acts of dishonesty or criminal misconduct should be given to the sureties. Ib.

Uberrima fides, whether necessary.]—Where parties are contracting, either of them, unless he is under a duty to the other, may keep silence even as to facts which he believes would be operative on the mind of the other; if, however, one of them has made a statement which he believes to be true, but which in the course of the negotiation he discovers to be false, he is bound to correct his erroneous statement. Davies v. London and Provincial Marine Insurance Co., 47 L. J., Ch. 511; 8 Ch. D. 469; 38 L. T. 478; 26 W. R. 794.

In some cases, such as contracts between solicitor and client, there is a duty to make entire disclosure. In others, such as contracts of partnership, everything material must be disclosed. There is no such duty in the case of a contract of suretyship, but nevertheless very little said which ought not to have been said, and very little omitted which ought to have been said, will suffice to avoid the contract. Ib.

The officers of a company, believing that the retention of money by one of their agents amounted to felony, directed his arrest. Certain friends of his came to the officers of the company and proposed to deposit a sum of money by way of security for any deficiency. On the same day the company was advised that the acts of the agent did not amount to felony, and the directions for the arrest were withdrawn. Later in that day the friends of the agent had a second interview with the officers of the company, and agreed to deposit a sum of money as security for his defaults, no mention being made of the withdrawal of the directions for the arrest. The sum of money was afterwards deposited with trustees on an agreement for the security of the company:—Held, that the change of circumstances ought to have been stated to the intending sureties, and that the agreement must be rescinded and the money returned to the sureties. Ib.

The rule which prevails in assurances upon ships and lives, that all material circumstances known to the assured must be disclosed, though there is no fraud in the concealment, does not extend to guarantees. North British Assurance Co. v. Lloyd, 10 Ex. 523; 3 C. L. R. 264; 24 L. J., Ex. 14; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 45.

In the latter case the concealment, to vitiate the guarantee, must be fraudulent. Ib.

A. obtained a loan of 10,000*l.* from an insurance company, on the deposit of railway shares, with a stipulation that, if the market value of the shares fell below a certain amount, A. should either furnish fresh shares or pay their value, so as to leave a given surplus. When the time for repayment of the loan arrived, the shares having fallen in value, the time was extended to a further period, on the deposit of additional shares, and the acceptance of A.'s brother (B.) to the amount of 2,000*l.* Before the loan became due, in pursuance of the terms of this second arrangement, B. applied to the company to be released from his acceptance upon procuring the guarantee of the defendant and three others for 500*l.* each. The company assented to this arrangement. A. then informed the defendant of the loan and of its terms, and told him, that, unless he could procure security, his shares would be sold at a great loss; but the arrangement as to the withdrawal of B.'s acceptance was not communicated to the defendant, and he was wholly ignorant of it. The defendant executed a guarantee which did not refer to B.'s acceptance for 2,000*l.*, but recited the consideration for the guarantee to be the original loan, and of the company's agreeing not to require any further security in the event of the depreciation of the shares, as provided for by the original agreement. In an action on this guarantee by the company:—Held, that the non-communication of the private arrangement between the company and A. and his brother did not amount to constructive fraud, and afforded no defence to the action. Ib.

At the request of the defendant, the plaintiff accepted a bill for 110*l.*, dated the 25th of October, 1859, and drawn by Read for the purpose of raising funds to relieve the latter from an execution, the defendant at the same time giving the plaintiff the following undertaking: "You having lent your name to Mr. Read on a bill for 110*l.*, payable three months from this date, the proceeds to be applied to the discharge of the amount payable to the sheriff, I undertake to share with you any loss or liability you may incur in respect of such bill." Prior to this transaction, Read, finding himself in a state of great embarrassment, had applied to the defendant (who was his attorney) for advice; and, at the suggestion of the latter, an accountant was employed to prepare a statement of Read's affairs, to be laid before a meeting of his creditors. The plaintiff assisted the accountant in preparing this statement, and at his desire (in order, as he stated, that his imprudence might not come to the knowledge of his wife) the fact of Read being indebted to him to the extent of 2,000*l.* for money lent was kept out of the statement, and altogether suppressed:—Held, that, the contract being one of indemnity, and not of suretyship, although the plaintiff knew that the defendant, when he agreed to be responsible for half the 110*l.*, was influenced by the impression that the balance-sheet contained a true statement of Read's affairs, he was entitled to recover from the defendant one-half of the loss entailed upon him by that transaction, the jury having negatived fraud. Way v. Hearn, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 292; 32 L. J., C. P. 34.

Mere non-communication of circumstances affecting the situation of the parties material for the surety to be acquainted with, and within the knowledge of the person obtaining a surety bond, is undue concealment, though not wilful or intentional, or with a view to any advantage to himself. Railton v. Mathews, 10 Cl. & F. 934.

It is settled that there must be something amounting to fraud to enable a surety to say, that he is to be released from his contract on account of misrepresentation or concealment. Pledge v. Buss, Johns. 663; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 695.

In an action on a banking guarantee, to take effect at once, a plea on equitable grounds, that it had been given on a misrepresentation by the plaintiff as to the state of the principal's banking account, and on an undertaking to return it if a partnership between the principal and the defendant did not take effect:—Held, that the latter part alone would not be any defence, and that to sustain the former part it must be shewn, not only that there was a misrepresentation, but that the defendant relied upon it, and gave the guarantee on the faith of it. M'Kewan v. Thornton, 2 F. & F. 594.

An injunction having been obtained to restrain proceedings in an action on a bond in which the plaintiff had joined as a surety, on the ground of misrepresentation on the part of the obligee, and a deviation by him, with the concurrence of the principal obligor, from the terms of the contract on which the bond was founded; and it appearing on the evidence that there was reason to suppose that there had been such misrepresentation and deviation, although the evidence was not conclusive on the point, the court refused, on motion, to dissolve the injunction, or to put the plaintiff on the terms of bringing the money into court. Allan v. Inman, 7 Jur. 433.

Necessity of Inquiry.]—A surety is not, of necessity, entitled to receive, without inquiry from the party to whom he is about to bind himself, a full disclosure of all the circumstances of the dealings between the principal and that party. Hamilton v. Watson, 12 Cl. & F. 109.

If he requires to know any particular matter of which the party about to receive the security is informed, he must make it the subject of a distinct inquiry. Ib.

A party relying on his ignorance of facts must shew, not only that he had not the information, but that he could not, with due diligence, obtain it. Wason v. Wareing, 15 Beav. 151.

The plaintiff, a surety, sought to set aside a deed executed in 1848, on the ground that he had been released by a transaction between the principals in 1842, of which he was ignorant in 1848. It appeared that he had made inquiries in 1845, and was referred to persons who could give him the information, but neglected to do so until the end of 1849, when he obtained it:—Held, that, having in 1845 the means of acquiring the knowledge, he must be deemed to have had it in 1848, and his bill was dismissed. Ib.

Without saying that in every case a creditor is bound to inquire under what circumstances his debtor has obtained the concurrence of a surety, it may be safely stated, that if the dealings are such as fairly to lead a reasonable man to believe that fraud must have been used in order to obtain such concurrence, he is bound to make inquiry. In some cases wilful ignorance is not to be distinguished in its equitable consequences from knowledge. Owen v. Homan, 4 H. L. Cas. 997; 1 Eq. R. 370; 17 Jur. 861.

Extent of Doctrine of Notice.]—Notice to a creditor when his debt is contracted that the relation of principal and surety exists between his co-debtors is sufficient to affect him with the consequences of that relation without any further acceptance of it on his part. Wythes v. Labouchere, 3 De G. & J. 593; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 7 W. R. 271.

But it is not a consequence of that relation that the creditor, without any inquiry on the part of the surety, should acquaint him with every circumstance affecting the credit of the debtor, or of any matter unconnected with the transaction in which he is about to engage which may render it hazardous, the principles applicable to insurances not applying to such a case. Ib.

A customer, being desirous of obtaining an advance from his bankers on the credit of a surety, employs solicitors for that purpose, who are also the ordinary solicitors of the bankers, but are not employed by them in the transaction in question. The solicitors, however, give information to the bankers as to the sufficiency of the surety, and debit them with the costs of preparing the instrument of suretyship:—Held, that they could not be regarded as having acted for the bankers from the beginning, so as to affect the bankers with notice of any concealment or misrepresentation on the part of the customer towards the surety. Ib.

Signature of Specification.]—By a deed between a local board of the first part, certain contractors of the second part, and the defendants of the third part, the contractors covenanted to do work upon the basis of a specification; and the defendant covenanted to pay any losses that might be sustained from the non-performance of the work. The deed recited that the specification had been signed by five members of the local board, as was required by the local act. In point of fact the specification had never been signed, although it had been acted upon:—Held, that the mere fact of the specification not having been signed did not release the sureties from their liability. Russell v. Trickett, 13 L. T. 280.

Application of Moneys.]—A. gave his promissory note as a security for a loan of 2,600*l.* by B. to C. Before the making of the note, it was agreed between B. and C. that part of the money lent should be applied to the payment of an old debt from C. to B. This agreement was concealed from A.:—Held, this was a fraud in law, and that A. was released from liability on the note. Stone v. Compton, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 142; 6 Scott, 846. See Pidcock v. Bishop, 5 D. & R. 505; 3 B. & C. 605; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 109; 27 R. R. 430.

As between principal and surety, if any material part of the transaction between the creditor and his debtor (in respect of which the surety enters into his engagement) is, with the knowledge and assent of the creditor, misrepresented to the surety (the misrepresentation being such, that but for the same the suretyship would not have been entered into, or being entered into, the extent of the surety's liability may thereby be increased), the security given by the surety is not available against him on the ground of fraud. Ib.

Exposing Vessel to Unusual Risk.]—The defendant agreed to sell two ships to a company to be paid partly in bills of exchange accepted by the company, with liberty to the defendant to freight one of the vessels. The plaintiff agreed to indorse the bills by way of surety. Shortly afterwards the defendant, assuming to act as agent of the company, despatched one of the vessels to Constantinople, laden, on his own account, with munitions of war, for the Circassians, who were at war with Russia. This was not known either to the company or to the plaintiff:—Held, that, the defendant having exposed the ships to extraordinary risk, it amounted to a release of the plaintiff from his liability. Burke v. Rogerson, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 635; 14 L. T. 780—L. JJ.

Postponement of Execution—Necessary Consents.]—Upon the eve of a sale by a sheriff, a surety gave a written guarantee for payment of the judgment debts by instalments, in consideration of the judgment creditors consenting to postpone the sale under the execution. It turned out that the consent of another person was necessary in order to prevent the sale, and in consequence the sale took place. The surety gave notice that the consideration having failed, the guarantee was at an end. Representations were made on behalf of the judgment creditors when they took the guarantee, that they had power to stop the sale, and it would be stopped:—Held, that the surety was entitled to have the guarantee delivered up to be cancelled. Cooper v. Joel, 1 De G. F. & J. 240; 1 L. T. 351.

Further Liability—Evidence.]—C. contracted with R., the attorney of the plaintiff, to purchase the goodwill of a business for 425*l*. C., and H. as his surety, gave the plaintiff a bond for 300*l*., and C. gave his separate bond for 125*l*. To an action on the bond, H. pleaded that it was obtained by the fraud of the plaintiff. Held, that to support this plea, H. was bound to shew that R., who prepared the bond, knew and agreed that H. should be kept in ignorance of C.'s further liability for the 125*l*. Spencer v. Handley, 4 Man. & G. 414; 11 L. J., C. P. 250.

Previous Indebtedness.]—P. had been employed by the plaintiffs in the sale of coals for them on commission, for which he at the end of each month gave them his acceptances, and by the terms of his agreement he was to hand over to them within six days all moneys he received from customers. P. having fallen into arrear to the extent of 1,272*l*. the plaintiffs required him to find security to the amount of 300*l*., and at his request the defendant consented to guarantee 100*l*. The agreement of guarantee recited the terms of dealing between the plaintiffs and P.; but the fact that P. was already indebted to the plaintiffs in the large sum above mentioned was concealed from the sureties. In an action against the defendant upon the agreement, he pleaded that he was induced to make it by the fraudulent concealment by the plaintiffs of a material fact:—Held, that the noncommunication by the plaintiffs to the defendant of the fact that P. was at the time indebted to them, was evidence for the jury in support of the plea. Lee v. Jones, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 386. Affirmed, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 482; 34 L. J., C. P. 131; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 81; 12 L. T. 122; 13 W. R. 318—Ex. Ch.

It is no defence by a surety in an action on a bond, that at the time of his entering into the bond his principal was indebted to the obligees of the bond, and that they withheld this fact from him, unless he shews a fraudulent concealment, which will not be presumed where the principal, upon the evidence, had the money of the obligees in his hands in the course of his duty, no default being shewn. Stokesleigh Union v. Stoddart, 2 W. R. 14.

A surety who executes a bond on a misrepresentation by the obligee of a material fact is entitled to relief. Blest v. Brown, 3 Giff. 450; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 187; 5 L. T. 663. Affirmed, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 602; 6 L. T. 620; 10 W. R. 569.

Therefore, where a surety was induced to execute a bond on a representation by the obligee that the principal was not indebted to him, which statement was untrue, the court directed the bond to be cancelled. Ib.

Where a bond by a surety purported to guarantee the payment of flour, to be supplied by the obligee (of a specified quality), in order to enable the principal debtor to execute a contract, and the obligee designedly supplied inferior flour, so that the contract was annulled, the obligor is entitled to have the bond cancelled. Ib.

—— Liability of Bank for Representations of Agent.]—The plaintiff supplied oats to D., a customer of a bank, for the purpose of enabling D. to perform a contract with the government for the supply of oats, on the faith of a guarantee given by the manager of the bank that, on receipt of the money to be paid by the commissariat department to the bank for D. for the price of the oats supplied to the government by D., the bank would pay the plaintiff out of that money the sum due to him, subject only to the debt due to the bank from D. D. was at the time so largely indebted to the bank that it was practically impossible that there should be any surplus to come to the plaintiff, after payment of the debt due to the bank; but the manager concealed this from the plaintiff. The bank having appropriated the whole of the money to the payment of their own debt:—Held, that on proof of these facts there was evidence to go to the jury of a false representation on the part of the manager of the bank; that the bank was answerable for such false representation; and that the false representation was properly described in the declaration as that of the bank. Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank, 36 L. J., Ex. 147; L. R. 2 Ex. 259; 16 L. T. 461; 15 W. R. 877—Ex. Ch.

Servant's Honesty—Previous Acts.]—In the case of a continuing guarantee for the honesty of a servant, if the master discovers that the servant has been guilty of acts of dishonesty in the course of the service to which the guarantee relates, and if, instead of dismissing the servant, as he may do at once and without notice, he chooses to continue him in his employ without the knowledge and consent of the surety, express or implied, he cannot afterwards have recourse to the surety to make good any loss which may arise from the dishonesty of the servant during the subsequent service. Phillips v. Foxhall, 41 L. J., Q. B. 293; L. R. 7 Q. B. 666; 27 L. T. 231; 20 W. R. 900.

Declaration on a bond given to the plaintiff by the defendant which recited that by an agreement of even date the plaintiff had agreed to admit J. into his service as clerk and traveller (not further stating the terms of the agreement) and was conditioned for J.'s accounting for and paying over to the plaintiff all moneys which he might receive on the plaintiff's account; the breach alleged being that J. had received moneys for the plaintiff which he had not accounted for or paid over. Plea, that before the defaults sued for, J. had committed other defaults of the same kind; that the plaintiff had, with knowledge of those defaults, continued to employ J. in his service without notice to the defendant; and that the defaults sued for were committed during such continuance of the service:—Held, that the plea was good. Sanderson v. Aston, 42 L. J., Ex. 64; L. R. 8 Ex. 73; 28 L. T. 35; 21 W. R. 293.

When an action was brought by a county treasurer against the surety to the bond of a county cess collector, on account of a breach of the bond by nonpayment into the proper bank of the cess which had been collected, the surety attempted to set up an equitable defence that the cess collector had been previously engaged in that office, and that during the time he fulfilled the duties of that office he had misconducted himself, which acts of misconduct were known to the plaintiff, who had given no notice to the surety on his becoming surety:—Held, that as no privity could exist between the surety to the bond, and the plaintiff in his official capacity of county treasurer, no equity could be set up against him. Lawder v. Simpson, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 57; 21 W. R. 439.

Contractor's Honesty—Certificate obtained by Fraud.]—An alteration in the position of a surety brought about by the act of an employer does not discharge the surety, if the act of the employer has been caused by the fraud of a contractor whose honesty the surety has guaranteed. The plaintiffs entered into a contract with a firm of contractors for the construction of certain works. The defendants were parties to the contract as sureties for the contractors. The contract provided that the liability of the sureties should continue until the engineer of the plaintiffs should have given his final certificate of completion. A certain sum of money was to be retained by the plaintiffs, and not paid over to the contractors until six months after the granting of the final certificate of completion. The certificate was obtained by fraud on the part of the contractors, and the retention-money was paid over to the contractors:—Held, that the certificate having been obtained by the fraud of the contractors, whose honesty the defendants had guaranteed, did not operate as a discharge of the defendants' liability under their contract of suretyship; that the payment over of the retention-money, even if it had not been brought about by the contractors' fraud, would not have discharged the defendants, there being no evidence that the payment of the retention-money had caused any alteration in the position of the defendants. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. Harding, 62 L. J., Q. B. 55; [1892] 2 Q. B. 494; 4 R. 7; 67 L. T. 539; 41 W. R. 19; 57 J. P. 85—C. A.

Precautions against Fraud.]—A surety guaranteeing the honesty of a person employed is not entitled to be relieved from his obligation because the employer fails to use all the means in his power to guard against the consequences of dishonesty. Black v. Ottoman Bank, 15 Moore, P. C. 472; 8 Jur (N.S.) 801; 6 L. T. 763; 10 W. R. 871—P. C.

To discharge a surety for the due performance of duties, there must be on the part of the obligee an act of connivance or gross negligence amounting to wilful shutting of the eyes to the fraud or something approximating to it. Dawson v. Lawes, Kay, 280; 2 Eq. R. 230; 23 L. J. Ch. 434; 2 W. R. 213.

Effect of Power of Suspension of Defaulting Party.]—Under the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 91, the power of dismissing rate collectors is vested in the lord-lieutenant, but by regulations of the privy council, made under the act, the collector-general is empowered to suspend any collector who, in his opinion, has been guilty of neglect of duty:—Held, that the omission of the collector-general to suspend the collector, after knowledge of fraud and dishonesty on his part during his service and employment, was not a defence to an action on the guarantee; first, because the doctrine of Phillips v. Foxhall (L. R. 7 Q. B. 666) was inapplicable to a guarantee for the fidelity of an officer appointed and removable by the lord-lieutenant; secondly, because the omission to exercise a power of suspension as distinguished from a power of dismissal did not terminate the liability of the sureties. Byrne v. Muzio, 8 L. R., Ir. 396.

Action by co-Surety to set aside Transaction—Parties.]—One of two sureties who had joined the principal debtor in a bond, filed a bill to set aside the transaction, on the ground of fraud, and prayed an account of the payment of the bond:—Held, that the principal debtor and the co-surety were necessary parties. Allan v. Houlden, 6 Beav. 148; 12 L. J., Ch. 181.

Where, by the construction of the terms of a guarantee, there is no right of contribution amongst the guarantors, any one of them may sustain a bill in equity to set aside the guarantee for fraud, without making his co-guarantors parties. Pendlebury v. Walker, 4 Y. & Coll. 424.

9. Laches and Negligence.

What amounts to.]—The mere passive inactivity of a person to whom a guarantee is given, his neglect to call the principal debtor to account in a reasonable time, and to enforce payment against him, does not discharge the surety; and the rule at law and in equity is the same, that there must be some positive act done by him to the prejudice of the surety, or such degree of negligence as to imply connivance, and amount to fraud. Black v. Ottoman Bank, 15 Moore, P. C. 472; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 801; 6 L. T. 763; 10 W. R. 871—P. C.

Mere negligence, even if gross, on the part of a creditor, unaccompanied by positive acts of concurrence in the defalcation of a debtor, will not discharge the surety, and is no ground of equitable defence. Madden v. M'Mullen, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 305; 4 L. T. 180.

Or mere forbearance or inactivity on the part of a creditor will not discharge a surety. Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201; 25 L. J., C. P. 106; 4 W. R. 151.

If a party guaranteed does any act injurious to the surety, or inconsistent with his right, or omits to do any act which his duty enjoins him to do, and the omission proves injurious to the surety, the latter is discharged. Watts v. Shuttleworth, 5 H. & N. 235; 29 L. J., Ex. 229. Affirmed, 7 H. & N. 353; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 945; 5 L. T. 58; 10 W. R. 132—Ex. Ch. See Stewart v. Robinson, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 69.

—— Bond for Performance of Duties—Breach of Condition — Acquiescence — Connivance.] — Mere laches of the obligee, or a mere passive acquiescence by the obligee in acts which are contrary to the conditions of a bond, is not sufficient of itself to relieve the sureties. Durham Corporation v. Fowler, 58 L. J., Q. B. 246; 22 Q. B. D. 394; 60 L. T. 456; 53 J. P. 374.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants, as sureties, on two bonds, the first given to the plaintiffs, as urban sanitary authority, to secure the due performance of the duties of a collector of district rates under the Public Health Act, and the second given to the plaintiffs, as the corporation of a borough, to secure the performance by the same person of his duties as collector and receiver of borough rates under the Municipal Corporations Act. The evidence shewed that the plaintiffs had acquiesced in an irregular mode of accounting on the part of the collector, but that the collector was never suspected of dishonesty until a year after the date of the second bond, when defalcations were discovered, and he was dismissed. The jury in answer to questions put to them found, first, that the plaintiffs had permitted the collector to retain moneys in his hands for a longer period than a week (which was contrary to s. 195 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and to the conditions of the bonds, and to a resolution passed by the plaintiffs before the bonds were given); and secondly, that the plaintiffs had permitted him to mix the proceeds of the different rates:—Held, that the plaintiffs' acquiescence in the collector's irregular mode of accounting was not such connivance as to discharge the sureties; that upon the evidence there were no questions which the judge could have been properly required to leave to the jury other than those he did leave; and that on the facts proved at the trial, and on the findings, there was no defence to the action, and the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment:—Held, further, that on the construction of the second bond, in which the person guaranteed was described as "collector and receiver," the sureties were liable for his breach of the condition to pay over moneys received by him, independently of the question of the validity of the rate. Ib.

Of Agents.]—A. obtained an advance of money from a loan society, upon the security of a joint and several promissory note of himself and the defendant (who, to the knowledge and on the requirement of the society, signed the same as surety), and of a bill of sale of A.'s furniture. Certain instalments of the note being in arrear, the lenders seized and sold the goods of A. under the bill of sale, and afterwards sued the defendant for the balance:—Held, that it was competent to the defendant to shew, by way of equitable defence, that but for the mismanagement of the lenders' agents, the goods of A. would have realised sufficient to satisfy the whole debt. Mutual Loan Fund Association v. Sudlow, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 449; 28 L. J., C. P. 108; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 338.

Bond to Guardians for Collection of Rates—Surety Liable through Overseers' Negligence.]—The defendant, as surety, gave a bond to the guardians of the poor for the M. union, conditioned for the due discharge by C. of his duties as collector of poor-rates for the parish of N. C. absconded, having embezzled part of the rates, and allowed others to be lost by not applying for them. The guardians sued the defendant for the loss. The defendant admitted his liability as to the sums embezzled, but disputed his liability as to the sums lost by C.'s negligence, on the ground that the loss would not have occurred if C. had been called upon to account as he ought to have been. It appeared that no negligence could be imputed to the guardians, but there appeared some ground to believe that if the overseers of the parish of N. had discharged their statutory duties with reasonable care the loss would not have occurred:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from the defendant the moneys lost through failure of C. to collect them, for that there had been no negligence on the part of the plaintiffs, and they were not answerable for the negligence of the overseers. Mansfield Union v. Wright, 9 Q. B. D. 683—C. A. Affirming 46 J. P. 200.

Non-discovery of Fraud.]—A. was bound jointly with B., the trustee of a bankrupt's estate in Scotland, to the extent of 1,000*l.* The condition of the bond was, that B. should faithfully discharge his office, account, &c. The creditors of the bankrupt, according to the practice in Scotland, chose three commissioners to act for them and superintend the proceedings of the trustee. B., by various contrivances, amounting to fraud against the estate, was found in arrear to the amount of 1,000*l.* Whereupon the bond being put in suit against A., he pleaded that the commissioners, by neglect and connivance, caused and permitted the default, or knowing it concealed it from him. Of this imputation there was no distinct proof:—Held, that even on that supposition A. was not discharged. M'Taggart v. Watson, 10 Bligh, 618; 3 Cl. & F. 525. And see cases ante, cols. 1258, 1259.

As to Accrual of Liability.]—A. having sent an order to B. for certain goods, C. undertook to guarantee payment to B., upon an undertaking of D. to indemnify C.; B. accordingly informed C. that the goods were preparing, and afterwards shipped them for A. without giving notice to C. that they were shipped; afterwards D. desired to recall his indemnity, upon which C. wrote to B. to know whether he had executed the order; to which no answer was given by B. for a considerable time, he having gone abroad in the interim. Upon this C., supposing from the silence of B. that the order was not executed, gave up his indemnity to D.:—C. still remained liable to B. on his guarantee. Oxley v. Young, 2 H. Bl. 613; 1 Esp. 424.

In Examining Accounts.]—The laches of obligees in a bond (conditioned for the principal obligor to account for and pay over from time to time all such tolls as he should collect for the obligees), in not properly examining his accounts for eight or nine years, and not calling upon the principal for payment, so soon as they might have done, for sums in arrear, or unaccounted for, is not an estoppel in an action against the sureties. Trent Navigation Co. v. Harley, 10 East, 34.

An insurance broker, bound with two sureties, became bankrupt, and was indebted to the obligees in a considerable sum for premiums, and they received a dividend of 6*s.* in the pound under the commission. The premiums were due three years before the bankruptcy, and the obligees did not call on the sureties until after the bankruptcy:—Held, that the sureties were not discharged by the laches of the obligees in suffering the credit of the broker to run on so long beyond the six months stipulated by the bond. London Assurance Co. v. Buckle, 4 Moore, 153. And see Hearn v. Cole, 3 Dow, 459.

Delay in Suing.]—The liability of a surety on a bond is not discharged by the delay of the creditor in suing for the debt, or by the circumstance of the principal debtor afterwards executing to the creditor another bond for a larger sum. Eyre v. Everett, 2 Russ. 381.

Extent of Delay—Notice.]—The defendant guaranteed the payment of the price of certain timber sold by the plaintiff to the defendant's son. The plaintiff received part payment from the son, and afterwards made repeated applications for the residue. More than two years having elapsed from the day stipulated for payment, the son gave the plaintiff a bill of exchange, which was dishonoured, and shortly afterwards became bankrupt. The plaintiff did not give the defendant notice of the dishonour of the bill, nor did he inform him of the state of the account until after the bankruptcy:—Held, that the defendant was notwithstanding liable, and was not discharged by the time that had elapsed, nor by want of notice of the applications made to his son. Goring v. Edmonds, 6 Bing. 94; 3 M. & P. 259; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 235; 31 R. R. 358.

A. guarantees to B. the debt of C. upon condition "that no application shall be made to A. on B.'s part for the amount guaranteed, or any portion thereof, but on the failure of B.'s utmost efforts and legal proceedings to obtain the same from C." C. remains in England two years; then goes abroad insolvent, not having paid the debt to B. No proceedings are taken against him until four years after the guarantee given, when process is issued, and continued on the roll, C. remaining abroad until more than six years after the guarantee given:—The guarantor is discharged by the laches of B. Holl v. Hadley, 4 N. & M. 505; 2 A. & E. 758; 4 L. J., K. B. 126.

If A. becomes bound to B. for the honesty of C., who embezzles money, B. may maintain an action on the guarantee, though three years have elapsed without notice having been given of the embezzlement by B. to A.; at least if A. was acquainted with the circumstances from any other quarter, and B. does not appear to have concealed it from him industriously, A. will not be discharged from his guarantee, though B. appears to have given credit to C. for the amount of the sum embezzled. Peel v. Tatlock, 1 Bos. & P. 419.

Not giving Notice.]—Under a bond, conditioned that if M. should duly account for all moneys received by him in the plaintiff's service as a clerk; and also that if M. should embezzle the plaintiff's property, and should, within three days after proof thereof, repay the plaintiff the damage sustained by such misbehaviour or misdoing; or, in default thereof, if the defendant should, after notice given, make a full recompense to the plaintiff, the bond was to be void; the plaintiff, in order to render the defendant (the surety) liable for M.'s not accounting, must give the defendant notice thereof,; as, by the construction of the condition, the notice must be given for M.'s not accounting, as well as for his embezzling. Phillips v. Fordyce, 2 Chit. 676.

Neglect to enforce Payment—Proceeds of Execution.]—By a guarantee, the defendant engaged to pay to the plaintiff any debt due to him from the defendant's son, not exceeding 100*l.*, provided that, before the defendant was called on in pursuance of the guarantee, the plaintiff should avail himself to the uttermost of any bonâ fide securities he held of the son; provided, also, that in case anything should prevent the defendant from receiving and retaining the proceeds of an execution he had levied on his son's property, the guarantee should be void:—Held, that the plaintiff's neglecting to adopt means to enforce payment of a bill by a party who was proved to be totally insolvent, and to have been three years and a half in gaol, where he continued, was not a breach of the condition upon which the guarantee was given. Muskett v. Rogers, 8 Scott, 51; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 728; 8 L. J., C. P. 354.

Held, also, that the circumstance of a portion of the property seized, which turned out not to be the property of the defendant's son, being afterwards recovered by the owner, neither avoided the guarantee nor afforded ground for diminishing the amount of the defendant's liability thereon. Ib.

Keeping Bill of Exchange Unreasonable Time.]—Where the firm of A. & Co. gave a guarantee to B. & Co. that they would endorse any bill or bills which C. might give to B. & Co., in part payment of an order for certain goods then executing for him; B. & Co. to allow 5*l.* per cent. on the amount of the bills for the guarantee; and C. gave B. & Co. a bill at eighteen months, in part payment of the goods which the latter kept for seventeen months and ten days, and then, finding that C. was insolvent, applied, for the first time, to A. & Co. for their indorsement, tendering the amount of commission:—Held, that B. & Co. were concluded by their laches, and that A. & Co. were not liable on their guarantee. Payne v. Ives, 3 D. & R. 664.

Neglect to Present for Payment.]—Where a commission broker effected the sale of wool from the plaintiff to C. & P., to be paid for by a bill at eight months, accepted by the latter; and the broker agreed to guarantee half the amount for an allowance of 1 per cent.; and the plaintiff confirmed the sale, and informed the broker that if he could not procure from C. & P. acceptances of approved houses (which they would prefer), that they would take his guarantee for one-half the amount on the terms proposed; and the wool was delivered to the vendees without the intervention of the broker, and the vendors took the acceptance of the former for the amount of the wool, made payable at a banker's; but before the bill was at maturity, the vendees became insolvent, and the vendors resorted to the broker upon his guarantee:—Held, that he was liable, though the bill had not been presented for payment, and though there was no proof that it would not have been paid if presented. Holbrow v. Wilkins, 2 D. & R. 59; 1 B. & C. 10; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 11; 25 R. R. 285.

Where a debtor indorsed a bill of exchange of which he was the indorsee, over to his creditor by way of collateral security for his debt, and the creditor did not present it at maturity, nor give the debtor notice of its dishonour when presented:—Held, that the creditor could not recover in an action either on his original debt or upon the bill of exchange. Peacock v. Purcell, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 728; 32 L. J., C. P. 266; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 178; 8 L. T. 636; 11 W. R. 834.

In an action on a note, the defendant pleaded that he made the note jointly with E. for his accommodation, and as his surety only to secure payment of a loan made by the plaintiff to E.; that at the time when the note was made, the plaintiff, having notice of the premises, agreed, in consideration of the defendant making such note as surety, that the plaintiff would call in and demand payment of the note from E. within three years; that this agreement should be indorsed in writing on the note at the time of making it, which, by mistake, was not done; that the plaintiff omitted to demand payment of the note from E. within three years, whereby he lost the means of obtaining payment from E., who had become insolvent :—Held, that the plea was good, on the ground that the condition, in consideration of which the defendant had become surety, had not been performed by the plaintiff. Lawrence v. Walmsley, 31 L. J., C. P. 143; 5 L. T. 798; 10 W. R. 344.

Omission to fill up Name in Bill—Notice of Non-payment.]—The debtor gave his creditor a bill of exchange accepted by himself, but with the drawer's name left blank. The plaintiff at the same time, as a surety, deposited with the creditor certificates of stock in a joint stock company as collateral security for the debt. The debtor died without the creditor having filled in the name of the drawer, and his estate was insolvent. The bill was never presented for payment, nor was notice given to the plaintiff of its non-payment :—Held, that the creditor had not discharged the plaintiff from his suretyship by his omission to fill up the drawer's name, and to give notice of the nonpayment of the bill to the plaintiff. Carter v. White, 54 L. J., Ch. 138; 25 Ch. D. 666; 50 L. T. 670; 32 W. R. 692 —C. A..

Sale of Goods at a Loss.]—When money is borrowed on the security of a bill of sale of the borrower's goods, together with a note for the amount of the loan, signed by him and a third person, payable by instalments, the whole of the residue unpaid to become due upon default in payment of any instalment; and, default being made, the lender takes and sells the goods, and then sues the third person for the balance; it is a good equitable defence for him that he signed the note as surety merely, to the knowlege of the plaintiff, and that the goods would have sufficed, if properly sold, to satisfy the whole claim of the plaintiff, yet by his negligence and misconduct of the sale a loss was occasioned; and it is not material, for this purpose, that the fact of the suretyship does not appear on the face of the note. Mutual Loan Fund Association v. Sudlow, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 449; 28 L. J., C. P. 108; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 338.

Neglect to Insure.]—H. agreed with W. to complete fittings for a warehouse for 3,450*l.*, to be paid by instalments during the progress of the work. The contract contained a stipulation, that W. shall and may insure the fittings from risk by fire at such time and for such amount as the architects may consider necessary, and deduct the costs of such insurance for the time during which the works are unfinished from the amount of the contract. By an agreement reciting in part the contract, the defendant agreed with W. to guarantee the due performance of the works by H. W. advanced 1,800*l.* to H. during the progress of the works; after which the fittings, to the value of 2,300*l.*, while still unfinished, were destroyed by accidental fire in the workshop of H. W. had not insured the fittings. H. became insolvent and never repaid the 1,800*l.*, or any part of it. W. was compelled to pay a sum greater by 340*l.* than the original contract price to complete the work contracted for :—Held, that W. was bound to insure the fittings, and that his omission to do so, in equity, discharged the defendant's liability, not merely to the extent of the benefit he would have derived from the insurance if effected, but in toto. Watts v. Shuttleworth, 5 H. & N. 235; 29 L. J., Ex. 229. Affirmed, 7 H. & N. 353; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 945; 5 L. T. 58; 10 W. R. 132—Ex. Ch.

Neglect to Inrol Recognizance.]—A tenant's recognizance was executed at the same time as his lease, but was not inrolled for four years after. The tenant in the meantime became insolvent and incumbered his property :—Held, that the neglect to inrol the recognizance, when the lease was executed, did not discharge the surety. Quære, whose duty is it to inrol the recognizance. Jephson v. Maunsell, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 38, 132.

To File Warrant of Attorney.]—By an agreement between bankers, a customer and a surety, the surety guaranteed the balance due or to become due from the customer, subject to a limit and to a proviso, empowering the surety at any time to determine by notice his liability as to subsequent dealings. The customer afterwards obtained a loan from the bank beyond the limit of the guarantee, on a warrant of attorney, and simultaneously a second agreement was entered into between the bankers, the customer and the surety, that the warrant of attorney should not prejudice or affect the former agreement, and that the bankers would at any time, when requested by the surety, enter up judgment and issue execution. The bankers omitted to file the warrant of attorney, and the customer became bankrupt :—Held, that the agreement to issue execution was not nudum pactum, and that by the omission to file the warrant of attorney the surety was discharged. Watson v. Allcock, 4 De G. M. & G. 242; 1 Eq. R. 231; 22 L. J., Ch. 858; 17 Jur. 568; 1 W. R. 399.

In Registering Bill of Sale.]—By a deed, dated 25th of August, 1870, the goods of B. and P. were assigned to the plaintiffs as securities for money advanced to them by the plaintiffs. The defendant was a party to the deed, as surety for B. and P. In that capacity he covenanted for payment, on the 25th of August, 1871, and on other days, of a certain sum of money to the plaintiffs. The first instalment of interest became due from B. and P. upon the 25th of February, 1871. It was not paid, and to the knowledge of the plaintiffs B. and P. became embarrassed in their affairs. On the 5th of August they filed a petition in liquidation; a trustee was appointed, one being the solicitor in the liquidation, and the goods were sold by auction. The defendant knew nothing of the embarrassed state of B. and P. By the terms of the deed, B. and P. were to remain in possession until default was made; but upon default being so made, the plaintiffs were also, by the terms of the deed, entitled to take possession of the goods, and after giving a month's notice to sell the goods. They did not avail themselves of this power :—Held, that, to the extent of the value of the goods assigned, the defendant was released from liability, by reason of the laches of the plaintiffs in not registering the deed under the Bills of Sale Act, and in not taking possession of the goods when default was made in the payment of interest, and when bankruptcy was, to their knowledge, impending. Wulff or Woulff v. Jay, 41 L. J., Q. B. 322; L. R. 7 Q. B. 756; 27 L. T. 118; 20 W. R. 1030.

Creditor's Misfeasance.]—Corn factors supplied flour on credit to a baker, on his executing to them, with a surety, a bond, the condition of which, after reciting that the baker had entered into a contract for the supply of bread to the army, was that the bond was to be void if the baker should deliver to the corn factors his bills on the government as he drew them, and if he and the surety should make good the amount to become due to the corn factors. The corn factors supplied flour, but not of the quality specified in the government contract, which was vacated on that account:—Held, that the corn factors could not as against the surety allege ignorance of the terms of the contract, and that the surety was discharged. Blest v. Brown, 4 De G. F. & J. 367; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 602; 6 L. T. 620; 10 W. R. 569.

By Civil Law.]—By the civil law, sureties are not discharged from their liability to satisfy the creditor, though the benefit of a hypothec of the debtor is lost by the laches of the creditor to enforce his demands. Macdonald v. Bell, 3 Moore, P. C. 315.

10. Alteration of Instrument.

General Rule.]—A surety is bound only to the letter of his engagement; if that engagement is altered in a single line, no matter whether it be altered for the benefit of the surety, or whether the alteration be innocently made, the surety has a right to say the contract is no longer that for which he engaged to be the surety, and he is entitled to be relieved from the engagement. Blest v. Brown, supra.

Promissory Note.]—A. being indebted to the plaintiff, it was arranged that B. and the defendant should join as her sureties in a promissory note for the amount payable to the plaintiff. The defendant, in ignorance of the arrangement that B. should sign the note, signed a joint and several note for the amount together with A. and as her surety. The note so signed was then handed to the plaintiff, who procured it to be signed by B., without the defendant's consent or knowledge:—Held, that, assuming the note to have been completely issued when it was signed by B., this was an alteration of the note and of the defendant's liability in a material point, and that the defendant was consequently discharged. Gardner v. Walsh, 5 El. & Bl. 83; 24 L. J., Q. B. 285; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 828; 3 W. R. 460.

Affixing Seal.]—To an action on a guarantee, the defendant pleaded that, whilst the guarantee was in the hands of the plaintiff, it was, without the defendant's knowledge, by some person to him unknown, altered in a material particular, by affixing a seal by and near to his signature, as and for his seal, thereby causing the guarantee to purport to have been sealed by him, and to be his deed; by reason whereof the guarantee became void in law:—Held, that the plea was an answer to the action. Davidson v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 343; 12 L. J., Ex. 467—Ex. Ch.

Words inserted by co-Surety after Execution to Limit Amount of his Contribution. — See Ellesmere Brewery Co. v. Cooper, 65 L. J., Q. B. 173; [1896] 1 Q. B. 75; 73 L. T. 567; 44 W. R. 254.

Inserting Unimportant Word.]—A. agreed to do for B. & Co. all the wood-work on an iron ship which they were building for M. & Co., according to a certain tender, the whole to be completed for 3,800*l.* The contract or tender contained the following clause: "Any important work not mentioned in this tender that may be required to be done by the owners, to be paid for by them, in addition to the amount herein specified." The work was undertaken by A. for B. & Co. upon the faith of a guarantee as follows: "In consideration of your contract with B. & Co. for the wood-work of an iron ship now building by them for M. & Co., we hereby guarantee the payment to you according to the contract." The word "important" in the contract was inserted by A., with the consent of B. & Co., after the guarantee was signed by C.:—Held, that the contract bound B. & Co. for extra work done, they being the persons referred to therein as the owners, and that the insertion of the word "important" had no material effect upon the liability of C. under the guarantee. Andrews v. Lawrence, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 768—Ex. Ch.

In whose Custody.]—Several directors of a banking company, amongst whom was the defendant, signed a document, whereby they severally undertook to pay a sum of money to the bank, the intention, however, being that they should only be bound each for a proportion. The defendant and some others paid their proportion, and the secretary then struck out their names without the knowledge of the defendant, he being under the impression that the legal effect of the document was what had been intended. An action was brought against the defendant on this document to recover the whole amount secured:—Held, that the document was in the custody of the bank as distinguished from the individual directors, and that the above material alteration, therefore, discharged the defendant. Bank of Hindustan, China and Japan v. Smith, 36 L. J., C. P. 241; 16 L. T. 518.

11. Payment.

Subsequently avoided.]—A surety is not discharged by the fact of the creditor having innocently received payment from the principal debtor, if such payment has been subsequently avoided as a fraudulent preference under the bankruptcy laws by the assignees of the debtor, and they have recovered from the creditor the sum paid. Petty v. Cooke, 40 L. J., Q. B. 281; L. R. 6 Q. B. 790; 25 L. T. 90; 19 W. R. 1112.

S., and the defendant as his surety, made and delivered to the plaintiff a joint promissory note, for the payment of money due from S. to the plaintiff. S. paid to the plaintiff the amount of the note, and the plaintiff in good faith received such amount, but at the time of making the payment, S. was in insolvent circumstances, and made the payment in contemplation of bankruptcy, of which the plaintiff was ignorant. After the time of payment, S. made an assignment to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The trustees elected to treat the payment by S. to the plaintiff as a fraudulent preference, and the plaintiff paid the amount to them:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to maintain an action against the defendant, and that the latter was not discharged from liability in respect of the note. Ib.

Time of.]—Where an obligee of a bond receives the whole principal after it is payable, he cannot recover interest in an action on the bond, as solvet post diem is a good plea. Dixon v. Parkes, 1 Esp. 110. S. P., sed quære, Hellier v. Franklin, 1 Stark. 291.

To whom.]—A payment by the obligor of a bond to the obligee, to whom the obligor is also otherwise indebted, cannot without some circumstances to shew that it was intended to be made in discharge of the bond, be so applied in favour of a surety of the obligor, in an action upon the bond, under the plea of payment. Plomer v. Long, 1 Stark. 153.

Payment of a bond debt to one of two trustees is a good discharge as to both. Husband v. Davis, 10 C. B. 645; 20 L. J., C. P. 118.

Appropriation of Payments by Party guaranteed.]—A. & Co., bankers, advanced 2,000*l.* to B., a customer, by placing it to the credit of his general current account, and took as security a series of ten promissory notes, maturing at the rate of one per week during a period of ten weeks. C., as surety for B., gave a written undertaking that if the notes were not paid, he would secure the debt by a mortgage upon property of his own. Moneys were paid into B.'s account more than sufficient to meet the bills if they had been so applied, but as the account was at the same time largely drawn upon, it was at the dates of the maturing of the bills constantly overdrawn:—Held, that A. & Co. having received moneys which they might have applied to the satisfaction of the notes, were bound so to have applied them to the relief of the surety, before applying them to the liquidation of the current account, and that the surety was consequently discharged. Kinnaird v. Webster, 48 L. J., Ch. 348; 10 Ch. D. 139; 39 L. T. 494; 27 W. R. 212.

Certain of the directors of a company guaranteed personally to the company's bankers the drafts of the agent of the company to the extent of 1,000*l.*, and 1,000*l.* further, undertaking to provide the bankers with funds to meet the acceptances before maturity. The company kept a current account with the bankers, and the drafts of its agent were from time to time honoured and debited to this current account. One of the guarantors died, and his estate was under the administration of the court. The company's current account had been constantly overdrawn; at the date of the testator's death it was overdrawn to the amount of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; and the company was now in liquidation:—Held, that the guarantees given were a continuing security not satisfied by the earlier credits in the current account, and that, therefore, the bankers were entitled to prove against the testator's estate for the sum of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*, and interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the testator's death. Booth, In re, Browning v. Baldwin, 40 L. T. 248; 27 W. R. 644.

Action on a bond, dated 10th January, 1837, conditioned for the repayment of principal and interest on the 6th April following, and given as a security by the defendants to the plaintiffs on the advance of 1,000*l.* by the plaintiffs to W., one of the defendants, who had then lately opened an account with the bank of which the plaintiffs were trustees. Several sums of money had been paid in by W. to the credit side of his account previously to and since the execution of the bond:—Held, there being evidence to lead to such a conclusion, that the bond was given as a continuing security, and was not discharged by the sums paid in by W. Henniker v. Wigg, 4 Q. B. 792; D. & M. 160; 7 Jur. 1058.

A. and B. entered into a joint and several bond for securing a sum of money advanced to A. by his bankers. After the execution of the bond, and before it became due, A. paid money to the bankers, and he continued to draw upon them until his banking account was overdrawn. Some years afterwards, an account was settled between A. and the bankers, in which the whole money secured by the bond was treated as remaining due from A. The bankers then took a warrant of attorney from A. for payment of the balance found due upon the settlement, by instalments at distant periods. Several of the instalments were paid, but A. became bankrupt before the whole debt was liquidated. It being proved that B. was privy to the settlement of accounts between A. and the bankers, and to the arrangement respecting the warrant of attorney:—Held, that the bond was not discharged by the course of payment, the money paid by A. to the bankers being applicable to the banking account, and the bankers being entitled to hold the bond and warrant of attorney as distinct securities. Tyson v. Cox, Turn. & R. 395; 24 R. R. 79.

M. was surety in a bond given by G., collector of taxes in Jamaica, for payment of the collections for 1842. G. at the date of the bond was in arrear for taxes collected by him in 1841. G. appointed S. his deputy, to collect the taxes for 1842, which he partly did, and G. collected the remainder. Shortly after the collection of the taxes, the receiver-general pressed G. for the payment of the arrears of 1841. G. went to S. and obtained from him 3,000*l.* to remit to the receiver-general, S. taking that amount out of a chest, in which were placed the moneys collected for 1842. G. converted that sum, and also 2,000*l.* which he had collected for taxes in 1842, into paper money, and transmitted 5,000*l.* to the receiver-general, who appropriated the whole amount in liquidation of the arrears for 1841. In an action by the Crown against M. upon the bond:—Held, that the receiver-general had a right to appropriate the remittance by G. to the liquidation of the arrears of 1841, and that it was not necessary that G. should assent to that appropriation, and that M. was bound by the appropriation, and liable on the bond for the deficiency of the taxes for 1842. Att.-Gen. of Jamaica v. Manderson, 6 Moore, P. C. 239; 12 Jur. 313.

Taxes collected in one year under 23 Geo. 3, c. 99, must be duly paid by the collector to the account of that year, and the sureties are liable, though all the moneys collected in the year for which they are sureties should be in fact paid in, if any part of them should be appropriated by the collector, and received by the commissioners in satisfaction of the arrears of a former year. Gwynne v. Burnell, 7 Cl. & F. 572; West, 342; 1 Scott (N.R.) 711; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 853.

—— Agreement with some co-Sureties—Suspense Account—Bankruptcy.]—Several persons became guarantors to a bank for a debt. Some of them subsequently arranged with the bank, that in lieu of their personal liability to pay the entire debt a sum should be deposited in the bank to a suspense account, which sum the bank had power to appropriate towards the payment of the debt, but had not done so:—Held, that this deposit did not amount to payment, and that the bank were entitled to prove for the whole debt in the bankruptcy of a guarantor who was no party to the above agreement. Such an agreement is not an evasion of the bankruptcy law. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Wilson, 62 L. J., P. C. 61; [1893] A. C. 181; 1 R. 331; 68 L. T. 540; 41 W. R. 603—P. C.

Satisfaction.]—The plaintiffs, in an action against the co-obligor of the defendant on the joint and several indemnity bond of both of them, accepted from the former 215*l.*, the damages being at that time unliquidated, and gave a receipt for that sum, stating it to be in discharge of the damages and costs in that action:—Held, that this receipt did not shew that the plaintiffs had accepted the 215*l.* in satisfaction of the entire claim to indemnity under the bond; and therefore that they were entitled to recover a further sum against the defendant. Field v. Robins, 2 N. & P. 226; 8 A. & E. 90; 1 W. W. & H. 145; 7 L. J., Q. B. 153; 2 Jur. 855.

A. gave B. a bond to secure an annuity, and before any payment became due A. lent B. a sum of money, on which it was agreed that B. should retain the payments of the annuity, as they became due, till that sum was discharged; the agreement to retain held a good plea to an action on the bond, such agreement and retainer being equivalent to a plea of solvit ad diem. Sturdy v. Arnaud, 3 Term Rep. 599.

A., as surety, became bound to the guardians of a poor-law union, by a bond conditioned, that the treasurer of the union should discharge the duties of his office "by receiving all moneys tendered to be paid to guardians, by paying, out of the moneys in his hands of the guardians, all orders on him drawn on their behalf," and that he should pay over to the guardians all balances, moneys, &c. due to the union. The treasurer, who was a corn factor, had extensive dealings in corn, and opened accounts in trade with the overseers of the townships who were farmers. No money was received from these townships, but it was the practice of the treasurer to debit the overseers in his trade account with the amount of the poor-rate ordered by the guardians to be paid, and then to debit himself with the amount as paid to him as treasurer. His accounts were audited half-yearly, and the credits on the corn were allowed by the auditor as payments in money. At the last audit the auditors found that the sum of 239*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* was due from him to the guardians:—Held, that the surety was liable, inasmuch as between the treasurer and the overseers money had in fact passed. Belford Union v. Pattison, 1 H. & N. 523; 26 L. J., Ex. 115; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 5 W. R. 121—Ex. Ch.

A. guaranteed the payment to B. of two bills of exchange accepted by C. C. afterwards handed over the amount of the bills to B. A fiat having issued against C., his assignees recovered the money from B. as having been paid by way of fraudulent preference. In an action by B. against A. upon the guarantee, A. pleaded that C. had paid, and B. had received, the money in satisfaction:—Held, that this payment did not amount to a satisfaction. Pritchard v. Hitchcock, 6 Man. & G. 851; 6 Scott (N.R.) 851; 12 L. J., C. P. 322.

Conduct.]—A treasurer of a poor-law board entered with sureties into a bond, with a condition that he should honestly, diligently and faithfully perform the duties of his office, one of which was to pay orders for money which should be drawn upon him by the guardians. He was a banker, issuing his own notes. On a Friday he paid orders drawn upon him by the guardians, partly in cash and partly in his own notes; and again on Monday forenoon paid similar orders in a similar way, and also gave in exchange for their order, in favour of persons from London, a common banker's draft upon London, which was afterwards dishonoured. The bank stopped payment on Monday afternoon:—Held, that the sureties were discharged, because as to the notes given on Friday, the guardians having kept them during Saturday, conclusively elected to treat the orders as paid; as to all the notes, the guardians, who were entitled to receive cash, thought fit to receive the notes; and as to the banker's draft upon London, the guardians received it for their own convenience. Lichfield Union v. Greene, 1 H. & N. 884; 26 L. J., Ex. 140; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 247; 5 W. R. 370.

Pleading.]—Action on a bond for the penal sum of 12,000*l.* The declaration set forth the condition, which was for the payment of 6,000*l.* with interest, and assigned as a breach the non-payment of the 6,000*l.* (omitting interest). Plea, that the defendant paid the 6,000*l.* with interest according to the form and effect of the condition, is bad. Bishton v. Evans, 2 C. M. & R. 12; 3 D. P. C. 735; 1 Gale, 76; 5 Tyr. 639; 4 L. J., Ex. 142.

Payment, by whom.]—Action on a bond. Plea, payment. 200*l.* having been lent by the plaintiff to the defendant on his bond, through M., the defendant's attorney, and who acted for him generally as his agent in his pecuniary affairs, and repayment being afterwards demanded, M. obtained from his banker (the real plaintiff) an advance of 400*l.* for himself, depositing the bond and another bond as a security for repayment, stating in a letter to the plaintiff that he had laid down the money to prevent her any further inconvenience. The defendant was not aware of the application for, or of the repayment of the 200*l.*:—Held, that this was not a payment by the defendant. Lucas v. Wilkinson, 1 H. & N. 420; 26 L. J., Ex. 13; 5 W. R. 197.

Where, on default of the receiver, and discharge under the Insolvent Act, the plaintiff not appearing, although served with notice, his surety paid the amount to the solicitor, which was proved by affidavit:—Held, that such payment was insufficient, and a motion to discharge the recognizance of the surety refused; but, on a subsequent notice on the plaintiff to shew cause, on his not appearing the order made. Mann v. Stennet, 8 Beav. 189; 9 Jur. 98.

Investment by Treasurer of County.]—The 12th section of the 1 Vict. c. 54, enabling the treasurer of a county to apply to the Court of Chancery by motion, to vacate the recognizances of himself and his sureties, upon his investing in government securities a sum equal to that secured by the recognizances, applies only to those cases where the party continues to be treasurer at the period of making the application. Therefore, a petition presented under the 12th section by a person who had resigned the office of county treasurer before the passing of the above act was dismissed. Callaghan, In re, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 448, n.

Not always a Discharge.]—In cases of principal and surety, circumstances may arise where payment of the entire sum by the principal would not discharge the sureties. Id. 450, n.

12. RESERVATION OF RIGHTS AGAINST SURETY.

Rule.]—It is a general rule that a creditor may give time to the principal debtor without discharging his right against the surety, provided he expressly reserves such right. Circumstances may, however, prevent that rule from having effect. Owen v. Homan, 4 H. L. Cas. 997; 1 Eq. R. 370; 17 Jur. 861.

A transaction, which would otherwise operate as a release of a surety, will not have that effect if the remedy against the surety is reserved. Wyke v. Rogers, 1 De G. M. & G. 408; 21 L. J., Ch. 611.

Covenant not to Sue.]—By a deed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the principal debtor assigned all his property to trustees to sell, with power to them to advance moneys necessary for converting the prepared earth, part of the property assigned, into bricks, and for selling the same, and ultimately to pay thereout rateably, so far as it would extend, the debts of the several creditors. It was also declared that the creditors did, "subject to the proviso, acquit, release, and for ever discharge" the debtor; and then followed a proviso that any creditor who had any security for his demand, or to the payment whereof any person was liable as surety for the debtor, might execute the deed without prejudice to such security or to the claim against any surety:—Held, that the deed operated only as a covenant not to sue, and not as a release extinguishing the debts, and that, therefore, the creditors' rights against any surety of the debtor were legally reserved. Bateson v. Gosling, 41 L. J., C. P. 53; L. R. 7 C. P. 9; 25 L. T. 570; 20 W. R. 98.

A. and B. entered into a joint and several bond, conditioned for payment of moneys due by B. to a bank. After the making of the bond, the bank, without the privity or consent of B., executed a deed, whereby the bank released B. from all actions, &c., with a proviso that nothing therein contained was to extend to prevent the bank from suing any other person than B., who might be liable to make good to the bank any money due from B., or as being jointly or severally bound with B. in any bond, &c., as if the deed had not been executed, it being understood and agreed, that, as regards any such suits, the deed should not operate or be pleaded in bar or as a release:—Held, first, that this deed operated only as a covenant not to sue B., and not as a release. Price v. Barker, 4 El. & Bl. 760; 3 C. L. R. 927; 24 L. J., Q. B. 130; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

Held, secondly, that A. was not discharged by the execution of the deed without his consent; the effect of a covenant not to sue the principal debtor qualified by a reserve of the remedies against a surety being to allow the surety to retain all his remedies over against the principal, and the covenant not to sue operating only so far as the rights of the surety may not be affected. Ib.

Express Reservation.] — A surety by deed guaranteed the payment of a banking current account, and agreed that no composition with the principal debtor should discharge his liability. The principal debtor entered into a deed of composition with his creditors, which contained an absolute release of his debts:—Held, that the surety was not discharged by the release of the principal debtor. Union Bank of Manchester v. Beech, 3 H. & C. 672; 34 L. J., Ex. 133; 12 L. T. 499; 13 W. R. 922.

A transaction which would otherwise operate as a release of a surety, such as giving time to the principal debtor, will not have that effect, either at law or in equity, if the remedy against the surety is expressly reserved. Boaler v. Mayor, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 76; 34 L. J., C. P. 230; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 565; 12 L. T. 457; 13 W. R. 775.

It is a rule of law that a creditor may suspend his right for ever against the principal debtor, and yet preserve his rights against the surety. When a debtor executed a deed which contained a release from his creditors, followed by a proviso reserving any rights his creditors might have against any other persons in respect of any debt due by the debtor, either alone or jointly with any other persons:—Held, that a surety was not released. Green v. Wynn, 38 L. J., Ch. 76; L. R. 7 Eq. 28; 19 L. T. 553; 17 W. R. 72. Affirmed, 38 L. J., Ch. 220; L. R. 4 Ch. 204; 20 L. T. 131; 17 W. R. 385.

If A., the creditor of B., by bills, for which C. and D. are sureties, by a deed to which B. and C. are parties, discharges B. and C., reserving his remedies against D., such reservation is not defeated by a stipulation that the bills shall be delivered up; it appearing that such stipulation was intended to be so modified as to give to A. the benefit of such reservation. Maltby v. Carstairs, 1 M. & Ry. 549; 7 B. & C. 735; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 196.

A release to one of two sureties who had entered into a joint and several covenant to pay an annuity, in default of payment by the grantor, was accompanied by a proviso that the release should not prejudice the right of the grantee to enforce payment against the grantor, and the other surety, or either of them:—Held, that the proviso restrained the operation of the release, and that the liability of the co-surety was not affected by the release. Thompson v. Lack, 3 C. B. 540; 16 L. J., C. P. 75.

To an action by payee against maker of a promissory note, plea, that the note was made by him and G., and that the plaintiff afterwards, by deed-poll, released G., whereby the defendant was released. The deed, by which it appeared that the creditors of G. agreed to accept a composition, contained a clause that it should not extend to invalidate notes upon which other parties might be jointly liable with G., or prejudice the claim of any creditor against a surety of G.:—Held, that the deed did not release the defendant. North v. Wakefield, 13 Q. B. 536; 18 L. J., Q. B. 214; 13 Jur. 731.

A. gave a promissory note payable to B. (for which A. had received no consideration) as a security for goods to be sold to B. on credit; and B. indorsed the note over to the creditors. B. afterwards executed a deed of composition with the creditors, by which he undertook to pay his debt to them by instalments, that they should not be prevented by that arrangement from suing on any securities which they held, and that on default in paying the instalments the deed should be void:—Held, that the delay granted to B. by this agreement did not discharge A. Nichols v. Norris, 3 B. & Ad. 41.

Semble, that to reserve a creditor's right against a surety there must be a distinct expression of intention to reserve it. Overend, Gurney & Co. v. Oriental Financial Corporation, L. R. 7 H. L. 348 ; 31 L. T. 322. Affirming 41 L. J., Ch. 332 ; 20 W. R. 253.

A creditor, having the security by bond of a third person for the due accounting of an agent, settles accounts with that agent and takes from him a bond for the balance found to be due, and bills at different dates for the amount of the bond and the interest thereon, until the last of the bills should fall due : and at the same time stipulates that he is at liberty at any moment to proceed on the original security :—Held, that this was not a discharge of the surety. Lindsay v. Downes (Lord), 2 Ir. Eq. R. 307.

Parol, Sufficiency of.]—Where a creditor discharges the principal debtor, but reserves his rights against the surety, even by parol, the surety is not discharged. Norman v. Bolt, 1 Cab. & E. 77.

If an intention to give what is in effect time be declared by a written agreement, in order that the right as against the surety may be reserved, it is necessary that such a reservation be declared also in writing. Wyke v. Rogers, 1 De G. M. & G. 408 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 611.

A. and B. (principal and surety) became bound to C. in the payment of 400*l.*, of which sum, by an arrangement between A. and B., 120*l.* were paid to the latter. B. repaid to C. that sum before the time limited by the bond for the payment of the 400*l.*, and C., after that time, accepted from A. a promissory note, payable at two months, for the remainder, on a parol agreement (which was proved) that the note was not to be considered as given in discharge of or as substituted for the bond. A. died insolvent. On a bill filed by B. against C. for a declaration, that under the circumstances he might become released and discharged from the bond, and for an injunction to restrain C. from proceeding in an action which he had commenced for the recovery of 280*l.*, the remainder of the 400*l.* :—Held, that the surety was not discharged, and that there was no case for the interference of a court of equity. Ib.

The plaintiffs brought an action against the defendant, one of five joint and several sureties, to recover the balance of the sum guaranteed. The plaintiffs had previously by letter, without the defendant's knowledge or consent, agreed to release another of the sureties from "all debts due" by him :—Held, that evidence of a verbal agreement prior to the letter of release to reserve rights against the sureties was not admissible, and that parol evidence was not admissible to alter the ordinary legal construction of a document. Mercantile Bank of Sydney v. Taylor, [1893] A. C. 317 ; 1 R. 371 ; 57 J. P. 741—P. C.

Assumpsit on a guarantee, given by the defendant to the plaintiff in 1833, for goods to be furnished to one Jardine. Breach, delivery of goods to the amount of 90*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, and non-delivery by the defendant. The plea alleged a subsequent agreement between Jardine and the plaintiff and defendant and others, embodied in the following note :—"1836. We jointly and severally promise to pay to Messrs. J. M'Clure & Son, or order, the sum of 44*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.*, which is to constitute a discharge in full, for a debt of 90*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, due by Wm. Jardine to Messrs. M'Clure & Son." Signed by defendant and Jardine and four others, and delivered to the plaintiff, and received by him. Upon the trial the plaintiff proposed to prove, by parol, that at the time he took this note it was expressly agreed that he was still to be at liberty to sue the defendant upon his guarantee :—Held, that this evidence was rightly rejected. M'Clure v. Fraser, 9 L. J., Q. B. 60.

If a creditor execute a deed of compromise with the principal debtor, he thereby discharges the surety. Not so if it be stipulated in the deed of composition that the remedies against the sureties shall be reserved. Parol evidence of the understanding of the parties to the deed that the remedies against the sureties should be reserved cannot be admitted. Glendinning, Ex parte, Buck, 517 ; Carstairs, Ex parte, id. 560. And see S. C., 1 Rose, 130.

Knowledge of Arrangement with Principal.]—A declaration alleged that the defendant agreed to guarantee and be accountable for the payment of all sums of money which were or thereafter should become due to the plaintiffs from R. M'G. on a banking account. It then stated as a breach that 599*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* became due upon the advance of moneys by the plaintiffs to R. M'G., yet that R. M'G. did not pay the same, and thereby the defendant became liable. To this the defendant pleaded, that no part of the 599*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* was due or owing from R. M'G. to the plaintiffs on the banking account. Another plea was, that, after the accruing of the debt of R. M'G. to the plaintiffs, he was indebted to them in 1,100*l.*, of which the 599*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* was part, and was also indebted to other persons, and was in insolvent circumstances, and unable to pay his debts in full, and that thereupon his creditors agreed with him and mutually with each other to accept a composition in discharge of their respective debts ; and the plea then stated the payment by R. M'G. of the composition to the plaintiffs. Replication, that the plaintiffs entered into the composition with the knowledge of the defendant, and upon the agreement that it should not discharge the defendant from his liability upon the guarantee, which was denied by the rejoinder. At the trial, the facts stated in the replication were found by the jury, and the judge told them that under those circumstances they ought also to find the second issue for the plaintiffs, which they accordingly did :—Held, on a rule to arrest the judgment, that the replication to the fourth plea was good, inasmuch as it did not appear that the reservation of the plaintiffs' rights against the defendant was unknown to the other creditors. Davidson v. M'Gregor, 8 M. & W. 755 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 164.

Where upon giving time to a principal debtor there is a reservation of rights against a surety the surety is not discharged, and the question whether or not the surety is informed of the arrangement is wholly immaterial. Webb v. Hewitt, 3 K. & J. 438.

Effect of Security given by Surety.]—In general a release to the principal is in equity a release to the surety, but if the surety has, previously to the release given by the creditor, paid part of the debt, and given a security for the remainder, the general rule will not apply, but the creditor, notwithstanding the release, will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, retain his right against the surety. Hall v. Hutchons, 3 Myl. & K. 426 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 45.

B. accepted a bill of exchange as surety for A., and subsequently, in consideration of further time given him (B.) for payment, covenanted by deed to pay what was due on the bill with interest, and at the same time assigned a policy as further security:—Held, that an entire acquittal of debts given to A. by all his creditors did not release B. Defries v. Smith, 10 W. R. 189.

Intention to Abandon.]—A deed of assignment contained a clause providing that it should not affect any surety nor any security which any of the creditors might have, but if such security should be enforceable against the debtor or his estate, then the creditor (unless he should consent to abandon his security) should be entitled to receive dividends upon so much only of his secured debts as might remain after such security should have been realised, after credit should have been given for the full value thereof; and a creditor, holding a policy of assurance at that time valueless, proved for the full amount of his debt and received a dividend thereon:—Held, that there was no evidence of the creditor's intention to abandon his security. Parker v. Anglesea (Marquis), 25 L. T. 482; 20 W. R. 162.

Surety suing Released Principal.]—The plaintiff, a shareholder in a banking company, became surety for advances to be made by the company to the defendant. The defendant afterwards executed a composition deed, to which the plaintiff and the company were parties, whereby he assigned his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors; and this deed contained a stipulation for a reserve of remedies against sureties for the defendant. The plaintiff having been compelled to pay the debt to the company:—Held, that he was entitled to recover back the amount from the defendant. Kearsley v. Cole, 16 M. & W. 128; 16 L. J., Ex. 115.

Action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange. Plea, a composition deed registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861; the deed contained no reservation of rights against sureties. Replication, that the bill was accepted for value and indorsed to the plaintiff for value, and that if he had assented to the deed he would have discharged the drawers. Rejoinder, that before the registration of the deed the drawers consented to the plaintiff executing and becoming bound by the deed. The issue upon the rejoinder having been found for the defendant:—Held, that, as by reason of such consent the plaintiff might have come in for the composition and have held the drawers liable for the balance, he was in the same position as if the right to have recourse to the drawers had been reserved to him in the deed, and therefore he was bound by it. Poole v. Willats, 9 B. & S. 957; 38 L. J., Q. B. 255; L. R. 4 Q. B. 630; 20 L. T. 1006; 17 W. R. 1009.

In an action by the drawer against the acceptor of a bill, he pleaded a composition deed executed by him before the bill was due. The deed contained a clause reserving the rights of creditors against sureties. In the declaration the bill was stated to be payable to the plaintiff, without shewing that it was a negotiable instrument. The replication alleged that the bill was payable not to the plaintiff only, but to the plaintiff or order; that he had indorsed the bill; that the holders of the bill at the time of the making and registration of the deed presented the bill for payment, and it was dishonoured by the defendant. The plaintiff never assented to the deed, and was compelled to pay the amount of the bill to the holders, upon which he became the holder. The replication concluded, that "the plaintiff, except as in the replication mentioned, was not a creditor of the defendant in respect of his claim on the bill":—Held, that there was no departure from the declaration, but that the replication was bad because the plaintiff was a creditor and was barred by the deed. Hooper v. Marshall, 39 L. J., C. P. 14; L. R. 5 C. P. 4; 21 L. T. 639.

The acceptor of a bill of exchange for 100*l.* being sued thereon by the holders, paid into court the sum of 30*l.* in satisfaction of the whole cause of action. The holders gave notice (in Form 4, App. B., of the R. S. C. 1883) that they accepted that sum, having previously written to the acceptor to say that the indorsers had arranged to pay the balance of 70*l.*, and would sue the acceptor therefor:—Held, that the acceptor was not thereby absolutely released, and that the indorsers, having paid the balance, could recover it from the acceptor. Jones v. Whitaker, 57 L. T. 216—C. A.

13. Other Cases.

Balance Due from Creditor to Principal.]—Where A. joins as surety for B.'s debt, the mere circumstance of a balance, to the amount of the debt, being owing from the creditor to B. in other transactions, is no discharge to A. from his suretyship. Harrison v. Nettleship, 2 Myl. & K. 423; 3 L. J., Ch. 86.

Felony of Third Parties.]—Bond of a clerk to commissioners of public works, conditioned from time to time when so required, to account in writing for all moneys, and also make good answer for and pay the moneys due on the balance of such accounts to the commissioners. In an action on the bond, a replication, that although he had accounted, and a large sum was due on balance of such account, yet he did not make good answer for or pay the balance. Rejoinder, that he paid part of the balance and made good answer for the residue thus, that he was necessarily travelling on the public way in discharge of his duty, with such residue on his person, when the same was violently and feloniously stolen and taken from him:—Held, that the acts of strangers to the bond could not discharge the obligor. Hornsby v. Slack, 1 Ir. C. L. R. 126.

Agreement that Principal's Effects should be first Sold.]—Defendant drew bills as surety for H., who accepted them, and it was provided by a deed to which the plaintiff, the holder, as well as the defendant, was a party, that he should not sue defendant on the bills till H.'s effects should have been sold, and the proceeds applied in discharge of the bills. H.'s effects were seized and sold under a commission of bankruptcy, the trustee, to whom they had been conveyed by the deed, having, with the knowledge and assent of the defendant, omitted to take possession of them in time:—Held, that the plaintiff was not barred from suing the defendant on the bills. Lancaster v. Harrison, 6 Bing. 726; 4 M. & P. 561; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 288.

Landlords distraining.]—Landlords advanced money to their tenant on a joint note of himself and a surety; they afterwards took a security for this and another sum advanced at the same time by an assignment of furniture of the tenant by way of mortgage:—Held, that, by taking the furniture under a distress for rent in arrear, they discharged the surety. Pearl v. Deacon, 1 De G. & J. 461; 26 L. J., Ch. 761; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1187; 5 W. R. 793.

Hire-purchase Agreement—Seizure of Goods by Vendor.]—Where an agreement which is in form a hire-purchase agreement, but in reality an executory contract of sale, contains a stipulation that it may be determined in case of instalments being in arrear by seizure of the goods, a seizure by determining the obligation will discharge a surety for the purchaser who has guaranteed the future instalments. Hewison v. Ricketts, 63 L. J., Q. B. 711; 10 R. 558; 71 L. T. 191.

Surety becoming Principal.]—Judgment having been obtained against a surety, he entered into a new arrangement with the creditor (irrespective of the principal debtor), by which execution was not to issue while he kept up certain policies for securing the debt:—Held, that he became principal, and not surety, by the new arrangement, and that no subsequent dealing between the creditor and the principal debtor would annul it. Reade v. Lowndes, 23 Beav. 361; 26 L. J., Ch. 793; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 877.

Judgment against Principal.]—By a deed, 1,400*l.* was advanced to one Gye on the security of three life policies, whereby Gye covenanted to keep up the premiums and pay interest at 3 per cent. on the loan. By a covenant in the deed, which was made between M. of the one part, G. and L., sureties, of the second part, and Gye of the third part, G. and L. covenanted with M. "that they or one of them will, during the continuance of the present security, in the event of the premiums on the said policies . . . and the interest in respect of the said principal sum of 1,400*l.* not being paid, as to the premium within three days, and as to the interest within thirty days, of their falling due by Gye . . . duly pay the premiums . . . and also pay the interest on the said sum of 1,400*l.*" Judgment was recovered for the 1,400*l.* against Gye:—Held, that it operated as a merger with regard to the liability to pay future interest, and that the surety was released. But semble, there could be no merger of interest accrued before the judgment. Faber v. Lathom (Earl), 77 L. T. 168.

Renewal of Liability.]—Where a creditor, having already a warrant of attorney from his debtor, takes a promissory note from him and a surety, and afterwards enters up judgment under his warrant of attorney, and takes the goods of the principal debtor in execution, and subsequently withdraws the execution without the knowledge of the surety, he discharges the surety. But if the surety, after knowing that the execution is withdrawn, makes a new promise, his liability is restored, and he cannot object to the promise as being without consideration. Mayhew v. Crickets, 1 Wil. Ch. 418; 2 Swanst. 185; 19 R. R. 57.

A debtor and his surety persuaded the creditor to accept from the debtor a transfer of a mortgage which the debtor knew to be imaginary, but which the surety, relying on the debtor's statement, believed to be a good security. Afterwards the creditor, at the request of the surety, who suggested to him that he was secured by the mortgage, released the surety. Some friends of the surety, on the faith of this release, lent him money to enable him to compound with his other creditors, which the creditor, at the time of giving the release, knew that they had refused to do unless the release was given:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to be restored to his rights against the surety. Scholefield v. Templer, Johns. 155; 28 L. J., Ch. 452; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 619. Affirmed on appeal 4 De G. & J. 429; 7 W. R. 635.

Terms on which Relief granted.]—Where a surety had pleaded to an action on the guarantee, and then filed a bill in equity for an injunction, and had put the bankers to unnecessary costs:—Held, that he could only be relieved in equity on paying the costs at law subsequently to the declaration. Watson v. Allcock, 4 De G. M. & G. 242; 1 Eq. R. 231; 22 L. J., Ch. 858; 17 Jur. 568; 1 W. R. 399.

Discharge of Surety by Tenant for Life of Creditor—Extent of.]—Where a testator bequeathed the residue of his property to his widow and executrix for her life, and she released the surety for a debt due to her husband's estate from payment of all interest on the debt:—Held, to extend only to her life interest in the principal moneys due in respect of the debt. Coates v. Coates, 3 N. R. 355; 33 L. J., Ch. 448; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 532; 9 L. T. 795; 12 W. R. 634.

C. RIGHTS OF SURETY.

1. CONTRIBUTION.

a. Nature of Liability.

Under what Instruments.]—There is a right of contribution between co-sureties, whether by separate instruments or by the same instrument. Mayhew v. Crickets, 2 Swanst. 185; 1 Wils. C. C. 418; 19 R. R. 57. S. P., Craythorne v. Swinburne, 14 Ves. 160; 9 R. R. 264.

But where sureties are bound by different instruments for equal portions of a debt due from the same principal, and the suretyship of each is a separate and distinct transaction, there is no right of contribution between them. Coope v. Twynam, 1 Turn. & Russ. 426; 24 R. R. 89.

A bond was executed by a principal and two sureties, with a stipulation that the sureties should not be discharged by any new arrangement between the creditor and the principal. One of the sureties compounded with his creditors, and by the terms of the bond the moneys secured became immediately payable. After this the plaintiff signed a separate undertaking to become liable for the whole amount; and upon the principal becoming insolvent, the creditor sued the plaintiff and obtained payment of the amount due. The plaintiff filed his bill against the solvent surety in the first bond for contribution:—Held, that he was entitled to contribution from him. Whiting v. Burke, L. R. 6 Ch. 342. Affirming L. R. 10 Eq. 539.

The doctrine of contribution amongst sureties is not founded in contract, but is the result of general equity on the ground of equality of burden and benefit. Therefore, where three sureties are bound by different instruments, but for the same principal and the same engagement, they shall contribute. Deering v. Winchelsea (Earl), 1 Cox, 318; 2 Bos. & P. 270; 1 R. R. 41.

How Arranged.]—When it is ascertained what each of the co-sureties has paid beyond his proportion, the equity as between them is arranged upon the principle of contribution for excess. Gifford, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 805; 6 R. R. 53.

Custom of London.]—Where one obligee is sued by the custom of London, his co-sureties shall contribute. Layer v. Nelson, 1 Vern. 456.

Where Different Shares.]—Where several parties are sureties for the payment of one sum of money, though by distinct instruments, and one pays more than an equal share of that sum, he may have contribution from his co-sureties; but if it is arranged by contract, which it may be, that each surety shall be answerable only for a given portion of one sum of money, in such case there is no right of contribution amongst the co-sureties. Pendlebury v. Walker, 4 Y. & C. 424.

—— Arrangement for Settlement.]—A., B., C. and D., at request of E., who was in pecuniary difficulties, had joined with E. as sureties in various promissory notes and bills of exchange, but in no instance had they all four joined. A. was liable to a larger amount than B., C. and D. The creditors of E. pressed for payment, and A., B., C. and D. employed W., a solicitor, to enter into arrangements with the creditors on their behalf, and the following agreement was drawn up by W. and signed by A., B., C. and D.:—"We, the undersigned, being jointly liable as guarantors upon certain bills of exchange given in favour of E., authorise W. to act for us as our joint and several solicitor in all matters concerning those bills, and we further authorise W. to take such proceedings as he may think fit to recover the amount of such bills from E. In carrying out the terms W. will negotiate to settle the above upon the best terms he can. As, however, between the parties themselves, the following is the basis of the arrangement inter se: Upon the amount being ascertained for which the liabilities can be discharged, the parties to this arrangement undertake to provide the same in the proportion of one-fourth each, and all sums recovered from E. are to be brought into account and repaid to such parties in proportion to their existing liabilities, or to the amounts respectively found by them." In a suit by A. for contribution:—Held, that, upon the true construction of this agreement, the parties did not intend to alter their existing liabilities and to take the entire liability upon themselves in equal shares, but only to advance the requisite money in the first instance in equal shares; and that, consequently, their ultimate rights and liabilities were not thereby varied. Arcedeckne v. Howard, 45 L. J., Ch. 622—H. L. Affirming 27 L. T. 194; 20 W. R. 879—L.JJ.

Between Wrong-doers.]—The principle that no rights of indemnity and of contribution exist as between wrong-doers is confined to cases where the transaction is actually illegal or void, or where the fraud is so great that on moral grounds the court will not entertain a suit for the relief of the malfeasors. The principle is further limited to cases where the fraudulent or illegal transaction is itself the basis of the claim, and does not apply where the transaction, though leading to that which is the basis of the claim, is separable from it. Power v. Hoey, 19 W. R. 916.

Trustee who had incurred liability for negligence:—Held, not entitled to contribution from his co-trustee. Blyth v. Fladgate, 63 L. T. 546.

Promise not within Statute of Frauds.]—A promise by one co-surety to indemnify another is not within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and therefore need not be in writing. Thomas v. Cook, 3 M. & Ry. 444; 8 B. & C. 728; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 49.

Where A., at the request of B., entered into a bond with him and C. to indemnify D. against certain debts due from C., and D. and B. promised to save A. harmless from all loss by reason of the bond:—Held, that this promise was binding, although not in writing, and that A. might recover from B. the whole of the moneys which he was compelled to pay by virtue of the bond. Ib.

Liability accrues after Payment of more than Share.]—A surety is not entitled to call upon his co-surety for contribution until he has paid more than his proportion of the debt due to the principal creditor, even though the co-surety has not been required by the creditor to pay anything, provided that the co-surety has not been released by the creditor. Davis v. Humphreys (infra) followed. Craythorne v. Swinburne (14 Ves. 160; 9 R. R. 264) discussed. Snowdon, Ex parte, Snowdon, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 540; 17 Ch. D. 44; 44 L. T. 830; 29 W. R. 654—C. A.

A surety is not entitled to sue his co-sureties for contribution until he has paid on account of the principal debt a sum greater than he would be obliged to pay when the entire liability should be fairly apportioned among them. Davis v. Humphreys, 6 M. & W. 153; 9 L. J., Ex. 263; 4 Jur. 250.

Where one of several co-sureties has had judgment against him for the whole of his guarantee he cannot obtain contribution against the others until he has actually paid more than his own share, but he is entitled to a declaration of his right to contribution and to a prospective order that on paying his own share he be indemnified by his co-sureties against further liability. Wolmershausen v. Gullick, 62 L. J., Ch. 773; [1893] 2 Ch. 514; 3 R. 610; 68 L. T. 753.

Several Interest.]—Two of three persons who are jointly and severally bound in a bond of indemnity to the sheriff, in a matter in which they are severally interested, cannot, after having paid the whole, join in an action against the third for contribution. Kelby v. Steel, 5 Esp. 194.

Joint Surety at Instance of Plaintiff.]—Where the defendant at the instance of the plaintiff became a joint surety for a third person, and the plaintiff was forced to pay all the money:—Held, that he could not call on the defendant for contribution of a moiety; aliter if he had become a joint surety of his own motion. Turner v. Davies, 2 Esp. 478.

Payment without Demand.]—Where one of two persons, who, as sureties for a third, signed together with the principal a joint and several promissory note, on the note becoming due paid the amount, although no demand had been made or action brought against him by the holder:—Held, that such payment could not be considered voluntary, and that he might sue his co-surety for contribution. Pitt v. Purssord, 8 M. & W. 538; 10 L. J., Ex. 475; 5 Jur. 611.

Nature of Payment.]—A surety has no right to sue his co-surety for contribution, unless the sum paid by him, and in respect of which he sues, is his own money. Gopel or Goepel v. Swindon, 1 D. & L. 888; 13 L. J., Q. B. 113; 8 Jur. 340.

Giving Time to Surety.] — Although time given to the principal will, under certain circumstances, exonerate a surety, yet time given to a surety without the privity of his co-surety will not, upon his paying the debt, affect his right to contribution against such co-surety. Dunn v. Slee, 1 Moore, 2; Holt, N. P. 399; 17 R. R. 651.

A surety in an indemnity bond may maintain an action against his co-surety, although he has given a subsequent security to the obligees, under which he paid the sum conditional in the bond, without the knowledge or consent of such co-surety. Ib.

Advance made by Principal to one co-Surety —Concealment.]—M. and W. became co-sureties for a sum of 500*l.*, borrowed by B. Of this sum of 500*l.*, 125*l.* was, by previous agreement, advanced by B. to his surety W. No notice of this transaction was given to M. B. became bankrupt, and M. and W. were called upon to pay the unpaid balance of the loan of 500*l.* M. brought an action against W., claiming that W. should be treated as principal debtor on account of the advance of 125*l.* given to him, and claiming the benefit of all securities given to him:—Held, that there was no concealment between the co-sureties of any material fact, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief claimed. Mackreth v. Walmsley, 51 L. T. 19; 32 W. R. 819.

Security given by Principal to one co-Surety.]—In an action by a co-surety against his companion for contribution on a bond, it appeared that at the time of executing the bond the plaintiff had, unknown to the defendant, taken a promissory note from the principal for the amount:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed to say whether the plaintiff and defendant were co-sureties for the principal; and that, if the defendant meant to contend that the giving the promissory note was in consequence of an arrangement that the surety was to look solely to the principal for repayment, he should have asked the judge to put that question to the jury. Done v. Whalley, 2 Ex. 198; 17 L. J., Ex. 225; 12 Jur. 338.

—— Duty to bring into Hotchpot.] — See post, col. 1306.

Discharge of Principal—Mistake.] — To an action by the plaintiff to recover contribution from the defendant, his co-surety, he pleaded that without his privity or consent the plaintiff had agreed to discharge the principal. Replication, on equitable grounds, that the agreement, by which it was alleged the principal was discharged, was worded by mistake so as to include the claim sued for, contrary to the intention of the parties, and that the plaintiff did not otherwise discharge the principal, and that the true agreement was in all respects performed:—Held, a good replication. Yorley v. Barrett, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 225; 26 L. J., C. P. 1; 5 W. R. 137.

Alteration of Instrument by Surety.]—N., E., P. and B. purported to become sureties under a bond for C. up to 150*l.* N. and E. purported to covenant to pay up to 50*l.* each, and P. and B. up to 25*l.* each. N., who executed the bond last, bonâ fide added after his signature the words "for twenty-five pounds only." Judgment having been obtained against C. for 48*l.*, the plaintiffs sought to recover that amount from the co-sureties in the proportion of 12*l.* apiece:—Held, that the defendant sureties were discharged from all liability under the bond, on the ground that there had been a material alteration made bonâ fide by N. in the bond after its execution by the other sureties, inasmuch as, although the amount sought to be recovered from each surety was less than any amounts for which each had purported to covenant, yet the principle of proportional contribution must regulate the right of contribution as between the sureties, and that proportion had been materially altered by the limitation of liability added by N.; further, that N. himself was not liable under the bond for 25*l.*, inasmuch as he only undertook the liability under a contract in which other sureties were joined, and that contract being void in respect of the other sureties, was necessarily void as against him. Ellesmere Brewery Co. v. Cooper, 65 L. J., Q. B. 173; [1896] 1 Q. B. 75; 73 L. T. 557; 44 W. R. 254.

Between Drawer and Indorser of Accommodation Bills.]—A., being in want of money, applied to the plaintiff and the defendant to put their names to a bill for his benefit, which they agreed to do; A. drawing the bill, the plaintiff accepting, and the defendant indorsing; A. at the same time giving the plaintiff and the defendant a memorandum, stating that the bill was accepted and indorsed for his accommodation, and that he would pay the bill when it became due; he, however, not being able to do so, again applied to the plaintiff and the defendant to put their names to a second bill, in order to meet the first, which they did, the position of the names being changed, A. accepting, the plaintiff drawing, and the defendant indorsing, as before. The plaintiff having eventually to pay the amount of the bill, brought an action against the defendant for contribution as a co-surety:—Held, that the defendant was a co-surety, and therefore bound to pay his quota. Reynolds v. Wheeler, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 561; 30 L. J., C. P. 350; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1290; 4 L. T. 472.

Between Co-owners of Lands Charged with Payment of Tithes.]—The defendant was the owner and occupier of certain lands which were charged with payment of tithes; there was a provision for recovery. In an action of debt for arrears accrued in respect of the whole of the lands charged for four years, during which time the defendant was the owner and occupier of a portion only of such lands:—Held, that the defendant had his remedy by action against the co-owners for contribution. Christie v. Barker, 53 L. J., Q. B. 537—C. A.

Directors—Breach of Trust—Ratification—Liability of Administrator.]—The directors of a company advanced moneys of the company upon an unauthorised security, and two sums of 600*l.* and 400*l.* so lent were lost. The 600*l.* formed part of a loan of 800*l.*, and the 400*l.* formed part of a loan of 1,000*l.* which was granted by the board of directors, and of which 400*l.* was actually advanced and repaid, and a second 400*l.* was advanced and not repaid. In an action by the company against one of the directors who had taken part in granting the loans, he was held liable to pay the two sums of 600*l.* and 400*l.* to the company, and, having paid them, sued three of his co-directors for contribution. One of the defendants was not present at the meeting at which the loan of 800*l.* was granted, and at which a cheque for the 800*l.* was drawn, but he was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed. The 800*l.* had been already paid to the borrower :—Held, that, whether the defendant would or would not have been liable to the company, there was no equity to compel him to contribute to the plaintiff in respect of the 600*l.* Ramskill v. Edwards, 55 L. J., Ch. 81 ; 31 Ch. D. 100 ; 53 L. T. 949 ; 34 W. R. 96.

The same defendant was present at the meeting at which the loan of 1,000*l.* was granted, when he protested strongly against it. He was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the first meeting were read and confirmed, and he then signed a cheque which was drawn for the first 400*l.* :—Held, that by signing the cheque he had adopted the whole loan of 1,000*l.*, and that he was therefore liable to contribute in respect of the second 400*l.*, which was lost. Ib.

The third defendant died after the commencement of the action, and his administrator was then made a defendant :—Held, that the liability to contribute survived against the defendant's estate. Ib.

b. Amount.

Rateable Proportion.]—It seems that one of several co-sureties in a bond may recover against any one of the others his aliquot proportion of the money paid by him under the bond, regard being had to the number of sureties. Cowell v. Edwards, 2 Bos. & P. 268.

Even though the insolvency of the principal and of the other sureties is not proved. Ib.

If A., B. and C. become bound as sureties for D. in three separate bonds, and any one of them is compelled to pay the whole debt of the principal, the two others are compellable to contribute in proportion to the penalties of their respective bonds. Deering v. Winchelsea (Earl), 2 Bos. & P. 270 ; 1 Cox, 318 ; 1 R. R. 41.

A surety may recover contribution, according to the number of sureties, without reference to the number of principals, from his co-sureties in an action for money paid. Kemp v. Finden, 12 M. & W. 421 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 137 ; 8 Jur. 65. S. P., Pitt v. Purssord, 8 M. & W. 538 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 475.

Sureties in a recognizance contribute in proportion to the amounts for which they were respectively originally bound. MacDouglas, In re, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 269—C. A.

Death of Surety—Substitution of New Surety—Liability of Estate of Deceased Surety.]—F., E. and B. entered into a joint and several bond to secure the repayment of a sum lent to F., and it was stipulated that if E. or B. should die, F. should within a month procure some other person to enter into a further bond to the like effect. E. died, and a fresh bond was executed by F., B. and H. in the same form as the former bond, with the additional proviso that it should not release the heirs, executors, or administrators of E., or in any way alter, vary, or lessen their liability, or affect any right or remedy of the lender under the former bond. B. and H. having paid the debt in equal shares, claimed against E.'s estate for half the amount :—Held, that E.'s estate was liable for one-third only of the amount paid by B. and H. Ennis, In re, Coles v. Peyton, 62 L. J., Ch. 991 : [1893] 3 Ch. 238 ; 7 R. 544 ; 69 L. T. 738—C. A.

Security obtained by one Co-surety who has paid off Debt.]—C. being indebted to D., four of his friends joined him in signing and giving four promissory notes to secure the payment to D. of the sum of 13,000*l.* and interest. D. effected three policies on the life of C. for, in the aggregate, 10,000*l.* In 1867, Lord H. of E., one of the co-sureties, having been sued by D. on the notes, paid, with the assistance of his father, the Earl of E., the 13,000*l.* and interest by a mortgage of estates which were settled upon the earl for life with remainder to Lord H. of E.; and the earl having paid the premiums and kept the policies on foot, in September, 1871, shortly after the death of C., obtained an assignment from D. of the policies and received the 10,000*l.* from the insurance office. A., another of the four sureties, died. His estate, which was stated to be insolvent, was being administered by the court, and Lord H. of E. brought in a claim against it for contribution in respect of the sum paid to D. on the notes :—Held, that, under all the circumstances of the case, Lord H. of E. and his father, the earl, must be treated as one person, and that the claim for contribution would be allowed, but only after Lord H. of E. had brought into account, as a set-off, the moneys which were received on the three policies assigned to the earl, credit being first given for the premiums and other moneys which had been paid in reference to the transaction. Arcedeckne, In re, Athins v. Arcedeckne, 53 L. J., Ch. 102 ; 24 Ch. D 709 ; 48 L. T. 725.

One Surety Insolvent.]—One of the sureties of an annuity was obliged to pay the arrears of an annuity, a second was insolvent, and an action was brought against the third for contribution :—Held, that at common law he was liable only to one-third, and not one-half. Browne v. Lee, 6 B. & C. 689 ; 9 D. & R. 700 ; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 276.

Five directors of a company gave their joint and several bond to a bank to secure repayment with interest of a loan made by the bank to the company. By an agreement between five persons interested in the company of the first part, and the five directors of the second part, after reciting the bond, it was agreed that, in pursuance of an agreement made upon the treaty for the loan by the bank, the liability of the several persons parties thereto of the second part, under the bond, should be borne and discharged by the ten several persons parties thereto in equal shares and proportions, and that each of the several persons parties thereto would indemnify the other nine against all actions, &c., in respect of the loan by the bank or in respect of the bond. The company was ordered to be wound up, and the bank recovered judgment against the obligees of bond for the whole amount of principal and interest due thereunder. One of the guarantors had become insolvent. On a bill by two of the guarantors, who had under the judgment paid more than their proportion of the sum secured by the bond, against the other eight guarantors to enforce a rateable contribution from them in respect of the principal, interest, and costs recovered under the bond :—Held, that all the solvent guarantors were liable to contribute rateably in respect of that whole amount recovered under the bond, and that the extra liability arising from the insolvency of one of the guarantors was not to fall upon the defendants to the action at law. Dallas v. Walls, 29 L. T. 599.

—— Amount of Proof by Co-surety who has paid off Debt.]—Where one of several co-sureties has paid off the debt, he is, notwithstanding the terms of s. 5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, entitled to the benefit of a proof by the creditor against one of the co-sureties for the full amount of the debt, and his right of proof is not (though his right of receiving dividends is) limited to the sum which as between him and his co-surety such co-surety is liable to pay. Stokes, Ex parte (De G. 618) followed. Parker, In re, Morgan v. Hill, 64 L. J., Ch. 6; [1894] 3 Ch. 400; 7 R. 590; 71 L. T. 557; 43 W. R. 1—C. A.

Whether the result would be the same if the creditor had never proved, and the surety who had paid the debt had in the first instance claimed against his co-surety, quære. Ib.

Joint Adventure—Default in Payment of Loss by One Party.]—By agreement between the plaintiffs, the defendants, and Messrs. L., B. & Co., a cargo of Californian wheat was to be shipped for their joint account by the correspondents of L., B. & Co. at San Francisco, consigned to the plaintiffs at Liverpool for sale upon certain special terms; the shippers to reimburse themselves for costs and insurance of the cargo by drafts on the plaintiffs at sixty days' sight to the extent of 45*s.* per quarter, less freight, and for the balance of invoice amount by separate drafts at sixty days' sight upon each of the above parties for one-third of the excess. The cargo was shipped, and a bill was drawn by the San Francisco house for 20,353*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* on account of the invoice price of the wheat, less freight, upon the plaintiffs, and was duly accepted and paid by them, together with freight, insurance, and other charges in respect of the cargo; and the wheat on arrival was sold by the plaintiffs at a loss. In December, 1883, L., B. & Co. became insolvent and compounded with their creditors for 30 per cent. of their liabilities, which composition the plaintiffs received, leaving an unpaid balance of 1,760*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* due from that firm for their share of the loss on the adventure:—Held (the judge to draw inferences of fact), that the purchase and shipment of the wheat was a joint partnership adventure, each of the three firms to participate equally in the profit or loss; and that the defendants, according to the rule of equity, which since the Judicature Act, 1873, is to prevail, were liable to contribute equally with the plaintiffs to make good the default of L., B. & Co. Lowe v. Dixon, 16 Q. B. D. 455; 34 W. R. 441.

Costs.]—A. and B. were sureties for C., a collector of taxes, who became a defaulter. The obligees sued A. and recovered:—Held, that in an action for contribution, brought by A. against B., A. could only recover half the amount of the verdict against him, and that he could not recover from B. either the half of the taxed costs of the obligees, or the half of his own costs of defending the action brought by the obligees. Knight v. Hughes, 3 Car. & P. 467; M. & M. 247.

Held, also, that if A., after the verdict in the action against him on the bond, obtained a sum of money from C., he must take that in reduction of the amount of the verdict, and could not apply it either to pay his own costs or the taxed costs of the obligees. Ib.

A. deposited with the defendant, as a security for goods, a bill accepted by the plaintiff, for which the plaintiff had received no value. A. afterwards paid for the goods, and asked for the restoration of the bill; but the defendant indorsed it for value to G., who sued the plaintiff and recovered:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover from the defendant the amount of the bill as money paid to the use of the defendant, but not the costs of the action by G. against the plaintiff. Bleaden v. Charles, 7 Bing. 246; 5 M. & P. 14; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 82.

Where the plaintiff and the defendant executed as sureties a warrant of attorney, given as a collateral security for a sum of money advanced on mortgage to the principals, and on default being made by the principals, judgment was entered up on the warrant of attorney, and execution issued against the plaintiff:—Held, that he was entitled to recover from the defendant, as his co-surety, a moiety of the costs of such execution. Kemp v. Finden, 12 M. & W. 421; 13 L. J., Ex. 137; 8 Jur. 65.

Interest.]—When one of several sureties has paid the principal debt, and some of the co-sureties are insolvent, he is entitled as against the solvent sureties to be repaid their numerical shares of what he has paid with interest from the time of payment, although the instrument does not contain any express indemnity so as to carry interest as on a specialty. Hitchman v. Stewart, 3 Drew. 271; 3 Eq. R. 838; 24 L. J., Ch. 690; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 839; 3 W. R. 464.

By deed A. agreed to charge certain property with all sums that B. should pay as surety for a third party, and also agreed that B. should insure her life, and that the costs of such insurance, and the payments for keeping the same on foot, should be paid out of the property charged; and she directed the trustees to make the necessary payments for effecting and keeping on foot the policies. The trustees did not make the payments, but the policy was kept on foot by B.:—Held, that he was entitled to interest thereon. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

Where sureties joined as co-obligors in a bond, one, who had been compelled to pay the amount with interest, was not entitled to carry on interest upon such payment against the personal representative of his co-surety. Contribution decreed, but without interest either on the consolidated sum or the principal money paid. Quære, whether as against the principal debtor or his representative such payment carries interest in the absence of express agreement. Onge v. Truelock, 2 Moll. 42.

—— Use of Recognizance.]—When one of two sureties has paid the full amount of a receiver's recognizance, he is entitled to use the recognizance for the purpose of recovering, out of the estate of his co-surety, not only one-half of the sum so paid by him, but also interest thereon from the date of payment. Swan's Estate, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 208—Ch. App.

A surety having paid the whole amount of a recognizance, and having been allowed to use the recognizance for the recovery of contribution from his co-surety, he is not thereby entitled to recover interest thereon. Salkeld v. Abbott, Hay & J. 110.

Use of Crown Securities.]—A surety by recognizance who pays the whole amount into court, when pressed with crown process, is entitled to use the crown securities, in order to levy a moiety from his co-surety, provided he share with his co-surety the benefit of any counter-security he may have taken from the principal. Latouche v. Pallas, Hayes, 450.

c. Proceedings.

Action.]—A surety may recover contribution from his co-surety in an action for money paid. Kemp v. Finden, 12 M. & W. 421 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 137 ; 8 Jur. 65.

A. mortgaged an estate to B., in which C. joined as a surety ; and A. and C. gave a joint bond for the payment of the sum advanced by B. A. afterwards, by indenture, to which C. was no party, sold the estate to D., who engaged to pay B. the sum advanced by him to A., and covenanted to indemnify A. and C. from the payment thereof. D. being afterwards called on for payment by B., C. advanced to D. the sum due to B. in discharge of the mortgage :—Held, that C. was not entitled to recover from D. in an action for money paid. Crafts v. Tritton, 2 Moore, 411.

Where a surety, bound with his principal for the payment of money by instalments, takes a bond as a security, he cannot recover on the implied promise. Toussaint v. Martinant, 2 Term Rep. 100.

Parties.]—Suit by one surety against another for contribution, the representatives of another surety who died insolvent ought to be parties. Hole v. Harrison, Rep. t. Finch, 15.

Proof of Insolvency of Principal.]—On a bill filed by a surety against his co-surety and the principal, for a contribution from the co-surety in respect of money actually paid by the plaintiff for the principal, it is not necessary to prove the insolvency of the principal ; otherwise, where the principal is not a party to the suit. Lawson v. Wright, 1 Cox, 275.

Evidence of Payment.]—In an action against a co-surety in a bond for contribution, any declaration of the obligee upon what account he received the money paid him in account by the principal obligor is not evidence unless made at the time of payment. Dunn v. Slee, 1 Moore, 2 ; Holt, N. P. 399 ; 17 R. R. 651.

Proof in Bankruptcy—Statute of Limitations.]—Liability to contribution as a surety, though the amount was not ascertained at the time of the bankruptcy, is a debt provable under s. 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. The Statute of Limitations does not begin to run as against a surety claiming contribution until his own liability is ascertained. Wolmershausen v. Gullick, 62 L. J., Ch. 773 ; [1893] 2 Ch. 514 ; 3 R. 610 ; 68 L. T. 753.

2. Recoupment.

By Custom of London.]—By the custom of London, where a surety pays a debt, he shall maintain an action against the principal, though he has not counter bond. Layer v. Nelson, 1 Vern. 456.

Effect of subsequent Accord.]—An annuity bond was executed by two brothers, one as principal, the other as surety. By agreement afterwards, between them and a third brother, for the settlement of their several claims and debts, and for the apportionment of property to meet the latter, the annuity bond was included. The surety in that bond was afterwards compelled to pay ; and his representative brought an action against their principal to be reimbursed :—Held, that the agreement was an accord, in respect of the annuity bond ; and that as third parties were bound by that agreement, the surety was also bound ; and that the action could not be maintained. Cartwright v. Cooke, 3 B. & Ad. 701 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 261.

Bankruptcy of Principal—Right of Surety to Prove.]—Surety for bankrupt not entitled to prove for purpose of voting at first meting unless he has paid the debt. Whittaker, Ex parte, Parrott, In re, 63 L. T. 777 ; 39 W. R. 400 ; 8 Morrell, 49.

Under s. 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the surety of a bankrupt is entitled to prove against the bankrupt's estate, although he has not paid the debt for which he is liable. Delmar, Ex parte, Herepath, In re, 38 W. R. 752 ; 7 Morrell, 129, 190.

A bank held the guarantee of B. for their debtor's account, whereby it was provided that "the guarantee should extend to the repayment of all moneys which should at any time be due from the debtor to the bank, and should be a continuing guarantee to the extent of 800*l*. . ." and "that the guarantee should not be considered as wholly or partially satisfied by the payment or liquidation at any time or times thereafter of any sums for the time being due, but should extend to and be a security for every and all future sum or sums of money at any time due to the bank thereon, notwithstanding any such payment or liquidation ;" and "that all dividends, compositions, and payments should be taken or applied as payments in gross, and that the guarantee should apply to secure any ultimate balance due to the bank." The debtor having filed a petition for liquidation, B. paid 800*l*., the amount of his guarantee, to the bank. Upon a question whether the bank, or B., was entitled to prove for the 800*l*. :—Held, that B. having by the guarantee contracted himself out of his original right, in favour of the bank, the latter was entitled to prove for the whole amount of their debt, including the 800*l*. paid by B. Midland Banking Co., Ex parte, Sellers, In re, 38 L. T. 395.

Principal and surety, on a note payable by instalments ; after one payment became due, principal discharged under the Insolvent Debtors Act. Bill by creditor, and decree against surety, and him to have remedy over against effects of the principal for the first money due on the first payment, and the common decree for the rest. O'Carroll's Case, Ambl. 61.

Surety in a bond for the bankrupts after the bankrupts obtain their certificate, joins with them in a new bond to the representatives of the creditor, and the old bond is delivered up to the surety :—Held, that this was not equivalent to payment by the surety so as to enable him to prove under the commission. Sergeant, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 183. Affirmed 2 Glyn & J. 23.

Right to Dividend where Creditor proves.]—A. guaranteed to B. & Co. the payment of all goods supplied by them to H. until they received notice from C. of the discontinuance of the guarantee, "but so as A.'s liability under the guarantee should not at any time exceed 250*l*." H. afterwards became bankrupt, and owed B. & Co. for goods, 657*l*., upon which sum they received a dividend in the bankruptcy. A. paid the 250*l*. under his guarantee :—Held, that A. was entitled to receive from B. & Co. a proportionate part of the dividend. Hobson v. Bass, L. R. 6 Ch. 792 ; 19 W. R. 992.

Four directors of a company, by way of security for any balance which might be due from the company to a bank, gave the manager of a branch of the bank their promissory note for 2,000*l.*, and the manager indorsed the note to the bank. The company was wound up. The bank proved in the winding-up for 3,659*l.* as due by the company to the bank, and was declared entitled to a dividend of 1,051*l.* on that sum. The bank afterwards brought an action against one of the makers of the note, who paid the bank 2,067*l.* for debt and interest due on the note :—Held, that the giving the note was in pursuance of an ordinary contract of suretyship, and that the surety who had paid the 2,067*l.* was entitled to receive from the bank a share of the dividend, bearing the same proportion to the whole dividend as the sum paid by him bore to the sum proved for by the bank. Gray v. Seckham, 42 L. J., Ch. 127 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 680 ; 27 L. T. 290 ; 20 W. R. 920.

Surety for indemnity to a limited amount, having paid to the extent of his engagement, entitled to dividends, upon proof by the creditor under the bankruptcy of the principal debtor, subject (see Turner, Ex parte, 3 Ves. 243 ; 3 R. R. 90) to a deduction of the porportion of dividend upon the residue of the debt proved beyond that for which the surety was engaged, supposing that expunged. The surety not entitled to the benefit of the proof against other estates upon a distinct security. Paley v. Field, 12 Ves. 435 ; 8 R. R. 349.

A surety by bond for advances generally, but under a limited penalty, is not liable beyond the penalty : by paying the penalty, he is entitled to a proportion of the dividends from a proof by the creditors to a greater amount under the bankruptcy of the principal debtor ; and a surety may compel the creditor to prove under the commission against the principal, and to become a trustee of the dividends for such surety having paid the whole. Wood, Ex parte, cor. Ld. Thurlow, Bridg. Ind.

A person who becomes surety for a limited amount of a debt has, on paying the amount for which he is liable, all the rights of a creditor in respect of that amount, and is entitled to share in the security held by the creditor for the whole debt. Goodwin v. Gray, 22 W. R. 312.

Retainer by Executor.]—A surety having paid the debt of his principal is entitled to rank as a simple contract creditor for the amount, and, if made executor, to retain it out of the assets of the principal against all other creditors of equal degree. Boyd v. Brooks, 34 L. J., Ch. 605 ; 12 L. T. 38 ; 13 W. R. 419.

Executor, surety with testator for another allowed to retain out of estate whole amount, due on bond. Bathurst v. De la Zouch, Dick. 460.

Retainer by Agent.]—The obligor of several bonds, in which A., his solicitor, joined as surety, conveyed certain real property to A., upon trust to sell, and out of the proceeds of the sale to pay the bond creditors. The creditors did not execute, nor had any notice of the deed :—Held, that the deed was a mere deed of agency, and not binding in favour of the creditors ; but that A. was entitled to retain the estates conveyed to him until he should be discharged from his liability as surety under the bonds. Wilding v. Richards, 1 Colly. 655 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 211.

Transfer of Security by Surety to Creditor—Liability of Principal to Surety for Money paid.]—Where at the trial of an action for money paid, the jury found that the plaintiff was surety, and the defendant one of the principals, on a promissory note, and it was also proved that the plaintiff had transferred a mortgage security, which was his property, to the holder of the note, who thereupon released him from liability and, which security was valued by the jury (under the direction of the judge) at a certain sum ; but it did not appear that any cash was paid on foot of the security or otherwise, by or on behalf of the plaintiff :—Held (diss. O'Brien, J.), that the plaintiff was entitled to retain the verdict entered for him at the trial for the value of the mortgage. Barclay v. Gooch (2 Esp. 571) discussed. Fahey v. Frawley, 26 L. R., Ir. 78.

Amount.]—A surety who compounds a debt for which his principal and himself have become jointly liable, and takes an assignment of that debt to a trustee for himself, can only claim against his principal the amount which he has actually paid. Reed v. Morris, 2 Myl. & Cr. 361 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 197 ; 1 Jur. 233.

The plaintiff and defendant being joint makers of a promissory note, the defendant as principal, and the plaintiff as his surety, the defendant covenanted with the plaintiff to pay the amount to the payee of the note on a given day, but made default :—Held, in an action on this covenant, that the plaintiff was entitled, though he had not paid the note, to recover the full amount of it by way of damages. Loosemore v. Radford, 9 M. & W. 657 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 881 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 284.

Formerly it was supposed, that in the case where one of several sureties paid the whole debt owing from the principal, his remedy was only in equity for a contribution ; but in modern times it has been held, that if one in the nature of a surety pays a debt, he may maintain an action against the party liable for the debt. Stirling v. Forester, 3 Bligh, 575 ; 22 R. R. 69.

Annuity bond forfeited when the grantor was discharged under an insolvent act, which provided that future estate should not be discharged ; the penalty, being less than the subsequent arrears, was allowed as the debt, and not only in favour of the purchaser of an annuity, but also of a co-obligor as surety, having compounded with the purchaser, and obtained possession of the securities, by repaying the money advanced with the arrears then due, being at that time less than the penalty. Butcher v. Churchill, 14 Ves. 569.

Interest.]—A surety, who is indemnified against all loss by his principal, and who is compelled to pay the debt of his principal, is entitled to interest upon the amount so paid, though interest was not expressly mentioned in the contract between them, and though there was not any demand of interest, and though the claim in respect thereof was not made until many years after payment. Petre v. Duncombe 2 L. M. & P. 107 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 242 ; 15 Jur. 86.

A. as principal and B. as surety joined in granting an annuity for the life of C., and A. assigned to trustees a policy of insurance upon his own life, upon trust to permit C., after the death of A., out of the money insured or the interest thereof, to receive the annuity, and A. and B. executed their joint and several bond conditioned to secure the punctual payment of the annuity. The executors of A. received the amount of the policy, and invested it upon Government securities. The executor of B. was compelled to pay C. an arrear of the annuity :—Held, that as against the general assets of A. the executor of B. was not entitled to interest on the money so paid by him ; but that he was entitled, as against the sum insured and the interest thereon, to be put in the same situation as if it had been duly applied in payment of the annuity, and therefore to be repaid thereout the money advanced by him with interest. Caulfield v. Maguire, 2 Jo. & Lat. 141 ; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 164.

Two persons having jointly and severally granted an annuity, and mutually covenanted that each should pay one moiety, and indemnify the other against all "actions, suits, costs, charges, damages, demands, sums of money, and expenses," which might be incurred by reason of the nonpayment thereof ; one, who, on the insolvency of the other, had made payments on account of his moiety, is not entitled to interest on such payments. Bell v. Free, 1 Swanst. 90 ; 1 Wils. Ch. 51 ; 18 R. R. 153.

In cases of bond debt, interest is computed only to the commission. In the case of principal and surety, if principal become bankrupt, the surety cannot prove for interest paid by him after date of the commission. Francis v. Rucker, Ambl. 674.

Surety cannot prove for interest due and paid subsequent to commission under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52. Wilson, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 137.

A. became surety for payment of two promissory notes upon which his son was liable. He died before the notes were due, and the son being unable to pay them, the trustees of A.'s will borrowed money sufficient for the purpose, and paid the amount due for principal and interest on such notes. By his will A. made his son one of his residuary legatees :—Held, that the son, or his share in the testator's estate, was bound to make good to such estate, in addition to the principal paid by the trustees on account of such notes, interest upon the sums for which the notes were originally made. Willes v. Greenhill, 30 L. J., Ch. 808 ; 9 W. R. 217.

—— Compound Interest.]—B. was a surety for A. in a joint bond to C. and D., for 180,000*l.* conditioned to pay 90,000*l.* with interest at 5 per cent. By a counter bond of equal date, A. was bound to B., in a like penalty, with condition to indemnify B., his heirs, executors, &c., from payment of the said 90,000*l.* and interest, and from all damages he might sustain on account of the nonpayment of the said sum, and interest. After the deaths of A. and B., the executors of B. were called upon, and did pay to C. and D. 22,000*l.* on account of the principal, and several large sums for interest on A.'s debt. In a suit for the administration of A.'s estate, the court allowed the executors of B. to come in as creditors for the several sums so paid by them, and for interest on the 22,000*l.*, but not for interest on the several sums of money paid for interest on the original debt. Rigby v. Macnamara, 2 Cox, 415 ; 2 R. R. 92.

Priority—Crown Debt]—A surety to the crown, who has paid the debt of his deceased principal, is entitled to the crown's priority in the administration of his principal's estate. Churchill (Lord). In re, Manisty v. Churchill, 58 L. J., Ch. 136 ; 39 Ch. D. 174 ; 59 L. T. 597 ; 36 W. R. 805.

Sureties of a county treasurer, paying the amount of his recognizance, are not by reason of such payment entitled to priority over the crown, there being a debt due by such treasurer to the crown, ultra the amount of the recognizance. Reg. v. O'Callaghan, Jon. & C. 154 ; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 439.

—— Co-sureties.]—A. mortgaged house to B., and C. and D. were his sureties : money being due for interest, C. paid it to prevent suit. D. lent A. money on equity of redemption, on which C. requested him to include debt, in consideration money, which he did :—Held, that C. shall have his demand first satisfied. Beckett v. Booth, 2 Eq. Abr. 595.

Costs—No Notice of Liability prior to Writ.]—The plaintiff guaranteed A. that the defendant would, upon demand, from time to time pay to A. what should be due. A demand was made upon the defendant by A., and upon nonpayment a writ was issued against the plaintiff for the amount, the writ being the first notification to him of the amount being due and unpaid. He allowed judgment to go by default, and an execution was levied upon his goods :—Held, that he might recover against the defendant the costs of the writ at the suit of A., but not the costs of the subsequent proceedings. Pierce v. Williams, 23 L. J., Ex. 322.

Surety in Bond—Whether Specialty Creditor.]—If a surety in a bond (without any counter-security to himself), pays off the bond for his principal, he is merely a simple contract creditor, and not a specialty creditor of the principal debtor. Simpkins v. Poulett, 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 81.

Evidence of Payment by Surety.]—In an action by the surety on a sheriff's bond against his principal, for the recovery of money alleged to have been paid to the sheriff, the evidence of payment was, that an action having been brought upon the bond against both, they had defended the action by one attorney ; that a compromise had been effected under the authority of the surety ; that the surety had sent a cheque for the agreed sum to the sheriff by post, and that he had subsequently verbally stated to the principal that he had paid the debt and costs in the action, to which the latter made no reply ; and that eight or nine years had elapsed since the compromise :—Held, that there was evidence that the debt had been satisfied by the surety. Price v. Burca, 6 W. R. 40.

Lien on Property of Principal.]—Sureties having paid the amount of the sums secured by them :—Held, that they had a lien on the principal's property. Munnings v. Bury, 1 Tam. 147.

A receiver, entitled to shares of the property in the cause as heir-at-law of the testator, and to other shares as purchaser, mortgaged the former shares to his surety, excepting the latter. On default of the receiver the surety had to pay :—Held, that the surety by accepting the mortgage had not waived his general rights and was entitled to a lien on the rest of the receiver's property. Brandon v. Brandon, 3 De G. & J. 524 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 147 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 256 ; 7 W. R. 250.

A factor who becomes surety for his principal, has a lien on the goods sold by him for his principal, to the amount of the sum for which he has so become surety. Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251.

A surety for a mortgagor, who pays part of the mortgage, is entitled, as against the mortgagor, to a charge on the estate. Gedye v. Matson, 25 Beav. 310.

Surety for one Partner against another Partner.]—The rights of a surety against his principal are not exactly the same as those of the creditor; and therefore, although a creditor who has recovered judgment against one partner cannot sue another partner, that rule does not take away the rights of a surety for one partner as against another partner. Kendall v. Hamilton (4 App. Cas. 504), distinguished. Badeley v. Consolidated Bank, 34 Ch. D. 536; 55 L. T. 635; 35 W. R. 136.

Recovery of Money paid by Mistake.]—The plaintiff was co-surety with K. in a bond given by B. to the guardians of a union, conditioned for the due accounting to them of moneys received by him as treasurer. At the time the bond was entered into B. was a member of a banking firm, into which the moneys of the union were afterwards paid and drawn out by the guardians by cheques in their name. The firm became bankrupt, and B. having ceased to be the treasurer, the guardians demanded of the plaintiff, as such surety, the balance due from B., the late treasurer. The plaintiff, in ignorance of the facts, paid the money:—Held, that the sureties were not liable on the bond, and that the plaintiff having paid the money in ignorance of the facts, was entitled to recover it back. Mills v. Alderbury Union, 3 Ex. 590; 18 L. J., Ex. 252.

Effect of Indemnity given to Surety.—The plaintiff accepted a bill for the accommodation of R. R. afterwards compounded with his creditors, who executed a release in which the holder of the bill concurred, under a secret understanding between him, the plaintiff, and R. that his rights against the plaintiff should not be prejudiced. R. died, appointing the plaintiff his executor. The plaintiff, at the request of R.'s widow, renounced probate, and allowed her to take out administration, in consideration of which, she and her brother gave him a memorandum, undertaking to indemnify him against all his liabilities as surety for R., on several instruments, and under the accommodation bill, but not beyond the amount of the assets. The holder of the bill pressed the plaintiff for payment, the plaintiff paid him, and filed a bill against Mrs. R. and her brother for indemnity out of the assets:—Held, that however the case might have stood apart from the memorandum, Mrs. R. had thereby estopped herself from treating the plaintiff's payment to the bill holder as voluntary, and not made in satisfaction of a legal liability, and that she had therefore no defence to the suit; and that although the demand against her brother might be of a legal and not of an equitable nature, yet as he was surety in respect of a demand which, as against his principal, was the proper subject of a suit in equity, he was properly made a party to the suit. Atkins v. Revell, 1 De G. F. & J. 360.

An indenture was made between A., B., C. and D., which recited the bankruptcy of A., and that he had entered into a composition, with the sanction of the court of bankruptcy, to be paid by instalments secured by promissory notes, and that B., C. and D. had agreed to secure the payment of the last two of the notes upon being indemnified against any loss in respect of their liability on foot of the notes. The deed witnessed that, in pursuance of the agreement, and in consideration of the liability of B., C. and D. on foot of the notes, and in order to indemnify them from any loss in respect thereof, A. charged his stock in trade, and all his real and personal estate, with payment of the amount of the two last instalments of the notes, and gave them powers of attorney, of entry and sale; and out of the proceeds, and after payment of costs, to retain any moneys which they should pay, or should be liable to pay, in respect of the notes; and A. covenanted to indemnify B., C. and D. against payment of the notes. B. was a creditor of A., and took notes signed by A., B., C. and D. for the composition. E., another creditor, took similar notes, and handed them over before they were due to B., in payment of a debt due by himself to B.:—Held, first, that the deed was confined to the liability of the sureties, and did not convert the simple contract debts of A. into specialty debts. Caldwell v. Parker, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 519; 17 W. R. 955.

Held, secondly, that B. was only a simple contract creditor in respect of notes given to him. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that he was a specialty creditor in respect of the notes given to E. Ib.

Right to compel Principal to pay accrued Debt.]—When there is an accrued debt, and the surety is liable and admits liability for the amount guaranteed, he has a right to compel the principal debtor to relieve him from his liability by paying off the debt. In order to support such an action it is not necessary to prove that the creditor has refused to exercise his right to sue the principal debtor. Mathews v. Saurin, 31 L. R., Ir. 181.

A surety may in equity compel his principal to relieve him of his liability by payment of the debt. Antrobus v. Davidson, 3 Mer. 578; 17 R. R. 130.

Surety depositing money, and indemnifying against expense, &c., may compel creditor to go against principal, and even to prove under commission of bankruptcy for benefit of surety. Wright v. Simpson, 6 Ves. 734.

The case in which a surety has a right to sue his principal in equity, to be discharged from his liability, is where the creditor has a right to sue his debtor, and refuses to exercise that right, semble. Padwick v. Stanley, 9 Hare, 627; 16 Jur. 586.

If A. borrows money for B. on a mortgage of his estate, the covenant in the mortgage deed to pay the money will bind him for whom it is borrowed. The mortgagor may file a bill against his debtor to have his estate disencumbered, and so may every surety against his principal, for he shall not be put to his indebitatus assumpsit. Lee v. Rook, Mos. 318.

Covenant to save harmless decreed in specie; to wit, the principal was decreed to indemnify the surety. Ranelagh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 189.

A. is bound for B., and has a counter bond. Equity will compel B. to pay the defendant, though A. is not sued. Ib.

Surety for a receiver indemnified out of the balance due to him. Glossup v. Harrison, 3 Ves. & B. 134; G. Coop. 61.

Payment under fear of Arrest.] — Surety, having paid defendant for fear of arrest, shall recover same in chancery. Anon., Cary, 19.

Rights against Co-surety.]—A surety who pays the debt of his principal has the same rights against his co-surety that he has against the principal. Woods v. Creaghe, 2 Hog. 50.

3. SECURITIES.

Title to.]—A surety is entitled to the benefit of any security which the creditor has received for the debt, though he has received it after the contract of suretyship. Campbell v. Rothwell, 47 L. J., Q. B. 144; 38 L. T. 33.

Sureties are entitled to the benefit of every security which the creditor has against the principal. Mayhew v. Crickett, 2 Swanst. 191; 1 Wils. 424; 19 R. R. 57, 61.

A surety paying off the debt is entitled to the benefit of a security given without his knowledge by the debtor to the creditor, at a different time, to secure another demand in addition to that for which he became surety. Scott v. Knox, 2 Jones. 778.

A surety for part of a debt is not entitled to the benefit of a security given by the debtor to the creditor, at a different time, for another part of the debt. Wade v. Coope, 2 Sim. 155; 29 R. R. 70.

The right of a surety who pays the debt, to the benefit of subsidiary securities belonging to the principal, is the common equity of the court; therefore, where A. granted land to B., who covenanted to pay rent, and keep premises in repair, and C. executed a mortgage to A. to secure the performance of the covenants, a bill to foreclose (rent being in arrear) filed by A., who afterwards accepted a surrender of the land from B., dismissed; for the subsidiary fund to which C., as surety, was entitled to resort for indemnity being extinguished by A. accepting the surrender, C. was therefore deprived of his remedy over the land. Harberton (Lord) v. Bennett, Beat. 386.

Where the surety pays off debt in bankruptcy, he is entitled to have an assignment of the security to enable him to obtain satisfaction for what he has paid above his own share. Crisp, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 133.

—— Whence Derived.]—The right of a surety to the benefit of the security held by the creditor is derived from the obligation of the principal debtor to indemnify his surety. Semble. Yonge v. Reynell, 9 Hare, 809.

—— Against what Persons.]—A surety who pays off a debt for which he became answerable, is entitled to all the equities which the creditor could have enforced, and that, not merely against the principal debtor, but also against all persons claiming under him. Drew v. Lockett, 32 Beav. 499; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 786; 8 L. T. 782; 11 W. R. 843.

In 1853, L. mortgaged real estate to E., and D. joined in that mortgage as surety for L. Subsequently thereto, L. further mortgaged the same estate to C., and in 1854 and 1855 executed several other mortgages to S., who then had notice of the first mortgage. In 1858 the first mortgage was transferred to S. The legal estate in the property comprised in that mortgage and the subsequent mortgages afterwards became vested in S. A portion of the real estates had been sold by E., and S. claimed a priority over D. in respect of the unsold part of the property. On a bill by D., to ascertain the priorities of the several incumbrancers:—Held, that D. was entitled to the unsold realty in priority to S. Ib.

A. mortgaged his estate to C., and B. became A.'s surety for the debt. Afterwards A. mortgaged the estate to D., who had notice of the first mortgage. The first mortgage was subsequently paid off, partly by B., the surety, but D. got a transfer of the legal estate:—Held, that the surety had still priority over D. for the amount paid by him under the first mortgage, as surety for A. Ib.

Marshalling—In what Cases.]—A. having effected policies upon his own life with an assurance office, mortgaged them to the office as a security for successive loans. In one of these mortgages B. became surety for repayment of the amount borrowed. A. subsequently became bankrupt, and B. was compelled as surety to pay part of the debt. Upon A.'s death:—Held, as against his assignee in bankruptcy, that B. was entitled to marshal the securities so as to obtain repayment out of the balance of the several policy moneys of the amount which he had been compelled as surety to pay. Heyman v. Dubois, 41 L. J., Ch. 224; L. R. 13 Eq. 158; 25 L. T. 558.

A., being indebted to B., lodges several securities for money with him as collateral securities for the debt; A. afterwards borrows a further sum of money of B., for which C. becomes his surety. A. becomes bankrupt, and B. calls upon C. to pay the second debt. The securities in the hands of B. being more than sufficient to pay the first debt, C. shall have the benefit of the surplus in reduction of the second debt. Praed v. Gardiner, 2 Cox, 86; 2 R. R. 8.

Indorsing Acceptance.]—The indorser of a bill of exchange is a surety for the payment to the holder, and, having paid it, is entitled to the benefit of any securities to cover it deposited with the holder by the acceptor. He is so entitled whether at the time of his indorsement he knew, or did not know, of the deposit of those securities. The surety's right in this respect in no way depends on contract, but is the result of the equity of indemnification attendant on the suretyship. Duncan, Fox & Co. v. North and South Wales Bank, 50 L. J., Ch. 355; 6 App. Cas. 1; 43 L. T. 706; 29 W. R. 763—H. L. (E.)

S. C. R., one of the partners of R. & Sons, in December, 1874, deposited with the N. & S. W. Bank the title deeds of two of his own freehold properties, and signed a memorandum acknowledging them to be deposited as securities for what the N. & S. W. Bank might advance to the firm in the way of discounts. In November, 1875, D. & Co. sold to R. & Sons a cargo of corn to be paid for in cash. Cash was paid only for part. R. & Sons offered a bill of exchange for the rest, which was declined. D. & Co. were customers of the N. & S. W. Bank. R. & Sons said if D. & Co. would inquire of those bankers they would find it would be all right with their bills. The bank manager refused to discount the bill without the indorsement of D. & Co., but said that he believed D. & Co. would incur no more than a nominal liability by putting their names on the bill. D. & Co. thereupon consented to take the bill, indorsed it in the ordinary way, and it was discounted by the bank and carried to their credit. In January, 1876, R. & Sons stopped payment. The bill became due in February, and was dishonoured. D. & Co., who then became acquainted with the fact that securities had been deposited with the bankers to cover advances on R. & Sons' bills, brought an action against the N. & S. W. Bank to have the benefit, so far as they would go, of the securities deposited in December, 1874, claiming to be sureties to the bankers for what was due upon the bill:—Held, that D. & Co. were sureties on the bill, and that as such they were entitled to the benefit of these securities. Ib.

Mortgage.]—In December, 1854, S. assigned certain premises and a policy of assurance to secure the repayment of a sum of 200*l.* advanced to him by W., and interest. The proviso for redemption was that, on payment of the money, W. would reassign the premises and policy unto S., his executors, administrators or assigns, or as he or they should direct. F., by the same indenture, as surety, covenanted for himself only, with W., that while the 200*l.* or any part should remain owing he would pay the interest and premiums, and he also assigned a policy on his own life, and covenanted to pay the premiums. W. at four different periods between May, 1856, and May, 1866, advanced moneys amounting to 530*l.* to S. on the security of the same premises. S. made default in the payment of interest. W. died in 1878, and his executors made a demand upon F. for all arrears, which he paid, and he also paid the premiums on the policy of S.:—Held, that F. was entitled to have a transfer of all the securities on paying what was due upon the mortgage of December, 1854. Forbes v. Jackson, 51 L. J., Ch. 690; 19 Ch. D. 615; 30 W. R. 652.

A., B. and C. executed to D. a mortgage of B.'s lands (comprised in the petition for sale), and of C.'s lands, to secure 2,914*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, of which 900*l.* was B.'s debt, and the remainder C.'s debt. The mortgage contained a proviso that, as between A., B. and C., A. was a surety only, and that B. and C. respectively were sureties only for portion of the said sum; yet, with regard to D., they were to be considered as principal debtors, so as not to be released by time being given to any other or others of them, or by any act or omission of D., whereby, as sureties only, they would be released. B. subsequently executed to D. two other mortgages of the lands comprised in the petition. A. having paid D. the full amount of the debt secured by the first mortgage, claimed to stand in D.'s place for 900*l.*, being B.'s debt, and the moiety of 2,014*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, being C.'s debt, for which both he and B. were joint sureties, and to be placed on the final schedule on foot of, and in the priority of, the first mortgage:—Held, first, that A.'s claim was valid, and that he was not estopped by the special proviso of the mortgage from relying on his equitable rights of surety. Kirkwood, In re, 1 L. R., Ir. 108.

Held, secondly, that a surety joining in a mortgage is entitled on paying off the original mortgage debt to get the benefit of all the securities, held by the original mortgagee, without paying off subsequent mortgages. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the doctrine of tacking is applicable only in the case of existing debt. Ib.

D., a partner in a banking firm in New York, in which firm H. and two other persons were also partners, made two promissory notes in the name of H., D., & Co. payable to W. at a bank in New York. The notes came, by several indorsements, into the possession of I., a merchant at New York, and he, on presenting them at maturity for payment, found that they were dishonoured. D. had notice of the dishonour, and subsequently, in consideration of the amount of the notes, conveyed to I. land, which was declared to be intended as a security for payment of the notes and interest. H. being in England, the notes were indorsed to W., and he, in accordance with instructions, sued H. for the amount, and having received information that H. intended to leave the country, he caused him to be arrested. H. was discharged from custody on G. and F. becoming sureties in a bond to the sheriff, and they (H. having absconded) afterwards had to pay the amount of the judgment entered in the action against him. G. and F. then applied to W. for the mortgage executed by D., and were informed that he had nothing to do with it. On bill filed by G. and F. against W., I., S. H., and G. D.:—Held, that he was entitled to have the mortgage delivered up to him; to be paid the costs of the suit out of the amount of the judgment; and to recover against S. H. and G. D. the whole amount of principal, interest, and costs in respect of the notes. Goddard v. White, 2 Giff. 449; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1364; 3 L. T. 313.

In a suit by A. against B. and C., a conveyance of an estate by A. to B. was declared void, and set aside for fraud, except as to an intermediate mortgage of the estate made by B. to D., to secure a sum of money lent by D. to B., and for which C. had joined B. as his surety in a bond and covenant to D.; and the decree also directed B. to redeem the estate, and procure its reconveyance to A., and, if he did not do so, gave A. the right to redeem, and to use the name of B. for that purpose, and to recover from B. the money which A. should pay to D. for such reconveyance; and the bill was dismissed against C. A. afterwards procured an assignment of D.'s mortgage to a trustee, and, in the name of the mortgagees, brought an action against C. on his covenant and bond:—Held, that if A. had redeemed D., the debt would have gone as against C.; that C., as the surety of B., would, on payment of the mortgage debt, be entitled to the benefit of the security held by D., such security not having been disturbed by the decree; that the charge of participation by C. in the fraud, whereby B. had been enabled to create the mortgage on the estate, was not a ground for depriving C. of such right; and that C. was, therefore, in a suit for an injunction to restrain A. from suing him on the bond and covenant, entitled to such relief. Yonge v. Reynell, 9 Hare, 809.

The circumstance of the dismissal, as against C., of the bill brought by A. against B. and C., which prayed that the mortgage debt might be paid by B. and C., was material to the case, though it was not alone conclusive, as it might well be that there might be no equity to compel C. to pay the debt, though C. might have no equity to be relieved from his legal liability to pay it. Ib.

A. was tenant for life of lots 1 and 2, to which B. was entitled in remainder; B., and A. as his surety, mortgaged lot 2, B. alone covenanting to pay. By a contemporaneous deed, B. conveyed his interest in the other lot on trusts to indemnify A. as his surety: A. paid large sums for interest on the mortgage:—Held, that he was entitled to the benefit of the deed of indemnity only, but not to stand in the place of the mortgagee on lot 1. Cooper v. Jenkins, 32 Beav. 337; 1 N. R. 383.

Where a bond is given by principal and surety, and at the same time a mortgage is made for securing the debt, the surety, if he pays the bond, has a right to stand in place of the mortgagee. Copis v. Middleton, Turn. & R. 224; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 82.

A. mortgaged his own estate, and his wife joined him in charging hers; this is a pledge, and the wife shall stand in the mortgagee's place. Parteriche v. Powlett, 2 Atk. 384. In Clinan v. Cooke (1 Sch. & Lef. 35; 9 R. R. 3) Lord Redesdale said this case was imperfectly reported by Atkyns.

Sale of Mortgaged Property.]—S., in May, 1850, assigned his interest in a fund in court to J. to secure payment of a loan, and a bond was at the same time entered into by S., and the petitioner and her brother as sureties, as a further security. All the parties resided at Calcutta. In consequence of the terms of the bond not having been complied with by S., a stop order, at the request of the petitioner, was in March, 1853, obtained by J. The petitioner had, however, in February, 1853, at Calcutta, on the demand of the attorney of J., paid the debt and interest. In May, 1853, the stop order was, on the application of S., with the consent of J., discharged, but the mortgage deed remained in the possession of the agents of J. The residue of the fund belonging to S. was, by an order of December, 1855, ordered to be paid over to his appointees, and thereupon the surety presented a petition, praying that so much of the fund as might be necessary might be sold and paid to her in satisfaction of her demand against S.:—Held, that the petitioner was entitled to the relief which she prayed, and that she had adopted the proper means to obtain redress. Allen v. De Lisle, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 928; 5 W. R. 158.

The court will not, sitting in bankruptcy, on behalf of the sureties of a bankrupt, direct a sale of mortgaged premises for payment of the debt secured by recognizance, or for payment of any other security except a mortgage. Usher, Ex parte, 1 Ball & B. 197.

Life Policy—Right to Sum Insured.]—The money payable on a policy of insurance on the life of A. deposited with the insurance company as a security for a loan to B. is to be paid to the surety of B., satisfying the loan, and cannot be set off against a debt due by A. to the insurance company of which B.'s surety had no notice. Jeffery's Policy, In re, 20 W. R. 857.

Vendor's Lien—Delivery Order.]—On the 3rd of March goods belonging to C., lying at the St. Katharine Dock, in the custody of the Docks Company, were bought by D., as broker for buyers and sellers, for B. & Co., without disclosing the names of his principals, and D. indorsed to them the delivery order he had obtained from the sellers, on the representation of B. & Co. that the goods were wanted for immediate shipment. They, however, pledged their interest in the goods to the plaintiffs, and indorsed the order to them. On the prompt-day, the 18th of March, the plaintiff's clerk lodged the order at the London office of the Docks Company, with this memorandum, "Hold within to our order, and have warrants made out as soon as possible." He was told that the warrants would be ready with the goods on the 20th of March. Three hours later a messenger from the office reached the warrant office at the Dock House with a notice that the order had been lodged. Meanwhile B. & Co. had stopped payment, and D. being so informed, and having no notice of the plaintiffs' title, on the same day paid C. for the goods, and through a clerk who reached the Dock House before the messenger had arrived, obtained at the warrant office a warrant for the goods in the name of C., who indorsed the same to D., and gave him a second delivery order. The first delivery order was returned to the plaintiffs by the Docks Company, who refused to act upon it. In an action by the plaintiffs, claiming as against the Docks Company, C., and D., to be entitled to the goods:—Held, that D. was the surety, and B. & Co. the principal debtors; that, in the circumstances of the case, the unpaid vendor's lien had passed to D; that the title to the goods was in D. Imperial Bank v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co., 46 L. J., Ch. 335; 5 Ch. D. 195; 36 L. T. 233.

Promissory Note—Set-off against Debt due from Surety to Principal.]—A surety for a debt of a company paid the debt after the date of an order for winding up the company under the Joint Stock Companies Acts, 1856 and 1857. Among the securities for the debt in the hands of the creditor was a promissory note of the company:—Held, that the surety was entitled to set off against a debt due from him to the company an equal amount of the money due from the company on the note. Moseley Green Coal and Coke Co., In re, Barrett's Case, 4 De G. J. & S. 756; 12 L. T. 193; 13 W. R. 559.

Judgment.]—A co-debtor who has paid the entire debt in respect of which judgment has been recovered against himself and the other co-debtors, is entitled to an assignment of such judgment, and it is no defence to an action by him against the judgment creditor for refusing to assign it, to plead that such judgment had become satisfied by payment by such co-debtor after he had been taken in execution on the judgment. Batchellor v. Lawrence, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 543; 30 L. J., C. P. 39; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1306; 3 L. T. 508; 9 W. R. 373.

The plaintiff was the drawer of a bill of exchange for 106*l.* as surety for M., the acceptor. The bill was dishonoured at maturity, and the defendant sued the plaintiff and M. on the bill. Against M. he obtained judgment by default, and against the plaintiff on the trial of the action. The plaintiff paid the amount. The plaintiff applied to the defendant for an assignment of the judgment against M. The defendant refused to assign, and the plaintiff brought an action:—Held, that the plaintiff was primâ facie entitled to recover as damages the value of specific assets which would have been available for execution under the judgment, if assigned, and that it was not incumbent on him in the first instance to shew that there were no other assets available. Oddy v. Hallett, 1 Cab. & E. 532.

A surety is entitled to the benefit of all securities obtained by the creditor from the principal for the debt; and where a surety pays a debt secured by separate judgments obtained against himself and the principal, upon their joint and several bond, he may compel the creditor to assign to him the judgment obtained against the principal. Mara v. Ryan, 2 Jones, 715.

Where a creditor recovered judgment on a bill of exchange (in which the plaintiff was joined as surety) against the principal debtor, and also against the bail in the action, and the surety "paid and satisfied" both judgments, and took assignments thereof:—Held, that he could not recover on the judgment against the bail. Armitage v. Baldwin, 5 Beav. 278.

A. brought separate actions against B. and C. for the payment of the amount of a joint and several promissory note given by B. and C., his surety, to A., and recovered judgment in both actions; A. issued out execution only against C., the surety, who thereupon paid the debt and costs. C. dying, his administratrix filed a bill against A. and B. for an assignment of the judgment obtained by A. against B., the principal debtor:—Held, that as the debt was discharged, the judgment was satisfied, and could not be enforced at law against B., and that a court of equity would not compel an assignment, and that judgment was only available at law for the costs of the action against the principal. Dowbiggen v. Bourne, 2 Y. & Coll. 462; Younge, 111; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 82; 1 Jur. 102.

B. became surety for S. by bond and several judgment of 1807; and S. afterwards became surety for B. to nearly the same amount by bond of 1814. A suit for the administration of B.'s assets having been instituted by a judgment creditor of 1816, decrees to account and for a sale were pronounced in 1822. S., having in 1821 been obliged to pay the debt for which he was B.'s surety, procured the creditors of 1807 to prove the debts under the decree:—Held, that they were entitled to be paid the sum reported due to them, but that they should assign their judgment against S. to a trustee for B.'s creditors. Peoples v. Stewart, Hayes, 90.

As to the assignment of a judgment to a trustee for the benefit of a co-surety, see Scott v. Lowry, Hayes, 95, n.

A. and B. join in executing a bond and warrant to C., who entered judgment thereon, and issued execution against A.; he, being merely a surety, filed a bill to have judgment assigned upon payment of the debt, which was decreed. Hill v. Kelly, 1 Ridgw. L. & S. 265.

The principal in a bond being arrested gave bail, and judgment is had against the bail; on a bill by the sureties, who had been sued on the original bond, and paid the money, decreed the judgment against the bail to be assigned to them in order to reimburse them what they had paid with interest and costs. Parsons v. Briddock, 2 Vern. 608.

Where a judgment on a joint and several bond has been obtained against one of the obligors only, and the co-obligor pays the debt, the judgment is not thereby extinguished; and the co-obligor having obtained an assignment of the judgment is a specialty creditor against the estate of the other. Kent v. Canter, Wall. Lyn. 364. See S. C., id. 366, n.

As to the assignment of a judgment to a surety who has paid the debt, see note to Kent v. Canter, Wall. Lyn. 364.

Under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, see infra.

Right to Benefit of Proof in Bankruptcy.]—A surety under an annuity deed, redeeming the annuity subsequent to the bankruptcy of the grantor of the annuity, is entitled to the benefit of the grantee's proof under the grantor's commission, and to proceed by action against the grantor, who had obtained his certificate for the arrears of the annuity subsequent to the commission. Watkins v. Flannagan, 3 Russ. 421; 1 Glyn & J. 199; 6 Madd. 280. And see S. C. at law, 3 B. & Ald. 186.

Bond.]—Bill of surety in a bond, to have it assigned after having paid its amount, dismissed with costs as useless. Gammon v. Stone, 1 Ves. 339.

Assignment of bond to co-obligor who pays it is of no use, since even the principal may plead payment to action in name of obligee; but action on the case lies, or perhaps indebitatus assumpsit. Woffington v. Sparks, 2 Ves. 569.

The plaintiff joined the testator as surety in a bond, which he had paid after the death of the testator, taking assignment of the bond; he is only a simple contract creditor of the testator. Jones v. Davids, 4 Russ. 277.

Where two persons execute a bond, the one as principal, the other as surety, and no other assurance is executed at the time, the surety paying the bond debt is a simple contract creditor only of the principal. Copis v. Middleton, Turn. & R. 224; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 82. S. P., Simpkins v. Poulet, 2 L. J., Ch. 81.

It is a general rule that in equity a surety is entitled to the benefit of all the securities which the creditor has against the principal; the rule, however, must be qualified by considering it to apply to such securities as continue to exist, and do not get back upon payment to the person of the principal debtor. Ib.

As to the assignment of a bond to a surety who has paid the debt, see note to Kent v. Canter, Wall. Lyn. 364.

A. is indebted by bond (in which J. is bound as surety), and also by simple contract, to B.; A. states an account of both debts with B., and makes a bill of sale for securing the balance, which proves deficient. On a bill by the surety, decreed the money arising by the bill of sale should be applied towards discharge of both debts in proportion. Perris v. Roberts, 1 Vern. 34.

Surety paying off specialty debts is to be considered as a specialty creditor. Robinson v. Wilson, 2 Madd. 434.

A., together with B. and C. as his sureties executed a bond to D., for securing 300*l.* and interest; the debt is paid by C., with the proper money of A., but C. neglects delivering up the bond to A. to be cancelled; C. afterwards procures this bond to be assigned as a collateral security for a debt of his own:—Held, that this assignment was a gross fraud in C., and a perpetual injunction was granted to restrain all further proceedings upon the bond. May v. Harman, 4 Bro. P. C. 156.

Recognizance — Crown Debt — Priority.] — Upon the appointment of A. to the office of county treasurer in 1831, he, together with four other persons, B., C., D. and E., entered into security by recognizance, whereby A. acknowledged himself indebted to the king in 7,000*l.* sterling; by the same instrument B. and C. acknowledged themselves to be jointly and severally indebted in 5,000*l.* sterling; and D. and E. in like manner in 2,000*l.* sterling. In the condition (which was that A. should duly account, pursuant to the 4 Geo. 4, c. 33) the instrument was described as "the foregoing recognizance." In 1837 A. resigned the office of treasurer, being a defaulter to the amount of 18,000*l.* and upwards, of which sum about 4,000*l.* was due to the crown, and the residue to the county:—Held, that this was a recognizance securing a single sum of 7,000*l.* and no more:—Held, also, that 7,000*l.* British was the amount thereby secured, although the amount which the 4 Geo. 4, c. 33, required such treasurer to secure was 7,000*l.* Irish; and that upon payment of that sum by A., the principal, he was entitled to have the recognizance of himself and sureties vacated; but on payment of that sum by the sureties they were not entitled as against the crown to the benefit of the recognizance acknowledged by A., the principal. Reg. v. O'Callaghan, Jon. & C. 154; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 439.

Under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97.]—This act applies to a contract entered into before the passing of the act provided a breach of it has taken place, and payment has been made by the surety after the passing of the act. De Wolf v. Lindsell, Cochran, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 293; L. R. 5 Eq. 209; 17 L. T. 487; 16 W. R. 324.

The court has no power under this provision to enforce by order the remedy there given. Phillips v. Dickson, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 391; 29 L. J., C. P. 223; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 401; 2 L. T. 185; 8 W. R. 390.

A surety is not entitled to have an assignment of the principal security unless he pays the debt in full. Ewart v. Latta, 4 Macq. H. L. 983.

Where two properties are mortgaged by A. to B. for distinct sums, and C. is surety for the one only, the right of B. to retain all the securities until repaid both debts overrides the right of C. to have the benefit of the securities for that debt for which he is surety. Farebrother v. Wodehouse, 23 Beav. 18; 26 L. J., Ch. 81; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1178; 5 W. R. 12.

A surety is entitled to the benefit of all securities taken by the creditor, whether he has notice of them or not. Pearl v. Deacon, 24 Beav. 186; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 5 W. R. 702. S. P., Strange v. Fooks, 4 Giff. 408; 11 W. R. 983.

—— Satisfaction of Judgment.]—The right of a co-surety under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, who has satisfied a judgment obtained by the creditor against the debtor and his sureties, to stand in the place of the judgment creditor, is not affected by the circumstances that such surety has not obtained an actual assignment of the judgment. M'Myn, In re, Lightbown v. M'Myn, 55 L. J., Ch. 845; 33 Ch. D. 575; 55 L. T. 834; 35 W. R. 179.

—— Breach of Trust—Costs Paid by Co-trustee.]—A. and B. were trustees. B. was guilty of a breach of trust. The trust fund was ultimately restored, and A.'s costs were directed to be paid out of B.'s estate. A. afterwards paid money on account of these costs, after the passing of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97; and it was held that the money was paid by A. in the character of surety, and therefore that he was entitled, under the 5th section, to claim as a specialty creditor on account of it. Lockhart v. Reilly, 1 De G. & J. 464; 27 L. J., Ch. 54.

—— Right of Distress.]—A right of distress is not a security or remedy to the benefit of which a surety paying rent is entitled under the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 5. Russell, In re, Russell v. Schoolbred, 29 Ch. D. 254; 53 L. T. 365—C. A.

Discharge of Surety by Loss of Securities.]—See ante, cols. 1214, 1215.

Given by Principal to Surety—Covenant to continue Mortgagee as Consignee.]—Merchants in London agreeing to become sureties for a West Indian planter, on being secured by a conveyance of his plantation, in trust, with a covenant that they should be continued as consignees till the expiration of five years after the reimbursement of what they might advance:—Held, entitled to the benefit of this covenant. Whether a covenant to continue a mortgagee as consignee after payment of the debt is valid, quære. Bunbury v. Winter, 1 Jac. & Walk. 255; 21 R. R. 159.

—— Priority of Creditor.]—A. bound with his father for the debts of the father, who enters into a statute to the son to pay the debts, and indemnify the son; one of the creditors delivers up his bond, and takes a mortgage from the father. The son shall not set up the statute to defeat the mortgage. Legriel v. Barker, 2 Vern. 39.

—— To one Co-surety—Duty to bring into Hotchpot.]—A surety who has obtained from the principal debtor a counter-security for the liability which he has undertaken is bound to bring into hotchpot, for the benefit of his co-sureties, whatever he receives from that source, even though he consented to be a surety only upon the terms of having the security, and the co-sureties were, when they entered into the contract of suretyship, ignorant of his agreement for security. Steel v. Dixon, 50 L. J., Ch. 591; 17 Ch. D. 825; 45 L. T. 142; 29 W. R. 735.

Five sureties executed a guarantee to a bank, by which they jointly and severally undertook to repay to the bank the balance for the time being owing to them by a customer on his current account to the extent of 2,000*l.* Afterwards the principal debtor deposited with one of the sureties a policy of insurance on his own life, to secure that surety against all liability in respect of the suretyship. The principal debtor became bankrupt, owing more than 2,000*l.* to the bank, whereupon the bank called upon the sureties to pay them 2,000*l.* under the guarantee. The sureties paid this sum in unequal amounts. The principal debtor afterwards died, and the policy money was received by the surety with whom the policy had been deposited:—Held, that, inasmuch as the surety with whom the policy had been deposited was bound, upon the principle of Steel v. Dixon (17 Ch. D. 825), to bring the policy money into hotchpot for the benefit of his co-sureties, the deposit in effect enured for the benefit of all the co-sureties to the full extent of the principal debt, and that the policy money must accordingly be applied in repaying to the five co-sureties the amounts which they had respectively paid under the guarantee. Berridge v. Berridge, 59 L. J., Ch. 533; 44 Ch. D. 168; 63 L. T. 101; 38 W. R. 599.

A., one of three sureties who had become bound to the extent of 2,000*l.* to a corporation for the due accounting of the office of its treasurer, B., received formal notice from the corporation that B. was a defaulter, and on the next day took from B. a deposit note of a bank for 2,300*l.*, which had been placed in the bank by B., one month previously, in the name of his daughter. On a bill filed by the corporation against B., who had absconded, and the three sureties, to make good the amount found due by B. ultra the 2,300*l.*:—Held, establishing the liability of the sureties, that the circumstances under which A. received the 2,300*l.* were such as ought to have induced him to make inquiry, and that, having neglected to do so, he was bound to restore that amount, with interest. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation v. Murray, 7 De G. M. & G. 497; 26 L. J., Ch. 201; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847; 5 W. R. 208.

Given by Third Party to Creditor.]—Settlement by a husband of money, in trust to pay the interest to the wife during her life, with a proviso against anticipation. The husband joins with a surety in a covenant to pay an annuity, secured by an assignment by the wife of the interest to become due, and of the principal sum in the event of there being no children of the marriage:—Held, the surety not entitled to any remedy in equity under the assignment in respect of his payment of the arrears of the annuity recovered against him by an action upon the covenant, although he had no notice of the proviso against anticipation in the settlement, a charge of fraudulent concealment not being sufficiently established; and even if fraud had been fully made out against the wife, it seems it would not be sufficient to support the assignment, which would be to give her a power of alienation against the intention of the settlor. Jackson v. Hobhouse, 2 Mer. 483; 16 R. R. 200.

D. ACTION AGAINST SURETY.

1. GENERALLY.

Who may Sue.]—Where a father, on his son's entering as an underwriter at Lloyd's, gave the committee of that body a letter by which he held himself responsible for all his son's engagements in that capacity, in an action on the guarantee by the committee:—Held, that the committee of Lloyd's, and the corporation of Lloyd's, as their successors, were trustees of the benefit of the guarantee for all the persons, whether members or outsiders, with whom the son had contracted engagements as an underwriting member, and that the corporation could maintain an action to enforce the guarantee against the father's estate for the benefit of all those persons, on the ground, as to the outsiders, that the brokers through whom the son's engagements with them were contracted were trustees for their principals of the right which they themselves had to call on their own agents, Lloyd's, to enforce the guarantee for their benefit. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140; 16 Ch. D. 290; 43 L. T. 481; 29 W. R. 452—C. A.

Parties.]—All obligors in joint and several bond, principals, and sureties must be parties generally. Exception where the surety is insolvent or has paid nothing. Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 326.

—— Principal.]—The bill stated that the plaintiff, with the parol consent of the defendant, a surety, had by deed released the principal debtor, and that, having brought an action at law against the surety, it had been held, that the surety was released. The bill prayed payment by the surety of the debt:—Held, on demurrer, that the principal debtor was a necessary party to the suit. Brooks v. Stuart, 1 Beav. 512; 8 L. J., Ch. 279.

—— Representative of Deceased Surety.]—One of three sureties having died after claims against them had been established in a suit, and after a sum of money had been paid by them into court:—Held, that, for the purposes of the suit, a representative of the deceased surety was a necessary party, though the court refused to declare in the suit as constituted the liabilities of the sureties inter se. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation v. Murray, 7 De G. M. & G. 497; 26 L. J., Ch. 201; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847; 5 W. R. 208.

If a bill be brought against principal and one surety, and it is admitted that the other is dead insolvent, and there are no personal assets, his representatives need not be made parties. Madox v. Jackson, 3 Atk. 406. And see Angerstein v. Clark, Dick. 738.

Right of Set-off.]—In an action by the payee of a joint and several note against one who, to the knowledge of the payee, joined in it as a surety only, it is competent to the surety, by way of equitable defence, to plead a plea of set-off due from the payee to the principal, arising out of the same transaction out of which the liability of the surety arose. Becherraise v. Lewis, 41 L. J., C. P. 161; L. R. 7 C. P. 372; 26 L. T. 848; 20 W. R. 726.

The plaintiff signed and delivered to the defendant the following document: "In consideration of your having, at my request, agreed to become a director of the Surrey Gas Association, and to be and act as director, I hereby undertake and agree to guarantee, indemnify, and save you harmless from and against all losses, costs, charges, damages, and expenses which you may bear, incur, sustain, or be put to by reason thereof, or on account of actions as director, and I further agree to accept a transfer of twenty-four of your shares in the association when requested by you, such transfer to be at my own expense, costs, and charges, and I undertake to pay all calls for and in respect of such shares." The plaintiff having afterwards sued the defendant for a debt:—Held, that the defendant might set off the expenses incurred by him as a director as money paid for the plaintiff's use. Hutchinson v. Sydney, 10 Ex. 438; 3 C. L. R. 174; 24 L. J., Ex. 25; 3 W. R. 65.

A declaration that in consideration the plaintiff would accept, for the defendant's accommodation, a bill of exchange, and would deliver it to him in order that he might negotiate it for his own use, the defendant promised to indemnify and save harmless the plaintiff from any loss or damage by reason thereof, and that the plaintiff accepted the bill, yet the defendant did not indemnify and save harmless the plaintiff from loss or damage by reason thereof, and the plaintiff, as acceptor, was obliged to and did pay the holder the amount of the bill with interest, and the costs of an action brought on the bill, and the plaintiff also incurred costs and expenses in defending and settling the action. Plea to the plaintiff's claim in respect of the amount of the bill and interest, a set-off. Another plea to the costs of the action, and the costs and expenses incurred in defending and settling the action, that the whole of these were incurred at the defendant's request, concluding with a set-off:—Held, that the first plea was good, as the defendant might sever so much of the plaintiff's claim as was liquidated, and plead a set-off to that; and that the second plea was bad as pleaded to costs incurred, but not paid. Crampton v. Walker, 3 El. & El. 321; 30 L. J., Q. B. 19; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 9 W. R. 98.

A guarantee, being a mere contract of indemnity, cannot form the subject of a set-off.

Morley v. Inglis, 5 Scott, 314; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 58; 6 D. P. C. 202; 3 Hodges, 270; 7 L. J., C. P. 11.

A. was indebted on bond to B. B. died, leaving C. his sole next of kin, who obtained letters of administration of his estate. The estate of B., after all debts, &c., were paid, left a clear residue exceeding the amount of the bond debt. A. became surety for C. by joining in promissory notes, C. became an insolvent debtor, and A. was compelled to pay the notes. C. died, and then the assignee under his insolvency took out letters of administration de bonis non of B., and sued A. on the bond:—Held, that A. might set off the sums which he had been compelled to pay as surety for C. against the bond debt. Jones v. Mossop, 3 Hare, 568; 13 L. J., Ch. 470; 8 Jur. 1064.

Joint Debt of Defendants—Debt due from Plaintiff to Co-surety.]—Action on a covenant to pay all liabilities which the plaintiff might incur under a deed of assignment made between the plaintiff and other parties. The defendant pleaded that the covenant was the joint and several covenant of himself and one Wilson, and that before action the plaintiff was indebted to Wilson in an amount exceeding the plaintiff's claim against the defendant; and that Wilson had assigned the plaintiff's debt to himself and the defendant in equal shares as tenants in common. As to one-half of the plaintiff's claim the defendant claimed to set off one half of the debt so assigned, and as to the other half, the defendant said that he was entitled to be exonerated by his co-surety Wilson, and to call upon him to contribute in equal shares to the payment of the plaintiff's claim, and was entitled to set off the share remaining vested in Wilson against this part of the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the defence was no answer to the plaintiff's claim. Bowyear v. Pawson, 50 L. J., Q. B. 495; 6 Q. B. D. 540; 29 W. R. 664.

Right of Creditor to Benefit of Counter-security given by Debtor to Surety.]—A creditor is not entitled to the exclusive benefit of a counter-security given by his debtor to the person who guarantees the payment of the debt. Dictum in Maure v. Harrison (1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 93; 20 Vin. Abr. 102) disapproved. Walker, In re, Sheffield Banking Co. v. Clayton, 61 L. J., Ch. 234; [1892] 1 Ch. 621; 66 L. T. 315; 40 W. R. 327.

Principal primarily Liable.]—The recognizance of a surety for a tenant will not be put in suit unless an attempt has been made to enforce the rent from the tenant by attachment, or it is shewn that such a proceeding would be useless. Newman v. Mills, 1 Hog. 291.

The East India Company having compelled payment from a surety in India by their power over him as one of their servants, without an account or proceeding against the principal, though solvent, and otherwise under harsh circumstances, he was restored to the same situation by a decree for repayment, with interest at 5 per cent., upon giving security for repayment in case in a future suit by the company he should be held liable; the court would not, in the circumstances, give Indian interest. Law v. East India Co., 4 Ves. 825.

A. is principal in a recognizance of 5,000*l.*, and B. and C. sureties. A. afterwards jointures his wife, before marriage, in some lands, without notice either to the wife or her friends of this recognizance, and devises his real and personal estate to B., one of his sureties, and dies. First the personal estate of A., the principal, shall be applied towards the recognizance; then his lands devised, the devisee being a volunteer; next the paraphernalia of the wife of A., the principal; and lastly, the two sureties shall contribute to make up the deficiency. Tynt v. Tynt, 2 P. Wms. 542; Mos. 192.

Proof in Bankruptcy of Surety.]—An annuity granted by A. to B. was secured by a covenant by C., a surety, to pay the annuity in case A. made default, and by a judgment for 2,100*l.* entered up against A. and C. The annuity remained unpaid from January, 1823, A. having left the country; and in February, 1824, C. became bankrupt, and afterwards obtained his certificate. C. having died, B. filed a bill to have the arrears of the annuity paid out of his real and personal estates:—Held, that neither the value of the annuity nor the sum due on the judgment was provable under C.'s commission, and therefore that his certificate was not a bar to the plaintiff's demand. Johnson v. Compton, 4 Sim. 37.

Form of Judgment against Co-sureties.]—In a decree against sureties who were jointly and severally liable, the Lord Chancellor refused to make any declaration for contribution between them equally. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation v. Murray, 7 De G. M. & G. 497; 26 L. J., Ch. 201; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847; 5 W. R. 208.

Right of Surety to Restrain Action.]—A surety has no equity to restrain an action against him by the creditor on the ground that the creditor has instituted proceedings in equity under which he may obtain relief against the principal, in the absence of circumstances to prevent the surety from recovering over against his principal. Jackson v. Digby, 2 W. R. 540.

Evading Execution.]—A surety is no more justified in placing the whole of his property out of the reach of liability to pay the debt than if he were the principal debtor. Goodricke v. Taylor, 2 De G. J. & S. 122; 3 N. R. 678; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 414; 10 L. T. 113; 12 W. R. 632.

Whether Surety a Necessary Party to Action against Principal or Other Surety.]—A. having a general power of appointment over an estate in the event of his surviving his father, joined with B. and C., his sureties, in a covenant to pay an annuity to the plaintiff, and A. covenanted that if he should survive his father, he would create a term in the estate for securing the annuity. A.'s father died, and A. granted other annuities to the plaintiff, but did not create the term. He afterwards vested the estate in trustees for the benefit of such of his creditors as should execute the conveyance. Several of the creditors executed it, and one of them, on behalf of himself and the others, filed a bill to have the trusts of the deed carried into execution. After a decree had been made in that suit, the plaintiff filed his bill against A., the trustees, and the plaintiff in that suit, praying for an account of what was due to him in respect of his securities, that the priorities of himself and the other incumbrancers might be declared, that he might redeem the securities which should appear to be prior to his own, and might have the benefit of the decree as to that part of his demand for which he should not be entitled to priority over the trust deed:—Held, on demurrer, that the sureties were not, but that all the creditors who had executed the deed were, necessary parties. Newton v. Egmont, 4 Sim. 574.

A. borrowed of the plaintiff a sum of money, which was secured by the joint bill of A. and B., his surety; part of the money was further secured by the joint and several bond of A. and his sureties, B. and C. A. afterwards further secured it by an assignment of his claims against a partnership. To a bill by the plaintiff to obtain payment from that partnership:—Held, that C. was not a necessary party. Adams v. Thompson, 6 L. J., Ch. 109.

2. Pleadings.

Claims.]—If B., by a guarantee, undertakes to A. to answer for the payment of goods to be sent by him to C., A. cannot maintain indebitatus assumpsit against B. for the price of the goods sent to C. accordingly, but must declare specially on the guarantee. Mines v. Sculthorpe, 2 Camp. 215.

A. drew a bill nominally for a specific purpose, which he was authorised to do, and got it discounted with some bankers who held a guarantee from B. for that particular bill; A. applied the money to other purposes, and B. was obliged to pay the banker under his guarantee. Semble, that A. subjected himself to a special action on the case. Jones v. Fleming, 7 B. & C. 217; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 113.

It is not necessary in a declaration against a person, on his undertaking to be answerable for or to pay the debt of another, to state an agreement, a note, or a memorandum, or the terms of any such, or the parties thereto, or that it was in writing or signed by the defendant. Lilly v. Hewitt, 11 Price, 494.

It is not necessary to aver a request made to the party himself, in the first instance, to pay the debt before the guarantor is resorted to; at least an averment, that he had neglected and refused to repay the money, is sufficient for the purpose of maintaining the action against the guarantor. Ib.

A declaration stated that S. was in the custody of the warden of the Fleet, in execution at the suit of the plaintiff, upon a judgment, and that in consideration that the plaintiff would cause him to be discharged, and would take his warrant of attorney for the debt and costs, the defendant undertook that S. should be forthcoming to satisfy the amount of the judgment to be entered up on the warrant of attorney on the 18th July, 1840, at the office of Mr. A., and also that one day's previous notice of meeting S. should be given to Mr. A. Averment, that the plaintiff did discharge S. out of custody, and took a warrant of attorney for the debt and costs. Breach, that S. was not forthcoming to satisfy the amount of the judgment so to be entered up as aforesaid at the day and place agreed on, nor was one day's notice given to Mr. A.:—Held, sufficient, on motion in arrest of judgment, without an averment that judgment was actually entered up on the warrant of attorney. Page v. Jarvis, 8 M. & W. 136; 10 L. J., Ex. 239; 5 Jur. 412.

A declaration upon an undertaking to indemnify and save harmless the plaintiff from all actions which might be brought by C. for or in respect of rent then due or to become due for premises, stating that C. brought an action against the plaintiff for rent "claimed to be due" for the occupation of the premises for a certain time then elapsed, that the plaintiff was forced and obliged to pay the same, and that the defendant had failed to indemnify him, is bad, for not shewing that the rent in respect of which C. brought his action was due at the time of the defendant's promise, or became due afterwards. Lesenbery v. Evans, 3 Man. & G. 210; 3 Scott (N.R.) 476.

—— Construction.]—A declaration on a guarantee omitted in the description of the contract the following clause: "This guarantee is only to extend to secure moneys becoming due in respect of dealing up to, and inclusive of, the day of receipt, by" (plaintiff), "of a written notice from me" (the guaranteeing party) "to discontinue this guarantee":—Held, no variance. Jones v. Clarke, 3 Q. B. 194; 11 L. J., Q. B. 206.

A declaration stated that the defendant promised that in the event of A'M. making default in payment of 15*l.* 3*s.*, the defendant would, on such default being made, immediately pay the plaintiff that sum; whereas the terms of the guarantee, as proved, were as follows: "In the event of A'M. making default, I will, immediately on such default being made, and a letter being sent to me at 62, Gower street, Bedford square, giving me notice of such default, pay," &c.:—Held, as the declaration alleged an absolute, while the terms of the guarantee conveyed only a qualified conditional promise to pay on a letter being sent as a condition precedent, that there was a variance between the guarantee declared on and the guarantee proved. Higgins v. Dixon, 2 D. & L. 124; 14 L. J., Q. B. 329; 10 Jur. 376.

A breach assigned in a declaration, upon a guarantee that the plaintiff would sell and deliver goods to A., the defendant guaranteed the payment in case A. did not pay for them, was, that the defendant had not guaranteed the payment or paid. The defendant pleaded that he had guaranteed the payment:—Held, that the words in the breach were not to be understood as used disjunctively, and that proof that the defendant had executed the instrument of guarantee did not entitle him to a verdict on that issue. Boyd v. Moyle, 2 C. B. 644.

In an action on the following guarantee: "Whereas W. C. is indebted to you in a sum of money, and may have occasion to make further purchases from you, as an inducement to you to sell him such goods, and continue your dealing with him, I hereby agree and undertake to guarantee you in 100*l.*, payable to you in default on the part of W. C. for two months," the declaration stated the promise to be, to guarantee the plaintiffs in 100*l.* "payable on default of W. C. on two months' notice thereof to the defendant": — Held, a variance. Allan v. Kenning, 2 M. & Scott, 768; 9 Bing. 618.

A declaration on a guarantee stated the consideration of the instrument to be, that the plaintiff would give credit to a third person "in manner then and there agreed upon between them"; by the correspondence produced in evidence to support such guarantee, the terms on which the credit was stated to be given were "to be agreed upon":—Held, that the substance of the consideration was properly set out, and consequently that there was no variance. Irving v. Mackenzie, 1 Br. & B. 523.

In an action on a guarantee, the declaration stated that the defendants undertook to indemnify A. for holding goods in his warehouse on their behalf, and delivering the same up to them when requested so to do: on the production of the instrument, it appeared that the defendants only guaranteed him for holding the goods in his warehouse on their behalf:—Held, that this was no variance, as it must be implied that he was to deliver them up to the defendants. Sampson v. Burton, 4 Moore, 515; 2 Br. & B. 89.

A declaration on a guarantee stated that P. kept an account with a banking company, and was indebted to them in 800*l.* for money advanced by them to him, and that it was proposed that they should advance to P. more money; and thereupon an agreement was entered into between the company and the defendants, and signed by them, as follows: "We, the undersigned, hereby indemnify (the company) to the extent of 1,000*l.*, advanced or to be advanced to P., but this indemnity to cease when P. shall have paid 1,000*l.* to the credit of his account." The evidence was, that at the time the guarantee was given, the sum of 1,400*l.* was due from P. to the company for money already advanced:—Held, that the guarantee, construed with reference to the facts existing at the time it was given, did not disclose a good consideration, and that if the preliminary averments in the declaration were to be taken as a statement of part of the consideration, they were put in issue by non assumpsit, and were not proved. Bell v. Welch, 9 C. B. 154; 19 L. J., C. P. 184; 14 Jur. 432.

Recovery on Common Counts.]—Where, on the trial of an action upon a guarantee, for the payment of work done for a third person, the plaintiff at first shaped his case upon the guarantee, but afterwards resorted to the common counts, and made out the defendant's liability as a principal, and recovered a verdict on those counts:—Held, that the verdict could not be disturbed. Edge v. Frost, 4 D. & R. 243.

A defendant undertook to see the plaintiff paid for certain goods supplied by him to A., at the defendant's request. After the goods had been supplied, and A. had made default in payment, the defendant acknowledged his liability under the guarantee, and promised to pay the plaintiff the price of the goods. Neither the guarantee nor the subsequent promise was in writing:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on an account stated. Wilson v. Marshall, 15 Ir. C. L. R. 467.

Defences—Summary Judgment.]—A surety whose principal has not admitted the debt claimed by the plaintiff, and who has received no particulars of demand, will be allowed to defend an action on a specially-indorsed writ without paying money into court or giving security. Lloyd's Banking Co. v. Ogle, 45 L. J., Ex. 606; 1 Ex. D. 262; 34 L. T. 584; 24 W. R. 678.

—— New Agreement.]—In an action on a contract of guarantee, it is a good bar, that before breach a new contract has been made to pay absolutely. Taylor v. Hillary, 1 C. M. & R. 741; 3 D. P. C. 461; 1 Gale, 22; 5 Tyr. 373; 4 L. J., Ex. 72.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff engaged C. as collecting clerk, and required security previously to employing him, and, in consideration that the plaintiff would employ C., the defendant gave his guarantee. Plea, that before the defendant made the promise, and before the plaintiff required the security, the plaintiff and C. had agreed together that the plaintiff should employ C., which agreement was in force at the time of the defendant's promise:—Held, that this was a denial that C. was employed at the request of the defendant, and, therefore, that the plea traversed the consideration alleged, and amounted to the general issue. Lyall v. Higgins, 3 G. & D. 585; 4 Q. B. 528; 12 L. J., Q. B. 241; 7 Jur. 644.

—— Statute of Frauds.] — A declaration stated, that the defendant guaranteed the payment of goods furnished by the plaintiff to H., at the defendant's request. Plea, that, before breach of that undertaking, it was agreed that the plaintiff should supply goods to H., and that they should be paid for at the end of three months by a joint bill at four months, to be accepted by the defendant, which agreement the plaintiff, before breach of the former declared on, accepted in full discharge of such former agreement, and released the defendant from performing it:—Held, that the second agreement did not require to be in writing, pursuant to 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4, being an agreement by which the defendant became absolutely bound as an original debtor; and not being an accord and satisfaction, but a substituted contract, afforded a good defence to the action without alleging performance. Taylor v. Hillary, supra.

The objection that there is no note in writing of a promise to pay the debt of another within 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4, need not be pleaded specially. Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 A. & E. 438; 3 P. & D. 276; 9 L. J., Q. B. 409; 4 Jur. 1081.

In an action on a guarantee, the defendant may shew, under the general issue, that the consideration alleged in the declaration is not the actual consideration to be inferred from the instrument. Raikes v. Todd, 1 P. & D. 138; 8 A. & E. 846; 1 W. W. & H. 619; 8 L. J., Q. B. 35.

To an action upon a guarantee, a plea that the promise declared on was a special promise for the debt of another, and that no agreement in respect thereof, nor any memorandum or note thereof in writing, was signed by the defendant, was bad on special demurrer, as amounting to an argumentative denial of the contract or promise alleged. Reade v. Lambe, 6 Ex. 130; 2 L. M. & P. 67; 20 L. J., Ex. 161.

—— Breach of alleged Condition.]—A. and B. gave a joint and several guarantee to be responsible for the printing account of a company; B. afterwards became the secretary of the company; A. was sued separately on the guarantee, and pleaded equitably, that he gave it on the faith that some other person than B. should be secretary, which the plaintiff well knew and assented to; and that he had never consented that B. should be secretary:—Held, bad. Burbridge v. Child, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 106.

Replication.]—Where a defendant pleads that the contract declared upon was a guarantee for the debt of another, and that no memorandum thereof, stating the consideration, was or is in writing signed by the defendant, or any person authorised by him; the plaintiff may reply, that a memorandum of agreement in writing, stating the consideration, was signed by the defendant, without setting out such memorandum in the replication. Wakeham v. Sutton, 2 A. & E. 78;

4 N. & M. 114; 4 L. J., K. B. 33. S. P., Lysaght v. Walker, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 1.

The defendant and P. agreed for the sale by P. to the defendant of the "put or call" of some foreign railway shares, at a certain price per share, at any time before or on the 18th February, 1844. Before that day the defendant agreed to resell the option to the plaintiff, and to guarantee the performance of the agreement by P. On the 16th February the plaintiff required the delivery of the shares pursuant to the terms of the agreement, but it was at the same time verbally agreed between him and the defendant and P., that they should be delivered by P. to the plaintiff, not on the 18th February, but on the 2nd March, at Paris. To an action on this agreement the defendant pleaded, that on the 18th February it was agreed between the plaintiff and P., without the knowledge or consent of the defendant, that the shares should not be delivered according to the notice given by the defendant to P. (i.e. for the 18th February), but that the contract should be carried over, and the delivery of the shares postponed until the 1st March; and so that P. made default with the leave and licence of the plaintiff. The replication denied that it was so agreed:—Held, that this put in issue not only the fact of the agreement, but also the fact that it was made without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff. Hargreaves v. Parsons, 13 M. & W. 561; 14 L. J., Ex. 250.

3. Evidence.

Judgment against Principal not binding on Surety apart from Agreement.]—In the absence of special agreement a judgment or an award against a principal debtor is not binding on the surety, and is not evidence against him in an action against him by the creditor, but the surety is entitled to have the liability proved as against him in the same way as against the principal debtor. Young, Ex parte, Kitchin, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 824; 17 Ch. D. 668; 45 L. T. 90—C. A.

A judgment in an action inter partes is only binding on the parties to the action and those claiming under them, except in a case where there is an express contract by C. to indemnify B. against an action brought against him by A. In such a case judgment in the action by A. against B. will be conclusive in an action by B. against C. upon the contract of indemnity, because that is the real meaning of such a contract. Parker v. Lewis, 43 L. J., Ch. 281; L. R. 8 Ch. 1035; 29 L. T. 199; 21 W. R. 923, 928.

Accounts of Principal.]—An account delivered by a principal charging himself is evidence against his surety. Lysaght v. Walker, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 1.

A rate collector's bond executed by him and sureties was upon the conditions that the collector should collect the rates and pay the amount so collected to the treasurer, that the collector should deliver true and perfect accounts, and should, when required, deliver up his books and pay to the treasurer such money as upon the balance of any accounts should appear to be in his hands. The rate collector absconded, and an action was commenced against the sureties, claiming 223*l.*; the only evidence of the receipt by the collector of this sum was the entries made by him in his accounts:—Held, that these entries were admissible in evidence against the sureties. Abbeyleix Guardians v. Sutcliffe, 26 L. R., Ir. 332.

Limitation of Liability.]—To an action on a guarantee, the defendant pleaded that the guarantee was given by him on terms which limited his liability thereunder; and the plaintiff traversed this plea:—Held, that, in this state of the record, the plaintiff was not at liberty to object to the admissibility of evidence to prove what those terms were, on the ground that they were not shewn to have been reduced into writing. Galley v. Taylor, 2 Car. & K. 551.

Nature of Service.]—A declaration stated the consideration to be that A. "would then engage" C. as traveller, and averred that "A. did then engage C."; it was proved that A. had previously employed him in that capacity on one occasion:—Held, that this proof was sufficient. Norton v. Powell, 4 Man. & G. 42; 11 L. J., C. P. 202.

Delivery of Goods.]—On a guarantee to pay for goods sold and delivered to a third person, what such person had said respecting the goods sold to him is not evidence to charge the person giving the guarantee; the delivery of them must be proved. Evans v. Beattie, 5 Esp. 26. And see Bacon v. Chesney, 1 Stark. 192.

Evidence that, according to the custom of trade, the plaintiffs delivered coals to N. K. daily, and that at the end of every month he gave a bill payable in two months, is not sufficient to charge the defendant upon a guarantee for the payment of coals to be delivered to N. K. at a credit of two months from the delivery. Hall v. Hadley, 5 Bing. 54; 2 M. & P. 136; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 216.

If, in an action on a guarantee for payment for goods to be supplied to A., the plaintiff avers that goods were supplied to A., and the defendant pleads non assumpsit, this admits the supply of the goods to A., and no proof is required in support of the averment, and the plaintiff need not give any evidence that the goods were supplied, except with the view of shewing the amount of damages. Taylor v. Hillary, 7 Car. & P. 30.

Notice.]—A declaration stated that, in consideration that R. J. in his lifetime (of whom the plaintiff was administratrix) would execute a bond to W. J., in the penal sum of 600*l.*, the defendant undertook that he would save harmless and indemnify R. J., his executors and administrators, from any loss or damage, by reason of his executing the bond; the declaration then averred the execution of the bond by R. J., his death, and the grant of administration to the plaintiff; and that she, as administratrix, became liable to pay and satisfy the bond to W. J., of which the defendant had notice; but that he did not indemnify the plaintiff, as such administratrix, from loss or damage by reason of the execution of the bond; by means whereof she, as administratrix, was called upon, and forced, and obliged to pay, and did pay to W. J., 310*l.*, secured by the bond, and a further sum for the costs of an action against her. Plea, that the plaintiff, as administratrix, was not called upon, or forced, or obliged to pay, nor did she pay to W. J., the moneys in the declaration mentioned, nor was she damnified, as therein mentioned. The bond, when produced on the trial, appeared to be subject to a condition for repayment of the sum secured, with interest, "at or before the expiration of six months' notice to be given to pay the same," and there was no proof of such notice having been given. The defendant had notice of the action being commenced against the plaintiff on the bond (which was stayed by a judge's order on payment of debt and costs), and did not come in to defend it:—Held, that this was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover on the above issue. Jones v. Williams, 7 M. & W. 493; 9 D. P. C. 252; 10 L. J., Ex. 120.

If, in an action on a bond against a surety, nonpayment by the principal, after a notice in writing required by the condition, is averred in the declaration, and the defendant suffers judgment by default, it is not necessary to give evidence of the notice, because the allegations of the declaration are not put in issue. Barwise v. Russell, 3 Car. & P. 608.

Negligence of Party Guaranteed.]—The condition of a bond recited a deed of dissolution of partnership between the plaintiff and T., in which was recited an agreement that, subject to the adjustment of the partnership accounts as therein mentioned, the stock-in-trade and partnership effects should belong absolutely to T., and all debts due from the partnership should be paid by T.; and that T., and the defendant as his surety, should indemnify the plaintiff by their joint and several bond against the partnership debts; and the condition was that T. and the defendant, or one of them, should indemnify the plaintiff against the payment of the partnership debts, and all costs, and all actions to be brought in respect thereof. To a declaration on this bond, which set out the condition, and a breach of it in nonpayment of a debt due from the partnership to M., who, in consequence, sued the plaintiff and T. for it, the defendant pleaded that, if the plaintiff was damnified, it was through his own default:—Held, that under this plea the defendant could not give in evidence the deed of dissolution, to shew that it contained certain stipulations as to the adjustment of the accounts, which the plaintiff had not performed, not having paid over to T. a balance alleged to be due to the latter on such adjustment. White v. Ansdell, 1 M. & W. 348; 1 Tyr. & G. 785; 5 L. J., Ex. 180.

—— Reduction of Damages.]—Held, also, that the defendant could not shew, in reduction of damages, that the costs of T.'s defence to the action brought by M. were much less than the costs incurred by the plaintiff. Ib.

E. OTHER INDEMNITIES.

1. EXPRESS.

Indemnity or Guarantee—Statute of Frauds.]—See ante, cols. 1139, 1140.

On Assignment of Leasehold.]—Under an agreement to assign a lease, the defendant agreed to pay the rent and taxes to become due in respect of the premises after a certain day, and to indemnify the plaintiff against the rent and covenants contained in the lease, and from all loss which he might incur by the nonpayment of such rent, or non-observance of the covenants. No legal assignment was made, but the defendant was let into possession, and some of the plaintiff's goods, which had been left upon the premises, were distrained for the rent and taxes. In an action upon the agreement for not indemnifying, the declaration alleged that goods or chattels of the plaintiff were in and upon the premises with the leave and licence of the defendant, and were liable to be seized and taken; and afterwards the goods were lawfully seized and taken as a distress for arrears of rent due under the lease in respect of the premises, and sold. The defendant pleaded that no goods or chattels of the plaintiff were at any time in and upon the premises with the leave and licence of the defendant, nor was any part of the goods lawfully seized or taken as and for a distress, or sold or disposed of as alleged:—Held, that the statement relating to the leave and licence was immaterial; and that the substance of the plea was, that the plaintiff's goods had not been seized; and that as the facts involved in the issue raised thereon had been found for the plaintiff, the verdict upon such issue should have been entered for him. Groom v. Bluck, 2 Man. & G. 567; 2 Scott (N.R.) 89; 10 L. J., C. P. 105.

In an action by a lessee against the assignee of a lease for a breach of a contract by the assignee to indemnify the lessee against a failure to perform the covenants contained in a lease, he sought to recover the whole costs, as well those paid by him on taxation as extra costs paid by him to his own attorney, incurred in unsuccessfully defending an action brought against him by the lessor for a breach of one of the covenants in the lease committed after the assignment:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to recover the extra costs as well as the taxed costs. Howard v. Lovegrove, 40 L. J., Ex. 13; L. R. 6 Ex. 43; 23 L. T. 396; 19 W. R. 188.

On the dissolution of a partnership between H. and R., H. assigned to R. all his interest in two houses belonging to the partnership held under subleases from C. and D., and R. covenanted to pay the rents and observe the covenants and keep H. indemnified against them. R.'s executors sold the houses to B., and B. to a company which went into liquidation. The landlords C. and D. thereupon sued H. for the rent, and he paid it for the whole of the year 1882. D. also made a large demand against H. for breaches of covenants to repair, but H. made no payment. On the 15th of March, 1883, D. assigned his reversion to H., and in May, 1883, H. acquired C.'s reversion. In June, 1883, H. bought the leasehold interest in both houses from the liquidators of the company, and covenanted thenceforth to pay the rent and observe the covenants. H. sought to prove against the estate of R. for the sums paid for rent, for the rent payable at Lady Day, 1883, on D.'s house, and for the amount of the dilapidations in that house:—Held, that the right of H., under R.'s covenant of indemnity, to prove for the rents which he had paid, was not taken away by his covenant in the assignment by the liquidators, which could not be extended to rents already due and paid. Further, this right was not defeated on the ground that the right of R.'s representatives, if they paid rent, to recover it from the owner of the lease for the time being, was interfered with by the assignment from the liquidators to H., for that this assignment could not take away any right of action which R.'s executors might have against the persons entitled to the houses at the end of 1882, and that an assignor who pays rent has no lien on the term, and so cannot be prejudiced by its subsequent assignment. Neither was the right defeated on the ground that H., on paying the rent, became entitled to a right of distress from the reversioners, which he had destroyed by taking an assignment of the leases, and had therefore discharged the estate of R. by releasing a remedy to the benefit of which R. as a surety was entitled, for that a right of distress is not a security or remedy to the benefit of which a surety paying rent is entitled under the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 5 :—Held, therefore, that H. was entitled to prove against R.'s estate for the rent paid in 1882 on both houses, and that he was entitled to prove for the Lady Day rent on D.'s house; but that H. was not entitled to prove for the amount of dilapidations, for that he had sustained no damage by reason of them, inasmuch as he bought the leases from the liquidators at a less price in consequence of the breaches of the covenant to repair; nor for the Lady Day rent of C.'s house. Russell. In re, Russell v. Shoolbred, 29 Ch. D. 254; 53 L. T. 365—C. A.

To Agent making Distress.]—A. gave authority to B. to distrain on the goods of C., and gave him an indemnity against all costs and charges that he might be at "on that account." B. made the distress, and his men being told by the son of C. that a certain cask contained spent liquor of no value, they took the cask to pieces, and let the liquor run off; it was, in fact, cochineal dye belonging to D. For the wasting of it, D. recovered damages against B. in trover:—Held, that B. could not recover the amount of those damages from A. in an action on the indemnity, and that such an indemnity would only apply to cases where a distress was illegal, because the landlord had no right to put in such distress. Draper v. Thompson, 4 Car. & P. 84.

A landlord signed a warrant of distress in the following form: "I hereby authorise R. I., or his agent, as my agent, to seize and distrain the goods on the premises in possession of M. G., for 9*l.*, being the amount of rent due to me; and for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant, authority and indemnification against all costs and charges in respect to any law expenses, action or actions that may arise, as well as any other and all charges or expenses which you or your agent may be at, or brought against you or your agent on this account." A servant of R. I. having distrained, an action was brought against him by the tenant, for the conversion of certain goods, some of which were alleged not to have been in the inventory, in which action the plaintiff was nonsuited:—Held, that, assuming that the servant had done nothing wrong, the indemnity extended to the costs of defending the action brought against him. Ibbett v. De la Salle, 6 H. & N. 233; 30 L. J., Ex. 44.

—— Stamping.]—An undertaking whereby a party describing a distress to be taken for rent claimed to be due to him, engages to indemnify the bailiff who makes the distress, does not require an agreement stamp. Cox v. Bailey, 6 Scott (N.R.) 798; 6 Man. & G. 193.

To Acceptor of Bill—Voluntary Payment—Estoppel.]—The plaintiff accepted a bill for the accommodation of R. R. afterwards compounded with his creditors, who executed a release, in which the holder of the bill concurred, under a secret understanding between him, the plaintiff, and R., that his rights against the plaintiff should not be prejudiced. R. died, appointing the plaintiff his executor. The plaintiff, at the request of R.'s widow, renounced probate, and allowed the widow to take out administration, in consideration of which Mrs. R. and her brother gave him a memorandum, undertaking to indemnify him against all his liabilities as surety for R. on several instruments, and under the accommodation bill, but not beyond the amount of the assets. The holder of the bill pressed the plaintiff for payment, the plaintiff paid him, and filed a bill against Mrs. R. and her brother for indemnity out of the assets:—Held, that however the case might have stood apart from the memorandum, Mrs. R. had thereby estopped herself from treating the plaintiff's payment to the bill-holder as voluntary, and not made in satisfaction of a legal liability, and that she had therefore no defence to the suit; and that although the demand against her brother might be of a legal and not of an equitable nature, yet as he was surety in respect of a demand which, as against his principal, was the proper subject of a suit in equity, he was properly made a party to the suit. Atkins v. Revell, 1 De G. F. & J. 360.

Liability for Interest.]—A. covenants to indemnify lands settled on B. from certain debts, the interest in which B. is afterwards obliged to pay: B. is entitled under the covenant to come against the estate of A. for the sums so paid for interest, together with interest thereon. Fergus v. Gore, 1 Sch. & Lef. 107.

Costs—Title to Lands.]—The defendant conveyed premises to the plaintiff, and covenanted for good title. An action was afterwards brought against the plaintiff by a party having a better title, and the plaintiff compromised it for 550*l.*:—Held, that the plaintiff, in an action for breach of covenant, might recover the whole sum paid, and his costs as between attorney and client in the compromised suit, though he had given no notice of that suit to the defendant. For, in an action on a general guarantee, the only effect of such want of notice to the indemnifying party is to let in proof on his part that the compromise was improvidently made; and it lies on him to establish that fact, which was not done in the present case. Smith v. Compton, 3 B. & Ad. 407; 1 L. J., K. B. 146.

—— Action undertaken at Request.] — In consideration of the plaintiff's having, at the instance of the defendant, consented to pay to the holder the amount of a dishonoured bill of exchange on which the defendant was liable as indorser, and to bring an action on the bill in the plaintiff's own name against the acceptor, the defendant gave to the plaintiff the following guarantee: "I hereby agree to be answerable to you for all costs, damages, and expenses, which you may sustain by reason of trying the action, and relating and incidental thereto." The plaintiff brought the action against H., who obtained the verdict. H.'s costs of suit were taxed and paid by the plaintiff. The bill of costs of the plaintiff's own attorney in the same suit having been delivered to, but not paid by the plaintiff, he sued the defendant on the guarantee:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, as damages, not only the costs which he had paid to H., but also those for which he was thus liable to his own attorney. Spark v. Heslop, 1 El. & El. 563; 28 L. J., Q. B. 197; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 730; 7 W. R. 312.

An action having been commenced against a surety on a promissory note, he agreed, that, if the plaintiff would take proceedings against the principal, he (the surety) would pay the extra costs occasioned thereby; the plaintiff having done so, afterwards issued execution against the surety for the balance due on the note, and also the extra costs; the court ordered the execution to be reduced to the extent of the costs included in it. Evans v. Pugh, 2 D. P. C. 360.

—— Action for Debt Clearly Due.]—A person indemnified cannot charge the person indemnifying with the costs of defending an action for a debt clearly due unless authorised by him to defend. Gillett v. Rippon, 1 M. & M. 406.

—— Sheriff.]—A sheriff, sued for a wrongful arrest, defended the action without communicating with the execution creditor, who was liable to indemnify him:—Held, in a subsequent action by the sheriff against the execution creditor, that, to entitle the sheriff to recover the costs of defending the former action, it should be submitted to the jury to say whether the course pursued in defending the former action was reasonable, under all the circumstances of the case. Caldbeck v. Boon, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 32.

—— Expenses of proposed Railway Company.]—By an agreement whereby the plaintiff agreed to allow his name to be put on the list of the provisional committee of a railway company, and the defendants undertook to indemnify the plaintiff from all personal responsibility, and to hold him harmless against all costs, charges and expenses that had been or might be incurred in and about the formation of the company, their meetings, advertisements, surveys and other expenses of carrying out the company, applying for an act of parliament, or anything relating thereto:—Held, that this was an indemnity against lawful claims only, and therefore did not apply to the costs incurred in the defence of an action improperly brought against the plaintiff as a member of the provisional committee, and the costs of a chancery suit which arose out of the action. Lewis v. Smith, 9 C. B. 610; 19 L. J., C. P. 278.

The plaintiff and defendant being members of a committee of a proposed railway company, by an agreement under seal, which recited that debts and liabilities had been incurred, and that it was probable that further disputes would arise respecting the liability of the members and the committee of management; and that the plaintiff being desirous of being relieved from all such questions and disputes had proposed to contribute and pay a sum to the defendants towards the payment of their claims, upon their agreeing to indemnify him, and to guarantee him that the sums mentioned in the first schedule had been paid, the defendants guaranteed that the sums mentioned in the first schedule had been paid, and also that they would indemnify and save harmless the plaintiff from all claims expressly mentioned and referred to in the second schedule, and from all costs, damages and expenses which he might sustain or be put to by reason thereof, and at their own costs and charges defend him against all actions and suits which should be commenced or prosecuted against him for the recovery thereof, or any part or parts thereof. After the making of this agreement, an order was obtained in the Court of Chancery, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, for winding up the affairs of the company. The plaintiff was adjudged to be a contributory, and a sum was directed to be collected, such sum being composed of one of the sums mentioned in the second schedule to the agreement, and the rest of it consisting of costs and expenses occasioned by and incidental to the proceedings under the winding-up. The plaintiff having been ordered to pay a proportion of the sum directed to be collected, and having paid the same, brought an action against the defendants under the agreement:—Held, that the agreement merely protected the plaintiff against the claims mentioned in the schedules, and against the costs and expenses to which the plaintiff might be put by reason of the enforcement of those claims; and consequently, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover beyond the amount of the sum mentioned in the second schedule, and which was included in the amount directed to be collected, and that the costs and expenses which he had been compelled to pay were not of the character contemplated by the agreement, and could not be recovered by him from the defendants. Tanner v. Woolmer, 8 Ex. 482; 22 L. J., Ex. 259.

—— Alleged Wrongful Distress.]—See Ibbett v. De la Salle, supra, col. 1319.

Charge on Property—In Favour of Co-partners—Extent of Liability.]—A banker took three gentlemen into partnership without an inquiry being made into the accounts, and gave them a charge on all his estates, by way of indemnity against all his liabilities at the time they entered into partnership:—Held, to be only an indemnity against what they should be called on to pay, on account of his liabilities, out of their private means, independent of the banking business. Grylls v. Grylls, 18 W. R. 85.

—— Where Property alleged to be Sufficient proves Insufficient.] — Where, for providing for payment for bills, a third person charged certain property for the benefit of acceptor by way of security, alleging it to be sufficient in value above incumbrances, but which turned out to be otherwise:—Held, that the acceptor was entitled to have so much as he had paid, and interest, as the property was insufficient to pay, raised and paid out of the general estate of the deceased third person. Ingram v. Thorp, 7 Hare, 67.

Conveyance of Estate by way of Indemnity—Right to Reconveyance.]—Upon the occasion of a bond being executed by A. and B. to secure money lent to A., the title deeds of an estate purchased by A. were deposited with B. as an indemnity against his liability upon the bond; the legal interest in the estate was likewise conveyed to B., and it was agreed that he should also hold it as an indemnity. After the death of B. his executor delivered up the title deeds to A. upon a false representation by him that the bond had been paid off:—Held, that a conveyance of the legal estate could not be compelled until the indemnity was worked out, and that the lien upon the title deeds remained. Tyson v. Cox, Turn. & R. 395; 24 R. R. 79.

Right of Action where no Loss incurred.]—A company entered into a contract with a business firm in the Argentine Republic to indemnify them against a particular claimant, the company being at liberty to use the name of the firm in defending any action brought by the claimant, and the firm agreeing to give all assistance required. At the time when this contract was entered into an action had been commenced in this country by the particular claimant: it was defended by the company in the name of the firm, and in their pleadings the company stated that E. had become the surviving partner of the firm. Judgment was given in the action against the firm, but no execution had been issued, and it appeared that E., who resided in the Argentine Republic, had no property in this country. E. brought an action against the company to enforce the contract of indemnity:—Held, that as it appeared that E. had no property in this country, and as no steps had been taken to enforce the judgment in the Argentine Republic, she was not damnified by the judgment against the firm, and was not therefore entitled to relief under the contract of indemnity. Eddowes v. Argentine Loan Co., 63 L. T. 364—C. A.

A surety on a bond to secure a money debt was secured by another bond of indemnity entered into by the principal debtor's father, who had died, having devised property specifically upon trust to pay the debt. The creditor having applied to the surety, the surety had recourse to the executors, who said they had no funds in hand, and that they were unable under the will to raise the money by sale of any portion of the testator's estate, except under a decree of the court:—Held, that the surety, though he had not actually paid anything, was entitled to maintain a bill against the executors for administration, payment of the debt and indemnity. Wooldridge v. Norris, L. R. 6 Eq. 410; 16 W. R. 965.

Held, also, that it was not necessary that the bill should be filed on behalf of all the creditors. Ib.

Specific Performance before Breach.]—In equity a contract to indemnify can be specifically enforced before there has been any such breach of the contract as would sustain an action at law. In equity the plaintiff need not pay and perhaps ruin himself before seeking relief. He is entitled to be relieved from liability. Johnston v. Salvage Association, 19 Q. B. D. 460; 57 L. T. 219; 36 W. R. 56; 6 Asp. M. C. 167.

Injunction to restrain Action.]—The defendant sued at law on an indemnity bond; the plaintiff filed this bill for an injunction, without offering to make any recompense for the damage actually sustained; the bill was dismissed. Godbolt v. Watts, 2 Anstr. 543.

Parties to Action—Privity.]—The defendant by his answer insisted that he was entitled to have relief over against A. for whatever he should be decreed to pay the plaintiff. There was not any privity between A. and the plaintiff:—Held, that A. was not a necessary party to the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Trimleston (Lord), 5 Ir. Eq. R. 511.

2. IMPLIED.

Against Payment of Rent.]—A lessee of a farm for an unexpired term at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, gave up possession to the defendant, under an invalid assignment of the unexpired residue of the lease. He entered, occupied and paid the reserved rent quarterly to the lessor for the lessee. The lessor never accepted or objected to the defendant as his tenant. The defendant quitted on a quarter-day without giving the lessee any notice to quit:—Held, that a promise by the defendant to indemnify the lessee against the rent for any period after the defendant had ceased to occupy, could not be inferred as a matter of law. Crouch v. Tregoning or Tregonning, 41 L. J., Ex. 97; L. R. 7 Ex. 88; 26 L. T. 286; 20 W. R. 536.

A., who held certain lands under lease at a rent, gave possession of a small part thereof to B., on the terms that he was to hold rent free, and make certain expenditure in buildings, which was done. C. afterwards acquired the residue of the holding from A., subject to this arrangement, and for many years paid the entire rent reserved by the lease. One year's rent being due, the landlord brought an ejectment, and B. paid the rent claimed in order to save the lands from eviction:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the amount from C. in an action for money paid. Murphy v. Davey, 14 L. R., Ir. 28.

Against Distress—On Sub-Tenant.]—A defendant held premises under a lease from H. at a certain rent, and entered into an agreement with one N. for the sale of all the household furniture, &c., on the premises for a certain sum, to be paid by instalments, covenanting, on payment of the whole of the purchase-money, to demise the premises to N. for twenty-five years; the lease to contain the like covenants on the part of N. as were contained in the lease under which the defendant held. The agreement also contained a covenant that N. should, in the meantime, and until such lease should be granted, pay the rent and perform all the covenants which would be to be performed by him in case the lease was actually granted, with a power of distress for nonpayment of the rent. N. was let into immediate possession under this agreement, and paid the rent. The defendant neglecting to satisfy the rent due to the superior landlord, the latter distrained and sold the goods of N.:—Held, that there was an implied duty on the defendant to indemnify N. from the consequences of the nonperformance of his covenants with the superior landlord, and that case was the proper form of action for the breach of such implied duty. Hancock v. Caffyn, 1 M. & Scott, 521; 8 Bing. 358; 1 L. J., C. P. 104.

The plaintiff took of the defendant a house at a yearly rent, under an agreement, by the terms of which the latter undertook that, up to the date of the agreement, he had paid, or would pay, "all arrears of rent, rates, taxes, or assessments"; and the former agreed, that "from and after that day, the same should be kept paid by him for the time he might occupy the premises." At the expiration of the first quarter, the superior landlord distrained for rent:—Held, that there was no implied duty in the defendant to indemnify the plaintiff against this claim, although the agreement between them stipulated for a yearly rent; the defendant having, by the subsequent clause, expressly undertaken to keep the reserved rent paid. Upton v. Fergusson, 3 M. & Scott, 88.

To a breach of contract by a lessee, to indemnify his sub-lessee against the rent payable to the superior landlord, it is no answer that at the time of the distress made by the superior landlord (the breach complained of) there was more rent due than that distrained for. Briant v. Pilcher, 16 C. B. 354; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1020; 3 W. R. 483.

—— On Goods of Stranger.]—There is no obligation upon the owner of land, arising from the mere circumstance of a stack of wheat being lawfully there, to indemnify the owner of the stack from the loss occasioned by a seizure and sale of the stack by the ecclesiastical commissioners, by virtue of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, for a tithe rentcharge upon such land. Griffinhoofe v. Daubuz, 5 El. & Bl. 746; 25 L. J., Q. B. 237; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 392; 4 W. R. 131—Ex. Ch.

—— To Bailiff.]—The defendant, an attorney, employed the plaintiff to levy a distress for rent upon the premises of an auctioneer, urging him to make the levy forthwith, assigning as a reason that there was a large quantity of furniture in the auction room; and by the warrant, he directed him to distrain "the several goods and chattels on the premises." Acting upon these instructions, the plaintiff caused all the goods upon the premises to be seized. Some of the goods so seized turning out to be protected from distress, the owners brought actions, and eventually the goods were restored to them, and the plaintiff incurred costs:—Held, that, under the circumstances, an indemnification of the plaintiff against the consequences of pursuing the defendant's instructions was implied by law. Toplis v. Grane, 7 Scott, 620; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 636; 2 Arn. 110; 9 L. J., C. P. 180.

Held, also, that the plaintiff's conduct in the premises did not exhibit such a degree of negligence and want of skill, as to afford an answer to an action for his work and labour. Ib.

Goods Lawfully Seized for Another's Debt.]—As a general rule, where one person's goods are lawfully seized for another's debt, the owner of the goods is entitled to redeem them, and to be reimbursed by the debtor against the money paid to redeem them, and in the event of the goods being sold to satisfy the debt the owner is entitled to recover the value of them from the debtor; and the right to indemnity exists although there may be no agreement to indemnify, and although there may be in that sense no privity between the owner of the goods and the debtor. Edmunds v. Wallingford, 54 L. J., Q. B. 305; 14 Q. B. D. 811; 52 L. T. 720; 33 W. R. 647; 49 J. P. 549—C. A. Affirming 1 Cab. & E. 334.

The defendant bought the business of an ironmonger in his own name for his two sons; he paid the greater part of the purchase-money. The banking account of the business was kept by him, and he drew the cheques on that account. A society having obtained judgment in an action against the defendant, certain goods of his sons were seized by the sheriff: the sons claimed the goods; but upon an interpleader summons taken out by the sheriff, the claim of the sons was barred, and the goods were sold. They realised 1,300*l.*, and this sum was paid into court in the action by the society against the defendant as a security for what might be found due to the society from the defendant upon taking certain accounts. The defendant's sons were afterwards adjudicated bankrupts, and the plaintiff was appointed their trustee. The defendant agreed with the plaintiff that in consideration of his son's goods having been seized and sold on behalf of the society in respect of an alleged claim against him, he would pay 300*l.* per annum to the plaintiff until he should have paid a sufficient sum to pay the trade creditors of his sons in full. The plaintiff having brought the present action to recover 1,200*l.* due by virtue of the abovementioned agreement, or in the alternative 1,300*l.*, the value of the goods seized:—Held, that even if the defendant's express promise to pay 1,200*l.* was not legally binding upon him, nevertheless the action was maintainable; for although the decision upon the interpleader summons did not estop the defendant from shewing that the seizure by the sheriff was unlawful, nevertheless he had by his conduct led to the seizure, and the goods of his sons had been legally taken for his debt; the defendant, therefore, was bound to indemnify his sons, and the plaintiff, as their trustee in bankruptcy, was entitled to have judgment entered for him for the sum of 1,200*l.*, which he was willing to accept instead of 1,300*l.*, the value of the goods seized. Ib.

Delivery of Goods claimed by Third Parties.]—The plaintiffs were in possession of certain trucks, which were claimed by the defendant, and also by the proprietors of a colliery. A correspondence took place between the plaintiffs and the defendant, in which the plaintiffs asked for an indemnity if they should deliver up the trucks to the defendant. The defendant, without giving any answer as to the indemnity, wrote requiring the plaintiffs to send the trucks back to him, which they thereupon did. The colliery proprietors then brought an action against the plaintiffs for conversion of the trucks; and their claim proving well founded, the plaintiffs were obliged to pay a sum of money, in settlement of the action, which they sought to recover from the defendant upon a contract of indemnity:—Held, that there was, under the circumstances of the case, evidence of an implied promise to indemnify. Dugdale v. Lovering, 44 L. J., C. P. 197; L. R. 10 C. P. 196; 32 L. T. 155; 23 W. R. 391.

The principle upon which in such cases a contract of indemnity is implied is not confined to cases of principal and agent, or employer and employed. Ib.

After Sale of Shares.]—The plaintiff, being the holder of shares in a mine worked on the cost-book principle, sold them to the defendant, and delivered to him a transfer paper in the usual form, signed by the plaintiff, but with blank spaces for the name of the transferee. By taking this paper to the secretary of the mine, and filling up the blanks with his name, the defendant might have had himself registered as the owner of the shares. A call was made, which the plaintiff was compelled to pay, as he continued to be the registered owner of the shares, the defendant having taken no steps to have himself registered:—Held, that there was an implied contract on the part of the defendant to indemnify the plaintiff against calls made upon the shares while they remained the property of the defendant. Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 25 L. J., C. P. 263; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 643; 4 W. R. 681—Ex. Ch.

Retirement of Director.]—H. and W. were two of the directors of a banking company. It was agreed at a meeting of directors that H. should retire from being a director and a shareholder on the terms embodied in a minute, as follows:—"H.'s shares to be taken at par. Release and indemnity may be arranged by the solicitors of the parties. (Signed) F. K., chairman." H. retired, and his shares were cancelled. W. was not present at the meeting at which this minute was passed, but was aware of the transaction, and expressed no disapprobation though he did no act to ratify it. It was subsequently determined, under the winding up of the company, that the cancellation of H.'s shares was invalid, and that he was a contributory:—Held, that W. was not under any liability to indemnify H. against the liabilities of the company arising after H.'s retirement. Walker, Ex parte, St. Marylebone Banking Co., In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 261; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1216; 5 W. R. 26—L.JJ.

Expenses of Captain of Ship.]—When the owners of a ship instruct the captain to make purchases in a foreign country, and to draw bills upon them in payment, the promise implied by law is not a promise to accept or pay the bills, but a promise to indemnify the captain against any loss or damage sustained by him from having drawn the bills. Huntley v. Sanderson, 1 C. & M. 467; 3 Tyr. 469; 2 L. J., Ex. 204.

Where a master of a ship which was damaged by perils of the sea (being exclusively the agent of the shipowner, in ordering repairs or borrowing money on bottomry bond for such repairs) hypothecated at a foreign port by a bottomry bond for necessary repairs, the ship, freight and cargo, amongst which were the plaintiff's goods, and in consequence of the ship and freight realising less than the sum borrowed, the plaintiff was obliged to contribute towards the difference, and also to pay his proportion of the costs of a suit instituted in the Court of Admiralty by the obligee of the bond:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action against the owner of the ship on an implied promise to indemnify. Benson v. Duncan, 3 Ex. 644; 18 L. J., Ex. 169; 14 Jur. 218—Ex. Ch.

A captain of a ship, in order to avoid expense, accepted the offer of a company to tranship some goods temporarily on board one of their vessels. The goods were afterwards removed to another vessel for the greater convenience of the company, but it was unfit to hold the goods, and they were lost. The captain, at the end of his voyage, declined to pay the value of the goods to the consignees, who held the bills of lading; he was then sued, and judgment was given against him. In an action to be reimbursed the damages, and the costs of the proceedings against the captain:—Held, that the company was bound to pay the value of the goods only, and not the costs of the action, as it ought not to have been defended. Ronneberg v. Falkland Islands Co., 17 C. B. (N.S.) 1; 34 L. J., C. P. 34; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 10 L. T. 530; 12 W. R. 714.

The plaintiffs were the registered mortgagees of forty-eight sixty-fourth shares in a ship, the defendants being the owners of the residue of such shares. The captain, having incurred a debt for necessary disbursements made by him, instituted proceedings in rem against the ship and arrested her in the Admiralty Division. The plaintiffs, in order to obtain the release and get possession of the ship, paid the captain's claim, together with the costs of the proceedings:—Held, that as the plaintiffs were compelled under pressure of law to pay the sum in question in order to release the ship from arrest and get possession of her, there was an implied promise on the part of the defendants to repay them that sum, inasmuch as the mortgagor and the defendants (the co-owners) were liable to the captain for the disbursements made by him. The Orchis, 59 L. J., P. 31; 15 P. D. 38; 62 L. T. 407; 38 W. R. 472; 5 Asp. M. C. 501—C. A.

On Sale of Equity of Redemption.]—There is an implied promise by the purchaser of an equity of redemption to indemnify the vendor against the mortgage debt. Bridgman v. Daw, 40 W. R. 253.

Mortgagee postponing Charge at Mortgagor's Request.]—Where, at the request of a mortgagor, a second mortgagee postpones his charge for the purpose of facilitating a further charge for the benefit of the mortgagor, the court will imply a promise on the part of the mortgagor to indemnify the second mortgagee, and allow a proof against the bankrupt mortgagor's estate for the amount which the second mortgagee would have received out of the proceeds of sale of the estate if he had not consented to postpone his charge. Ford, Ex parte, Chappell, In re, 55 L. J., Q. B. 406; 16 Q. B. D. 305—C. A.

Bail.]—A. entered into a recognizance of bail for B. on the removal by certiorari of an indictment for conspiracy. B. was convicted, and the recognizance was estreated for nonpayment of the prosecutor's costs:—Held, that A. might maintain an action against B. as upon an implied indemnity. Jones v. Orchard, 16 C. B. 614; 24 L. J., C. P. 229; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 936.

Request to get Bills accepted against Bill of Lading—Forgery.]—The defendant, a merchant at Newcastle, was a customer of the plaintiffs, bankers at Newcastle, whose London agent was the Union Bank of London. H., a merchant at Wolgast, in Prussia, wrote to the defendant that he was inclined to consign to him a cargo of wheat, and asking for how much, and at what date, the defendant would open for him a credit in London. The defendant wrote in reply: "You may draw against transmittal of bill of lading at 30*s.* to 32*s.* per quarter in advance for your best yellow wheat, on our account, at fourteen days, one, two, or three months' date on the Union Bank of London." H. afterwards wrote to the defendant that he was about to consign to him 8,320 scheffels of wheat, shipped by the vessel "Anna," Captain K., and that he annexed duplicate bill of lading. On the same day H. wrote to the Union Bank that he had drawn on them six bills of exchange for 400*l.* each, for account of the defendant. The Union Bank having no instructions, sent the letter to the plaintiffs. Messrs. B. and C. afterwards presented to the Union Bank, for acceptance, six bills of exchange for 400*l.* each, drawn and indorsed by H., together with a paper writing, purporting to be a bill of lading, indorsed by H. in blank. The plaintiffs having sent to the defendant the letter which H. addressed to the Union Bank, the defendant came to the plaintiffs' bank, and had some conversation with the manager, respecting the cargo of wheat supposed to have been shipped by H., when the defendant said, "it was a large amount, and that they must only accept against the bill of lading." The defendant then wrote to the plaintiffs, as follows: "We shall feel obliged by your requesting the Union Bank of London to accept the drafts of Mr. H. for 2,400*l.*, against properly indorsed bill of lading of 8,320*l.* scheffels of wheat, per 'Anna,' F. K., master, on our account." The Union Bank, at the request of the plaintiffs, accepted the drafts, and the plaintiffs debited the defendant with the amount. Before the draft became due it was discovered that the bill of lading was forged, and that no cargo was shipped on board the "Anna." H. was afterwards convicted of uttering a forged bill of lading. The Union Bank having paid the bills, and debited the plaintiffs with the amount:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount from the defendant on an implied contract to indemnify them. Woods v. Thiedemann, 1 H. & C. 478; 10 W. R. 846.

Breach of Trust.]—Where there are two trustees and the management of the trust is left in the hands of one, and the acting trustee commits a breach of trust, the passive trustee is not entitled to an indemnity from the acting trustee, unless there are some special circumstances, as where the acting trustee is the solicitor for the trust, or has derived a personal benefit from the breach of trust. Lockhart v. Reilly (25 L. J., Ch. 697) and Thompson v. Finch (8 De G. M. & G. 560) distinguished. Bahin v. Hughes, 55 L. J., Ch. 472; 31 Ch. D. 390; 54 L. T. 188; 34 W. R. 311—C. A. See further TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

Voluntary Payments.]—It has always been clear that a purely voluntary payment cannot be recovered back. Voluntary payments may be divided into two classes. Sometimes money has been expended for the benefit of another in such circumstances that an option is allowed him to adopt or decline the benefit; in this case, if he adopts the benefit, he will be liable to repay the money expended; but if he declines the benefit, he will not be liable. But sometimes the money is expended for the benefit of another person in such circumstances that he cannot help accepting the benefit, in fact, that he is bound to accept it; in this case he has no opportunity of exercising any option, and he will be under no liability—per Lord Esher, M.R. Leigh v. Dickeson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 18; 15 Q. B. D. 64; 52 L. T. 791; 33 W. R. 539.

Against Costs.]—If A. at the desire of B. commence an action for his benefit, A., being liable to the attorney for the costs, may maintain an action against B., on such indemnity, although he has not paid the attorney. Bullock v. Lloyd, 2 Car. & P. 119.

—— Consequences of Accident.]—The plaintiffs were contractors for the construction and maintenance of a tramway belonging to a tramway company with the company, and in order to carry out their contract they entered into a contract with the defendants, by which they undertook the construction and maintenance of the asphalte paving of the tramway. When H. was lawfully driving along the public highway on which the tramway was, he was by reason of a hole in the asphalte paving of the tramway (due to the negligence of the defendants in carrying out their contract), thrown out of his cart and injured. He therefore commenced an action to recover compensation against the tramway company, who at once gave notice of the action to the plaintiffs, who passed on the notice to the defendants, and claimed to be indemnified by them. The defendants repudiated all responsibility or liability, and refused to have anything to do with the defence of the action. The action was eventually compromised by the plaintiffs, who paid to H. 110*l.* for damages and costs, and also incurred costs themselves in defending the action up to the compromise and in compromising to the amount of 18*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover the costs paid to H., or the costs incurred in defending or compromising the action, although the costs were reasonably incurred, and though the plaintiffs did in fact benefit the defendants in so incurring them by reducing the claim of H. Fisher v. Val de Travers Asphalte Paving Co., 45 L. J., C. P. 479; 1 C. P. D. 511; 35 L. T. 366.

H. having contracted with the plaintiffs, who were carriers, for the carriage of two pictures from London to Paris, the plaintiffs contracted with a railway company for the carriage by them of the pictures over a part of the distance. The pictures were damaged on the journey by the negligence of the company. H. thereupon brought an action against the plaintiffs, who gave notice of it to the company, and requested them to defend it. They refused, and told the plaintiffs to take their own course. The plaintiffs defended the action brought against them by H. without success, and then brought an action against the company to recover not only the damages found by the jury to have been sustained by H., but also the costs of the unsuccessful defence. The company paid the damages into court, and disputed their liability as to the costs:—Held, that the costs were not recoverable, inasmuch as they could not be considered as the natural consequence of the default of the company, the contracts between H. and the plaintiffs, and between the plaintiffs and the company, having been separate and independent. Baxendale v. *L. 1. PRISON.

Lands purchased for Prison Purposes vesting in Prison Commissioners.]—In 1867 the justices of the county of M. bought land covered with houses subject to leases for long terms, several years of which remained unexpired The land and the houses were conveyed to the clerk of the peace for the county "upon trust for the justices of the county of M., for the purposes of the Prisons Act, 1855, and upon or for no other trust, intent, or purpose whatsoever." The land and houses were never used as part of the prison. An action having been brought to try whether the reversion in the land and houses was in the prison commissioners or the justices, the defendant proposed to adduce as evidence the minutes of the proceedings of the justices in order to shew that the land had been bought for the purpose of rendering the prison more commodious or safe:—Held, that the reversion in the land and the houses standing thereon had passed to the prison commissioners by virtue of the Prisons Act, 1877. Prison Commissioners v. Middlesex (Clerk of the Peace), 51 L. J., Q. B. 433; 9 Q. B. D. 506; 46 L. T. 864; 30 W. R. 881; 46 J. P. 740—C. A.

Per Jessel, M.R.: That the conveyance having been executed, the minutes of the proceedings of the justices were inadmissible as evidence shewing the purpose for which the land and houses had been bought. Ib.

Order made by Justices for Enlargement of—Necessary Notice.]—By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 24, the necessity for the alteration or enlargement of an existing prison shall be proved by the presentment of two or more visiting justices, and the consideration of such a presentment shall not be entertained unless not less than three weeks' notice has been given in some newspaper, circulating in the district of the prison authority, of their intention to take the same into consideration at a time and place to be stated in the notice. Due notice having been given that the presentment of justices as to certain gaols would be taken into consideration at the April quarter sessions for a county, the presentment was taken into consideration at those sessions, and it was resolved that the matter should be referred to a select committee to inquire into it, and report to the October sessions. At the October sessions the report was taken into consideration without any fresh notice having been given, and an order was made in conformity with the report:—Held, that the power of adjournment was inherent in the sessions, and that it was competent to the court to adjourn the matter from the April to the October sessions; that they had in effect done so, though not formally: that a fresh notice for the October sessions was not necessary; and that the order was therefore valid. Reg. v. Westmoreland JJ., 9 B. & S. 288; 37 L. J., M. C. 115; L. R. 3 Q. B. 457; 18 L. T. 326; 16 W. R. 753.

Newgate.]—The corporation of London was not authorised by 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, to make any orders for the regulation of Newgate, which prevented justices of the peace for the county of Middlesex from committing persons charged with misdemeanor to that gaol. Rex v. Cope, 6 A. & E. 226; 1 N. & P. 515; 7 Car. & P. 720; 6 L. J., M. C. 81.

The clerk of the sessions of gaol delivery of Newgate is not entitled to any fee in respect of convicts sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour. Reg. v. Baker, 2 N. & P. 375; 7 A. & E. 502.

—— For Criminal Offenders only.]—By 52 Geo. 3, c. ccix., Newgate is made a prison for the reception of criminal offenders only; therefore a person committed by civil process cannot be detained there. Masters, In re, 33 L. J., Q. B. 146; 9 L. T. 733.

By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 14, s. 2. in default of distress whereon to levy a poor or highway rate with costs, two justices are empowered to issue their warrant of commitment against the person in default to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three calendar months, unless the sums therein mentioned be sooner paid. Defaulters in payment of rates, the payment of which might be enforced under this statute, were committed to Whitecross-street prison and Newgate:—Held, that the warrants of commitment were civil and not criminal process, and therefore the commitment to Whitecross-street prison was right, and the commitment to Newgate was wrong. Reg. v. Whitecross-street Prison (Governor), 6 B. & S. 371; 34 L. J., M. C. 193: 11 Jur. (N.S.) 970: 12 L. T. 543; 13 W. R. 1017; 10 Cox, C. C. 134.

House of Correction in Coldbath-fields.]—The governor of the house of correction in Coldbath-fields is justified in refusing to receive a person committed for default in payment of rates under 20 & 21 Vict. c. cxviii. s. 14, relating to Islington. Reg. v. Coldbath-fields (Governor), 6 B. & S. 352; 34 L. J., M. C. 137; 13 W. R. 681, 1017; 10 Cox, C. C. 125.

Inquest on Prisoner—Jurisdiction.]—Notwithstanding the transfer of prisons to the secretary of state by the Prison Act, 1877, a prison, as to which no rules have been made under s. 30 of the act, and which at the commencement of the Prison Act, 1865, was a prison belonging to a county, is still the county prison, although locally situate within the limits of a city, and therefore the jurisdiction to hold inquests on prisoners dying in such prisons is in the coroner for the city, and such jurisdiction is not affected by s. 171, sub-s. 1, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Reg. v. Robinson, 19 Q. B. D. 322; 57 L. T. 275; 35 W. R. 843; 16 Cox, C. C. 287; 52 J. P. 22.

2. OFFICERS.

Liability—Detaining Wrong Person.]—The keeper of a prison who receives and detains one apprehended and charged in his custody under a warrant, runs the risk of the warrant having been executed against the proper person; and though acting bonâ fide, and without the means of ascertaining the identity of the individual named in the warrant, he is liable to an action for false imprisonment, if by the mistake of the officer to whom it was directed, it was executed against another. Aaron v. Alexander, 3 Camp. 35; 13 R. R. 742. And see White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. 80.

—— False Imprisonment — Protection of Warrant.]—The governor of a prison is protected in obeying a warrant of commitment, valid on the face of it, and an action for false imprisonment will not lie against him for the detention of a prisoner in pursuance of the terms of such warrant. The plaintiff having been convicted by a court of summary jurisdiction and sentenced to seven days' imprisonment, a warrant of commitment was issued directing that the plaintiff should be imprisoned in a certain gaol for seven days. The plaintiff was arrested on August 24, and lodged in prison on August 25. The governor of the gaol kept the plaintiff in prison until and during August 31:—Held, that, whether or not the plaintiff's sentence ran from August 24 or August 25, the governor was protected by the warrant, and was not liable to an action for false imprisonment in respect of the plaintiff's detention on August 31. Henderson v. Preston, 57 L. J., Q. B. 607; 21 Q. B. D. 362; 36 W. R. 834; 52 J. P. 820—C. A. Affirming 59 L. T. 334; 16 Cox, C. C. 445.

M. was committed for a contempt of court in not answering to a bill in chancery. She was taken to gaol under a warrant addressed to the gaoler, which shewed on the face of it the cause of her committal. The plaintiff in the suit did not bring her to the bar of the court within thirty days; but the gaoler did not discharge her:—Held, that the duty was cast in express terms on the gaoler by 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15, to discharge the person in his custody under such circumstances, and as the warrant gave him notice, he was bound to discharge her after the lapse of thirty days, without an order from the sheriff or the Court of Chancery; and that an action of trespass would lie against him for detaining her. Moone v. Rose, 38 L. J., Q. B. 286; L. R. 4 Q. B. 486; 20 L. T. 606; 17 W. R. 729.

The plaintiff, having obtained judgment against F. in an action of assault and false imprisonment, sued out a ca. sa., whereon F. was taken and committed to the Queen's prison, of which the defendant was the keeper. F. afterwards petitioned the Court of Bankruptcy for his discharge, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, and, having obtained from the commissioner an order for his discharge, was, in obedience thereto, discharged by the defendant accordingly. The plaintiff having brought an action against the defendant for an escape:—Held, that, whether this was or was not a debt from which the commissioner had power to discharge the prisoner, the defendant was protected, being bound to obey the order of the commissioner, who was acting judicially, in a matter over which he had jurisdiction. Thomas v. Hudson, 14 M. & W. 353; 2 D. & L. 873; 14 L. J., Ex. 283; 9 Jur. 627.

The plaintiff was imprisoned under an attachment for a contempt incurred by him in disobeying an order of the chancery division, which directed him to lodge a certain sum of money to the credit of a cause. The attachment order did not specify the length of time for which the plaintiff was to be detained in custody. At the expiration of a year from the date of his arrest, the plaintiff required the defendant, who was governor of the gaol in which he was imprisoned, to discharge him, but the defendant refused to do so, on the ground that the plaintiff had not obtained an order for his discharge from the court out of which the process of contempt had issued:—Held, that until such order had been obtained, the plaintiff was not entitled to be discharged, and therefore that, as no such order had been made, an action for false imprisonment did not lie for the detention of the plaintiff in custody under the attachment order for a period exceeding a year. Greaves v. Keene, 4 Ex. D. 73; 40 L. T. 216; 27 W. R. 416. S. P., McCombe v. Gray, 4 L. R., Ir. 432.

Superannuation—Compensation—Liability of County to Pay.]—At the time of the passing of the Prisons Act, 1877, C. was the governor of a prison, which, pursuant to that statute, was transferred to the Secretary of State for the Home Department. The justices of M. had been the local authority having control of the prison. C. retired from his appointment soon after the coming into force of that act, and the commissioners of the treasury awarded to C. an annuity of 56*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, and apportioned it as follows:—42*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to be borne by the justices of M., and 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to be borne by grants provided by parliament. At the time of his retirement C. was less than sixty years of age, and he had not become incapable from sickness, age, or infirmity, or injury, of executing his office in person, and he retired for the purpose of facilitating improvements in the management of the prison. The justices having declined to pay the sum of 42*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*:—Held, that the commissioners had jurisdiction to apportion the annuity granted to C. in the manner above mentioned, and that a mandamus would lie to compel the justices of M. to pay the amount apportioned upon them. Middlesex JJ. v. Reg. 53 L. J., Q. B. 505; 9 App. Cas. 757; 51 L. T. 513; 33 W. R. 49; 15 Cox, C. C. 542; 48 J. P. 104—H. L. (E.)

3. Prisoners.

a. Treatment of.

"Criminal Prisoner"—Meaning of.]—A person committed to prison under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 32, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26, for acting as a solicitor, though not duly qualified, is a "criminal prisoner" within 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 4, which enacts that "criminal prisoner shall mean any prisoner charged with or convicted of a crime." Such a person is not entitled to be treated as a misdemeanant of the first class by 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 41. Osborne v. Milman, 56 L. J., Q. B. 263; 18 Q. B. D. 471; 56 L. T. 808; 35 W. R. 397; 51 J. P. 437—C. A. Reversing 16 Cox, C. C. 138.

A person who is committed to prison in default of distress for nonpayment of a sum of money adjudged to be paid by a court of summary jurisdiction on an information under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, is a "criminal prisoner" within the meaning of the Prisons Act, 1865, s. 5, and must be treated as such while in prison. Kennard v. Simmons, 50 L. T. 28; 15 Cox, C. C. 397; 48 J. P. 551.

Hard Labour—Nonpayment of Penalties.]—The 5th section of the Summary Jurisdiction

Act, 1879, authorises the infliction of imprisonment with hard labour for default in payment of a penalty adjudged to be paid by a summary conviction where the act on which the conviction is founded authorises the infliction of imprisonment with hard labour as a punishment for the offence. Reg. v. Tynemouth JJ., 55 L. J., M. C. 181; 16 Q. B. D. 647; 54 L. T. 386; 16 Cox, C. C. 74; 50 J. P. 454.

Whether a statute which authorises the punishment of an offence with a penalty, or in the discretion of the court, with imprisonment with or without hard labour, is an act which authorises the punishment of imprisonment with hard labour within the meaning of the exceptions in s. 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, quære. Reg. v. Tynemouth JJ. (16 Q. B. D. 647) not followed. Reg. v. Turnbull, 16 Cox, C. C. 110.

Classification of.]—Trespass will lie against the governor of a prison for causing a prisoner to be removed by force, or threats of force, from one division of the prison to another, in which he ought not by law to be confined, although he acts in obedience to a rule issued by the secretary of state, if such rule is not in accordance with the statutes as to the classification of the prisoners. Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Ex. 729; 19 L. J., Ex. 137.

The secretary of state is also liable to an action if he improperly directs the gaoler so to remove all persons of a certain class, and a gaoler does remove a person coming within that class. Ib.

Removal when Insane.]—A prisoner for debt in the Queen's prison who becomes insane may be removed to Bethlehem hospital by a warrant of a secretary of state, upon the proper medical certificates, under s. 14 of the Queen's Prison Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 22). Gore v. Grey, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 56; 33 L. J., C. P. 109; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 203; 9 L. T. 693; 12 W. R. 213—Ex. Ch.

b. Expenses caused by.

Reformatory—Expense of providing requisite Clothing for Prisoner.]—By the Prisons Act, 1877, the "prison authority," constituted under the Prisons Act, 1865, s. 5, is relieved from the obligation of defraying the expense of clothing requisite for the admission of a youthful offender to a reformatory school under the Reformatory Schools Act, 1867, ss. 14, 23; for expenses of that description fall within the definition of "maintenance of a prisoner" contained in the Prisons Act, 1877, s. 57, and must be defrayed out of moneys provided by parliament, under s. 4. Prison Commissioners v. Liverpool Corporation, 49 L. J., Q. B. 431; 5 Q. B. D. 332; 42 L. T. 838; 29 W. R. 6; 44 J. P. 616—C. A.

Maintenance of, when Removed to Asylum—Upon what Funds Chargeable.]—Where a pauper prisoner without a settlement becomes insane during confinement in a prison to which the Prison Act, 1877, applies, the expenses of inquiring into his insanity and of removing him to a county lunatic asylum, and of his maintenance in such asylum during the currency of his sentence, are, by ss. 4 & 57 of that act, to be defrayed out of moneys provided by parliament; and the effect of those sections is to repeal the provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 2, which made the county liable. Mews v. Reg. 52 L. J., M. C. 57; 8 App. Cas. 339; 48 L. T. 1; 31 W. R. 385; 15 Cox, C. C. 185; 47 J. P. 310—H. L. (E.)

Liability of Boroughs for Maintenance.]—By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, a borough with a separate court of sessions, sending its prisoners to the county gaol without any special contract, shall pay the expenses incurred in the conveyance, transport, maintenance, safe custody and care of every such prisoner, according to the time he shall remain in custody there, at the average daily cost of each prisoner according to the whole number of prisoners confined in the prison, including in such expenses all expenses of "repairs, alterations, additions and improvements in or to the prison":—Held, that any such borough is bound to contribute, in the proportion above mentioned, not only towards the cost of the necessary and ordinary repairs of the county gaol, but towards the cost of enlarging it, according to 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126. Reg. v. Wigan Corporation, 39 L. J., M. C. 68; L. R. 5 Q. B. 267; 21 L. T. 715; 18 W. R. 455.

Conveying Prisoner to Prison, Expenses of.]—A metropolitan police magistrate, having summarily convicted an offender and adjudged her to be imprisoned, made out a warrant for her commitment; in obedience to which warrant the plaintiff, a police constable, duly conveyed her to prison. By reason of such conveyance the plaintiff incurred certain expenses which the prisoner had no means to defray. The magistrate subsequently made an order under 27 Geo. 2, c. 3, directed to the defendant, ordering him to pay to the plaintiff the amount of such expenses. The defendant refused to comply with the order, on the ground that the liability to pay the expenses of conveying prisoners to prison had been transferred from the county to the secretary of state by s. 4 of the Prisons Act, 1877, which provides, that "After the commencement of the act all expenses incurred in respect of the maintenance of prisons to which the act applies and of the prisoners therein shall be defrayed out of moneys provided by parliament." A similar question arose with regard to the expenses of conveying from the police court to the prison a man committed to take his trial for felony:—Held, that the expenses of conveying prisoners to prison were by s. 4 transferred to the secretary of state, and that the word "therein" in that section pointed to the class of prisoners to whose maintenance the act was intended to apply, not to the period of time from which the liability for such maintenance was to commence. Mullins v. Surrey (Treasurer), 51 L. J., Q. B. 145; 7 App. Cas. 1; 45 L. T. 625; 30 W. R. 157; 15 Cox, C. C. 9; 46 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

c. Proceedings against.

Prisoner wishing to argue Case in Person.]—The court cannot grant a habeas corpus to a party to a suit, in custody, to enable him to appear in court merely for the purpose of arguing his case in person. Weldon v. Neal, 54 L. J., Q. B. 399; 15 Q. B. D. 471; 33 W. R. 581.

A prisoner who conducts in person an action in which he is the plaintiff, is not entitled to a habeas corpus to bring him to chambers, to oppose a summons for leave to plead several matters, unless the judge, in his discretion, thinks that there is an urgent necessity for his presence. Ford v. Graham, 1 L. M. & P. 604; 10 C. B. 369.

Right to see Witness who is also a Prisoner.]—A. was to be tried for felony at the assizes for the county of W., and B., a material witness for A., was committed to the W. city prison for further examination on a charge of felony:—Held, that before the trial of A. the governor of the W. city prison ought to allow A.'s attorney to see B. in his presence. Rex v. Simmonds, 7 Car. & P. 176.

Service of Process.]—A governor of a prison, in compliance with an order of the visiting justices, refused to allow the process of the court to be served upon a prisoner undergoing a criminal sentence. The court granted a rule nisi for an attachment against the governor, on the condition that the rule was not to be served or acted upon unless he persisted in refusing to allow service. Danson v. Le Capelain, 7 Ex. 667; 21 L. J., Ex. 219.

Service of subpœna to appear and answer upon the deputy governor of the house of correction in Coldbath-fields:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, to be good service on a defendant a prisoner there, so as to found an application for leave to enter an appearance for a defendant under the 8th Order of August, 1841. Newenham v. Pemberton, 2 Colly. 54; 9 Jur. 637.

Where a detainer for debt was lodged against a person in custody on a criminal charge, who was afterwards convicted and sentenced to a year's imprisonment:—Held, that the creditor was not bound to declare during that period. Altroffe v. Lunn, 9 B. & C. 395.

Where a defendant was in a county gaol, in the custody of the sheriff, on a criminal charge, a writ of capias might be lodged with the sheriff, who was then bound to detain the defendant. An order of the court to detain was not necessary. Grainger v. Moore, 5 D. P. C. 456.

A writ of capias under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3, was not a step in the action, but was altogether collateral to it. Ireland v. Berry, D. & M. 505; 5 Q. B. 551; 13 L. J., Q. B. 140.

Application for Discharge.]—A prisoner has a right to apply de die in diem for his discharge, and is not prejudiced by a former application having been unsuccessfully made. Hallett v. Cresswell, 1 B. C. Rep. 1; 3 D. & L. 561; 15 L. J., Q. B. 129.

Charging in Execution.]—Where a defendant was in custody on a criminal charge, it was not necessary for the plaintiff to charge him in execution, in a civil suit, by habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum, within two terms after the commitment to prison. Gibbs v. King, 2 D. & L. 806; 1 C. B. 1; 14 L. J., C. P. 85; 9 Jur. 113.

Where a defendant was brought up in custody of a gaoler for the purpose of being charged in execution, and it appeared that a commissioner of bankrupts had on the preceding day granted an interim order for his protection, the court refused to allow him to be charged in execution. Sloman v. Williams, 4 D. & L. 49.

It was no ground of objection to the defendant's being charged in execution, that the plaintiff had, on a former occasion, repudiated the action. Revell v. Wetherell, 3 C. B. 605.

It was no cause to shew against a motion to charge a defendant in execution, who has been brought up on a habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum, that the warrant of attorney on which the judgment has been signed was given without consideration, and the judgment signed in breach of good faith. Cooke v. Wright, 5 D. & L. 274.

A defendant was arrested upon process, which was set aside by the court as having been improperly issued:—Held, that the illegality of the original arrest could not be shewn as cause against his being charged in execution at the suit of another plaintiff, by whom he had been detained, but that his discharge from such detainer could only be obtained on a substantive motion. Stanford, In re, 1 D. (N.S.) 183; 4 Scott (N.R.) 23; 3 Man. & G. 409.

A prisoner in custody, under process of contempt of the Court of Common Pleas, was liable to be charged in execution upon a judgment in that court in the ordinary way. Wade v. Wood, 1 C. B. 462.

Supersedeas.]—A defendant arrested upon an order, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3. was supersedeable, unless the plaintiff proceeded to execution within two terms inclusive after judgment. Walter or Walker v. De Richmont or Richment, 2 D. & L. 507; 6 Q. B. 544; 14 L. J., Q. B. 22.

A prisoner once supersedeable was always so. Hallett v. Cresswell, 1 B. C. Rep. 1; 3 D. & L. 561; 15 L. J., Q. B. 129; 10 Jur. 266.

But this only held so long as he remained in the same custody and under the same process. Rose v. Christfield, 1 Term Rep. 591.

Where the nature of the charge was altered, it had been repeatedly determined to be otherwise. London Assurance Co. v. Perkins, 1 Term Rep. 591, n.

As against a prisoner, a final judgment was complete at the time of signing without carrying in the roll. Colbron v. Hall, 5 D. P. C. 535.

If after judgment the defendant was superseded for want of being charged in execution, and then an action of debt was brought on that judgment, and judgment recovered thereon, the defendant might be taken in execution on such second judgment. Ismay v. Dervin, 2 W. Bl. 982.

A defendant who had once become supersedeable for want of being charged in execution could not afterwards be charged in execution on the same judgment. Hewitt v. Melton, 1 C. & M. 579; 3 Tyr. 503; 2 D. P. C. 71; 2 L. J., Ex. 214.

PROXY.

Appointment—Right of.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 21, s. 6, did not abrogate the right of appointing a general proxy, with a 30*s.* stamp, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. Trinity House of Hull v. Beadle, 13 Q. B. 175; 18 L. J., Q. B. 78; 13 Jur. 557.

—— Validity of.]—The liquidator of a company in voluntary liquidation, in his affidavit of proof in bankruptcy of a debt due to the company, described himself as the liquidator of the company, and at the foot of the affidavit there was a proxy in this form: "I appoint T. and D. jointly and severally my proxy," which was signed by the liquidator in his own name, without adding any description or stating that he acted in the name and on behalf of the company:—Held, that the proxy was good. Taylor, Ex parte, Pooley, In re, 36 L. T. 679; 25 W. R. 641—C. A.

By the 65th of the articles of association of a steamship company, it was provided that votes might be given personally or by proxy. Article 66 provided that the instrument appointing a proxy should be in writing under the hand of the appointor, and should be attested by one or more witness or witnesses, and that no person should be appointed a proxy who was not a member of the company. Article 68 gave a form of proxy containing an attestation clause. By a special resolution article 68 was repealed, and a new form given without an attestation clause, but the resolution did not purport to repeal article 66:—Held, that, as the special resolution did not purport to affect article 66, the provision requiring the signature to be attested remained in force, and that it was not merely directory, but that attestation was essential to the validity of a proxy, and that unattested proxies must be rejected. Harben v. Phillips, 23 Ch. D. 14; 48 L. T. 334; 31 W. R. 173—C. A.

—— Revocation.]—A proxy made by a canon to act for him in his absence, in all corporate business, is not revoked by the canon making the proxy having, in an intermediate period, appeared and acted for himself. Eyre v. Lovell, 3 Dougl. 67.

—— Stamp.]—A note in writing, signed by proprietors under a local act, authorising others to act for them in the nomination and appointment of a special commissioner, requires to be stamped. Reg. v. Kelk, 12 A. & E. 559; 4 P. & D. 185; 9 L. J., Q. B. 362.

A. JUDICIAL CAPACITY.

1. JUDGES.

a. Particular Cases.

Lord Chancellor.] — The Lord Chancellor, though "Chancellor of Great Britain," has only certain statutory powers in Scotland, which are not of a judicial nature. Stuart v. Bute (Marquis), 9 H. L. Cas. 440.

Although the holder of the great seal is Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and by statute has important functions to exercise in Scotland, his jurisdiction as a judge is limited to the realm of England. Stuart v. Moore, 4 Macq. H. L. 49; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1129; 4 L. T. 382; 9 W. R. 722.

Master of the Rolls.]—See generally, as to the jurisdiction of the Master of the Rolls in England and Ireland. Shaw, Ex parte, Beat. 34.

The Master of the Rolls has no authority to inquire whether the keeper of the Queen's prison obeys the regulations established for the government of his prison, or give directions as to the mode of treatment of the prisoners committed to his custody for contempt. Oldfield v. Cobbett, 11 Beav. 258.

One of Superior Courts at Westminster.] — Judge of the Court of Chancery is not a judge of one of the superior courts at Westminster within the meaning of s. 14 of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Miles v. Presland, 4 Myl. & C. 431. Affirming 2 Beav. 300.

b. Liability to Actions.

Act done in Course of Judicial Office.]—No action will lie for any act done or word spoken in the exercise of judicial office though said or done maliciously and contrary to good faith and honesty. Anderson v. Gorrie, [1895] 1 Q. B. 668; 14 R. 79; 71 L. T. 382—C. A.

If an action is brought against a judge of record for an act done in his judicial capacity, a plea that he so did it will be a sufficient justification. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 172.

An action does not lie against a judge of one of the superior courts for a judicial act, though alleged to have been done maliciously and corruptly. Fray v. Blackburn, 3 B. & S. 576. S. P., Dicas v. Brougham (Lord), 6 Car. & P. 249—Ex. Ch.; Johnson v. Cooke, 17 S. J. 30.

The judge of a consular court, vested by treaty with plenary civil jurisdiction over all British subjects within the limits of the jurisdiction, while sitting and acting as judge of such consular court, is entitled to the same degree of protection which is accorded by the law of England to a judge of a court of record, and no action will lie for an act done by such judge within his jurisdiction in his judicial capacity. Haggard v. Pélicier, 61 L. J., P. C. 19; [1892] A. C. 61; 65 L. T. 769—P. C.

A sheriff substitute ordered a passage in certain pleadings drawn by a practitioner in his court to be struck out. He refused. The sheriff substitute suspended him for a month. The practitioner's action for damages held to be unsustainable. To support an action under such circumstances against a judge, express malice must be alleged, not malice involved in the act, or to be inferred from it. Hamilton v. Anderson, 3 Macq. H. L. 363.

No action will lie against a judge of a court of record for any act done by him in the exercise of his judicial functions. Ward v. Freeman, 2 Ir. C. L. R. 460—Ex. Ch.

An action will not lie against a judge for acts judicially done by him. A warrant granted by the chief justice of the Queen's Bench in chambers, returnable into that court, to arrest a party for a breach of the peace, is such a judicial act as will protect him against an action for false imprisonment. Tauffe v. Downes, 3 Moore, P. C. 36, n.

Trespass will not lie against a judge for acting judicially, but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction; and it lies upon the plaintiff, in every such case, to prove that fact. Calder v. Halket, 3 Moore, P. C. 28.

A judge of a court of record is answerable in an action for an act done by his command when he has no jurisdiction and is not misinformed as to the facts on which jurisdiction depends. Houlden v. Smith, 14 Q. B. 841; 19 L. J., Q. B. 170; 14 Jur. 598.

A judicial officer is not liable to be sued for an adjudication according to the best of his judgment upon a matter within his jurisdiction; and a matter of fact so adjudicated by him cannot be put in issue in an action against him. Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 523; 31 L. J., C. P. 158; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 913; 4 L. T. 640; 10 W. R. 6.

An action lies against a judge of an ecclesiastical court who has acted beyond the jurisdiction of the court, as where a party was excommunicated for refusing to obey an order of the ecclesiastical court which it had no authority to make, or where the party had not been previously served with a citation or monition, nor had due notice of the order. Beaurain v. Scott, 3 Camp. 388; 14 R. R. 759.

An action was held not to lie against a vicar-general of a bishop for excommunicating a party for contumacy in not taking upon him administration of an intestate's effects, to whom he was next of kin, and who had intermeddled with the goods, although the citation by which he was cited was void, by reason that it required him to appear and take administration without leaving him an option to renounce it, and the proceedings thereupon had been set aside upon appeal; for the vicar-general had jurisdiction over the subject-matter, viz. the granting administration, and there was no malice. Ackerley v. Parkinson, 3 M. & S. 411; 16 R. R. 317.

No action will lie against the judge of a court of record (a coroner) for an act done by him in his judicial capacity. Garrett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611; 9 D. & R. 657; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 221. S. P., Thomas v. Churton, 2 B. & S. 475; 31 L. J., Q. B. 139; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 795; 6 L. T. 320.

If the judgment of commissioners of appeal in certain cases be declared final by statute, their judgment cannot be questioned in an action of trespass. Radnor (Earl) v. Reeve, 2 Bos. & P. 391; 5 R. R. 630.

An action will not lie against a county court judge for words spoken by him while hearing a cause, although they are alleged to be spoken falsely and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, and not bonâ fide in the discharge of his judicial duties. Scott v. Stansfeld, 37 L. J., Ex. 155; L. R. 3 Ex. 220; 18 L. T. 572; 16 W. R. 911.

The steward of a hundred court, or of a court baron, is not responsible for the misfeasance in the execution of process of the bailiffs of the lord of the hundred or manor, to whom process of execution awarded by such court is usually directed. Bradley v. Carr, 3 Man. & G. 221; 3 Scott (N.R.) 523. S. P., Holroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & Ald. 473; 21 R. R. 361. Tinsley v. Massam, M. & M. 52; 2 Car. & P. 582.

Where, however, the steward directs process to persons named by the party suing out such process, taking an indemnity for such party, he is liable. Ib.

An action will lie against a sheriff or his deputy if he refuses to sign a bill of exceptions. White v. Hislop, 4 M. & W. 73; 6 D. P. C. 693; 7 L. J., Ex. 204; 2 Jur. 470.

c. Salary.

Assignment—Amount Payable on Death.]—The 6 Geo. 4, c. 85, regulating the payment of the salaries and pensions to the judges of his majesty's courts in India, enacts, "that when a chief justice or puisne judge hath departed, or shall depart, this life while in possession of such office, and after the expiration of six calendar months from the time of his arrival in India for the purpose of taking upon him the office of chief justice or puisne judge, the court of directors shall, and they are hereby required to pay, or direct and cause to be paid out of the territorial revenues from which the salary of such chief justice or puisne judge so dying shall be payable, to the legal personal representatives, over and above what may have been due to such chief justice or puisne judge, at the time of his death, a sum equal to the amount of six calendar months' salary." Sir John David Norton died while holding the office of puisne judge of the supreme court of Madras, having previously assigned, as a security for money advanced, the sum of 2,500*l.*, which would be payable to his personal representatives:—Held, first, that the meaning of the legislature was, that this sum should form part of the general assets of the judge, and that "legal personal representatives" were to be construed executors or administrators. Arbuthnot v. Norton, 5 Moore, P. C. 219; 3 Moore, Ind. App. 435; 10 Jur. 145.

Held, secondly, that the judge had complete power of assigning such contingent interest, either inter vivos or by will, and that this was a good assignment. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that this assignment was not against public policy, it being unlike salary in this respect, that the judge could, by no possibility, receive it in his lifetime, and the assignment could, therefore, not diminish his income. Ib.

"Property" of Bankrupt vesting in Trustee—Pension.]—The effect of ss. 15 and 17 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is to vest in the trustee in a bankruptcy all the "property" of the bankrupt of whatever nature, including the matters dealt with by s. 23 and ss. 87 to 95, but subject to the exceptions and qualifications introduced by those sections. The pension of a retired judge of a crown colony, granted by the secretary of state for the colonies, and voted annually by the legislature of the colony, is, in case of the bankruptcy of the judge, "property" which vests in the trustee of the bankruptcy, but it is "income" of the bankrupt within s. 90 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and is subject to the power thereby given to the court to determine how much of it shall be set aside for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors. Huggins, Ex parte, Huggins, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 935; 21 Ch. D. 85; 30 W. R. 878—C. A.

Liability to Pay—Chancellor of Durham.]—By the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 19, the temporal jurisdiction, including all jura regalia of the bishopric of Durham, was transferred from the bishop to the crown, and by the 6th section of that act the rights of any persons holding any office by patent were reserved, and the revenues of the see were made chargeable with the same fees and stipends in respect of any office in the county of Durham as the same had theretofore been subject to. Under the authority of the acts constituting the ecclesiastical commissioners, and by an order in council in 1836, the surplus revenues of the see of Durham, after providing for the bishopric, were directed to be paid to the ecclesiastical commissioners, and such surplus was made chargeable with the payment of the fees and stipends granted out of the revenues of the see by the last or any preceding bishop to any officer of the palatinate who held his office by patent at the time of the passing of the act 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 19. The office of chancellor of the palatinate was created by patent before the time of Henry VIII., and the fees in respect of such office were about 27*l.* In the year 1788 the then bishop made a voluntary grant of 100*l.* to the chancellor, payable out of the revenues of the bishopric, for each sitting of the chancellor's court, and from that period down to 1836, 100*l.* was entered in the accounts of the bishopric under the headings, sometimes "new stipends" and sometimes "new stipend due this sitting." The ecclesiastical commissioners having refused to pay the present chancellor, who was appointed in 1852, any more than the sum for which there was evidence of a grant by patent:—Held, that, having regard to the period during which the 100*l.* had been de facto paid, and irrespective of the question whether the payment of that sum could ever have been enforced by action at law, the surplus revenues of the bishopric in the hands of the ecclesiastical commissioners were liable for the payment of the sum of 100*l.* for each sitting of the chancellor. Temple v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 3 De G. M. & G. 418; 23 L. J., Ch. 673; 18 Jur. 45; 2 W. R. 112.

d. Where Interested.

Lord Chancellor interested as Shareholder—Appeal.] — A company filed a bill in equity against the defendant in a matter largely involving the interests of the company. The Lord Chancellor had an interest as shareholder in the company to the amount of several thousand pounds, a fact which was unknown to the defendant. The cause was heard before the vice-chancellor, who granted the relief sought by the company. The Lord Chancellor, on appeal, affirmed the order of the vice-chancellor:—Held, that the Lord Chancellor was disqualified, on the ground of interest, from sitting as judge on the cause, and that his decree was therefore voidable, and must consequently be reversed. Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 3 H. L. Cas. 759; 17 Jur. 73.

Observations on the inconvenient operation of a remote interest in the subject-matter of a cause operating to disqualify the judge. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Lindsay, 3 Macq. H. L. 99.

In Rating Matters.] — On appeal against a valuation of ratable property under a local act to the sessions for a borough, the recorder who tried the appeal reduced the rate, and ordered that the costs should be paid by the respondents. The amount of costs not being then ascertained, he adjourned the case to the next sessions. At these sessions a deputy recorder appointed under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, s. 8, presided. The costs were, in fact, taxed by the recorder, who reduced them; but the order for costs was drawn up at the sessions at which the deputy recorder presided, and formally entered as of such sessions; the deputy recorder, however, not otherwise taking any part in the matter. The respondents were the parish officers of a parish comprised in a union which comprehended several other parishes, and the deputy recorder was a rated inhabitant in one of such other parishes; all the parishes contributed to a common fund for the relief of the poor:—Held, that the order for costs must be considered as the order of the deputy recorder, and was voidable on account of his interest; and that the 16 Geo. 2, c. 18. s. 1, was inapplicable as applying only to cases where justices act as such in the making of orders out of court, and not to the exercise of appellate jurisdiction. Reg. v. Cambridge (Recorder), 8 El. & Bl. 637; 27 L. J., M. C. 160; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 334; 6 W. R. 80. See 40 Vict. c. 11.

Counsel Raised to the Bench.]—A counsel in a cause being afterwards raised to the bench is not thereby precluded from taking part in the hearing and discussion of that cause; but he may properly (unless his doing so would entail great inconvenience and expense on the parties, or perhaps, from his being, as in chancery, the sole judge of the court, amount to a denial of justice) decline to take part in such hearing and decision. Thellusson v. Rendlesham, 7 H. L. Cas. 429.

Relationship.] — The relationship which is formed by marriage is not dissolved by the death of one of the parties without issue; so that a husband whose wife died childless cannot afterwards act as a judge in a cause to which her nephew is a party. Becquet v. Lempriere, 1 Knapp, 376.

Personal Interest.]—A member of the London County Council sat and voted at the hearing of an application for a music and dancing licence which was refused. Several weeks previously he had attended a meeting of persons who afterwards served notices upon the council of their intention to oppose the application. At this meeting the witnesses it was proposed to call at the hearing were present and their evidence was discussed. He took no part in this discussion, but on being requested to do so explained the procedure before the licensing committee, and also said that, assuming the facts to be as stated, the matter should be placed before the committee, but he declined to give any opinion as to what importance the committee or council would attach to them. He took no further part in the meeting and the terms of the notices of opposition were not settled there, and he did not at any time take part in assisting to settle them or in advising thereon:—Held, that the facts did not furnish sufficient grounds for inferring such bias in favour of the promoters as to disqualify the member from voting on the application and thereby to invalidate the council's decision. Per Wright, J.: That the strict rule as to interest other than pecuniary, is not applicable without qualification to bodies really exercising administrative functions, even though these involve something of a judicial character. Reg. v. London County Council, Edwardes, Ex parte, 15 R. 66; 71 L. T. 638.

The county council in determining applications for music and dancing licences are acting judicially and are bound by the same principles as are binding on justices in determining questions which come before them for judicial decision.—The London county council delegated to a committee of their body the hearing of applications for music and dancing licences. The committee by a majority recommended that a licence which had been applied for should not be granted. The applicant thereupon applied to the county council for a licence. At the hearing before the county council certain members of that body, who were also members of the committee and had voted in the majority against granting a licence at the hearing before the committee, instructed counsel to represent them before the county council and oppose the application for a licence. The councillors so instructing counsel were present at the hearing, but did not vote. The council by a majority refused the application for a licence:—Held, that the presence at the hearing of those members of the county council who had instructed counsel to oppose the application vitiated the proceedings, and a rule for a mandamus to hear and determine the application according to law was accordingly made absolute. Reg. v. London County Council, Akkersdyk, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 75; [1892] 1 Q. B. 190; 66 L. T. 168; 40 W. R. 285; 56 J. P. 8.

The General Council of Medical Education and Registration, acting under the powers of the Medical Act, 1858, held an inquiry in which they adjudged a medical practitioner to be guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, and removed his name from the register of medical practitioners. The proceedings were instituted by the managing body of a company called the Medical Defence Union, whose object was to protect the characters of medical practitioners and to suppress and prosecute unauthorised practitioners. Two out of twenty-nine persons who held the inquiry were members of the Medical Defence Union, but not of the managing body of the union:—Held (Fry, L.J., dissenting), that the two members had not such an interest in the matter in question as to disqualify them from taking part in the inquiry; and the court refused to interfere with the decision of the council. Leeson v. General Medical Council, 59 L. J., Ch. 233; 43 Ch. D. 366; 61 L. T. 849; 38 W. R. 303—C. A.

The chancellor of a consistory court being by his appointment an independent judge, it is no ground for prohibition in a cause tried in the consistory court before him that the bishop of the diocese was interested in the cause. Medwin,

Justices of the Peace.]—See JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

e. Amotion.

By Governor and Council of Colony.] — The governor and council of a colony or plantation have power, under 22 Geo. 3, c. 75, to amove a judge from his office for misbehaviour or neglect of duty. Montague v. Van Diemen's Land (Lieutenant-Governor), 6 Moore, P. C. 489.

Where a judge availed himself of his judicial office, through an incident connected with the constitution of the Supreme Court in Van Diemen's Land, to obstruct his creditor from recovering a debt due from him, and, upon an investigation by the governor and council, was found to be involved to a large extent in bill transactions and pecuniary embarrassment : —Held, sufficient to justify the governor and council in removing him from office. Ib.

—— Opportunity of Defence.]—The amotion was made, under an order of the governor and council, calling upon the judge to shew cause why he should not be suspended from office :—Held, that although there was some irregularity in pronouncing such an order for amotion, when the judge had only been called upon to shew cause against an order of suspension, yet, that as the facts justified the order of amotion, and the judge had sustained no prejudice by such irregularity, the order of amotion ought not to be reversed. Ib.

But where the governor and council amoved a judge without giving him notice, or affording him an opportunity of answering the charges brought against him, and upon which the order of amotion was founded, such order was held illegal and reversed. Willis v. Gipps, 5 Moore, P. C. 379.

Colonial Judge—Secretary of State.]—Removal from his position by the secretary of state is the only remedy which can be had against a colonial judge who maliciously overstrains his judicial office to the prejudice of a litigant. Anderson v. Gorrie, 14 R. 79 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 668 ; 71 L. T. 382—C. A.

Lapse of Time.]—On a memorial presented to the Queen in council by the House of Assembly of the Island of Grenada, complaining of the judicial conduct of the chief justice of that island as illegal and oppressive, being referred to the judicial committee, it appeared from the evidence, that during the fourteen years in which the chief justice had held office he had displayed on the bench several instances of intemperate, and in some cases illegal, conduct ; but these acts were committed many years before the presentation of the memorial, without any complaint at the time of the chief justice's misconduct ; the only act of recent date complained of being the fining of two magistrates for taking depositions in the third instead of the first person. The judicial committee reported to the crown that, having regard to the length of time which had elapsed since all the acts complained of, except that of fining the magistrates (which, though erroneous and improper, had been committed by the chief justice in the execution of his duty), they could not, sitting judicially, advise the crown to remove the chief justice for misconduct. Grenada (Island) v. Sanderson, 6 Moore, P. C. 38.

f. Other Matters.

Private Communications to.] — Observations upon the irregularity and impropriety of private communications to a judge upon a matter publicly before him, such communications being a high contempt of court. Dyce Sombre, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 116 ; 1 Hall & T. 285 ; 13 Jur. 857.

Judge acting as Arbitrator.] — Questions having arisen between the official liquidator of a company and a mortgagee with whom the trustees had deposited deeds belonging to the company, with respect to the validity of the security, the parties signed an agreement that their rights should be determined in a summary way by the judge acting in the matter of the winding-up :— Held, that this was a submission to the judge personally, and that no appeal could be brought to the Court of Appeal in Chancery. Durham County Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, Wilson, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Ch. 164 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 45.

Patent of Precedence.]—Where a judge of a district court in Canada was removed from that court to another district court, and the letters-patent appointing him judge to the latter court also granted him precedence over the judges of that court whose commissions were of later date than his own :—Held, that such grant of precedence was valid, and that the judge had a right to rank and take precedence accordingly. Bedard, In re, 7 Moore, P. C. 23 ; 13 Jur. 641.

Duty at Trial.]—See PRACTICE.

Death—Effect of.]—A plaint was heard before a deputy judge of a county court, and he, after death of the judge whose deputy he was, sent a written statement of his decision to the judge's successor, who received and entered it as his judgment. The court (without expressly deciding that the judgment so entered was void) granted a rule nisi for a prohibition against proceeding upon it, in order to give the parties an opportunity of applying to the new judge for a rehearing. Hoey v. M'Farlane, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 718 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 785.

2. OTHER OFFICERS.

Removal and Suspension.] — The supreme court at Calcutta has power by the Charter of Justice of 1774 (14 Geo. 3) to remove or suspend officers of that court, on account of misconduct, and this power of removal is not limited to acts done by such officer in his limited character, but includes transactions distinct from those of his office. Grant, In re, 7 Moore, P. C. 141.

An officer of the court, being a shareholder and director of the Union Bank at Calcutta, was a party to deceptive statements, contained in the half-yearly reports of the concern, as to the state of the affairs of the bank, and also availed himself, in his character as director, to obtain credit to a considerable amount upon his personal security only, which, by the condition of the deed of co-partnership of the bank, amounted to a breach of trust. No charge or imputation, with respect to his judicial functions, was brought against him :—Held, that there were sufficient grounds for calling upon the court to protect the administration of justice by suspending such officer for so misconducting himself. Ib.

The masters in ordinary in chancery have power to appoint and dismiss their clerks at pleasure, notwithstanding the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 84, provides salaries for those clerks out of a public fund, mentions them as officers of the court, assigns to them duties of a responsible nature, and affixes penalties for their misconduct. Ward, In re, 7 L. J., Ch. 137.

Distribution of Business.]—Though the respective duties of the master's chief clerk and copying clerk are nowhere exactly defined, they are sufficiently distinguished in their general features by the provisions of the Chancery Regulation Act relating to those officers, as well as by previous practice. And the masters are not at liberty to distribute the business of their offices between their two clerks in such a manner as habitually to allot to the copying clerk duties which, it is to be inferred from that act, were intended to be exclusively performed by the chief clerk; although with proper limitations, and on proper occasions, the masters are entitled to require either of their chief clerks to perform any official duty in which his assistance may be required, and for the performance of which he may be competent. Any solicitor of the court has a right to complain by petition of an irregularity being shewn to exist. The Lord Chancellor may interfere to correct it, though no actual evil be proved to have resulted from it. Master's Clerks' Case, 1 Ph. 650. S. C., nom. Whiting, In re, 15 L. J., Ch. 242.

Effect of Death.]—A commissioner in bankruptcy obtained leave of absence, and the Lord Chancellor, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, appointed the registrar attached to his court to act in his stead for two months. The commissioner died before the two months expired :—Held, that an order made by the registrar sitting under this appointment, dated the day after the death of the commissioner, was void. Corles, Ex parte, Palmer, In re, 3 De G. & J. 484; 28 L. J., Bk. 15; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 110; 7 W. R. 220.

Where an appointment has been made under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 25, which authorises in populous districts the appointment of two persons "to execute jointly the office of clerk, under such regulations as to the division of the duties and emoluments of the office as shall from time to time be made," the death of one does not vacate the office as to the other. Reg. v. Wake, 8 El. & Bl. 384; 27 L. J., Q. B. 11; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 68; 6 W. R. 36.

Crier and Tipstaff.]—The court will not on motion refuse to allow the usual fees payable on the swearing in of attorneys to the secondary, the tipstaff, and deputy crier. Ince or Price, In re, Longf. & T. 584.

Semble, these fees are now legally established. Ib.

Primâ facie, the crier and the tipstaff are entitled between them to the fee of one guinea upon the admission of attorneys, but the court-keeper is not entitled to the fee of ten shillings and sixpence, the secondary is entitled to the fee of one guinea for swearing attorneys into office. Admission of Attorneys, In re, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 685.

Of Inferior Courts—Protection of, in Execution of Duty.]—In trover, the defendant pleaded that the supposed grievance was committed after the passing of this statute, and within the jurisdiction of the inferior court thereinafter mentioned; and that, before and at the time of the grievance, the defendant had been duly appointed to act as a bailiff in the execution of the process of the court of the tolzey of Bristol, which, at the passing of the act, had, by charter, jurisdiction for the recovery of debts and damages in personal actions arising within the city and county of Bristol; and that no notice of action was given to him pursuant to the act :—Held, first, that the plea brought the defendant within the protection of s. 9 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19. Braham v. Watkins, 16 M. & W. 77; 4 D. & L. 42; 16 L. J., Ex. 9.

Held, secondly, that the jurisdiction of the inferior court was sufficiently shewn. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the defendant's duty as bailiff was sufficiently set forth. Ib.

Trover against a sheriff and two bailiffs. Plea, by the sheriff, not guilty; and by the bailiffs, a justification under process issued out of the ancient common law county court. Issue joined on the first plea, and to the other a new assignment, alleging the conversion to be the retaining possession by the bailiffs, after the sheriff had issued a supersedeas :—Held, that, upon the record, there ought to be a verdict for the sheriff, as he was not liable for the wrongful acts of his bailiffs, after the supersedeas issued. Brown v. Copley, 8 Scott (N.R.) 350; 2 D. & L. 332; 7 Man. & G. 558; 13 L. J., C. P. 164; 8 Jur. 577.

Officers of the Court of Passage are not protected in the case of process executed under an interpleader order made without jurisdiction, though good on the face of it, if such order was obtained on their own application. The relief or remedy, the power to grant which is conferred on superior courts by s. 89 of the Judicature Acts, 1873, only refers to the relief and remedies to be administered in the action, and as the result of the action, and not to an incidental and extraneous proceeding arising out of the levy of execution, such as interpleader. Speers v. Daggers, 1 Cab. & E. 503.

A justification under a writ out of an inferior court, tested on a day not being a court day, is bad. Humphries v. Longmore, 6 C. B. 363; 6 D. & L. 128; 17 L. J., C. P. 328.

Quære, whether a borough court established by charter, pursuant to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, having jurisdiction for the recovery of debts and damages, and in ejectment between landlord and tenant, is a court within the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 19. Assuming that it is :—Held, that one who de facto executes the process of the court under the serjeant-at-mace, but who has not been appointed by the recorder (the sole judge of the borough court), is not a bailiff within the statute, so as to be entitled to a month's notice of action. Tarrant v. Baker, 2 C. L. R. 78; 14 C. B. 199; 23 L. J., C. P. 21; 18 Jur. 15.

An act of parliament establishing a court of requests provided that the defendant in any action commenced for anything done in pursuance of the act, or on account of any order of the court, might give the special matter in evidence under the general issue :—Held, that this enactment protected not merely the officers of the local court, but also the plaintiff in the suit there, who had voluntarily accompanied and aided the officer in seizing the goods of his debtor under an order of execution. Culverson v. Melton, 2 M. & Rob. 200.

Where it is the regular course of proceeding of an inferior court, on a verdict being found therein, for the judges of the court to issue execution for the debt in case of nonpayment, and levy the amount, the fact of the plaintiff's bringing his plaint in the inferior court, and not countermanding the execution, renders him liable in trespass for the seizure, unless he justifies under the process of the inferior court. Coomer v. Latham, 16 M. & W. 713; 16 L.J., Ex. 175.

The steward of a hundred court, or of a court baron, is not responsible for the misfeasance in the execution of the process of the bailiffs of the lord of the hundred or manor, to whom process of execution awarded by such court is usually directed. Bradley v. Carr, 3 Man. & G. 221; 3 Scott (N.R.) 523.

Where, however, the steward directs process to persons named by the party suing out such process, taking an indemnity from such party, he is liable. Ib.

If a public officer is guilty of a misfeasance in the exercise of the powers intrusted to him by law, and in the discharge of his duty, he is liable to an action for any damage resulting from that act, without proof of malice or want of probable cause. Brasyer v. Maclean, 44 L. J., P. C. 79; L. R. 6 P. C. 398; 33 L. T. 1.

—— Mandamus to Deputy Steward—Balance.]—By a local act, the commissioners of a court of requests were empowered to order debts, when recovered by its process, to be paid by instalments, and under such terms and conditions as might appear reasonable and just to them. They made an order, whereby the payments were directed to be paid to a person who was then the deputy steward of the court; payments were made to him, and, in consequence of the plaintiffs not applying for them, a large sum had accumulated in his hands, when his principal died, and he was removed:—Held, that the commissioners, not having revoked his authority, nor issued any other order, a mandamus would not lie at the suit of the succeeding steward to compel the deputy to pay over the accumulations to such successor. Reg. v. Watson, 2 N. & P. 595.

Institution of Suits by.]—It is against public policy to allow an officer of the court to institute suits, in the conduct of which he had a direct personal interest. Kerakouse v. Serle, 4 Moore, P. C. 459.

B. WHEN APPOINTED BY GOVERNMENT.

1. Liability of.

Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.]—An action is not maintainable in an Irish court against the lord lieutenant during his term of office for any act done by him in his political capacity. Sullivan v. Spencer (Earl), Ir. R. 6 C. L. 173.

The suppression by a lord lieutenant of a political meeting in the Phœnix Park is an act done by him in his political capacity. If such an action is brought against the lord lieutenant, the court will stay the proceedings without requiring him to plead his privilege. Ib.

No action is maintainable against a lord lieutenant of Ireland in an Irish court during his continuance in office, for any act done by him quâ lord lieutenant, and when such an action has been brought, the court will, on motion, direct that the writ of summons and plaint be taken off the file, without putting the lord lieutenant to his plea. Luby v. Wodehouse, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 618.

Dismissal.]—Semble, a contract of service with the crown for a fixed term of years is determinable at the pleasure of the crown. De Dohse v. Reg., 66 L. J., Q. B. 422, n.—H. L. (E.)

Commissioners of Works and Public Buildings.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 95, the commissioners of works and public buildings are incorporated and empowered to take land compulsorily for the purpose of building public offices:—Held, that the commissioners do not represent the crown. Wood's Estate, In re, Works and Public Buildings Commissioners, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Ch. 488; 31 Ch. D. 607; 54 L. T. 145; 34 W. R. 375—C. A.

Woods and Forests.]—The commissioners of woods and forests are not, under the 7 Geo. 4, c. 77, entitled to sue or liable to be sued, for the specific performance of contracts entered into with and by them. Nurse v. Seymour (Lord), 13 Beav. 254. But see 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34.

The commissioners were authorised, with the consent of the lords of the treasury, to demise, or previous to any demise, to contract to demise. The bill alleged that the commissioners having first obtained the consent required, determined to demise, and afterwards contracted to demise to the plaintiff, and prayed a specific performance:—Held, on demurrer, that the bill could not be sustained. Ib.

An act of parliament empowered the commissioners of woods and forests to make certain new streets according to a particular plan therein referred to, and to lease and enter into agreement for leasing the grounds in the lines of the new streets. Under this power leases were granted of two plots of ground, upon which the lessees erected two particular houses, in the line of one of the new streets. Each of the leases described the plot of ground which it demised, as being "on the north side of a new street then forming there, called," &c., "and as fronting towards the south on the said new street." The plan referred to in the act of parliament exhibited an open space in front of the sites of these houses, but that plan was not mentioned in either of the leases. The intended streets were completed, and the space in front of the houses was left open. The commissioners of woods and forests and the paving committee of the parish afterwards gave permission to certain persons to erect an equestrian statue in the open space, and those persons proceeded to place it upon a part of that open space, but without interfering with the line of the carriage-way of the new street in which the houses stood. The lessees of the houses thereupon filed a bill to restrain the erection of the statue, alleging that upon the treaty for the leases, the lessees were shewn the plan of the intended new street, and parts adjacent, by which it appeared that the space in question was to be quite open and free from all obstructions, and that it was upon the treaty represented and stated, that opposite the two houses a free passage would be left of certain dimensions, which would be contracted by the erection of the statue; they also alleged that the proposed erection would diminish the value of their property, and be a public and private nuisance:—Held, that these circumstances did not entitle the lessees to an injunction to restrain the erection of the statue. Squire v. Campbell, 1 Myl. & Cr. 459; 6 L. J., Ch. 41.

The commissioners of woods and forests having no power under the statute 57 Geo. 3, c. 97, to make sale of any royalties, honours, hundreds, manors, lordships or franchises, "or any rights, members or appurtenances thereof," belonging to the crown, within the ordering and survey of the exchequer, contracted for the sale of the crown manor of E., and all courts baron, courts leet, and all fines, reliefs, rents, profits, waifs, strays, deodands, and "all other rights, members, emoluments and appurtenances thereto belonging":—Held, that this being in effect a contract for sale by the crown, the advowson of E., which was appended to the manor, did not pass under the contract, and consequently, that the purchaser was bound to take a conveyance of the manor without the advowson. Att.-Gen. v. Sitwell, 1 Y. & Coll. 559; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 86.

Semble, that if the contract had been between subject and subject, the advowson would have passed, although, at the time of the contract, it was not known by either party to be appendant to the manor, and, therefore, the sale of it was not in contemplation. Ib.

Injunction granted to restrain the commissioners of woods from building on part of the site of Carlton Palace, in violation of one of the terms of an agreement entered into by them with the plaintiffs for a building lease of an adjoining part of the site. Rankin v. Huskisson, 4 Sim. 13.

Trinity House.]—The Trinity House is not a department of the state, so as to be exempt from liability for negligence of its servants. Gilbert v. Trinity House Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 85; 17 Q. B. D. 795; 35 W. R. 30.

Upon Contracts.]—An officer appointed by government, treating as an agent for the public, is not liable to be sued upon contracts made by him in that capacity. Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 Term Rep. 172; 1 R. R. 177.

In a suit against her majesty's deputy commissary general for Natal, and as such representing her majesty's commissariat department, to recover certain moneys as the price or hire of certain waggons and oxen, for the carriage of certain goods, for damages for illegal acts of defendant or his employés, and for general damage:—Held, on exceptions by the defendant to the jurisdiction of the court and to the declaration, that the defendant could not be sued, either personally or in his official capacity, upon a contract entered into by him on behalf of the commissariat department; and that there was no cause of action against him. The government revenue cannot be reached by a suit against a public officer in his official capacity. Quære, whether the court would have had jurisdiction if a petition of right had been presented and the crown had ordered that right should be done. Palmer v. Hutchinson, 50 L. J., P. C. 62; 6 App. Cas. 619; 45 L. T. 180—P. C.

Nor even when contracting by deed, on account of government, is he personally answerable. Unwin v. Wolseley, 1 Term Rep. 674. See Thompson v. Pearce, 1 Br. & B. 25; 3 Moore, 260.

No action lies against a public servant of the crown contracting on behalf of the crown upon any implied warranty of authority to make the contract. Dunn v. Macdonald, 66 L. J., Q. B. 420; [1897] 1 Q. B. 555; 76 L. T. 444; 45 W. R. 355—C. A.

In one case, however, a person entering into a charterparty in his own name, on behalf of the government, was held to be personally liable. Cunningham v. Collier, 4 Doug. 233.

The principal secretary of state for war is not personally liable in an action for breach of a contract entered into by him on behalf of the war department. O'Grady v. Cardwell, 20 W. R. 342.

Indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, and verdict for plaintiff. Defendant brought a bill suggesting that he was master of the buckhounds, and acted only in relation to his office; and that the king ought to pay for these goods. Defendant pleaded the verdict and demurred, for that the matter was suable at law. Plea overruled. Graham v. Stamper, 2 Vern. 146.

C. contracted with the commissioners of the admiralty to convey the mails from Calais to Dover during the continuance of the contract, and the commissioners for and on behalf of her majesty agreed to pay to him from and out of the moneys to be provided by parliament, 18,000*l.* per year; the contract to continue from the date until A.D. 1870:—Held, that there was no obligation on the part of the commissioners to employ C. under the contract, parliament not having provided moneys for the payment. Churchward v. Reg., L. R. 1 Q. B. 173; 14 L. T. 57.

The lords commissioners of the admiralty are empowered to sue and be sued in respect of certain matters under a collective name; an action lies against them in respect of some of such matters. A writ of summons directed to them in that name having been served upon one of the commissioners, the court refused to set aside the writ, although it appeared upon the plaintiff's affidavit, on shewing cause, that the cause of action was one for which the defendants were not suable in their collective name. Williams v. Admiralty (Lords Commissioners), 2 L. M. & P. 456; 12 C. B. 420; 20 L. J., C. P. 245; 16 Jur. 42.

For Money and Interest.]—It is clear that a suit may be sustained against a public officer having in his hands money issued by government for the use of an individual for the recovery of such money. But where the government has ordered the money to be withheld, the question is only between government and the individual or his assignee, and this court has no jurisdiction. Priddy v. Rose, 3 Mer. 102; 17 R. R. 24.

Quære, whether a right can legally exist in an officer of the crown to sell the soil of the crown, and not account for the proceeds; but, if it can legally exist, such right ought to be established by evidence cogent and invincible. Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 Kay & J. 579; 27 L. J., Ch. 761; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 6 W. R. 780.

Receiver of a public trust having a salary, making interest of balances in his hands, is accountable to the trustees for interest made ultra, notwithstanding prior accounts settled without demanding it. Lonsdale (Earl) v. Church, 3 Bro. C. C. 41. And see 7 Price, 45.

Public functionaries must account for interest made by them on any considerable balances in their hands of the money, being the proceeds of public property sold by them pursuant to appointment; although they have necessary payments to make in course of their duty; if their instructions direct payment of proceeds into the bank, and point out a course of supplying themselves for such necessary payments. Crauford v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 2.

Previously to 1833, the clerk of the patents received the fees paid by the patentees for his own use, but by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 84, he received a fixed salary, and was required to hand over all the fees to the exchequer:—Held, that he was liable to account to the crown in equity in respect of such fees, and in respect of all interest and profits made by the use of them, and that an information for this purpose was properly filed in the Court of Chancery. Att.-Gen. v. Edmunds, 37 L. J., Ch. 706; L. R. 6 Eq. 381; 18 L. T. 505.

The funds voted by parliament for the public service are not trust funds in the hands of the secretaries of state who receive them from the treasury; and the Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to take any account of the application of such funds. Grenville-Murray v. Clarendon (Earl), 39 L. J., Ch. 221; L. R. 9 Eq. 11.

The crown, by royal warrant, "granted to the secretary of state for India in council for the time being" certain booty taken in war "in trust for the use of" certain persons, who had been adjudged entitled to it upon a reference to the Court of Admiralty, to be distributed among them, with a further provision that in case any doubts should arise in the course of the distribution the decision of the secretary of state should be final, unless the crown should otherwise order:—Held (1) That the secretary of state for India in council could only sue or be sued as a corporation under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, s. 65, in proceedings which might have been taken by or against the late East India Company; (2) That the royal warrant constituted the secretary of state for India in council an agent of the crown for the purpose of the distribution of the fund under the control of the crown, but did not constitute him a trustee for the persons interested subject to the control of a court of equity. Alexander v. Wellington (Duke) (2 Russ. & My. 35) discussed. Brown v. Harris (13 Ves. 552) distinguished. Kinloch v. Secretary of State for India, 51 L. J., Ch. 885; 7 App. Cas. 619; 47 L. T. 133; 30 W. R. 845—H. L. (E.)

But an action cannot be maintained against the secretary at war, by a retired clerk of the war office, for his retired allowance, on the grounds that the secretary is only chargeable in his public and official character, and that an action cannot be maintained against him as such, for anything done by him in that character, although it may amount to a breach of employment, as it would tend to expose him to an infinite number of actions, to be brought by any persons who might suppose themselves aggrieved; although he may have received the money applicable to such specific purposes. Gidley v. Palmerston (Lord), 7 Moore, 91; 3 Br. & B. 275; 24 R. R. 668.

For Torts.]—If a public officer is guilty of a misfeasance in the exercise of the powers intrusted to him by law, and in the discharge of his duty, he is liable to an action for any damage resulting from that act, without proof of malice or want of probable cause. Brasyer v. Maclean, 44 L. J., P. C. 79; L. R. 6 P. C. 398; 33 L. T. 1.

An action for trespass committed or intended is not maintainable against officials of the crown or government sued in their official capacity or as an official body. Raleigh v. Goschen, 67 L. J., Ch. 59; [1898] 1 Ch. 73; 77 L. T. 429; 46 W. R. 90.

Such an action will, however, lie against such officials in respect of acts actually done or directed by them if sued in their individual capacity, even although such acts be done by the authority of the government. Ib.

The secretary of state is liable to an action if he improperly directs a gaoler to remove a prisoner to a part of a prison in which he ought not to be confined, and the gaoler so removes him. Cobbett v. Gray, 4 Ex. 729; 19 L. J., Ex. 137.

An action will lie against the secretary of state for war, like any other corporation, for misuser of land vested in him; but, semble, when land has been acquired under the authority of parliament for military purposes, and is vested in the secretary of state for war, an action will not lie against him for a nuisance occasioned by the reasonable user of such land for military purposes under his direction. Hawley v. Steele, 46 L. J. Ch. 782; 6 Ch. D. 521; 37 L. T. 625.

An action of trespass and false imprisonment lies in England by a native Minorquin, against a governor of Minorca, for an injury committed by him in Minorca. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161.

—— Seizure of Ship.] — No action lies against a commander of a British ship of war for seizing and detaining a vessel on suspicion of her being hostile prize; though he afterwards dismiss her without libelling her in the Court of Admiralty: and though he detain her partly on suspicion of matters which are merely causes of forfeiture if she is British. Faith v. Pearson, 6 Taunt. 439; 2 Marsh. 133; 4 Camp. 357; Holt, 113.

By the Kidnapping Act, 1872, s. 3, vessels carrying native labourers of the South Sea Islands, not being part of the crew, must have a licence; by s. 6, vessels carrying native labourers without a licence are subject to the provisions of s. 16; by s. 9, to detain or confine a native for the purpose of removing him from one place to another is declared to be felony; by s. 16, any vessel suspected upon reasonable grounds of committing an offence against the 9th section may be detained; by s. 20, no damages shall be payable and no officer shall be responsible for the detention or seizure of a vessel in pursuance of the act. Before the passing of the Kidnapping Act, 1872, the plaintiff's vessel sailed on a voyage to the South Sea Islands for the purpose of fishing; her master hired native labourers, and after the fishing was over the vessel was engaged in carrying the natives home when she was seized by a man of war, of which the defendant was commander. At the time of the seizure the defendant bonâ fide believed that there was reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence had been committed against the act:—Held, no action would lie against the defendant. Burns v. Nowell, 49 L. J., Q. B. 468; 5 Q. B. D. 444; 43 L. T. 342; 29 W. R. 39; 44 J. P. 828—C. A.

If a ship was seized as forfeited under the 12 Car. 2, c. 18, by a governor of a foreign country belonging to Great Britain, the owner could not maintain trespass against the party seizing, although the latter did not proceed to condemnation; for, by the forfeiture, the property was divested out of the owner. Wilkins v. Despard, 5 Term Rep. 112; 2 R. R. 559.

—— Colonial Governors.]—In a suit against her majesty's deputy commissary general for Natal, and as such representing her majesty's commissariat department, to recover certain moneys as the price or hire of certain waggons and oxen, for the carriage of certain goods, for damages for illegal acts of defendant or his employés, and for general damage:—Held, on exceptions by the defendant to the jurisdiction of the court and to the declaration, that the defendant could not be sued, either personally or in his official capacity, upon a contract entered into by him on behalf of the commissariat department; and that there was no cause of action against him. The government revenue cannot be reached by a suit against a public officer in his official capacity. Quære, whether the court would have had jurisdiction if a petition of right had been presented and the crown had ordered that right should be done. Palmer v. Hutchinson, 50 L. J., P. C. 62; 6 App. Cas. 619; 45 L. T. 180.

Trespass for seizing and detaining at Kingston in Jamaica a schooner of which the plaintiff was charterer, and which had, as alleged, put into the port of Kingston in distress and for repairs. Plea, in substance, of privilege and to the jurisdiction, that the defendant was captain-general and governor-in-chief of the island of Jamaica, that the acts complained of were done by him as governor of the island and in the exercise of his reasonable discretion as such, and as acts of state. The plea did not aver even generally that the seizure of the plaintiff's ship was an act which the defendant was empowered to do as governor, nor even that it was an act of state:—Held, that the judgment respondeat ouster was right and must be affirmed. Musgrave v. Pulido, 49 L. J., P. C. 20; 5 App. Cas. 102; 41 L. T. 629; 28 W. R. 373—P. C.

—— Jurisdiction.]—The governor of a colony (in ordinary cases) cannot be regarded as a viceroy; nor can it be assumed that he possesses general sovereign power. His authority is derived from his commission and limited to the powers thereby expressly or impliedly entrusted to him. It is within the province of municipal courts to determine whether any act of power done by a governor is within the limits of his authority, and, therefore, an act of state. Ib.

Secretary of State—Removal of Officer.]—Action for removing an officer does not lie against the secretary of state for India, the crown having an absolute right to remove the officer at will and pleasure. Grant v. Secretary of State for India, 46 L. J., C. P. 681; 2 C. P. D. 445; 37 L. T. 188; 25 W. R. 848. See Dickson v. Combermere (Viscount), 3 F. & F. 527.

—— Cannot Refuse to Appear.]—A secretary of state, made a defendant in a suit in equity, cannot refuse to appear on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction over him, and that he could only be proceeded against on a petition of right. Felkin v. Herbert, 1 Dr. & Sm. 608; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 90; 9 W. R. 609.

Mandamus to Lords of Treasury.]—In the half-year ending the 31st December, 1870, certain prosecutions took place at the assizes and quarter sessions of a county, and the costs were taxed by the proper officers under the orders of the respective courts, and the treasurer of the county paid the bills, and returned the bills, with the usual vouchers, to the treasury. The lords of the treasury had appointed officers, called the examiners of criminal law accounts, and these officers disallowed or reduced in amount fifty-one of the items in the bills returned; and a rule nisi was then obtained for a mandamus to the lords of the treasury, commanding them to issue a treasury minute authorising the paymaster of civil contingencies to pay to the treasurer of the county the sums disallowed:—Held, that a mandamus would not lie, inasmuch as the lords of the treasury received the money, which was granted to her majesty, as servants of the Crown, and no duty was imposed upon them as between them and the persons to whom the money was payable. Reg. v. Treasury Commissioners, 41 L. J., Q. B. 178; L. R. 7 Q. B. 387; 26 L. T. 64; 20 W. R. 336; 12 Cox, C. C. 277.

Held, also, that the course which the lords of the treasury had pursued was erroneous, as they had no authority whatever to have the bills retaxed, and ought to have paid over to the treasurer of the county the full sum which he had expended as costs of prosecutions. Ib.

The Exchequer and Audit Department Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 39), and the acts which it amends or alters, give no right to a receiver of public moneys to compel the commissioners of the treasury to direct the comptroller and auditor general to examine and audit the accounts. Edmunds, Ex parte, 25 L. T. 705; 20 W. R. 205.

A mandamus will not lie to the lords commissioners of the treasury to compel them to pay a debt incurred by a county court, even although parliament has, upon an estimate made by the commissioners of the treasury, voted a sum for the salaries and expenses of the county courts for the year. Walmesley, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 81; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1010; 4 L. T. 242; 9 W. R. 599.

Criminal Proceedings against.]—It is a high misprision in an officer to alter an inrolment without the sanction of the Court of Chancery. Garrick v. Williams, 3 Taunt. 540.

A public officer is indictable for misbehaviour in his office. Rex v. Bembridge, 3 Dougl. 327.

One who was appointed collector of certain duties by the proper constituted authorities, and who considered himself, and was considered by the commissioners to be such collector, but whose appointment turned out to have been informally made, cannot be indicted at common law for the receipt of duties, by colour and pretence of being collector of such duties, though the money was fraudulently collected and misapplied by him, because he was in fact appointed collector, and in that character received the money. Rex v. Dobson, 7 East, 218; 3 Smith, 213.

—— Jurisdiction.]—The 42 Geo. 3, c. 85, giving jurisdiction for trying and punishing in this country, persons holding public offices or employments, for offences committed abroad, does not extend to felonies. Rex v. Shawe, 5 M. & S. 403; 17 R. R. 340.

—— Validity of Indictments.]—In an indictment against a public officer for breach of duty, it is sufficient to state generally that he is such officer, without shewing his appointment. Rex v. Hollond, 5 Term Rep. 607; 2 R. R. 678.

In an indictment against an officer for disobedience of orders, it is not necessary to aver that the orders have not been revoked, or that they are in force. Ib.

Where a public officer is charged with a breach of duty, which duty arises from certain acts within the limits of his government, it is not necessary to aver, in an indictment against him, that he had notice of those acts; he is presumed from his situation to know them. Ib.

A charge in an indictment against an officer of a breach of orders in not prosecuting a war, "with all possible vigour and decision," is too uncertain, even though the charge is made in the very words of the order given to him. Ib.

By 33 Geo. 3. c. 52, s. 62, the demanding or receiving any sum of money or other valuable thing as a gift or present, or under colour thereof, whether for the use of the party receiving the same, or for, or pretended to be for, the use of the company, or of any other person whatsoever, by any British subject holding any office in the East Indies, shall be extortion and a misdemeanor, and shall be proceeded against and punishable as such. An information under this section charged the defendant with receiving from R., in the East Indies, a sum of money, to wit, 8,000 rupees, being of the value of 800*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain, as a gift or present. The jury found him guilty, and that the sum of money was 8,000 rupees; and that the sum of 8,000 rupees, at the time of the receipt, was of the value of 766*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* money of Great Britain, being at the rate of 1*s.* 11*d.* for each rupee:—Held, first, that the meaning of the statute was to prevent a person holding office in the East Indies from receiving any gift absolutely, whatever the reason for the gift might be; and that if the meaning of the statute was to prohibit gifts being received only where they were received extorsively or under colour of office, the indictment would be good by virtue of 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, which applied as well to indictments preferred for offences abroad as for offences in England. Douglas v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 74; 17 L. J., M. C. 176; 12 Jur. 974—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that it was not necessary to state for whose use the money was received. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that it was not necessary to state whose the money was. Ib.

2. Purchase and Sale of Offices.

Indictment.]—The 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 3, makes it a misdemeanor in any person who shall by any way or means contract or agree to receive or have any money, fee, or profit, for any office or employment specified in that act, or for any appointment thereto:—Held, that a count in an indictment alleging the offence to be that the defendants did unlawfully and corruptly contract and agree with D. N. to procure the appointment to a certain office and employment was bad for not stating the offence within that section. Samo or Day v. Reg., 2 Cox, C. C. 178—Ex. Ch.

Relief against Bonds, &c.]—Bill for relief against four bonds for procuring plaintiff a pursership on board a man-of-war. The court could not set aside the bonds, but relieved against the interest and costs, on payment of the principal. Symonds v. Gibson, 2 Vern. 308.

Bond given by A. to B. for B.'s quitting his pretence, and procuring A. to be admitted purser to one of the king's ships. Court will relieve on payment of principal without costs. Ib.

A. agreed to surrender his commission in the army to B. for 100*l.*, for which B. gave his bond. B. was refused the commission. No relief in equity, save against the interest and costs. Berrisford v. Done, 1 Vern. 98.

Action at law on a bond given to a trustee, only reciting that the obligor was (on the resignation of obligee's cestui que trust) appointed to an office, not restrained by injunction, but may be pleaded at law in order to try whether the consideration was corrupt. Thrale v. Ross, 3 Bro. C. C. 57.

Bill of exchange given to secure procuration money stipulated to be paid to colonel of regiment for commission is void, and court will interfere even after money is in hands of sheriff on execution at law. Whittingham v. Burgoyne, 3 Anstr. 900.

Agreement and bond from A. to B. to pay 600*l.* for procuring a commission in the marines. The commission was procured, but A. refused to take the oaths. Equity will not relieve him against his bond, semble. Ive v. Ash, Colles's P. C. 267.

Perpetual injunction granted against a bond for the purchase of an office upon the public policy of the law, although the office was not within the statute 5 & 6 Edw. 6. Hanington v. Du Chatel, 1 Bro. C. C. 124.

A., by his interest with the commissioners of excise, gets an office in that branch of the revenue for B., who in consideration thereof gives a bond to A. to pay him 10*l.* per annum as long as B. enjoys the place. Equity will relieve against the bond. Law v. Law, 3 P. Wms. 391.

Money advanced.]—Money advanced by plaintiff to the defendant to procure him a commission in the marines, decreed to be refunded with interest, plaintiff having, after six months, been discovered to have worn a livery, and being thereupon discharged, first, upon grounds of public policy; and, secondly, as plaintiff had been imposed upon, defendant knowing that he was incapable of holding the commission. Morris v. MacCulloch, 2 Eden, 190; Ambl. 432.

A sum of money was paid by A. to B. for the purpose of purchasing C. promotion in the army, and it remained unapplied in the hands of B. at the death of A. C., having been compelled, from the bad state of his health, to quit the army, and having no prospect of being able to enter into the service again, filed a bill for the money, and it was decreed to be paid to him. Leche v. Kilmorey (Lord), Turn. & R. 207; 24 R. R. 19.

Enforcing Contracts.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement to grant a deputation of the office of registrar of a consistory court. Wheeler v. Trotter, 3 Swan. 174; 19 R. R. 195.

Contract for sale of command of East India ship is illegal, and therefore cannot be enforced by suit upon equity against the fund paid by company, as a compensation under the regulations of 1796, to restrain the practice in future. Thomson v. Thomson, 7 Ves. 470; 6 R. R. 151.

Sale by the owner of the command of a ship in the service of the East India Company, without their knowledge, is illegal, and cannot be the subject of an action. Sale of a commission in the army is not bad of itself. Sale of a public office, or any obligation to be made good out of it, is so. Hartwell v. Hartwell, 4 Ves. 815.

The command of an East India ship is a public trust; and the sale of it, contrary to a public regulation of the company, is a breach of public duty. East India Co. v. Neave, 5 Ves. 181.

C. COMMISSIONERS.

1. Appointment and Qualification.

By Majority of Proprietors—Neglect of Conditions—Validity.]—By a local inclosure act it was provided that whenever the office of commissioner should be vacant the lord of the manor, with the major part in value of the proprietors of lands and common rights in the parish (such value to be ascertained according to their respective assessments in the last rates made for the relief of the poor of the parish in the said parish) present at a public meeting, should elect another. The office of commissioner having become vacant, a new one was elected by the lord of the manor and the major part in value of the proprietors of lands at a public meeting. No one there disputed that he had such majority, but no reference was made to the poor-rates:—Held, that, nevertheless, the appointment was valid. Doe d. Harris v. Bodenham, 9 B. & C. 495.

Of Agents—Right to Appoint.]—A local drainage act created the lords or ladies of three manors, or, in his, her, or their absence, their agents appointed in writing under their hands, commissioners for executing the act. It authorised the commissioners to take lands for the purpose of the drainage, and it contained clauses for that purpose to the same effect as those in the Lands Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, subsequently passed; and it provided that no person should be capable of acting as a commissioner or agent for a commissioner till he had made a declaration that he would duly execute the powers in the exercise of which he should act as commissioner or agent. The three lords of the manors, by writing under their hands, appointed the defendants their agents, but without having first made the declaration. These acted as commissioners (first making the declaration), and gave the plaintiff a written notice that they required to take, for the purposes of the act, his land, describing the specific acres, roods, and perches. The plaintiff refused to treat, and the commissioners thereupon issued a warrant to the sheriff of the county to summon a jury to assess the sum to be paid to the plaintiff for the purchase of the land required for the purpose of the act. Both the notice and warrant were in the defendants' names as commissioners. A jury was empannelled, and assessed the price of the land. The plaintiff, who had throughout protested against the proceedings, refused to receive the price so assessed. The defendants paid it into a bank, under the authority of the local act enabling them so to do, and entered on the land. The plaintiff having thereupon brought an action against them:—Held, that the lords and ladies of the manors were commissioners by virtue of the local act, and if they did not choose to associate, might appoint agents for such time as they thought proper, which agents thereupon became commissioners, and might issue notices and warrants in their own names, and were not bound to shew, on the face of their proceedings, for what lord or lady they respectively acted. Ostler v. Cooke, 18 Q. B. 831; 22 L. J., Q. B. 71; 17 Jur. 370—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that such appointment of an agent was well executed, though the lord or lady had not previously made the declaration required by the local act. Ib.

Money Qualification—Incumbrance.]—By a local act a commissioner of a court of requests was liable to a penalty of 50*l.* if he acted without having a qualification of 50*l.* a year in real property, or 1,500*l.* in personal, or 25*l.* a year real, and 1,000*l.* personal property, "above all charges and incumbrances whatsoever," the proof of which qualification was by that statute to lie on him in any action against him for the penalty:—Held, that the words "above all charges and incumbrances whatsoever" did not mean beyond payment of all his debts, but only applied to specific charges on the property in respect of which he claimed to be qualified. Dumelow v. Lees, 1 Car. & K. 408.

Held, also, that in such an action it was sufficient if he shewed that he had property to the required amount; and that it was not incumbent on him to give any evidence with a view of shewing that the property was not incumbered. Ib.

Property Qualification—Occupier.]—By a lighting and watching act no person was qualified to be a commissioner unless he should be an occupier of premises in the township, and be rated for the same on the poor-rate at 35*l.*, or unless he should be rated on such rate, and be possessed of property in the township of the value of 1,500*l.*:—Held, that a person possessed of property to that amount at the time of election, but who was not an occupier until after making the rate preceding the election, and whose name was not on the rate when it was made, though inserted after, in pursuance of the 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 12, was not qualified. Reg. v. Eddowes, 1 El. & El. 330; 28 L. J., Q. B. 84; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 469; 7 W. R. 63.

Ratable Value or Rates.]—By a local act it was enacted that twelve inhabitants, householders, resident in the town or parish of Rye, rated to the relief or maintenance of the poor of the parish, by one or more rate or rates, to the amount of 10*l.* per annum, should be appointed commissioners of the harbour of Rye:—Held, that the ratable annual value, and not the rates payable, conferred the qualification. Easton v. Alce, 7 H. & N. 452; 31 L. J., Ex. 115; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 156; 5 L. T. 323; 10 W. R. 110.

Penalty—Acting without Qualification.]—A local act of 3 Will. 4, c. 68, for improving a township, provided that no person should be capable of acting as a commissioner in the execution of that act, unless he should have the qualification thereby required; s. 10 imposed a penalty of 50*l.* on any person who should act as a commissioner without being qualified. The 1 Vict. c. 33 repealed the provisions of the first act as to the appointment, number, mode of election, and qualification of commissioners; s. 2, after defining the number of the new commissioners, and transferring to them the powers of the former commissioners, enacted, that "all provisions in the former act contained in reference to the commissioners thereby appointed shall be held to apply to the commissioners to be appointed under this act and the acts of such commissioners, in the same manner as if the same were re-enacted and repeated in that act (except as far as the same are repealed by or are inconsistent with its provisions), and that the two acts shall be construed together as one act"; s. 7 required a different qualification, but there was no clause in the act of Victoria which in terms imposed a penalty on persons acting as commissioners without such qualifications:—Held, that a person who acted as a commissioner under the 1 Vict. c. 33, without being qualified as required by that act, was liable to the penalty imposed by the 3 Will. 4, c. 68. Gough v. Hardman, 5 H. & N. 112; 1 L. T. 375.

Disqualification by Interest.]—A local act directed that no person should be capable of "acting as a commissioner in execution thereof in any case wherein he shall be personally interested in the matter in question," and that any person who should so act as a commissioner being so disqualified should forfeit 100*l*. The commissioners were in part elected by parishes within a certain precinct. An order had been made by them for constructing a footway along the frontage of the defendant's, among other premises, in a particular manner. The defendant, who was afterwards elected a commissioner, attended at a special meeting of the commissioners, and first moved to rescind the order as to all except his own premises, which was negatived. On a motion being made to alter the order by adopting a less expensive mode of paving, he supported the proposition in a speech, and took an active part in the discussion and in opposing the original order. He then proceeded to the ballot with the other commissioners. In an action for the penalty, there was a count charging the defendant with acting as commissioner where he was personally interested, and voting accordingly. Another count only charged him with acting as such commissioner in a case in which he was personally interested. The jury found that the defendant did not vote on the occasion in question, and gave him a verdict:—Held, that he did not act as a commissioner in proposing or rescinding the order, except as to his own premises, but there was evidence that he had acted as a commissioner by addressing the meeting on the motion for altering the order, and by taking an active part in the discussion; and that, as the only question left to them was whether he had voted, and not whether he had acted as a commissioner in any other manner, he was entitled to a new trial. Charlesworth v. Budgard, 1 C. M. & R. 498; 4 Tyr. 824; 4 L. J., Ex. 89.

The evidence of a person who proceeds to a ballot is admissible as to the share he personally took in it. Ib.

By an act for lighting a town, no person shall be capable of acting as a commissioner in the execution of the act who shall be interested in any contract for furnishing, supplying, or selling any article, matter, or thing to be employed or made use of for the purposes of the act:—Held, that a person who had contracted with former commissioners to sell a plot of land to be used for the purposes of the act was not disqualified from acting, though the conveyance had not been executed. Woolley v. Kay, 1 H. & N. 307; 25 L. J., Ex. 351. See also LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

A local act incorporated 10 & 11 Vict. c. 16. By s. 2 of the local act, every male person of full age, rated to the relief of the poor in a certain amount, shall be a commissioner. By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 16, s. 9, any person who after his appointment as a commissioner shall be concerned or participate in any manner in any contract shall thenceforth cease to be a commissioner. By s. 15, every person who shall act as a commissioner, after having become disqualified, shall be liable to a penalty of 50*l*. In an action against a person for the penalty for having acted as a commissioner after he was disqualified, an invoice was produced, in his handwriting, addressed "To the Commissioners of St. Ives," and charging them for lime supplied on several occasions during four months. He became a commissioner by reason of possessing the qualification required by s. 2 of the local act:—Held, first, that he was appointed a commissioner within the meaning of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 16, s. 9. Nicholson v. Fields, 7 H. & N. 810; 31 L. J., Ex. 233; 10 W. R. 304.

Held, secondly, that by being concerned in a contract he became disqualified to act as a commissioner within the meaning of s. 15. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the invoice was evidence from which a jury might find that he was concerned or participated in a contract within s. 9. Ib.

2. POWERS.

Application of Funds.]—Commissioners under a local act, the object of which was to supply a town with water, were empowered to raise funds by assessment to be applied in certain ways having immediate reference to the purposes of the act, and in otherwise carrying it into execution:—Held, that although the commissioners might have properly applied the funds raised in resisting a proceeding in parliament prejudicial to the object of the act, yet they were not justified in applying them to defray the expense of obtaining another act of parliament, giving more extensive powers for carrying out the object of the existing act. Att.-Gen. v. Andrews, 2 Mac. & G. 225; 2 Hall & T. 431; 20 L. J., Ch. 467; 14 Jur. 905. See Bower v. Griffith, 16 W. R. 540.

Improvement commissioners empowered by a local act to levy rates, and do all acts, matters, and things for promoting the health, comfort, and convenience of the inhabitants within their district, and for that purpose to exercise the powers vested in them by their act, will be restrained from applying the rates to the promotion of a bill in parliament to extend their district and enlarge their powers. Att.-Gen. v. West Hartlepool Improvement Commissioners, 39 L. J., Ch. 624; L. R. 10 Eq. 152; 22 L. T. 510; 18 W. R. 685.

Assessment of Damage—Trial of Facts.]—An act gave powers to a company to make a canal, and provided that certain commissioners should determine, by the verdict of a jury, the sum to be paid for damage caused by the works authorised by the act. Action on a judgment of the commissioners to recover the damage assessed by a jury. Plea, that the damage for which compensation was awarded was not caused by reason of the execution of the company's powers, and that the commissioners had no jurisdiction to assess the damage:—Held, that the commissioners had no jurisdiction to try the question as to the fact of damage, but only to assess the damage, if any. Barber v. Nottingham and Grantham Ry., 15 C. B. (N.S.) 726; 33 L. J., C. P. 193; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 260; 12 W. R. 376.

Death of Commissioners — Successors not appointed.]—By a navigation act the undertakers were authorised to make and maintain such navigation, and from time to time to alter their dams and weirs for that purpose, and to enter and make works upon lands for the purpose of the undertaking, first making satisfaction to the owners as commissioners under the act should direct. By a subsequent clause any person injured by the works was to receive compensation, to be assessed by the commissioners. The commissioners were named in the act, and power given them to appoint successors from time to time. The navigation was made; and, as part of it, a dam across a river was enlarged. Subsequently all the commissioners died without having appointed successors. The company afterwards raised the dam to the injury of a mill-owner below:—Held, that the power to alter the dam still existed, even though the mill-owner should no longer have any means of obtaining compensation, as to which the court gave no opinion. Kennet and Avon Navigation Co. v. Witherington, 18 Q. B. 531; 21 L. J., Q. B. 419.

Where three commissioners and their successors were appointed to transact the business under an inclosure act, and the act of any two of them was to be valid, an assessment executed by two, after the death of one of the three, and before the appointment of a successor, was invalid. Doe d. Nicholson v. Middleton, 3 Br. & B. 214.

Mortgage—Action by Puisne Incumbrancers—Costs.]—An action was brought by judgment creditors against harbour commissioners, in which the plaintiffs were found entitled to a charge on the undertaking, a receiver was appointed, and the priorities of other incumbrancers (some of whom were prior to the plaintiffs) were ascertained, and certain funds arising from the undertaking paid into court. The funds now available being insufficient for all the payments required:—Held, that, under the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, s. 60, the commissioners were entitled to be paid their costs as between solicitor and client out of the fund in priority to all parties, and that it made no difference that the fund had not actually come to the hands of the commissioners, but had been paid into court by the receiver. Batten v. Dartmouth Harbour Commissioners, 59 L. J., Ch. 700; 45 Ch. D. 612; 62 L. T. 861; 38 W. R. 603.

Extent of.]—When an act authorises commissioners to effect certain specified objects, with a clause providing for the payment of compensation to all persons whose interests may be affected, such authority extends not only against the persons to whom the commissioners are accountable, but also against the persons whose rights may be interfered with. Holt v. Rochdale Corporation, 39 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 10 Eq. 354; 23 L. T. 43; 18 W. R. 885.

3. Contracts.

By Clerk in accordance with a Resolution.]—By an act, commissioners were appointed for improving a navigation; their powers were to be executed by the majority present at a meeting of not fewer than three. They were not to be personally liable on contracts made, or for damages incurred, in relation to anything done in pursuance of the act, but might be sued in the name of their clerk. The commissioners, at a meeting held, resolved to accept a tender for executing works in pursuance of the act. Their clerk thereupon drew up a contract according to the tender, and it was afterwards signed by the contractor:—Held, that the contract made in consequence of the resolution was a contract entered into by the commissioners in execution of their office, and that they were liable and might be sued in the name of their clerk for damage negligently done by the contractor to third persons in execution of such contract. Allen v. Hayward, 7 Q. B. 960; 4 Railw. Cas. 104; 15 L. J., Q. B. 99; 10 Jur. 92.

Salary of Officer.]—Commissioners, appointed under a local act, were empowered to appoint officers at such salaries as they should think reasonable, and to remove such officers and appoint others. In some sections of the act the officers were spoken of as employed by the commissioners. The commissioners were empowered to make rates, which were vested in them, and they were directed to apply the moneys which should come to their hands under the act in paving, lighting, &c., the parish, and carrying the several purposes of the act into execution:—Held, that an action did not lie against them by one of their officers for arrears of salary. Bogg v. Pearse, 2 L. M. & P. 21; 10 C. B. 534; 20 L. J., C. P. 99.

—— Clerk suing Successor.]—Commissioners were appointed to be annually elected for executing a local act. They had power to levy rates. They had power to appoint clerks and other officers, and to pay them salaries out of the money to be raised by the rates. They had power to execute many works. They might sue and be sued by their clerk, and they were exempted from personal liability for any contracts entered into by them as commissioners:—Held, that a clerk, appointed by the commissioners for one year, might maintain an action for his salary against the clerk of the commissioners in a subsequent year. Hall v. Taylor, El. Bl. & Bl. 107; 27 L. J., Q. B. 311; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 877.

Held, also, that it was within the scope of their authority to employ an attorney; and that he might recover in an action against the clerk of the commissioners in a succeeding year. Ib.

—— Charge on Rates—Mandamus.]—Commissioners under a local improvement act were empowered to appoint a clerk and other officers, and to pay them reasonable salaries out of the moneys to be collected under the act; and power was given to levy rates for the purpose of paying the salaries of officers. Executors of B. sued the commissioners' clerk, the declaration alleging that the commissioners were indebted to B. in moneys for his agreed salary for his services as the clerk to the commissioners, and upon their retainer, and for other work and labour, of B., as the attorney and solicitor of, and otherwise for, the commissioners, at their request, in and about the business of the commissioners, and for money paid by him for their use and on accounts stated; and that the debt and moneys were a charge upon any moneys and funds in the hands of the commissioners collected under the act; and if they should not have in their hands any such moneys and funds, then the same debts became and were a charge upon a rate and assessment leviable under the act; and the executors demanded of the commissioners to pay the moneys due out of the funds in their hands, or to levy a rate under the act; and alleging a neglect and refusal, and claiming a writ of mandamus commanding the commissioners to pay or assess a rate:—Held, that the declaration was bad, it being consistent with the allegations that to part at least of the claim the commissioners were personally liable, and the remedy by mandamus being therefore inapplicable. Bush v. Beavan, 1 H. & C. 500; 32 L. J., Ex. 54; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 7 L. T. 106; 10 W. R. 845.

—— Whether Funds in Hand or not.]—To an action for salary due from commissioners under a town improvement act to their clerk, they pleaded that they never had at or since the accruing of the debt funds applicable to the payment of it, and that they had applied all the moneys which had come to their hands as such commissioners, except a small sum set apart by them to satisfy certain other claims which had accrued since that of their clerk, and they never had nor were they likely to have any surplus out of which they could pay his claim:—Held, that the plea was bad, and that, a debt being due, the clerk was entitled to judgment, whether it could be enforced by execution or not. Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311; 33 L. J., Ex. 17; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 347; 9 L. T. 510; 12 W. R. 204.

—— Judgment against Clerk—Distress upon Commissioners' Property.]—By an act the commissioners thereby appointed for improving a town were empowered to sue and be sued in the name of their clerk, who was expressly exempted from personal liability in respect of any such action, and they were also empowered to appoint a clerk and other officers, and it was enacted that they should and might, out of the moneys to arise by virtue of the act, pay such officers such salaries as the commissioners should think reasonable. An action was brought by the executors of a former clerk to the commissioners against their present clerk, for arrears of salary due to the deceased, in which judgment was entered up against the defendant and a fi. fa. issued, under which the sheriff seized the fire-engines and other goods of the commissioners vested in them by the act for public purposes, and a rule nisi having been obtained to set aside the judgment and fi. fa., on the ground that execution could not be had against different persons from the party sued, and that a mandamus to compel the commissioners to pay the debt out of the rates was the proper remedy:—The court discharged the rule, on the ground that if the commissioners were right they had other means of redress, as by action of trespass, but that, if the rule was made absolute, there were no means of reviewing the decision of the court. Saunders v. Slack, 11 L. T. 484.

Grant of Annuity.]—A grant of an annuity by five commissioners named in a local act in these words: "We five, &c., do grant unto A. an annuity of ——l. out of the rates granted and to arise by virtue of this act," according to the form prescribed in the act, does not raise any personal liability in the grantors, as, on a contract, the act empowers any five to be a quorum. Cane v. Chapman, 1 N. & P. 104; 5 A. & E. 647; 2 H. & W. 355; 6 L. J., K. B. 49.

4. Breach of Duty.

Duty thrown on Body.]—Where a duty is thrown on a body consisting of several persons each is individually liable for a breach of duty, as well for acts of commission as of omission. Rex v. Holland, 5 Term Rep. 607; 2 R. R. 678.

The Middle Level drainage commissioners were empowered and directed by statute to make a cut, and make and maintain at or near its opening a sluice to exclude the tidal waters. They were trustees for a public purpose, and acting without reward. The sluice was properly made, but owing to the absence of due care and skill in the persons employed by them to maintain it, the sluice burst, whereby the tidal waters came in and flooded the neighbouring lands. There was no proof that the commissioners had negligently or improperly employed unskilful or incompetent agents:—Held, that the commissioners were liable to an action at the suit of the owners of the neighbouring lands. Coe v. Wise, 7 B. & S. 831; 37 L. J., Q. B. 262; L. R. 1 Q. B. 711; 14 L. T. 891; 14 W. R. 865—Ex. Ch.

See Local Government—Negligence, &c.

5. Action by and against Clerks of.

Personal Charges.]—The clerk to commissioners of paving drew up a contract for paving, of which contract the contractor was, by agreement, to pay the expense; he offered to execute the contract, but refused to pay the clerk's charges, as unreasonable; the clerk refused to allow the contract to be executed until his charges were paid. Under an act authorising the commissioners to sue by their clerk:—Held, that he could not sue as such clerk for these charges. Curling v. Johnson, 10 Bing. 89; 3 M. & Scott, 496; 2 L. J., C. P. 264.

Liability for Negligence of Workmen.]—Clerks to commissioners, under a lighting and paving act, intrusted with the conduct of public works, are not liable for an injury occasioned by the negligence of artificers and labourers employed under their authority. Hall v. Smith, 9 Moore, 226; 2 Bing. 156; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 113.

Clerk at a Fixed Salary.]—A clerk to commissioners under a local act, who is paid by a fixed salary, is not within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, so as to require the delivery of a signed bill of costs, although he is an attorney, and his services consisted of work which, before his appointment at a fixed salary, he did as an attorney. Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311; 33 L. J., Ex. 17; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 347; 8 L. T. 509; 11 W. R. 1078.

E. IN OTHER CASES.

1. Appointment.

Power of Appointor.]—An appointment to an office for the life of the appointee is not invalid, upon the sole ground that the person making the appointment only holds his own office for life. Rosslyn (Earl) v. Aytoun, 11 Cl. & F. 742.

A right of nomination to an office being in two surviving grantees who could not agree upon the appointment was determined by lot on the order of the court. Seymour v. Bennet, 2 Atk. 483.

Nature of Tenure.]—The office of chamberlain of England is hereditary. Where two sisters inherit, they may act by deputy to be approved by the king, and who must not be of inferior degree to a knight. Burrell, Ex parte, 2 Bro. P. C. 146.

The office of paymaster of exchequer bills was an office during pleasure only, and not during good behaviour or for life, under 48 Geo. 3, c. 1. Smyth v. Latham, 9 Bing. 692; 3 M. & Scott, 251; 2 L. J., Ex. 241; 1 C. & M. 547; 3 Tyr. 509.

The office of weighmaster in a market town in Ireland is a freehold office. The appointment to it ought to be for life. M'Mahon v. Lennard, 6 H. L. Cas. 970.

A corporation having power by statute to appoint a weighmaster, and also at their discretion to remove him, the office is not a freehold office, and an appointment duly made by the corporation of a weighmaster during their pleasure is valid. Delea v. Cork Corporation, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 37; 19 W. R. 471.

The office of surgeon of the district prison of St. Catherine in the island of Jamaica (created by the acts of the local legislature) is an office held during pleasure only, and not during good behaviour. Hill v. Reg., 8 Moore, P. C. 138.

R. was in 1878 elected to the office of remembrancer of the city of London by the court of common council, and was subsequently sworn in before the court of aldermen. Before the plaintiff took the oath, the lord mayor made a declaration that his election was subject to the standing order relative to officers being annually elected, and the election was entered upon the city records as having been made upon those terms. In 1881 the court of common council passed a resolution that R. be not re-elected remembrancer, and the office be declared vacant. R. brought this action for a declaration that he was still remembrancer, and an injunction against the corporation appointing any one in his place, on the ground that the office had by usage acquired the nature of freehold, and that the court of common council had no power by resolution or by the form of election to alter the tenure of the office. It appeared that a remembrancer was first appointed eo nomine in 1570 by act of common council. Remembrancers were from that time regularly appointed to hold their office, sometimes during good behaviour, sometimes during the pleasure of the court of aldermen. In 1816 a resolution was passed by the court of common council that every person who might be elected to any office in the gift of that court should be elected for a year only. The subsequent appointments were expressed upon the records to have been made subject to this standing order. Some form of annual re-election was gone through at the beginning of every year in the case of the remembrancership and some of the other offices included in the standing order: —Held, that, if the office were for life, the election for a less period would be void altogether, and not merely as to the limitation, but that the form of appointment having varied, there was no continual usage sufficient to establish that the office was of any particular tenure, that if there was, it was as strong in favour of the tenure being during the will of the corporation as during good behaviour, and the resolution of the common council that the office was vacant was a sufficient determination of their will. Robarts v. London Corporation, 49 L. T. 455; 31 W. R. 529—C. A.

The office of commissioner of crown lands in New South Wales, created by the act of the legislature of that colony, is not a patent office, though made under the great seal of the colony within the meaning of the 22 Geo. 3, c. 75, but is an office held durante bene placito; and there is no right of appeal to the Queen in council, under that statute, from an order of a motion from such office by the governor-general and executive council. Robertson, Ex parte, 11 Moore, P. C. 288.

The 22 Geo. 3, c. 75, applies only to offices held by patent, for life, or for a certain term. Ib.

Upon the true construction of the Bedford Level Act, by which it is enacted that "none shall be capable to be or continue governor or bailiff that hath not 400 acres or more of 95,000 acres" (being the tract over which the corporation of the Bedford Level has jurisdiction), a mere legal estate in the lands of the level is a sufficient qualification for the office of governor or bailiff. Childers v. Childers, 1 De G. & J. 482; 26 L. J., Ch. 743; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1277; 5 W. R. 859.

"Substantial Inhabitants."]—The 11 Geo. 3, c. 29, which renders "substantial inhabitants" of the wards of London eligible to the office of collector of the ward rates, applies to resident inhabitants only. Donne v. Martyr, 2 M. & Ry. 98; 8 B. & C. 62; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 246.

Disqualification—Acts Done—Validity.]—By a private statute, tithes and dues were commuted for a specific corn rent, to be raised by assessment upon the landowners, and the court of quarter sessions, once in every ten years, upon application to be made to them by the landowners to appoint a person to make a new valuation of the land within the township, and again to apportion the annual sums which the owner or owners shall or ought to be charged with, was required by order of the court to nominate and appoint one or more fit and proper person or persons, not interested in the tithes or dues, and not being the steward or agent of any person so interested, to make a new valuation and assessment. In an action upon a distress for a sum for which the plaintiff had been assessed in pursuance of such a valuation, it was contended that the land was not liable, because the appointed tithe valuer, who was a shareholder in a railway passing through the township, was interested in the tithes and dues, that the sessions had consequently no jurisdiction to appoint him, and that therefore his acts were null and void:—Held, assuming him to be interested within the meaning of the statute, and that the order appointing him might have been brought up by certiorari and quashed, that as the sessions had jurisdiction to inquire and determine whether he was interested, and the appointment had not been set aside, he was de facto in the office of tithe valuer, and that consequently his acts done whilst so in office were not null and void, and could not be challenged. Lancaster and Carlisle Ry. v. Heaton, 8 El. & Bl. 952; 27 L. J., Q. B. 195; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 707; 6 W. R. 293.

The 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, s. 8, requires the assessors of land tax to be inhabitants of the parish, township or place, residing within the parish for which they are to act:—Held, that the acts of a person duly appointed as assessor were valid, although he was not qualified by being an inhabitant. Waterloo Bridge Co. v. Cull, 1 El. & El. 213; 28 L. J., Q. B. 70; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 464; 7 W. R. 87.

—— Interested Person.]—An office, of which the salary is to be fixed, and the accounts audited by certain justices, cannot be held by one of such justices. Rex v. Patteson, 1 N. & M. 612; 4 B. & Ad. 9; 2 L. J., K. B. 33.

Survivorship.]—Where one of two, appointed under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 25, to execute jointly the office of clerk to a county court, dies, the survivor continues to hold the office, though he cannot act till a successor to the deceased person is appointed. Reg. v. Wake, 8 El. & Bl. 384; 27 L. J., Q. B. 11; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 68; 6 W. R. 36.

Deputy—Power to Appoint.]—Ordinarily if it is an office requiring skill or discretion a person cannot appoint a deputy—he cannot transfer, but is bound to do it himself. But where the office is merely ministerial, such as that of digging a grave or of pulling a bell, it is clear that a deputy may be appointed therein; in the case of the sexton falling ill the public might be inconvenienced if dead bodies could not be buried. St. Margaret's, Rochester, Burial Board v. Thompson, 40 L. J., C. P. 213; L. R. 6 C. P. 445; 24 L. T. 673; 19 W. R. 892. And see Campbell v. Hewlitt, infra.

An under-sheriff could not appoint a deputy under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Jones v. Williams, 2 D. (N.S.) 938; 12 L. J., Q. B. 295; 7 Jur. 581.

—— Rights of Deputy.]—An action will not lie by a deputy against his principal for an increase of salary, without an express agreement, where the latter has been appointed to a new office. Bell v. Drummond, Peake, 45.

By a royal charter, establishing the palace court, it was granted that there should for ever be an office of the prothonotary of the court, and officer called the prothonotary, to make out and inrol processes, pleadings and judgments, and to keep the rolls and records; and the king granted the office to B., to have and execute the same by himself, or by his sufficient deputy, during his natural life. On a vacancy, the marshal of the household was to appoint the new prothonotary, who should be admitted, and might have and exercise the office during his natural life by himself or by his sufficient deputy or deputies. The prothonotary revoked by deed the appointment of his deputy, and appointed another by deed. The judge of the court, deeming this person insufficiently qualified, rejected him, and himself appointed the party previously dismissed, who had not ceased to act and to receive the fees payable to the prothonotary. He had received these fees while in office under the prothonotary's appointment, and the practice had been that he retained part and paid over the rest, in stated portions, to the knight marshal, the steward and the prothonotary:—Held, that the offices of prothonotary and deputy prothonotary were not distinct, and that, in the absence of special contract, the deputy acted and received fees on behalf of the prothonotary. Campbell v. Hewlitt, 16 Q. B. 258.

Held, secondly, that the retention of fees by the deputy on his account must be ascribed, not to any independent right, but to agreement between him and the prothonotary. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the prothonotary's revocation of the appointment determined the agreement and the deputy's right to retain any part of the fees; though if he unavoidably continued to perform duties on behalf of the prothonotary, he might have a cross claim for remuneration. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the judge of the court might refuse an insufficient deputy nominated by the prothonotary, but could not, of his own authority, appoint another deputy. Ib.

Proof of.]—The fact, that a party did a particular act (as signing a land-tax assessment) in an official capacity, may be proved, not only by shewing that he exercised the office before or at the period in question, but also by evidence (limited to a reasonable time) of his having exercised it afterwards. Doe d. Hopley v. Young, 8 Q. B. 63; 15 L. J., Q. B. 9; 9 Jur. 941. S. P., Doe d. Bowley v. Baines, 8 Q. B. 1037; 15 L. J., Q. B. 293.

Proof that a person has acted as a public officer on one occasion, before the occasion in question, is evidence that he is such officer. Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297.

In proceedings against a party in a voluntary office, not cast on him by law, it is necessary to aver not only an appointment, but an acceptance by the person appointed. Serra v. Wright, 6 Taunt. 45; 1 Marsh. 441.

It is not necessary, in an action by the weighmaster for disturbance in his office, to shew a formal appointment to it by deed. His having acted in the office for several years is sufficient. M'Mahon v. Lennard, 6 H. L. Cas. 970.

Stamp Duty upon.]—See REVENUE.

2. DETERMINATION OF APPOINTMENT.

By whom Removable.]—It is the prerogative of the crown, by letters patent, to suspend a public officer, though the office is granted for life. Slingsby's Case, 3 Swans. 178.

The supreme court of Calcutta has power by the charter of justice to remove or suspend officers of that court, on account of misconduct, and this power of removal is not limited to acts done by such officer in his judicial character, but includes transactions distinct from those of his office. Grant, In re, 7 Moore, P. C. 141.

Semble, whilst an officer receiving a salary given by act of parliament conducts himself properly in his office, the court has no jurisdiction to dismiss him. Kane v. Stewart, Sau. & Sc. 84, n.; 1 Jones, 630.

Mode of.]—Though a corporation may have by statute a power to remove one of its officers holding a freehold office, the Court of Queen's Bench will see that that power is exercised in a lawful manner, and will interfere if it should not be so. But if exercised in a lawful manner the court will refuse to interfere on the mere ground that the power has not been wisely or discreetly put in force in the particular case. Osgood v. Nelson, 41 L. J., Q. B. 329; L. R. 5 H. L. 636. Affirming 10 B. & S. 119; 20 L. T. 958; 17 W. R. 895—Ex. Ch.

In the case of removal from office of an officer of the corporation, upon an accusation of inability or neglect of duty, if there has been such evidence given as in an ordinary trial would justify the judge in leaving it to a jury to say, as a matter of fact, whether the accusation was made out, the court will not interefere with the decision arrived at by the corporation. Ib.

A corporate body having the power to dismiss one of its officers holding a freehold office on complaint against him, referred to a committee of its own body the task of examining into the complaint, and receiving evidence upon it and reporting thereon. The committee performed this duty. The report and evidence were duly furnished to the inculpated officer, who was then called on for his defence. He was afforded the opportunity of being heard, and counsel was heard for him, but the corporate body itself did not rehear the evidence. He was ordered to be dismissed from his office:—Held, that this was not a case of delegation of lawful authority, but was a due exercise of that authority by the corporate body itself. Ib.

Notice of.]—A person validly elected to an office and admitted to it, cannot be removed from it without notice. Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 404; 32 L. J., Q. B. 337; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1081; 9 L. T. 60; 11 W. R. 1004.

The poor law commissioners have a discretionary power of removing a relieving officer of a union whom they deem unfit for his office, without giving him notice of their intention to remove him, or hearing what he has to say in his defence. Teather and Poor Law Commissioners, In re, 19 L. J., M. C. 70.

Effect of Suspension.]—Suspension does not create a vacancy in an office, it is only an impediment to the officer enjoying any benefit from it; but all acts required to be done by such officer must still be done by him to give them validity. Phillips v. Bury, 2 Term Rep. 351.

When an officer is suspended by the crown, he is entitled to receive his salary, but not to exercise the functions of the office. Slingsby's Case, 3 Swans. 178.

By Appointment of Another.]—Where justices of the peace having power to appoint a surgeon, appointed another in the place of one holding the office:—Held, that the office of surgeon of the district prison being a public office, held at pleasure, and not an ancient office, the choice of another to fill such office, by the justices, in exercise of the powers vested in them by the local acts, was a determination of the first appointment. Hill v. Reg., 8 Moore, P. C. 138.

The subsequent appointment of a new paymaster in the place of a former one is a virtual revocation of the appointment of such former paymaster, even though the instrument under which the new appointment is made contains no express cause of revocation of the old one, and though it allege, contrary to the fact, that the former paymaster had resigned. Smyth v. Latham, 9 Bing. 692; 3 M. & Scott, 251; 2 L. J., Ex. 241; 1 C. & M. 547; 3 Tyr. 509.

By Acceptance of Incompatible Office.]—A public officer cannot vacate his office by accepting an incompatible office, unless the first office is one which he might have determined by his own act, or which he might have surrendered to the party appointing to the second office, or from which he might have been amoved by, or with the concurrence of, such party. Rex v. Patteson, 1 N. & M. 612; 4 B. & Ad. 9; 2 L. J., K. B. 33.

The acceptance by the holder of one office of another incompatible office does not vacate the former, unless it is such as he could determine by his own act simply, or unless that authority concurred in the appointment which could accept the surrender of or amove from the old one. Worth v. Newton, 10 Ex. 247; 2 C. L. R. 1471; 23 L. J., Ex. 338; 2 W. R. 628.

3. Assignment of.

Validity of.]—The office of warden of a forest was granted by James the First to Lord Oxford, his heirs and assigns, and was subsequently assigned by the holder upon various occasions; and, lastly, to A., without any objection on the part of the crown:—Held, that the office passed under the assignment to A., and that he was entitled to claim compensation upon the forest being disafforested. Wellesley v. Mornington, 23 L. J., Ch. 49; 2 W. R. 31.

The office of wood-ward, or forester of the crown, is an office of trust, incapable of assignment without a licence from the crown, founded on the return to a writ of ad quod damnum. Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 Kay & J. 579; 27 L. J., Ch. 761; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 6 W. R. 780.

4. Rights of Officers.

a. Salary and Pensions.

Agreements for Fixed Amount.]—The marshal of the city of Dublin is by virtue of his office registrar of the pawnbrokers of Ireland, and as marshal and registrar is entitled to receive considerable fees; and the defendant, in consideration of his being appointed to the office of marshal by the corporation of Dublin, entered into an agreement with them to accept, by way of fixed salary, a sum less than the fees, and to pay over the fees to the city treasurer:—Held, that the agreement was illegal, as being against public policy. Dublin Corporation v. Hayes, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 226.

An agreement between a municipal corporation and the clerk of the peace of the borough, on his appointment, that he shall accept a fixed salary in lieu of his fees, and that any surplus of fees above the salary shall be paid into the borough fund, is void, on two grounds of public policy: first, because a person accepting an office of trust can make no bargain in respect of that office; and, secondly, because the law presumes that all the fees are required for the purpose of enabling him to uphold the dignity and perform properly the duties of his office.

Liverpool Corporation v. Wright, 1 Johns. 359; 28 L. J., Ch. 868; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1156; 7 W. R. 728.

Right to Fees.]—Persons serving under the crown under a general commission have no legal right to demand specific compensation, semble. Crawford v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 67.

The principal registrars in the prerogative office disagreeing about the appointment of a clerk, the deputy-registrar nominated A., who for twelve months officiated, and received fees:—Held, that he was an officer de facto, and had a right to the stated fees, and to retain them without account. Seymour v. Bennet, 2 Atk. 483.

Exclusion from Office—Return of Salary.]—The defendant, who had been illegally elected for the office of surgeon of a county infirmary in Ireland, entered into office, and though cautioned, kept out the plaintiff, who had been legally elected:—Held, first, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages from the defendant for so excluding him from the office. Lawlor v. Alton, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 160.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiff, as he had not actually discharged the duties of the office, though he had offered and was ready to do so, was not entitled to recover, as money had and received, the salary which the defendant had received under the grand jury presentment. Ib.

Claim to Fees—Evidence.]—The immemorial existence of fees of an office may be presumed from uninterrupted modern usage, unless there is some evidence given to the contrary. Shepherd v. Payne, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 132; 33 L. J., C. P. 158; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 540; 10 L. T. 193; 12 W. R. 581—Ex. Ch.

The modern usurpation of an excess does not affect the title to the original fees. Ib.

The clerk of the papers of the queen's prison, appointed under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 22, by the secretary of state, at a fixed salary, holds in effect the same office as the clerk of the papers of the queen's bench prison, appointed under the 27 Geo. 2, c. 17, by the marshal of the Marshalsea, and that office was one belonging to the queen's bench, and consequently within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 58, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 35:—Held, therefore, that the clerk of the papers of the queen's prison was entitled to insist on payment to him of the fees sanctioned by the commissioners under the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 35, in order that he might account for them to the treasury. Markwell v. Dyson, 14 Q. B. 820; 19 L. J., Q. B. 193; 14 Jur. 809.

Revocation of Resolution granting Pensions.]—Trustees were created by statute a body corporate for the management of the navigation of a river, with a common seal and a perpetual succession. The statute empowered them to levy tolls, and enacted that it should be lawful for them to allow to any officer or servant an annuity or allowance. Their clerk, removable at their will and pleasure, having in 1865 resigned, owing to ill-health, after service for forty years, the trustees duly passed a resolution (not sealed) that his resignation "be accepted, and that a retiring pension of 300*l.* per annum, free of income tax, be granted to him during the remainder of his life." The pension was duly paid quarterly for some years, until the defendants, who had meanwhile been substituted by statute for the trustees, with all their powers, and subject to all their liabilities, duly passed a resolution to reduce the pension to 150*l.* per annum, to be paid during their pleasure, and made the first quarterly payment on the reduced scale. The clerk having brought an action to recover the difference:—Held, that the resolution of 1865 was revocable, and that he could not recover. Marchant v. Lee Conservancy Board, 43 L. J., Ex. 44; L. R. 9 Ex. 60; 30 L. T. 367—Ex. Ch.

Pensions under the Superannuation Act, 1859.]—Under the provisions of the Superannuation Act, 1859, the question whether or not a pension shall be granted to a public servant is to be decided by the commissioners of the treasury; and until they have decided to grant a pension no public servant can maintain an action in respect thereof. Edmunds v. Att.-Gen., 47 L. J., Ch. 345; 38 L. T. 213; 26 W. R. 550.

The Superannuation Act, 1859, s. 2, after prescribing a scale of superannuation allowances for civil servants according to length of service, provides that, if any question shall arise as to the claim of any civil servant for superannuation under this clause, "it shall be referred to the commissioners of the treasury, whose decision shall be final." Where, therefore, a civil servant makes a claim for superannuation allowance to the commissioners of the treasury, and their lordships decide upon the amount of the allowance to be made, such decision is final, and cannot afterwards be made the subject of litigation in any civil tribunal. Cooper v. Reg., 49 L. J., Ch. 490; 14 Ch. D. 311; 42 L. T. 617; 28 W. R. 611.

Pensions—Liability to Debts.]—A superannuation allowance, granted by a resolution of the board of directors of the East India Company to a retired clerk under the authority of 53 Geo. 3, c. 155, s. 93, is only a gratuity; and the grant, to be binding on the company, must be by deed. For both these reasons, the allowance is not a debt which can be attached on behalf of a judgment creditor of the grantee under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125. Innes v. East India Co., 17 C. B. 351; 25 L. J., C. P. 154; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 189; 4 W. R. 245.

The effect of ss. 15 and 17 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is to vest in the trustee in a bankruptcy all the "property" of the bankrupt of whatever nature, including the matters dealt with by s. 23 and ss. 87 to 95, but subject to the exceptions and qualifications introduced by those sections. The pension of a retired judge of a crown colony, granted by the secretary of state for the colonies, and voted annually by the legislature of the colony, is, in case of the bankruptcy of the judge, "property" which vests in the trustee in the bankruptcy, but it is "income" of the bankrupt within s. 90 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and is subject to the power thereby given to the court to determine how much of it shall be set aside for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors. Huggins, Ex parte, Huggins, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 935; 21 Ch. D. 85; 47 L. T. 559; 30 W. R. 878—C. A. See also BANKRUPTCY.

The court of probate in enforcing payment of alimony and costs will authorise sequestration to receive portions of a civil service pension. Sansom v. Sansom, 48 L. J., P. 25; 4 P. D. 69; 39 L. T. 642; 27 W. R. 692.

The pension of a retired officer in the Indian navy, received solely in respect of past services, is liable to sequestration for nonpayment of costs.

Dent v. Dent, 36 L. J., Mat. 61 ; L. R. 1 P. 366 ; 15 L. T. 635 ; 15 W. R. 591.

The pension of an officer of her majesty's forces, being by s. 141 of the Army Act, 1881, made inalienable by the voluntary act of the person entitled to it, cannot be taken in execution, even though such pension be given solely in respect of past services, and the officer cannot again be called upon to serve :—Held, that an order appointing a receiver of such pension was bad. Birch v. Birch (8 P. D. 163) approved ; Dent v. Dent (L. R. 1 P. 366) distinguished. Lucas v. Harris, 56 L. J., Q. B. 15 ; 18 Q. B. D. 127 ; 55 L. T. 658 ; 35 W. R. 112 ; 51 J. P. 261—C. A.

A creditor, before 1876, recovered a judgment against a county court judge in receipt of a salary. In February, 1876, the creditor, under s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, obtained an order that the judge should pay the debt by instalments at stated times. In December, 1877, he resigned his judgeship, and a pension was granted him under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, s. 15. Having made default in payment of the sum he was directed to pay by the order of February, 1876, the creditor issued a writ of sequestration, and afterwards, in April, 1878, obtained an order restraining the debtor from receiving 200*l.*, part of his pension, and ordering that the sequestrator should receive that amount out of the pension :—Held, that the writ of sequestration was properly issued, and that the pension could be made available for payment of his debts. Willcock v. Terrell, 3 Ex. D. 323 ; 39 L. T. 84—C. A. See Snow v. Bolton, 50 L. J., Ch. 743 ; 17 Ch. D. 433 ; 44 L. T. 571 ; 29 W. R. 583.

E., a retired storekeeper of one of her majesty's dockyards, entitled to payment from the treasury of a pension or superannuation allowance of 155*l.* a year, assigned such pension to the plaintiff to secure a loan of money. E. afterwards became insolvent, and included the debt due upon the plaintiff's security in his schedule. The commissioner of the insolvent debtors' court, by his order, made in presence of counsel for the plaintiff, recommended that 50*l.* a year, part of the insolvent's pension, should be paid by the paymaster-general to the provisional assignee of the insolvent debtors' court, for the benefit of the creditors of the insolvent. The plaintiff declined to prove as creditor under the insolvency ; but, having filed a bill, moved for an injunction to restrain E. from applying for, or receiving, or enabling any other person to receive, the balance of his pension left after the appropriation of the annual sum recommended by the commissioner : —Ordered accordingly. Lloyd v. Eagle, 28 L. J., Ch. 389 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 187.

Salary—Rights of Creditors.]—The grant of a menial office in the house of lords for a term of years, liable to creditors, and a daily fee or allowance held to be also subject to their demands. Schellinger v. Blackerby, 1 Ves. 347.

Receiver granted at the suit of a judgment creditor of the office of master forester of the royal forest. Blanchard v. Cawthorne, 4 Sim. 566.

The court will not appoint a receiver of the annual allowance paid to the assistant parliamentary counsel to the lords of the treasury, before the hearing. Cooper v. Reilly, 1 Russ. & M. 560. Affirming 2 Sim. 560.

A salary to an equerry to one of the royal family is not a subject of sequestration. Fenton v. Lowther, 1 Cox, 315.

It is against public policy that the salary of a public servant should be reduced by the application of any part for the payment of debts. Harnden, Ex parte, 28 L. J., Bk. 18 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 852 ; 7 W. R. 280—L.JJ.

Salary—Assignment of.]—The office of clerk to the deputy registrar in the prerogative court of Canterbury is not an office connected with the administration of justice within the meaning of the statute 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 16, so as to prevent its being aliened or charged. Nor is the alienation of a charge on the profits of the office contrary to the policy of the law restricting the alienation of the income of a public officer. Aston v. Gwinnell, 3 Y. & J. 136.

The salary of the assistant parliamentary counsel to the treasury is not assignable, and the court will not appoint a receiver of it. Cooper v. Reilly, 2 Sim. 560 ; 1 Russ. & M. 560.

An assignment of the emoluments of a fellow of a college in the university is valid in equity, and effect will be given to a security thereon, out of the dividends apportioned to such fellow from time to time in respect of his fellowship. Feistel v. King's College (Cambridge), 10 Beav. 491 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 339 ; 11 Jur. 506.

The profits of the office of clerk of the peace being assigned for payment of creditors, a receiver was appointed, pending the question of the validity of the assignment. Palmer v. Vaughan, 3 Swan. 173.

Semble, that the profits of a public office, such as the patent office of keeper of the register of sasines, cannot be assigned for the benefit of creditors. Hill v. Paul, 8 Cl. & F. 295.

Agreement to assign fees of gaoler, and profits of tap-house, not carried into execution. Methwold v. Walbank, 2 Ves. 238.

Pension—Assignment.]—Principles of public policy on which pay, pensions, &c., are held inalienable. Grenfell v. Windsor (Dean), 2 Beav. 544.

An assignment by a retired military officer of his pension for valuable consideration is void under 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 25. Lloyd v. Cheetham, 3 Giff. 171 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 640 ; 4 L. T. 576 ; 9 W. R. 924.

But the statute does not apply to the assignment of a pension granted by the East India Company. Heald v. Hay, 3 Giff. 467 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 311 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 379 ; 5 L. T. 740 ; 10 W. R. 264. S. A compensation granted to a public civil officer on the reduction of offices in his department under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24, is not assignable by him. Wells v. Forster, 8 M. & W. 149 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 216 ; 5 Jur. 464.

A pension from the East India Company cannot be assigned. Hawker, Ex parte, Keely, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 34 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 214 ; 26 L. T. 54 ; 20 W. R. 322.

A pension for past services may be alienated ; but a pension for supporting the grantee in the performance of future duties is inalienable. Davis v. Marlborough (Duke), 1 Swan. 74 ; 2 Wils. 130.

Property, including a pension payable by the secretary of state for India, was mortgaged to the plaintiff, and subsequently to one of the defendants. Upon a bill for foreclosure the common decree was made, and it was also ordered that, in the event of the foreclosure becoming absolute, the mortgagor should execute a power of attorney enabling the mortgagee to receive the pension. James v. Ellis, 24 L. T. 12; 19 W. R. 319.

Where a canon was entitled to a share of the revenues of lands, &c., vested in the corporation, in consideration of future duties to be performed during the year, for his own and not for the public benefit, and he had assigned his canonry by way of mortgage:—Held, that such security was valid, and a case for the appointment of a receiver. Principles of public policy on which pay, pensions, &c., are held to be inalienable. Grenfell v. Windsor (Dean), 2 Beav. 544.

—— Claim for Arrears—Set-off.]—In an action brought by a retired clergyman against his successor in the incumbency for arrears of the pension allowed under the Incumbents' Resignation Act, 1871, the defendant claimed to set off against such arrears, and also to recover, by way of counter-claim, a judgment debt due to him from the retired clergyman:—Held, that the pension was inalienable, and therefore the defendant's claim could not be set off, and the plaintiff was entitled to a separate and independent judgment for the arrears due. Gathercole v. Smith, 50 L. J., Q. B. 681; 7 Q. B. D. 626; 45 L. T. 106; 29 W. R. 577; 45 J. P. 812—C. A.

By s. 10 of the Incumbents' Resignation Act, 1871, the pension allowed to a retiring clerk is made a charge upon the revenues of the benefice, "and shall be recoverable as a debt at law or in equity from the incumbent of the said benefice by the retired clerk, his executors, administrators and assigns . . . but shall not be transferable at law or in equity." In an action by a retired clerk against the incumbent of the benefice for payment of the arrears of the pension that had been allowed him under the act:—Held, that the incumbent could not set off against such arrears a judgment debt previously due to him from the retired clerk. Gathercole v. Smith, 50 L. J., Ch. 671; 17 Ch. D. 1; 44 L. T. 439; 29 W. R. 434—C. A.

b. Compensation for Loss of Office.

i. Persons Entitled.

Officer de facto.]—The council of a borough removed a town clerk, who had been elected to hold during good behaviour, but had not made the declaration prescribed by 9 Geo. 4, c. 17, s. 2:—Held, that, as having been an officer de facto, he was entitled to compensation. Reg. v. Cambridge Corporation, 12 A. & E. 702; 4 P. & D. 294; 10 L. J., Q. B. 25.

By s. 11 of the Metropolis Management (Plumstead and Hackney) Act, 1893, every officer in the service of the district boards therein mentioned who comes within the scope of the Superannuation (Metropolis) Act, 1866, and who has suffered pecuniary loss by abolition of office or by diminution or loss of salary, fees, or emoluments in consequence of the act of 1893, shall be entitled to pecuniary compensation:—Held, that the section must be construed to mean that compensation shall be paid to any of the servants of the district boards who have suffered loss in consequence of the act. Legg v. Stoke Newington Vestry, 59 J. P. 696.

Solicitors.]—An attorney cannot, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 66, or 5 & 6 Vict. c. 111, s. 2, claim compensation for fees and emoluments which he derived from being employed by the justices of a division to prosecute offenders committed by them for trial, where the prosecutor did not employ another attorney. Reg. v. Manchester Corporation, 5 Q. B. 402; 8 Jur. 421.

Certain trustees having the management of the relief of the poor of a metropolitan parish, appointed a solicitor for the arrangement of legal matters, with an annual salary. After the passing of the Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867 (30 Vict. c. 6), the poor law board refused to allow the board of guardians elected under that act to continue him in the appointment which he had received from the trustees:—Held, that he was entitled to an award of compensation from the poor law board, under s. 76. Reg. v. Local Government Board, 43 L. J., Q. B. 49; L. R. 9 Q. B. 148; 29 L. T. 769; 22 W. R. 315.

The four attorneys of the sheriff's court of York having a monopoly of the office of attorney in that court, were not, on other attorneys being admitted to practise in the court, by the operation of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, entitled to compensation; because, although their office was an office of profit within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 66, there had been no abolition of it, or removal from it. Reg. v. York Corporation, 2 G. & D. 580; 3 Q. B. 550; 11 L. J., Q. B. 326; 6 Jur. 1082.

Clerk to Stipendiary.]—Before and at the time of granting a charter of incorporation and a separate court of quarter sessions to the borough of Manchester, there was a division of the county of Lancaster, called "the division of Manchester," consisting of forty-three townships, and the business of the division was done at the New Bailey, in Salford; and M. acted as clerk to the justices who attended there. Some of the justices of the division met at Worsley, and others at Heaton Norris, both being townships within the division, and did petty sessions business there; and such justices employed different clerks on such occasions. By virtue of 53 Geo. 3, c. 78, a stipendiary magistrate was appointed for a district, including Salford and other townships in the division of Manchester, who appointed M. as his clerk:—Held, first, that M. was not clerk to the justices for the Manchester division of the county of Lancaster, but only to such of them as attended at Salford; and, secondly, that the clerk to the stipendiary magistrate was not an officer of the borough, county or division of the county within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 111, s. 2; and, therefore, that M. was not, on either ground, entitled to compensation. Reg. v. Manchester (Borough Council), 9 Q. B. 458; 16 L. J., Q. B. 27; 11 Jur. 222.

Coroners.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, s. 4, empowers the queen, with the advice of her privy council, to order that any county shall be divided into so many districts as shall seem expedient, for the purposes of the act; and by s. 6, whenever any county has been customarily divided into districts, for the purpose of holding inquests, during seven years before the passing of the act, and it shall seem expedient that the same division of the county be made under this act, each of such districts shall be assigned to the coroner usually acting in and for the same district before the passing of this act; but if it shall appear expedient that a different division of such county be made, and any coroner shall present a petition praying for compensation for the loss of his emoluments arising out of such change, the lords of the treasury are to assess the amount of compensation to be paid out of the county rate: —Held, that the coroner was entitled to compensation only where a county had been customarily divided into districts for seven years before the passing of the act, and where a different division was ordered under the act. Reg. v. Lechmere, 16 Q. B. 284; 20 L. J., Q. B. 169; 15 Jur. 558.

Chamberlains.]—In 1794 a corporation appointed A. assistant-chamberlain of the city, for a year, at a yearly salary. In 1804 the salary of A. was raised. In 1810 B. was appointed assistant-chamberlain by the chamberlain, and he continued to hold this office till the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76. In 1827 the corporation had again raised the salary. On the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the office of B. was abolished, and a claim having been made by him for compensation, the lords of the treasury awarded that his office was not the subject of compensation, and the court confirmed the decision. Harvey, Ex parte, 3 N. & P. 159; 7 A. & E. 739; 7 L. J., Q. B. 129.

Clerk of the Peace.]—After the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 111, a corporate borough was created by charter, not containing a non-intromittant clause. Its area was a part of a county. A grant of a court of quarter sessions was made, and the council appointed a clerk of the peace for the borough: —Held, that the clerk of the peace of the county was not entitled to compensation under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 66, he not having been removed nor his office abolished, although the profits were diminished. Reg. v. Brighton Council, 7 El. & Bl. 249; 26 L. J., Q. B. 153; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 585; 5 W. R. 257.

Evidence of Resignation.]—It is no evidence of voluntary resignation, by a corporate officer, of the offices held by him, so as to exclude him from compensation, that he omitted to declare his wish to be re-elected, and allowed another person, without opposition, to be elected in his place. Att-Gen. v. Poole Corporation, 8 Beav. 75; 14 L. J., Ch. 101; 9 Jur. 318.

Where no formal resignation or surrender of the offices held by a corporate officer was made by him, and another person was, without opposition by him, appointed in his place:—Held, that such corporate officer was removed from his offices within the meaning of the act. Ib.

Agreement for Increase not under Seal.]—An agreement by a corporation with one of their officers, for an increase of the salary of an office retained by him, as a compensation for the loss of an office of which he was deprived, though upon an executed consideration, is not binding, if the contract is not under the common seal of the corporation. Reg. v. Stamford Corporation, 6 Q. B. 433; 8 Jur. 909.

Service under Crown.]—Persons serving under crown under a general commission have no legal right to demand specific compensation, semble. Crawford v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 67.

Assignment.] — Semble, that compensation allowance for the loss of an office in the custom-house, though revocable at the pleasure of the government, is assignable. Tunstall v. Boothby, 10 Sim. 542; 9 L. J., Ch. 294.

Injunction granted to restrain the lords of the treasury from paying the compensation awarded under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, for the office of side-clerk in the exchequer, which had been abolished. Ellis v. Grey (Earl), 6 Sim. 214.

ii. Assessment of.

By Town Council.]—The town council has jurisdiction to determine the whole claim to compensation of a borough officer who has been removed from office: and may pronounce not only on the amount to which he is entitled, but whether his office, or the tenure of it, was such as to entitle him to anything. Reg. v. Sandwich Corporation, 2 G. & D. 28; 2 Q. B. 895; 11 L. J., Q. B. 132; 6 Jur. 684.

—— Effect of.]—Where a town council, in obedience to a mandamus, assessed compensation for the loss of certain offices of profit, and the lords of the treasury, on appeal, assessed a larger amount of compensation:—Held, that the assessment under the mandamus estopped the town council from denying the right to compensation. Sandwich Corporation v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 563; 16 L. J., Q. B. 432.

Emoluments of Office.] — The Metropolitan Bridges Act, 1877, provided that compensation should be paid to certain officers, including clerks, but not including solicitors, of the private companies or corporations whose bridges were taken over by the Metropolitan Board of Works under the act, upon a scale to be calculated on the basis of the emoluments actually received by them in the two years previous to the passing of the act. The Deptford Creek Bridge was taken over by the board, and thereby the plaintiff, who had been clerk to the Deptford Creek Bridge Company, lost his office. He had received a salary as clerk, and also payments for legal business done by him as solicitor for the company, and commission on the rents of the company's property which he received. The Deptford Creek Bridge Company had by their act power to appoint a solicitor and receiver as well as a clerk; they had never appointed such officers, and the legal business of the company had always been done and the rents received by the clerk, who had always been a solicitor:—Held, that, by the practice of the company, these duties had been attached to the office of clerk, and that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation in respect of the payments received for discharging them as part of the emoluments of his office; but as to the payments for legal business done by him, only in respect of his proportion as partner in the firm of solicitors of the net profits after deducting all office expenses necessarily incurred in earning the money. Drew v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 30 L. T. 138—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Lords of the Treasury.]—A town clerk had transacted the legal business of the corporation as charity trustees. He and his predecessors in office had usually transacted such business as incidental to their office. On the passing of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, he was removed from the office of town clerk, and subsequently the new charity trustees also removed him from their employment. The town council having awarded him compensation for the loss of his office of town clerk, but having refused compensation for the loss of his employment by the trustees, he appealed to the lords of the treasury, who awarded him compensation for such employment also:—Held, that they had jurisdiction to award such compensation, because the transaction of the charity business formed part of the incidental profits of the office of town clerk, and they therefore had entertained a question of amount only, and not a question whether the loss of any distinct office was a proper subject of compensation. Reg. v. Norwich Corporation, 2 G. & D. 605; 3 Q. B. 285; 11 L. J., Q. B. 246.

A treasury order for compensation to an officer of a corporation dismissed after the passing of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, is not necessarily bad because it directs the compensation to be calculated from a bygone time. But such order is bad and a nullity, if on the face of it, or by comparison with the treasury minute directing the order to issue, it appears that the compensation is partly given for a period during which the party still held the office. Reg. v. Lichfield Corporation, 16 Q. B. 781; 20 L. J., Q. B. 383; 15 Jur. 812—Ex. Ch.

The steward of a borough demanded compensation as for an office held for life. The town council allowed compensation as for an annual office only. The lords of the treasury, after hearing the parties, awarded compensation on the former principle. On motion for a mandamus to the corporation to execute a compensation-bond, there appeared evidence, on the one hand, that the office was not legally holden for life; and, on the other, that it had usually been so holden, and that the appointment was accepted on that understanding:—Held, that the lords of the treasury were not bound to consider only the legal tenure, but might, referring to the circumstances of the case, award compensation as for an office held for life. Reg. v. Norwich Corporation, 8 A. & E. 633.

The lords of the treasury have no jurisdiction to determine the right of a borough officer to compensation, whether he has been removed for alleged misconduct or otherwise. They have jurisdiction as to nothing but the amount of compensation. Reg. v. Sandwich Corporation, 2 G. & D. 28; 2 Q. B. 895; 11 L. J., Q. B. 132; 6 Jur. 684. S. P., Reg. v. Harwich Corporation, 2 Q. B. 909; 2 G. & D. 109; 6 Jur. 821.

By the usage of a borough, the office of clerk to the justices was appurtenant to the office of common clerk. After the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, a separate commission of the peace was granted to the borough; and the person who had been common clerk, which office was then abolished, was in lieu thereof appointed town-clerk and clerk of the peace, but not, as formerly, clerk to the justices also; such office being by s. 102 incompatible with that of clerk of the peace:—Held, that the lords of the treasury had jurisdiction to make an order on the town council to compensate him for the loss of such office. Rex v. Bridgewater Corporation, 1 N. & P. 466; 6 A. & E. 339; 6 L. J., M. C. 78.

Where the lords of the treasury awarded compensation to an officer in a borough, on his being removed from office by the town council, if the office was not a borough office, or the removal was not made under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the lords of the treasury had no jurisdiction. Reg. v. Poole Corporation, 3 N. & P. 119; 7 A. & E. 730; 7 L. J., Q. B. 126.

The lords of the treasury had no jurisdiction to decide whether an officer of a borough had been properly removed from office on the ground of misconduct. Reg. v. Warwick Corporation, 3 P. & D. 429; 10 A. & E. 386; 9 L. J., Q. B. 265.

If a corporation refuses compensation to a removed officer, on the ground that they had removed him for cause sufficient, the lords of the treasury have no jurisdiction to try the question of the sufficiency; and though, after entertaining that question, and determining it in favour of the claimant, they also adjudicate upon the proper amount of compensation, the court will not enforce by mandamus the payment of such compensation, nor try, upon the return to a mandamus, the sufficiency of the cause, the claimant being bound in the first instance to proceed against the corporation by mandamus, to compel them to restore him, or give him compensation for removal. Reg. v. Newbury Corporation, 1 Q. B. 751; 1 G. & D. 388; 6 Jur. 365.

Length of Service Nominal.]—On the 21st August, 1835, the town clerk of Lyme Regis, died, and, on the 31st of the same month, Lee was appointed his successor. On the 8th September, 1835, the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, passed:—Held, that he was entitled to nominal compensation only for the loss of his office as town clerk, since he must have known, when he was appointed, that his appointment would soon cease. Lee, Ex parte, 2 N. & P. 63; 7 A. & E. 139.

QUIA TIMET ACTION.

Generally.]—To sustain a quia timet bill there must be not only title, but danger to the property: where both concur the court will require the defendant to give security. Fisher v. Hughes, 1 Coop. C. C. 329.

In order to maintain a quia timet action to restrain an apprehended injury the plaintiff must prove imminent danger of a substantial kind, or that the apprehended injury, if it does come, will be irreparable. Fletcher v. Bealey, 54 L. J., Ch. 424; 28 Ch. D. 688; 52 L. T. 541; 33 W. R. 745.

Threat to break Contract.]—Where a company agreed to "erect and maintain in working order" certain telephone wires and apparatus, and threatened to cut off the communication, an injunction was granted to restrain the company from so doing. Keith, Prowse & Co. v. National Telephone Co. 63 L. J., Ch. 373; [1894] 2 Ch. 147; 8 R. 776; 70 L. T. 276; 42 W. R. 380; 58 J. P. 573.

A. covenants that a specific sum should be paid to B., if B. survived; A. having aliened part of it, on a bill by B., A. decreed to give security that it should be forthcoming. Flight v. Cook, 2 Ves. 619.

Accountant to Crown.]—The statutes providing for the relief of subject, accountants who have equities against the crown, held not to be confined to cases where the subject be actually sued or impleaded, but he may proceed by bill in equity in the first instance, and as it were quia timet, and that during the passing his accounts before the commissioners of audit. Colebrooke v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 146.

Indemnity.]—A. is bound for B., and has a counter-bond; equity will compel B. to pay the debt, though A. is not sued. Ranelaugh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 190.

A trustee held shares in a company on trust for an adult cestui que trust. He had applied for them at the request of the cestui que trust, who paid the money due to the company on the application and allotment. The trustee executed a transfer of the shares to the cestui que trust, and the latter sent it to the company for registration, but the directors refused to register it, and when an order was made to wind up the company the name of the trustee remained on the company's register as the holder of the shares. The trustee brought an action against the cestui que trust, claiming an indemnity against liability on the shares. There was no evidence to show whether calls were likely to be made in the winding-up:—Held, that the action was a mere quia timet one, and that it was premature and could not be maintained. Ranelaugh (Lord) v. Hayes (1 Vern. 189) not followed. Hughes-Hallett v. Indian Mammoth Gold Mines Co., 52 L. J., Ch. 418; 22 Ch. D. 561; 48 L. T. 107; 31 W. R. 285.

Colonel of a regiment having taken a bond of indemnity from his agents, with another as surety, in respect of all charges, &c., to which he may become liable by their default, the agents having afterwards become bankrupt, and government having given notice to the representatives of the colonel (deceased) of a demand upon the colonel's estate, by virtue of an unliquidated account, a bill by the representatives of the colonel, against the representatives of the surety, to pay the balance due to government, and also to set aside a sufficient sum out of the testator's estate to answer future contingent demands, though attempted to be supported upon the principle of a bill quia timet, dismissed with costs. Antrobus v. Davidson, 3 Mer. 569; 17 R. R. 130.

Preventing Action.]—Where the object of a bill quia timet is to prevent the assignees of a bankrupt, purchaser of estate, from bringing an action to recover back part of consideration money remaining due to vendor, which had been paid to him subsequent to act of bankruptcy, on the ground of his having waived his equitable lien, by taking a bond for the purchase-money, if the bill charge, as a fact, that the bond was given as a further additional or collateral security, the question of law cannot be raised on a general demurrer. Braband v. Hoskins, 3 Price, 31.

Parties.]—A party who had granted an annuity to a trustee for his wife, filed a bill against the trustee, his wife, and an assignee of the annuity from her, stating that such assignee had filed a bill against him and his wife, and that the trustee threatened to distrain, and praying to be at liberty to pay the arrears of the annuity into court, and to be indemnified against the costs of the assignee's suit:—Held, that the suit was not sustainable as an interpleader or quia timet, because, on account of the trustee not being a party to the assignee's suit, no decree could be made in it against the plaintiff. Palmer v. Fraser, 3 Y. & Coll. 491; 3 Jur. 890.

Nuisance.]—The court will not interfere, quia timet, in a case of alleged nuisance, but the actual existence of the nuisance must be proved. Att.-Gen. v. Kingston-upon-Thames Corporation, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 12 L. T. 665; 13 W. R. 888.

Therefore, where an information was filed to restrain the pollution of a navigable river by an increased discharge of sewage into it, but the evidence failed to show that a nuisance had actually arisen, the court dismissed the information, without prejudice to any further proceedings being taken, if a nuisance should ultimately be occasioned. Ib.

An interim injunction will not be granted in a quia timet action, unless the plaintiff makes out a strong case of probability that the apprehended mischief will in fact arise. Quære, whether, in the case of a hospital, the health of the public at large may not be considered to some extent as against the merely local inconvenience. Att.-Gen. v. Manchester Corporation, 62 L. J., Ch. 459; [1893] 2 Ch. 87; 3 R. 427; 68 L. T. 608; 41 W. R. 459; 57 J. P. 343.

The plaintiff was a manufacturer of paper, his mills being situate on the bank of a river, the water of which he used to a large extent in his process of manufacture, for which it was essential that the water should be very pure. The defendants, who were alkali manufacturers, were depositing on a piece of land close to the river, and about one mile and a half higher up than the plaintiff's mill, a large heap of refuse from their works. It was proved that in the course of a few years a liquid of a very noxious character would flow from the heap, and would continue flowing for forty years or more, and that if this liquid should find its way into the river to any appreciable extent the water would be rendered unfit for the plaintiff's manufacture, and his trade would be ruined. The plaintiff did not allege that he had as yet sustained any actual injury. The defendants said that they intended to use all proper precautions to prevent the noxious liquid from getting into the river:—Held, that it being quite possible by the use of due care to prevent the liquid from flowing into the river, it being also possible that, before it began to flow from the heap, some method of rendering it innocuous might have been discovered, the action could not be maintained, and must be dismissed with costs. But the dismissal was expressly declared to be without prejudice to the right of the plaintiff to bring another action hereafter, in case of actual injury or imminent danger. Fletcher v. Bealey, supra.

An action was brought by inhabitants of houses abutting on an open and unbuilt-on area of land situate in the centre of a town, adjoining the market-place, and known as Market-square, for an injunction to restrain the owner thereof from using, or causing or permitting the same to be used for the purpose of any sports, exhibitions, entertainments, or otherwise whereby a nuisance might be occasioned to the annoyance and injury of the plaintiffs. It appeared that in June, 1889, the defendant's agent licensed S. to use Market-square for holding a public show for several days, S. paying 6*l*. The show consisted of a large circular roundabout worked by a steam-engine, which engine also worked an organ; a large circular mechanical switchback worked by another steam-engine, which worked a second organ; a shooting gallery; and a boxing booth. Whilst the show was going on, the plaintiffs complained to the defendant's agent, and a correspondence ensued, which resulted in the defendant's agent declining to give an undertaking, and expressing his intention of allowing persons to use Market-square for public shows:—Held, that, as the defendant contended that he had the right to do the thing complained of, and had refused to give an undertaking, the inference was that there would be a repetition of the nuisance; and that therefore the plaintiffs were justified in bringing the action, and were entitled to an injunction. Phillips v. Thomas, 62 L. T. 793.

Delivery up of Documents.]—Principles on which courts of equity proceed, in ordering the delivery up of instruments on which actions may be brought. Cooper v. Joel, 27 Beav. 313; 1 De G. F. & J. 240; 1 L. T. 351.

A written guarantee was given for moneys payable by instalments; though invalid, there was no invalidity on the face of it. In an action for the first instalment the plaintiff was nonprossed:—Held, that, although there was a legal defence, the instrument ought to be cancelled, on the ground that future actions were contemplated, and that the future defence might fail from the loss of evidence. Ib. And see specific titles.

A. PLACE OF BUSINESS.

Principal Office.]—A railway company, by an act incorporating the company, was to have two termini, one at Bristol, the other at Paddington: two general half-yearly meetings were to be held, one at Bristol, the other at Paddington: an equal number of directors was to be chosen from the residents near each place. All the general business was transacted at Paddington, where the secretary resided, and where orders were issued: —Held, that Paddington was the only principal office of the company, within the Railways Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 138. Garton v. G. W. Ry., El. Bl. & El. 837; 27 L. J., Q. B. 375; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1036; 6 W. R. 677.

Where Business carried on.]—A railway company carries on its business, within the meaning of s. 60 of the County Courts Act, 1846, only at the principal station where the general superintendence of the whole concern is centred, and not at any station, however large, where the local management of any portions of the line is conducted, subject to the supervision of the general manager at the principal station. Brown v. L. & N. W. Ry., 32 L. J., Q. B. 318; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 234; 8 L. T. 695; 11 W. R. 884. S. P., Shiels v. G. N. Ry., 4 B. & S. 326; 30 L. J., Q. B. 331; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 631; 4 L. T. 479; 9 W. R. 739.

See Minor v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 C. B. (N.S.) 325; 26 L. J., C. P. 39; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1168; 5 W. R. 122.

The South Eastern Railway Company has a station in Cannon street, City, where a considerable portion of its business is transacted. Their principal station, where the meetings of the directors are held and the general and substantial business of the company is conducted, is without the city:—Held, that the company does not carry on business within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, within the meaning of s. 12 of the mayor's court Extension Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii). Le Tailleur v. S. E. Ry., 3 C. P. D. 18.

The place where a railway company carries on its business within s. 12 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, is where the general superintendence and management of the business take place. Rogers v. L., C. & D. Ry., 26 W. R. 192.

When, therefore, it appeared that a railway company had a chief office, which was also a terminal station, in London, but that its business was managed at Victoria station, which was not within the city :—Held, that the company carried on its business at Victoria station and not within the city. Ib.

B. POWERS AND DUTIES IN CONSTRUCTING AND WORKING.

1. GENERALLY.

Construction of Acts.]—Railway acts are to be construed strictly against the parties obtaining them, but liberally in favour of the public. Parker v. G. W. Ry., 7 Scott (N.R.) 835 ; 7 Man. & G. 253 ; 3 Railw. Cas. 563 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 105.

Enabling or Compulsory Powers.] — Acts authorising companies to make railways are regarded as but enabling statutes which give powers, but do not render compulsory or obligatory the exercise of those powers. Scottish North Eastern Ry. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. 382 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 607.

A railway extension act enacted, that it shall be lawful for the company to make a branch railway, "and, if they think fit," the diverging lines shewn on the plans, from the branch railway to various collieries, and also to widen and enlarge the railway. The company was empowered to let on lease the diverging lines, either before or after the construction, to the owners of the collieries :—Held, that the statute did not cast upon the company the duty to make the branch railway, and therefore a mandamus would not lie. G. W. Ry. v. Reg., 1 El. & Bl. 874 ; 16 Jur. 675 ; 1 W. R. 358, n.—Ex. Ch.

Where a railway company were directed by a private act passed in 1845 that they "should, and they were thereby required," to go to parliament in the next session for an act to make a line, and during next session an act was passed in consequence of that provision, which contained the words : "and it shall and may be lawful for the company," &c., with reference to the making of this line :—Held, that these latter words did not repeal the compulsory provisions of the act of 1845, and must therefore be construed as obligatory. G. W. Ry. v. Reg., 2 W. R. 54—Ex. Ch.

—— Duty to maintain Railway — Line destroyed by Mining.]—Where an act of parliament authorises but does not compel a railway company to take lands compulsorily and to construct and maintain a railway, and the company has taken the lands and made the railway, there is no obligation thereby imposed upon the company to continue working the railway. Hence, where a railway was let down by the owner of the subjacent minerals excavating the same, and the railway company refused to reinstate the railway, the court refused to grant a mandamus to compel them to reinstate it. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 62 L. J., Q. B. 572 ; 9 R. 1 ; 69 L. T. 572—C. A.

Part of Undertaking only.]—Where a railway company has undertaken to complete a line, or any series of lines, it is bound to complete the whole line or series of lines, and is not, without parliamentary authority, at liberty to abandon any portion of its undertaking. Graham v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 12 Beav. 460.

Existing contracts for making part of the line are no answer to an application to prevent a railway company from making a portion of the line with an intention of completing less than the whole. Ib.

A railway company authorised to make a line of fifty-six miles, resolved on making only four miles of it, and to abandon the rest :—Held, that such a resolution was illegal, both as against the landowners on the line and the shareholders in the company. Cohen v. Wilkinson, 12 Beav. 125 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 378 ; 13 Jur. 641 ; 5 Railw. Cas. 741. See S. C. on appeal, infra.

A railway company in 1846 obtained an act, which recited that it would be of local and public advantage if a line of railway was formed according to the plans and sections deposited as required by the practice of parliament, and referred to in the statutes, and that the company was willing to make it, and enacted that "it shall be lawful for them" to make it, and gave the company compulsory powers for purchasing lands ; and if it abandoned the line, or any part of it, the land was to vest in the owners of the land adjoining. By a subsequent act in 1849, the company was authorised to make a deviation line, and the time for making the railway and for the exercise of the compulsory powers was extended. The company had, in the exercise of the compulsory powers, taken the land, and opened part of the line :—Held, first, that the substituted portion of the line was to be considered as if it had been included in the act of 1846. York and North Midland Ry. v. Reg., 7 Railw. Cas. 459 ; 1 El. & Bl. 858 ; 1 C. L. R. 119 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 225 ; 17 Jur. 630 ; 1 W. R. 358—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the statutes did not cast upon the company, either by express words, or by implication, the duty to make the railway. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that there was no contract between the landowners and the company which could be enforced by mandamus (overruling Reg. v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., infra). Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the company, having exercised some of their powers, and made part of their line, was not bound to make the whole. Ib.

A company having obtained an act of parliament for making a railway on representation that it will be for the public benefit, with power to take lands along the proposed line, is bound from the time when such act receives the royal assent to execute the work. Reg. v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 266 ; 1 El. & Bl. 228 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; 17 Jur. 62 ; 1 W. R. 35.

The court will enforce performance by mandamus at the instance of one of the adjoining landowners. Ib.

The powers contained in railway acts are given only in contemplation of the supposed public good by completion of the whole work, and the court will interfere when it sees that the whole undertaking cannot be completed. Cohen v. Wilkinson, 1 Macn. & G. 481 ; 1 H. & Tw. 554 ; 5 Railw. Cas. 758 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 378 ; 14 Jur. 535.

A railway is not like a partnership for general trading purposes, in which one portion of the business may be abandoned, but it is a partnership for a public purpose for effecting a work which it is a duty to complete. The obligation to complete the work is co-extensive with the authority to make it. Ib.

It appeared very probable that at the time of filing the bill, a company, which were authorised to make 150 miles of railway, intended to complete twenty-three miles only, and then abandon the rest. Upon a motion to restrain them, it appeared that the company had since abandoned the whole. The court was of opinion that if the case had remained as it was at the time of the filing of the bill, the plaintiff would have been entitled to the injunction; but refused it, on the ground of the alteration in the existing circumstances, and gave no costs. Logan v. Courtown (Earl), 3 Beav. 22; 20 L. J., Ch. 347.

Where a railway company has formed a portion of the line, but is unable to complete the whole, the court exercises a discretion in granting an injunction, the effect of which will be to prevent that portion being made effective and beneficial to the public and profitable to the shareholders. Hodgson v. Powis (Earl), 12 Beav. 529; 19 L. J., Ch. 356; 14 Jur. 906. See S. C. on appeal, infra.

A series of acts had in the same year been obtained by the same parties for the construction of three different railways, all forming part of one system, but not joining each other at any point, and with different amounts of capital stock specifically allotted to each undertaking. Two years afterwards the whole of the undertakings were leased to another company, under an act of parliament, the management being entrusted to a joint committee. Only one of the three lines was completed, the others being abandoned:—Held, that no injunction ought to be granted on an interlocutory application to restrain the amalgamated companies from making calls, or extending the works which they had already completed, and an injunction which had been granted was dissolved. Hodgson v. Powis (Earl), 1 De G. M. & G. 6; 21 L. J., Ch. 17; 15 Jur. 1022.

—— Parties.]—On an application by an individual shareholder, on behalf of himself and the other shareholders, for an injunction to restrain the construction of part only of the line, the court refused to interfere, on the ground of the acquiescence of the plaintiff, and also that the other shareholders had for eighteen months previously to filing the bill known, or had the means of knowing, the acts complained of. Graham v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 2 Macn. & G. 147; 2 H. & Tw. 450; 20 L. J., Ch. 445; 14 Jur. 494.

A bill was filed by a shareholder on behalf, &c., to prevent the directors making a part only of the railway, abandoning the rest, and for an indemnity. There were several classes of shareholders:—Held, that it was not necessary that the several classes should be severally and separately represented on the record. Dumvile v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 12 Beav. 444.

A shareholder in a line of railway projected by A., filed a bill on behalf of himself, &c., against the members of the provisional committee, alleging that they had abandoned the line in favour of one projected by B., and alleging misconduct, &c., and praying an account, a receiver, and an injunction. Demurrer for want of equity and for want of parties, overruled without prejudice, and costs, with consent of all, reserved. Wilson v. Stanhope, 4 Railw. Cas. 251.

User for what Purposes.]—Action by a reversioner against a company for entering and making a railway on his land. Plea, that, before the reversion of the plaintiff, the dean and chapter of Durham were seised in fee, and by deed between them and the plaintiff, demised to the plaintiff the land for a term, "excepting and reserving the mines under the same, with power to dig, win and carry away the mines, with free ingress, egress and regress, way-leave and passage to and from the same, or to or from any other mines, lands and grounds, on foot and on horseback, and with carts and all manner of carriages, and also all necessary and convenient passages, conveniences, privileges and powers whatsoever, for the purposes aforesaid, and particularly of laying, making and granting waggonways in and over the premises, or any part thereof." The defendant justified making the railway as the servant of the dean and chapter, and by their authority. On the trial, it appeared that the company had made a double line of railway on the plaintiff's land, under a deed executed by the dean and chapter, and authorising the company to make such a railway for the conveyance of passengers, goods, coals, wares and merchandise. The railway was constructed for the purpose of conveying general goods and passengers, as well as coals, but had not been actually so used, and the railway was not more than was necessary for the carriage of coals likely to be sent along it from the country with which it communicated:—Held, if the railway was such a railway as the company, at the time when it was made, might lawfully make for the purposes for which, when made, they might lawfully use it, the plaintiff, as reversioner, had no ground of complaint by reason of the intention of the company also to use the railway for other purposes for which they had no right to use it. Durham and Sunderland Ry. v. Walker, 2 G. & D. 326; 3 Railw. Cas. 36; 2 Q. B. 940; 11 L. J., Ex. 440.

What Persons Empowered.]—By an act for making a canal, the "owners or proprietors of any mines of coals" within certain parishes were empowered to make any railways or roads to convey their coals to the canal over the lands or grounds of any person or persons, paying or tendering satisfaction for the damage thereby occasioned:—Held, that this power was not limited to persons who were proprietors at the time of the passing of the act or of the making of the canal, but extended to other persons who had become so since, and that such owners or proprietors were empowered to make railroads to be traversed by locomotive engines. Bishop v. North, 11 M. & W. 418; 3 Railw. Cas. 459; 12 L. J., Ex. 362.

Restraining User of Railroad.]—There is no equity to restrain by injunction the owners of a railroad made over the plaintiff's land from using the railroad after it had been completed, or from interrupting the plaintiff's workmen in removing it, and restoring the land to its original state, although the possession of the land for the purpose of constructing the railroad may have been obtained from a tenant of the plaintiff by means of circumvention and fraud. Deere v. Guest, 1 Myl. & Cr. 516; 6 L. J., Ch. 69.

The court will restrain one tenant in common from the wilful destruction of the common property; but where a railroad company had obtained a lease from five out of six tenants in common, and had, contrary to the wishes of the remaining tenant in common, constructed a railroad on the property, which, at law, had been held to be an ouster, the court refused to interfere by injunction to prevent the dissenting tenant in common removing the rails, &c., though the rent agreed to be paid by the company was three times the former rent. Durham and Sunderland Ry. v. Wawn, 3 Beav. 119 ; 2 Railw. Cas. 395 ; 4 Jur. 764.

Mandatory injunction in effect compelling a railway company to pull down walls which it had built in order to prevent another railway company from crossing its line. Great North of England Ry. v. Clarence Ry., 1 Colly. 507 ; 3 Railw. Cas. 605.

Liability for Constables' Wages.]—A railway act contained a provision for the appointment of constables during the construction of the railway and works, to be paid by the company :—Held, that the liability of the company for the wages did not cease with the opening of the line, but continued so long as workmen were employed in completing any of the works. North British Ry. v. Horne, 5 Railw. Cas. 231.

Statutory Powers—Expiration of Period for Completion of Works.]—Sect. 16 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, empowers a railway company, subject to the provisions and restrictions of the special act, to execute various works, and from time to time to alter, repair, or discontinue the before-mentioned works and substitute others in their stead :—Held, that the powers of this last clause were not subject to a restriction in the special act as to the time for completing the railway. Emsley v. North-Eastern Ry., 65 L. J., Ch. 385 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 418 ; 74 L. T. 113 ; 60 J. P. 182—C. A.

To Stop up Streets.]—In 1864, a railway company was empowered by an act to extend its line into London, and to make a station there. The act referred to plans and sections as being already deposited. The plans and sections shewed Sun street as crossed by an arch. The Railways Clauses Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20 (incorporated with the special act), provides, s. 13, that where it is intended to carry a railway on an arch as marked on the plan or section the same shall be made accordingly. The special act of 1864 gave the company power to stop up streets within an area (embracing Sun street) described as the site of the intended station. In 1870, the company obtained an act empowering it to change the level and pass under Sun street by a tunnel :—Held, that there was nothing in the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 13, to bind the company to cross the street by an arch as described in the deposited plans and sections (in the event of its not doing so by a tunnel, under the special act of 1870), so as to interfere with its power of stopping up the street altogether under the clause of its act of 1864, which enabled the company so to deal with streets within the prescribed area. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., L. R. 6 H. L. 367 ; 22 W. R. 281.

A railway company was by its special act empowered to stop up certain streets and passages in the metropolis, including L. C., and to appropriate and use such streets and passages, or parts so stopped up for the purpose of the railway and works, and they were authorised to grant leases of superfluous lands. The company erected a station at the north end of L. C., and thereby completely stopped it up as a thoroughfare, and they purchased all the houses along each side of the street, but did not expressly purchase or pay for, or take any conveyance of the soil of the street itself ; nevertheless, they treated the whole of the space formerly occupied by the street as well as by the houses on each side of it (which they had pulled down) as vested in them, and they surrounded it with a hoarding, stopping up the south end of the street, and leased a plot of land, comprising the ground at the south end of the street, to the defendants for building purposes. Builders, occupying premises in the street running at right angles to L. C., claimed a special right of access to them over the end of L. C. for the purpose of conveying long ladders and poles to their premises, beyond the right of the public in the street as a highway. They filed a bill to restrain the railway company from building so as to interfere with this alleged right, and moved for an injunction :—Held, that the railway company, having stopped up the one end of the street which they required for the purposes of their station, and having purchased all the houses in the street, had a right to stop up and appropriate the rest of the street, and accordingly the motion was refused. Temple v. Flower, 41 L. J., Ch. 604 ; 26 L. T. 657 ; 20 W. R. 587.

The railway company and the attorney-general ought to be parties to such suit. Ib.

Two Modes of Construction.]—Where the legislature has authorised a railway to be made, by means of a tunnel or otherwise, through a town or close to houses or buildings, the railway company is bound, not only to make compensation for any damage which the making of the railway may occasion to adjacent erections, but also, where there may be two modes of constructing their works, to adopt that course which would do the least amount of injury to the neighbouring property. Freehold General Land Investment Co. v. Metropolitan District Ry., 14 L. T. 96.

Must not Act Negligently.]—When a railway company, in executing works authorised by its statutory powers, took insufficient precautions to secure the safety of an adjoining house, the court granted an injunction to restrain the negligent exercise of its powers, and appointed a surveyor to report what was necessary to secure the premises ; and the company having complied with the requisitions of the surveyor, the court granted an inquiry as to damages. Biscoe v. G. E. Ry., L. R. 16 Eq. 636 ; 21 W. R. 902.

A railway company is bound to exercise the power given to it in derogation of individual rights with moderation and discretion and not negligently. Ib.

A railway company, in making a cutting through rock, at a short distance from a private dwelling house, conducted its operations by blasting, and pieces of stone were hurled on to the buildings and into the garden. Injunction granted. Arnold v. Furness Ry., 22 W. R. 613.

A railway company, in the course of its works, caused excavations to be made on its own land, within three feet of the walls of the houses belonging to the plaintiffs, and to a depth of fifteen feet lower than the foundations of such houses. On affidavits that the houses had been undermined, and in danger of falling in, and that the lives of the occupants would not be in safety if the excavations were allowed to proceed, the plaintiffs obtained an injunction ex parte, restraining the company from making further excavations. On affidavits on the part of the company, stating that the excavations had not endangered, and, if proceeded with in the ordinary manner, would not endanger, the houses; and that the giving way of one of the houses was owing to the wall thereof being very old and badly built, and to the taking down of an adjoining building; the court dissolved the injunction, with costs. Warburton v. London and Blackwall Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 558.

Power to Underpin Buildings on Adjoining Lands—Retaining Wall of Railway.]—A railway company had power to underpin or strengthen buildings on lands adjoining their line. They carried their line in a deep cutting close beside a building belonging to the plaintiffs, and having given the required notice that they intended to underpin this building, they made a wall of concrete to support the plaintiff's building, part of the thickness of which was under the plaintiff's building, and part on the company's land, the whole wall forming the retaining wall of the railway cutting:—Held, that the fact that the concrete wall was also the retaining wall of the railway did not make it the less an "underpinning" within the meaning of the act; and therefore that the company had not acted beyond their powers in making the wall on the plaintiff's land. Stevens v. Metropolitan District Ry., 54 L. J., Ch. 737; 29 Ch. D. 60; 52 L. T. 832; 33 W. R. 531—C. A.

Liability for sending Water on adjoining Lands for Protection of Defendants' Premises.]—By reason of an unprecedented rainfall, a quantity of water was accumulated against one of the sides of the defendants' railway embankment, to such an extent as to endanger the embankment, when, in order to protect their embankment, the defendants cut trenches in it, by which the water flowed through, and went ultimately on to the land of the plaintiff, which was on the opposite side of the embankment and at a lower level, and flooded and injured it to a greater extent than it would have done had the trenches not been cut. In an action for damages for such injury, the jury found that the cutting of the trenches was reasonably necessary for the protection of the defendants' property, and that it was not done negligently:—Held, that though the defendants had not brought the water on their land, they had no right to protect their property by transferring the mischief from their own land to that of the plaintiff, and that they were therefore liable. Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 53 L. J., Q. B. 285; 13 Q. B. D. 131; 50 L. T. 472; 32 W. R. 711; 48 J. P. 500—C. A.

A statement of claim alleged that the surface of the defendants' land had been artificially raised by earth placed thereon, and that in consequence rain-water falling on the defendants' land made its way through the defendants' wall into the adjoining house of the plaintiff, and caused substantial damage:—Held, upon demurrer, that the statement of claim disclosed a good cause of action. Hurdman v. N. E. Ry., 47 L. J., C. P. 368; 3 C. P. D. 168; 38 L. T. 339; 26 W. R. 489—C. A.

When, in consequence of the construction of the works of a railway, a constantly-recurring injury arose by floods or heavy rains washing earth on to the plaintiff's property, an injunction was granted as the proper remedy, instead of sending the case to have the damage assessed under the Lands Clauses Act, s. 68. Keates v. Holywell Ry., 28 L. T. 183.

In such a case the court will not grant a mandatory injunction, but will direct the injury to be stopped simpliciter, leaving it to the company to find the means of so doing. Ib.

Fall of Embankment.]—When an injury is alleged to have arisen from the improper construction or maintenance of a railway, the fact of one of its embankments giving way will amount to primâ facie evidence of such insufficiency; and this evidence may become conclusive, in the absence of any proof on the part of the company to rebut it. Great Western Ry. of Canada v. Braid, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 101; 1 N. R. 527; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 339; 8 L. T. 31; 11 W. R. 444.

Nuisances — During Construction.]—In the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, the "powers aforesaid" in s. 32, in exercise of which a railway company may do certain specified acts upon lands of which they have taken temporary possession, are exercisable for the purposes named in that section only, and the words "action for nuisance or other injury," in the same section, include "suit." Fenwick v. East London Ry., 44 L. J., Ch. 602; L. R. 20 Eq. 544; 23 W. R. 901.

Therefore, when a railway was in course of construction at the rear of a shop, and the company took temporary possession of an adjoining piece of land not owned by the owner of the shop, and erected a mortar mill thereon, for the purpose of making mortar to be used in the construction of the railway, that not being one of the purposes named in s. 32:—Held, that an injunction would be granted to restrain the railway company from working the mortar mill so as to be a nuisance to the owner of the shop. Ib.

Held, that the making of mortar was not an act necessary for making the railway within s. 16, for the company might get mortar elsewhere, and it was not an act without which the railway could not be made. Ib.

A railway company has not, by reason of the powers in its special act enabling it to work the line in the way most convenient to itself, any power to commit an act which, if committed by a private person, would constitute a nuisance, and be restrainable by injunction accordingly. Smith v. Midland Ry., 37 L. T. 224; 25 W. R. 861.

The provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, which authorise a railway company to construct and work its line, do not authorise the commission of acts which would, in the case of a private individual, constitute a nuisance. Smith v. Midland Ry., 26 W. R. 10.

—— When Construction completed.]—A railway company purchasing land for the railway acquires an absolute fee-simple, but such fee-simple is acquired solely for the purposes of constructing and using the railway. Norton v. *L. & N. A railway company has no right to erect hoardings to prevent prescriptive rights being acquired for windows looking across the line of Motion for an injunction to restrain the user of a temporary ballast line of railway, laid down for the purposes of the construction of a permanent line, in such a manner as to cause injury to the plaintiff's houses, very considerable damage having already been done to the houses. At the hearing of the motion, it appeared that the ballast line had been wholly removed; the motion was therefore refused, the court reserving the consideration of costs. Shersby v. S. E. Ry., 13 Jur. 689.

In cases of this nature the court will not grant an injunction ex parte. Ib.

A railway company, having, besides the ordinary compulsory powers of taking land, power to purchase by agreement additional lands, not exceeding fifty acres in all, in such places as should be deemed eligible for any of certain specified purposes connected with the undertaking which it should deem requisite, bonâ fide selected and acquired additional lands and used them without negligence for one of the purposes authorised, to wit, as a dock or yard for the reception of cattle travelling upon the line. A nuisance was thereby caused to adjoining occupiers:—Held, that the nuisance, being a necessary consequence of the use of the lands for a purpose expressly authorised by parliament, could not be restrained by injunction. Rex v. Pease (4 B. & Ad. 30), Vaughan v. Taff Vale Ry. (5 H. & N. 679), and Hammersmith Ry. v. Brand (L. R. 4 H. L. 171) followed. Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (6 App. Cas. 193) distinguished. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. Truman, 55 L. J. Ch. 354; 11 App. Cas. 45; 54 L. T. 250; 34 W. R. 657; 50 J. P. 388—H. L. (E.)

Engines—User of.]—By a private act reciting that a proposed railway, between certain termini, and its branches, would be of great public utility, a company was incorporated for the making of such railway, in a line parallel to and in some places within five yards of a highway, from which line no deviation was to be made exceeding 100 yards. A subsequent act authorised the use of locomotive engines on the railway. Upon an indictment for using the engines, whereby horses were frightened, and accidents occasioned on the highway, the alleged nuisance was found by verdict, but it was also found that the engines were of the best construction, and used with due care, and that by reason of these engines the public obtained better and cheaper coal:—Held, that such a restriction of the rights of the public was not unreasonable, and must be presumed to have been contemplated by the legislature, when authorising the use of locomotive engines, without words of qualification. Rex v. Pease, 1 N. & M. 690; 4 B. & Ad. 30; 2 L. J., M. C. 26.

—— Construction of—Smoke.]—A penalty is not incurred under s. 114 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, unless the engine using smoke-emitting fuel is so defectively constructed as to be incapable of consuming it own smoke, though used with proper care; and, consequently, no penalty attaches where the engine, though properly constructed on the principle of consuming its own smoke, is so carelessly used on a railway as to emit instead of consuming its smoke. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Wood, 2 El. & El. 344; 29 L. J., M. C. 29; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 70; 1 L. T. 31; 8 W. R. 24.

—— Inspection of.]—A court of equity will enforce, by injunction, the provision of s. 115, notwithstanding the practice of railway companies has been to rely on each other with respect to the fitness of their respective engines and not to enforce the provision of the act; and notwithstanding also, that, to enforce such right of inspection would occasion great inconvenience to the public traffic, and although it may appear that the provision is sought to be enforced, not from any apprehension of the use of improper engines, but for the purpose of impeding the traffic over their line of a competing company. Midland Ry. v. Ambergate Nottingham and Boston Ry., 10 Hare, 359; 1 W. R. 162.

Locomotive Engine at Station—Noise of Steam—Duty to Screen.]—In an action against the defendants, a railway company, it appeared that the plaintiffs were leaving a station belonging to the defendants in a carriage, when the horse was frightened by the sight and sound of a locomotive engine at the station which was blowing off steam, and the carriage was upset and the plaintiffs injured. It did not appear that the engine was defective, or that it was used in an improper manner, or that the approach to the station was inconvenient, but the jury found that the defendants were guilty of negligence in not screening the railway from the roadway leading to the station, and that such negligence had caused the accident:—Held, that the defendants were not liable, as there was no evidence of any obligation on their part to screen the railway from the road. Simkin v. L. & N. W. Ry., 21 Q. B. D. 453; 59 L. T. 797; 53 J. P. 85—C. A.

Liability of Railway Company for Damage by Sparks.]—A private statute, reciting that a railway for the passage of waggons, engines, and other carriages would facilitate the conveyance of coals and other heavy articles to certain slate quarries, and of slates, copper, and other ores to the seaside, and would otherwise be of great public utility, empowered a company to make and maintain a railway passable for waggons and other carriages, and to erect and set up fire engines or other machines, and to do all other matters and things fit or necessary for the making and using the railway. While one of the company's trains, carrying passengers in accordance with a certificate of the board of trade, and drawn by a steam locomotive engine, was passing along the line, sparks from the engine were emitted and blown towards a haystack, which took fire and was burnt:—Held, that the company had no statutory authority to use locomotive engines, and therefore was liable for the damage, notwithstanding all reasonable precautions had been taken by them to prevent the emission of sparks. Jones v. Festiniog Ry., 9 B. & S. 835; 37 L. J., Q. B. 214; L. R. 3 Q. B. 733; 18 L. T. 902; 17 W. R. 28.

A railway company, authorised by the legislature to use locomotive engines, is not responsible for damage from fire occasioned by sparks emitted from an engine travelling on the railway, provided the company has taken every precaution in its power, and adopted every means which science can suggest to prevent injury from fire, and is not guilty of negligence in the management of the engine. Vaughan v. Taff Vale Ry., 5 H. & N. 679; 29 L. J., Ex. 247; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 899; 2 L. T. 394; 8 W. R. 549—Ex. Ch.

—— Evidence.]—Workmen employed by a railway company, after cutting the grass and trimming the hedges bordering the railway, placed the trimmings in heaps between the hedge and the line, and allowed them to remain there fourteen days during very hot weather, which had continued for some weeks. A fire broke out between the hedge and the rails, and burnt some of the heaps of trimmings and the hedge, and spread to a stubble field beyond, and was thence carried by a high wind across a stubble-field and over a road, and burnt a cottage, which was situated about 200 yards from the place where the fire broke out. There was evidence that an engine belonging to the railway company had passed the spot shortly before the fire was first seen, but no evidence that the engine had emitted any sparks, nor any further evidence that the fire had originated from the engine, nor was there any evidence that the fire began in the heaps of trimmings and not on the parched ground around them:—Held, first, that it being a matter of common knowledge that engines do emit sparks, there was evidence that the fire originated in sparks from the engine that had just passed. Smith v. L. & S. W. Ry., 40 L. J., C. P. 21; L. R. 6 C. P. 14; 23 L. T. 678; 19 W. R. 230—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that there was evidence that the company was negligent in leaving the dry trimmings, and that the trimmings either originated or increased the fire, and caused it to spread to the stubble-field. Ib.

In an action against a railway company for so negligently managing and conducting an engine that the premises of the plaintiff adjoining the line were destroyed by fire emitted from the engine, evidence is admissible for the purpose of shewing that other engines belonging to the company, upon other occasions, in passing along the line, threw sparks or ignited matter to a sufficient distance to reach the premises, without shewing the precise circumstances under which this occurred. Piggot v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 C. B. 229; 15 L. J., C. P. 235; 10 Jur. 571.

The fact of premises being fired by sparks emitted from a passing engine is primâ facie evidence of negligence on the part of the company, rendering it incumbent on it to shew that some precautions had been adopted by the company reasonably calculated to prevent such accident. Ib.

In an action for injury by fire, alleged to have been caused by a locomotive belonging to a railway company, it was proved that the fire broke out shortly after the passing of the engine, and that the engine had none of the appliances which had been long in use to prevent sparks or hot cinders issuing from the chimney or the fire-box, and that there was no other way of accounting for the fire than assuming it to have been caused by a spark or a cinder from the engine. For the company, the evidence of several scientific witnesses was to the effect that the engine was so constructed that it was unnecessary to provide any of the safeguards suggested by the plaintiff's witnesses, and that it was impossible that sparks or cinders could have been thrown out by it so as to cause the damage complained of. In his summing up, the judge, after a recapitulation of the evidence on both sides, left it to the jury to say whether or not there had been negligence on the part of the company, either in using an improperly-constructed engine or in improperly using an engine of the description mentioned by the witnesses of the company:—Held, no misdirection. Fremantle v. L. & N. W. Ry., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 89; 31 L. J., C. P. 12; 9 W. R. 611. S. C., at nisi prius, 2 F. & F. 337.

In an action against a railway company for damage negligently caused by a fire to the plaintiff's premises, alleged to have arisen from sparks emitted from their engines, the negligence alleged being such as practical men stated would impede the engines, and would not be effectual for the object, it was left to the jury to say whether there were any means which the company ought to have adopted; and the jury having found that there had been no negligence on the part of the company, as to using such means, or in managing their engines, a verdict was directed in their favour. Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Ry., 4 F. & F. 1058.

In an action against a canal company for damage caused by the emission of sparks from the engines of a steamboat used by them, evidence being given that there were some mechanical appliances which were used to prevent the emission of sparks, and that there were species of fuel and modes of dealing with the furnaces for that object, which had not been adopted, the question was left to the jury whether there had been a neglect by the company of any practicable precautions which they reasonably ought to have used. Longman v. Grand Junction Canal, 3 F. & F. 736.

In an action against a railway company for carelessly letting sparks fly from their engines so as to set the herbage and pasturage on fire, it is not necessary to prove any specific negligence. Gibson v. S. E. Ry., 1 F. & F. 23.

—— Damages.]—The compensation, in such a case, should be measured, as in the case of an unwilling vendor. Ib.

If the company is negligent it is responsible for the injury that results from their conduct to the owner of the injured property, although they could not have reasonably anticipated that such injury would be caused by it. Smith v. L. & S. W. Ry., supra.

Injunction to Restrain Injuries.]—Where a public company is exceeding its powers, a court of equity cannot refuse to interfere by injunction, notwithstanding that irreparable mischief is not shewn to result from the proceedings of the company. Dun River Navigation Co. v. North Midland Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 135.

Parties injured by the conduct of a railway company, in exceeding the powers conferred upon it by act of parliament, are entitled to the most effectual remedy within the power of a court of equity; and where it appeared that the injury complained of would be remedied by suspending an injunction, an injunction which had been granted was suspended for three weeks. Spencer v. London and Birmingham Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 159.

The plaintiff, a lessee of a wharf and premises, of which the Regent's Canal Company was the proprietor, had covenanted to bear, in common with other lessees, the expense of keeping in repair a private road, called the Commercial road, leading from his premises to a public road. The London and Birmingham Railway acts provide that the company shall not take, use, damage, pass along or interfere with the said Commercial road, without the previous consent of the Regent's Canal Company under its common seal. A contractor for the railway works having deposited clay on the road to a quantity injurious to the plaintiff's premises, he filed a bill to restrain the nuisance:—Held, that the canal company was not a necessary party to the suit. Semple v. London and Birmingham Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 480. And see S. C., 2 Jur. 560; 9 Sim. 209.

2. Deviation and Plans.

Construction of Act.]—In putting a construction upon a railway company's act, no regard will be paid to the plans and sections deposited, in pursuance of the standing orders of the houses of parliament, previous to the application for that act, unless they are incorporated therewith. North British Ry. v. Tod, 12 Cl. & F. 722; 4 Railw. Cas. 449; 10 Jur. 975.

Plans and sections of an intended railway deposited in pursuance of the standing orders of the houses of parliament, cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the special act, except so far as they may have been incorporated within its provisions. Beardmer v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 Macn. & G. 112; 1 H. & Tw. 161; 5 Railw. Cas. 728; 18 L. J., Ch. 432; 13 Jur. 327.

Objection by Landowner.]—No proprietor, through whose lands a railway is to pass, is entitled to object that the line prescribed by the act of parliament has been deviated from, before it has reached his land, unless he can shew that the deviation is prejudicial to himself, or is likely to defeat the objects of the act. Lee v. Milner, 2 Y. & Coll. 611.

Agreement to apply for Deviation.]—During the progress of a railroad bill through parliament, the promoters of the bill agree, with an owner of land on the intended line, that if the bill shall pass they will endeavour in the next session to obtain the sanction of parliament to a deviation of the line. Quære, whether such an agreement is legal. Simpson v. Howden (Lord), 3 Myl. & Cr. 97; 1 Railw. Cas. 326. And see 3 Railw. Cas. 294.

Deposit of Plans.]—Where a company has a project extending into two adjacent counties, a landowner in one county is not bound to examine the plans or works of the company to be executed out of the county, or any plans or sections except those deposited with the clerk of the peace of his own county. Bentinck v. Norfolk Estuary Co., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 204.

The depositing with the clerks of the peace the plans and sections of a proposed railway, indicating the works proposed to be effected in constructing the line, gives no authority to the company to carry those works into effect, except so far as they are authorised by the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, or the special act regulating the company. Reg. v. Wycombe Ry., 8 B. & S. 259; 36 L. J., Q. B. 121; L. R. 2 Q. B. 310; 15 L. T. 610; 15 W. R. 489.

The lines and works of a railway are sufficiently shewn on the plans deposited by a black line, with dotted lines on each side, to mark the limits of deviation. Weld v. L. & S. W. Ry., 32 Beav. 340; 33 L. J., Ch. 142; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 510; 8 L. T. 13; 11 W. R. 448.

Where the plans deposited by a railway company delineated a field, shewing the line, the limits of deviation, and the boundaries on one side of those limits, but leaving the boundaries on the other side undefined, the court restrained the company from taking the land beyond the limits of deviation on the undefined side, though the name of the owner of the whole field was described in the book of reference. Wrigley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 4 Giff. 352; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 710; 8 L. T. 267.

—— Necessity of Works.]—To a count alleging that the plaintiff was entitled to support for his house from an adjoining house, and that a railway company wrongfully deprived the plaintiff of the support of the adjoining house, by negligently and improperly pulling down the same, without taking any care to secure the house against the consequence of such pulling down, the company pleaded (except as to so much of the count as charged them with having negligently and improperly pulled down the adjoining house) that the same was delineated in the plans, and described in the books of reference deposited, as in their act mentioned; and that because it was necessary in order to make the railway authorised by that act they pulled down the house:—Held, that the plea was good. Knapp v. L. C. & D. Ry., 2 H. & C. 212; 32 L. J., Ex. 236; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 671; 8 L. T. 541; 10 W. R. 890.

Land within the limits of deviation in the deposited plans and sections, but not actually taken in the first instance by the company, may be taken for the purposes of making a siding, so as to give local traffic an ingress on to the main line. Dylar's Estate, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 975.

Under s. 16, a railway company, empowered by a special act, incorporating the provisions of the general act, to construct "a railway and works" within certain limits as to space and time, may within such limits, without the consent of the owner, take the land for the purpose of constructing the various works mentioned in s. 16, although such works are not necessary, but only convenient for the purposes of the line. Sadd v. Maldon, Witham, and Braintree Ry., 6 Railw. Cas. 779; 6 Ex. 143; 20 L. J., Ex. 102.

Sect. 14 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, is to be construed as referable to the line of railway alone, whereas s. 16 comprehends all collateral works, therein called accommodation works, which may become necessary in consequence of the formation of the railway itself. Beardmer v. L. & N. W. Ry., supra.

A railway company, authorised by its special act to take such of the lands shewn and described in the deposited plans and books of reference as might be required for the purposes mentioned in the special act, has power to take lands outside the limits of deviation, if such lands are reasonably required for the construction of the line of railway within the limits of deviation, provided such lands have been properly shewn and described in the deposited plans and books of reference. Wrigley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. (4 Giff. 352) explained. Dowling v. Pontypool, &c. Ry. (L. R. 18 Eq. 714) approved.

Finch v. L. & S. W. Ry., 59 L. J., Ch. 458 ; 44 Ch. D. 330 ; 62 L. T. 881 ; 38 W. R. 513—C. A.

Deviation—What is.]—Deviation, in its ordinary and natural sense and as used in acts of parliament, means shifting the work in its integrity from one site to another which may be deemed more suitable. It does not imply a right not only to alter the situation of the work but in doing so to dispense with a half or two-thirds of it. Herron v. Rathmines Commissioners, [1892] A. C. 498 ; 67 L. T. 658—H. L. (Ir.)

Lateral and Vertical Deviation.] — Lateral deviation means horizontal movement in any direction in the plane of the map ; vertical deviation means movement up or down in the plane of the sections—per Fitzgibbon, L.J. Herron v. Rathmines Commissioners, 27 L. R., Ir. 179.

Nature and Amount of Deviation.]—A vertical deviation of the level of a railway not exceeding five feet, calculated with reference to the datum line shewn on the plans and sections deposited in pursuance of the standing orders of the houses of parliament, is within the powers of deviation conferred by s. 11, although the deviation may exceed five feet, calculated with reference to the surface line shewn on the plans and sections. North British Ry. v. Tod, 12 Cl. & F. 722 ; 4 Railw. Cas. 449 ; 10 Jur. 975.

The expression "deviation" in s. 15, is used with reference to the medium filum of the railway as laid down in the parliamentary plans. Doe d. Armistead v. North Staffordshire Ry., 16 Q. B. 526 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 249 ; 15 Jur. 944.

A railway act enacted, that the lands to be taken for the line of the railway should not exceed twenty-two yards in breadth, except where a greater breadth should be necessary for waiting-places, embankments, cuttings, &c. ; and a section provided, that the company, in making the railway and other works, should not deviate from the line delineated on the plan deposited with the clerk of the peace in pursuance of the act, with or without consent of the owners or occupiers of the lands, more than 100 yards, and that no deviation should extend into the lands or property of any person not mentioned in the book of reference of the plan, unless omitted by mistake ; and the company was empowered to make such deviations in the section as might be necessary in consequence thereof :—Held, that this section only prohibited the company from making the substituted line of the railway itself, at a greater distance than 100 yards from the line delineated in the plan ; but that it did not prevent them from taking lands at a greater distance from it than the 100 yards, for the purpose of embankments, cuttings, &c. ; the intention of the act being to give the company the same incidental powers with respect to the deviated line, as they had with respect to the original line :—Held, also, that a party, whose lands were so taken, could not object that the company had taken, for the same purpose, lands of another person not mentioned in the book of reference. Doe d. Payne v. Bristol and Exeter Ry., 6 M. & W. 329 ; 2 Railw. Cas. 75 ; 9 L. J., Ex. 232.

In the case of a tunnel marked on the deposited plans, there can be no deviation therefrom without the consent required by s. 13 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, or under the special powers of the special act. Little v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Ry., 12 C. B. 753 ; 7 Railw. Cas. 280 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 39 ; 17 Jur. 209 ; 1 W. R. 81.

A railway company having entered on land which they had purchased, and having proceeded to make their line in a manner exceeding their powers of vertical deviation, on a motion for an injunction, an action was directed to be brought immediately, and the motion to stand over. Holyoake v. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry., 5 Railw. Cas. 421.

The plaintiff must satisfy the court that he has sustained substantial damage from the violation of a legal right to entitle him to an injunction. Ib.

A railway company was building an embankment more than five feet above the level, according to ss. 11 and 12 of the Railway Clauses Act. It had not given the notice required by s. 12, but had obtained the consent required by s. 11. The court put it on terms to take the opinion of the board of trade, submitting to such order as this court should thereafter make, otherwise an injunction would go to restrain the company from proceeding with the embankment. Pearce v. Wycombe Ry., 1 Drew. 244 ; 17 Jur. 660.

Where the deposited plans and sections specify the span and height of a bridge by which a railway is to be carried over a turnpike road, the company will not, in the construction of the bridge, be allowed to deviate from the plans and sections. Att.-Gen. v. Tewkesbury and Great Malvern Ry., 1 De G. J. & S. 423 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 482 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 951 ; 8 L. T. 682.

There is a presumption of intention that the plans and sections referred to in an act conferring powers over the property of individuals should be adhered to. Ware v. Regent's Canal Co., 3 De G. & J. 212 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 25 ; 7 W. R. 67.

A canal company being desirous to enlarge one of their reservoirs, in order to obtain an act of parliament for that purpose, gave the usual parliamentary notices, and deposited with the clerk of the peace certain plans and sections. The plans shewed the lines, and where the enlargement was to take place, and also the proposed limits of lateral deviation, and the sections referring to the plans shewed the levels. The company completed the reservoir, but deviated from the deposited plans and sections. On a bill filed by W., alleging that his lands were flooded in consequence of such deviation, to restrain the company from using the reservoir as constructed : —Held, that the sections and plans deposited with the clerk of the peace were incorporated in and formed part of the act of parliament of the company, and, therefore, if any actual damage had resulted to W., he would have been entitled to an injunction. Ib.

Where a special railway act provided that the line should be made according to the levels shewn on the deposited plans, and that it should be lawful for the company to carry the line across a specified street on the level of the street :—Held, that the latter provision was not obligatory, and did not prevent the company from carrying its line across the street according to the provisions of the general act. Dover Harbour (Wardens) v. L. C. & D. Ry., 3 De G. F. & J. 559 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 474 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 453 ; 4 L. T. 387 ; 9 W. R. 523.

Where a railway company, keeping within its powers of deviation, deviates from the deposited plans in such a way as to arouse an apprehension, which was not aroused by the deposited plans, that great inconvenience and risk will be caused to the public, yet it will not be restrained by injunction if the information or bill against them does not charge them with capriciously using its powers of deviation, and if no evidence is given to shew that, granting the deviation, the line could be constructed in such a way as to allow the aroused apprehension. Att.-Gen. v. G. W. Ry., 14 W. R. 726.

Time for.]—Time for making deviations from the adopted line being extended for another two years from the 4th July, 1838, an injunction was refused. Dublin Navigation Co. v. North Midland Ry., 2 Jur. 1076.

"Town."]—At a trial of an issue the question was whether a railway at a particular place passed through a town within the meaning of s. 11 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, or not. The judge merely told the jury that the word "town" in the act was to be understood in its ordinary sense:—Held, that this was a misdirection, and that the judge should have given the jury such a definition as would have been a guide to enable them to decide the particular question before them. "Town" in s. 11 means the space on which the dwelling-houses are collected so near to each other that they may be said to be continuous. An open space occupied as a mere accessory to the convenience of dwelling-houses would also be in the town. Elliott v. South Devon Ry., 5 Railw. Cas. 500; 2 Ex. 725; 17 L. J., Ex. 262. 3. In Respect of Particular Works.

a. Stations.

Power to take Land for Building.]—Under the words "railway and works," in s. 3 of the Railways Clauses Act, a railway company has a right, by the compulsory powers of their act, to take a piece of land for the purpose of building a station. Cother v. Midland Ry., 2 Ph. 469; 5 Railw. Cas. 187; 17 L. J., Ch. 235.

By a clause in a railway act, after reciting that plans and sections of the widenings, enlargements and other works proposed to be made, describing the lands intended to be taken or used for the purposes of such widenings and enlargements, and for the stations, works and conveniences to be connected therewith, and also books of reference, had been deposited with the clerks of the peace, the company was empowered to "widen, alter, enlarge and complete their railway and other works, in, upon or over the lands delineated on the plans and described in the books of reference, and to enter upon, take and use such of the lands described upon the plans and in the books of reference, as might be necessary for such purposes, and to purchase and acquire any easement, right or limited interest upon, over, through or in any of the lands":—Held, that this authorised the building of a station upon part of the lands described, and not only such works as were necessary for the mere widening of the railway, the station being necessary for the public convenience. London and Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse Board of Works, 3 Kay & J. 123; 26 L. J., Ch. 164; 5 W. R. 64.

"First-Class Station."]—On the purchase of land by a railway company in 1838, the company covenanted with the landowners that a piece of the land purchased should for ever thereafter be used as a first-class station. The station was built, and the railway was completed in 1842; the railway company was afterwards made part of a company with a much greater length of railway. In 1869 the landowner filed a bill to compel the company to build a larger station and to stop all trains at that station:—Held, that as the existing station had not been objected to, and had remained for many years, and as the passengers were not numerous, the court would not compel a larger station to be built; but that as many trains as stopped at any other station between the termini of the original railway, excepting mail, express and special trains, must stop at this station. Hood v. North-Eastern Ry., L. R. 5 Ch. 525; 23 L. T. 206; 18 W. R. 473.

"Public" Station.]—Where by a clause in a railway act it was provided that "it should not be lawful for the railway company to make or establish any public station, yards, wharves, waiting, loading or unloading places, warehouses or other buildings and conveniences for the depositing, receiving, loading or keeping any passengers or cattle, or any goods, articles, matters or things, upon the estate of R. G. without his consent":—Held, upon demurrer, that the word public did not necessarily apply to every building, and that if it did, every convenience connected with the railway must, upon the question of demurrer, be considered as public, and therefore within the restriction of the clause. Gordon v. Cheltenham Ry., 5 Beav. 229; 2 Railw. Cas. 800.

At Particular Place.]—A contract entered into by a railway company with a landowner to build a railway station at a particular spot, nothing being said as to the user of the station, or the degree of convenience and accommodation to be afforded by it, is too vague and indefinite to be enforced by decree for specific performance; but the court will give damages for the breach of such contract, and in assessing those damages will give the landowner the benefit of all such presumptions as, according to the rules of law, are made against wrongdoers. Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 503; L. R. 9 Ch. 279; 30 L. T. 147; 22 W. R. 380.

The intention of Eton College to exclude the Great Western Railway Company from having a station within three miles of Eton being admitted or apparent, and they having procured to be introduced into the act clauses prohibiting the company from forming, making or laying down a railway or tram or other road to the south of the line, approaching within three miles of the college, and for making or constructing a depôt, station, or yard, &c., within three miles of the college, without the consent of the college, and the company having set down and taken up passengers without such consent within the prohibited space:—Held, that the words did not restrain it from so doing, the company being entitled to do all the act does not upon a strict construction restrain it from. Injunction refused.

Eton College v. G. W. Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 200; 3 Jur. 163.

"No Goods or Cattle Station at."]—In an action the plaintiff asked for an injunction to compel the defendants to pull down a goods station and cattle sheds which they had erected 140 yards from Bala Station, although it was provided by their private act "that at that station there should be no goods or cattle station." The plaintiff had not objected to the buildings till they were nearly completed, owing to his being abroad at the time, and ignorant of their erection till his return. The defendants contended that the buildings in question had not been erected "at" the station, as they were 140 yards off; that if they had been, it was for the public convenience they should be there, and that the plaintiff was precluded by acquiescence from insisting on his claim:—Held, that the erections were a breach of the provisions of the act, and that the plaintiff was entitled to his injunction. Price v. Bala and Festiniog Ry., 50 L. T. 787.

By Lessees of Covenantors.]—A railway company purchased lands from C., and agreed to erect a station at A., and that the trains should stop there for passengers and luggage. They entered into possession of the lands before the conveyance was executed, but did not erect a station, and C. served a writ of ejectment upon them. The company then filed their bill against C. praying for the specific performance of the contract. A decree was made ordering specific performance, and that C. should execute a proper conveyance of the lands, and that such conveyance should contain a covenant by the company to erect the station, and that trains should stop there for passengers and luggage. This conveyance was duly executed. Under acts of parliament of 1867 and 1873, confirming agreements between the company and the S. W. company, the latter company were empowered to take a lease for 1,000 years of the S. railway, and to work it, and were, during such lease, to be liable to all duties and obligations to which the S. company, if the acts had not been passed, would be subject and liable. No station was erected. On bill filed by C. against both companies:—Held, that though the S. W. company were necessary parties to the suit, no case whatever had been made out against them, inasmuch as they were not bound either in law or in equity by the covenant entered into by the S. company with C. to erect a station, but that they would be bound, when the station was made, to stop their trains there. Churchill v. Salisbury and Dorset Ry., 23 W. R. 894. Varying 32 L. T. 216.

Condition of.]—See CARRIERS.

b. Sidings.

Taking Land for.]—Land within the limits of deviation in the deposited plans and sections, but not actually taken in the first instance by the company, may be taken for the purposes of making a siding, so as to give local traffic an ingress on to the main line. Dylar's Estate, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 975.

Construction of Act—Public Use.]—A railway act provided "that it should not be lawful for the company to make or establish any public station, yards, wharves, waiting, loading or unloading places, warehouses or other buildings and conveniences for the depositing, receiving, loading or keeping any passengers or cattle, or any goods, articles, matters or things upon the estate of G., without his consent":—Held, that the word "public" did not necessarily override the whole sentence, and that, if it did, then that, from the subsequent clauses, every convenience connected with the railway must be considered as for the public use. Gordon v. Cheltenham and Great Western Union Ry., 5 Beav. 229; 2 Railw. Cas. 800.

Agreement with Landowner—Specific Performance.]—A railway company agreed with a landowner, through whose estate the railway would pass, to construct and maintain a siding connected with their railway at B., together with all necessary approaches thereto for public use, for the reception and delivery of goods:—Held, that specific performance could be decreed of the agreement to construct the siding and approaches without decreeing the company to maintain them when made. Lytton v. G. N. Ry., 2 Kay & J. 394; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 4 W. R. 441.

Held, also, that the agreement did not bind the company to erect sheds, or to keep one of their servants in attendance at the siding; but that it obliged the company to construct a proper siding, with approaches and a wharf or raised platform for the loading or unloading of goods. Ib.

—— Though Offer of Money Payment.]—A railway company having contracted to make a siding for the plaintiff on his land, offered a money payment instead, but specific performance of the agreement was decreed. Greene v. West Cheshire Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 17; L. R. 13 Eq. 44; 25 L. T. 409; 20 W. R. 54.

Undertaking to Replace—Further Expenditure—Indemnity.]—A railway company, as compensation for injury to the plaintiff's mill by the construction of their railway, agreed to lay down a siding from their line to the mill. The siding was made, but the plaintiff not having used it, the railway company removed the points, undertaking by a letter of the 2nd March, 1871, to replace them on receiving sufficient notice of an intention to use the siding. In November, 1879, the siding not having been used, the railway company removed the rails, and the plaintiff having required them to be replaced, its secretary, on the 27th November, 1879, wrote to the plaintiff that the rails had been removed under misapprehension, and would be replaced at once, or that the directors would undertake to do so at any time when called on. By regulations of the board of trade, issued in July, 1879, railway companies were required to provide signals, &c., on the opening of any siding or branch line which had not been in use before that time. On the 17th September, 1880, the plaintiff required the railway company to replace the siding. On the 19th of October the secretary replied, requiring the plaintiff to indemnify the directors against the expenses occasioned by the regulations of the board, in consequence of the non-user of the siding, if he required it to be replaced. The plaintiff's solicitors refused, and having again required the siding to be replaced, on the 5th of January, 1881, wrote to the secretary that unless in that month the plaintiff should be fully compensated for the injury and expense sustained by him from the construction of the railway, proceedings would be taken to recover full compensation. The secretary replied on the 19th of January, denying the liability of the company in respect of a right never used, and on which the plaintiff apparently placed no value. In an action for specific performance of the agreement to replace the siding:—Held, first, that the non-user of the siding, and the expenses caused thereby, under the regulations of the board of trade, were not a defence to the action, and that the company was not entitled to any indemnity against those expenses. Todd v. Midland Great Western Ry., 9 L. R., Ir. 85.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree to replace the siding and keep it in working order, the court considering damages an insufficient remedy. Ib.

Customers' Siding—Cutting off Connection—Order to Restore.]—Where a railway company had wrongfully taken up and removed the rails forming a connection between their line and a siding belonging to the applicant, the company was ordered at their own expense forthwith to restore the communication. Portway v. Colne Valley Ry., 7 Ry. and Can. Traff. Cas. 102.

What is Sufficient Performance.]—When a railway company was bound by its act to make a good and sufficient siding on a specified field of an owner who had opposed the bill:—Held, that the obligation was not broken, though the company took for other purposes so much of the specified field as not to leave any to furnish access from the siding to an adjoining road without passing over the land taken, or out of the specified field. Dowling v. Pontypool, Caerlon and Newport Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 18 Eq. 714.

c. Bridges.

Mandamus to Construct.]—A mandamus will not lie to compel a railway company to construct a bridge in lieu of a level crossing pursuant to an order of the board of trade, where it appears that the company is wholly without funds, and has not the means of providing the money required for that purpose. Bristol and North Somerset Ry., In re, 47 L. J., Q. B. 48; 3 Q. B. D. 10; 37 L. T. 527; 26 W. R. 236.

Under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 46, a railway has the option, when its line of railway crosses a turnpike road or a public highway (except when otherwise provided by the special act), either to carry the road over the railway or the railway over the road. A mandamus to command a company to do one of these two things is therefore defective unless it shews on the face of it circumstances which establish the impossibility of the company exercising this option. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 4 H. L. Cas. 471; 17 Jur. 931. Affirming 17 Q. B. 485; 20 L. J., Q. B. 428.

Bridge is a "Building."]—A railway company bought land from the plaintiff, and in the purchase deed covenanted with him not to erect any building upon it to a greater height than eighteen feet within the distance of eighty feet from certain other property of his. At the time of the conveyance the railway had been carried through the purchased land with two lines of rails on a viaduct thirty-three feet high, part of which was within eighty feet from the protected property. The company afterwards determined to widen its railway, so as to have four lines of rails, and commenced building on the purchased land, for the purpose of widening the viaduct, piers more than eighteen feet high, and standing within eighty feet of the protected property, and between it and the old viaduct:—Held, that the company ought to be restrained from so doing. Lloyd v. L., C. & D. Ry., 2 De G. J. & S. 568; 34 L. J., Ch. 401; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 380; 12 L. T. 363; 13 W. R. 698.

Agreement to Erect binding on Amalgamation.]—A railway company obtained a conveyance, for the purposes of the railway, of land from C.; and in the conveyance the company bound itself to erect and maintain a bridge over the road leading to C.'s property, which was to be, according to the plans, thirty-five feet wide, and leaving a road under it of fifteen feet wide. Afterwards this bridge was made, but the company, some years later, amalgamated with the H. company, and the latter company's act authorised a junction with the former railway, at a point near this bridge. The two companies then agreed as to the mode of effecting the junction; and part of the plan was to widen the arch or bridge over C.'s road, so as to extend the bridge from thirty-five feet to fifty-five feet wide, thereby darkening the road beneath. C. applied for an injunction to restrain the companies from carrying out this plan:—Held, that the first company having, in the first instance, obtained the conveyance from C. on certain conditions as to the width of the bridge, was bound not to depart from those conditions; and the H. company was equally bound, as claiming under the first company; for it was part of the consideration to maintain the bridge of the height and width originally fixed. Edinburgh and Glasgow Ry. v. Campbell, 4 Macq. H. L. 570; 9 L. T. 157.

Construction—Piles or One Span.]—A railway company had power by its act to cross a river, the property of certain persons, by the erection of a viaduct. By a clause to protect the proprietors of the river, it was enacted that between certain points the works incident to the construction of the railway should be made under the direction of the proprietors and according to plans to be submitted and approved by their engineer before commencement of the work. The company required the viaduct to be built on piles driven into the river; the proprietors objected that it should be done by a viaduct of one span or arch:—Held, that the company was not restricted to that mode of construction, but might carry the viaduct according to the terms of its act, without doing any permanent damage to the proprietors of the river. Birmingham Waterworks v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 L. T. 398.

Contract—Reference to Act—Width.]—In a contract between a railway company and a proprietor of land to be crossed by the line of railway, the Railways Clauses Act should be expressly referred to, if the company intends to claim the benefit of its provision. Clarke v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 1 John. & H. 631.

Therefore, where a company contracted "to provide and erect a suitable bridge over a street (marked in a plan referred to in the deed) as then planned and intended"; and the plan shewed that the street was intended to be forty-two feet wide:—Held, in the absence of any reference in the deed to the act, that the company was not at liberty to narrow the street to the dimensions specified in s. 49 (twenty-five feet), but must make a bridge with an arch of the full width of the street (forty-two feet). Ib.

According to Plans and Sections.]—By the plans and sections deposited by a company, it appeared that they intended to carry the railway across a public road by means of a skew bridge. Instead of doing so, the company diverted the road for some distance, and afterwards restored it to its former course by a bridge which crossed the railway at right angles, thus causing two abrupt and dangerous curves. A dispute having arisen between the trustees of the road and the company, the court granted an injunction until further order, restraining the company from proceeding with the works, and directed that in the meanwhile a competent person should inquire and report whether any deviation was necessary, and if so, how it could most conveniently be effected. Att.-Gen. v. Dorset Ry., 3 L. T. 608; 9 W. R. 189.

A railway company with whose act the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, was incorporated, by its deposited plans and sections proposed to build over a turnpike road an arch, of a span of forty-five feet. The company afterwards proposed to the trustees of the road to vary its plans, and to build a bridge of a span of thirty-five feet; but the proposal was rejected. Subsequently the company's agents commenced the erection of a bridge of the lesser span; and thereupon one of the trustees filed an information for an injunction:—Held, that the word "accordingly," in s. 13 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, meant, according to the deposited plans and sections; and that the company was bound to erect the bridge according to the plans which had been deposited. Att.-Gen. v. Tewkesbury and Malvern Ry., 1 De G. J. & S. 423; 32 L. J., Ch. 482; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 682; 8 L. T. 682.

A bridge forming part of the line of railway itself, is an engineering work within s. 14, and the company is by that section debarred from making it otherwise than according to the description in the plan. Ib.

A railway company, before applying for a deviation act, deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county plans and sections of the proposed line, and cross sections, shewing the manner in which roads were to be carried over the line. On one of these sections, No. 3, were delineated the manner in which it was proposed to carry a road at I. over the line by a bridge, and the proposed inclination of the altered line of road. The deviation act, when obtained, incorporated the Railways Clauses Act, and enacted that it should be lawful for the company to construct the bridges for carrying the railway over any roads, or for carrying any roads over the railway, of the heights and spans and in the manner shewn on the sections deposited. The company made the line, and at I. deviated two feet vertically from the level marked on the plans. They carried the road over the line on a bridge of the proposed height and span, but with a different inclination of the altered road. A mandamus having issued, commanding the company to make the bridge and carry the road over it in conformity with cross section, No. 3, and at the rates of inclination delineated thereon as the rates of inclination of the road when altered:—Held, first, that the exhibition of the plans and sections imposed no obligation on the company, except in so far as the plans, &c., were incorporated in the act. Reg. v. Caledonian Ry., 16 Q. B. 19; 20 L. J., Q. B. 147; 15 Jur. 396.

Held, secondly, that nothing in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, rendered the cross sections obligatory on the company. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that if the special act was obligatory (which, semble, it was so far as regarded the height and spans of the bridges), the obligation did not extend to the rates of inclination of the altered road, and that the mandatory part of the writ going in this respect beyond the obligation imposed by law, the writ was bad altogether. Ib.

Where, in consequence of a company raising the level of their railway within the limits of vertical deviation, it became necessary to raise the height of a bridge over which a road was to be carried:—Held, that there was no restriction as to the powers of the company to alter the levels of the approaches to the bridge, provided the land to be affected was included in the plans and sections deposited, or mentioned in the books of reference, and that full satisfaction was made to all parties interested for the damage sustained. Beardmer v. L. & N. W. Ry., 5 Railw. Cas. 728; 1 Mac. & G. 112; 1 Hall & T. 161; 18 L. J., Ch. 432; 13 Jur. 327.

Widening—Obstruction.]—A railway company having formed its line, obtained an act for an extension for three years of their compulsory powers to take land, the preamble stating that it was for the convenience and safety of the public. The company was owner of the soil on both sides of a lane crossed by a bridge, and therefore, like any other owner, owner of the soil of the land, but by a subsequent act the soil of all roads was vested in the district board of works in whose district such roads were situate. After the expiration of the three years the company found it necessary to widen the bridge over the lane, and claimed power to do so notwithstanding that the board of works for the district denied such power, and proceeded to widen the bridge, but only in the same line of abutment, the road itself not being narrowed, but the soil necessarily disturbed to form such addition. The board moved for an injunction to restrain such widening:—Held, that the soil of the road was only vested in the board to promote the public convenience and prevent the incursion of strangers. That the public convenience required the widening of the bridge, and as the only obstruction would occur whilst the works were in progress, and the road would not be ultimately narrowed, it was not a case for the extraordinary interference of the court. Wandsworth Board of Works v. L. & S. W. Ry., 8 Jur. (N.S.) 691; 10 W. R. 814.

Turnpike Road—Injunction—Undertaking.]—Sects. 70 and 71 of a railway act provided for the crossing by the railway of roads, not being turnpike roads. Sect. 72 provided that a turnpike road to be crossed by the railway should be raised or sunk so as to pass over or under the tramway. The railway being proposed to cross the Northam Bridge Road, a turnpike road, in the mode provided for by ss. 70 and 71, the plaintiffs, the proprietors of the road, filed their bill to restrain the railway company from crossing over or using the same, until it should have compleid with s. 72:—Held, that, as the object of the plaintiffs must be to procure for the public using the road a compliance with s. 72 of the act, upon the railway company entering into an undertaking to proceed with and complete a bridge over the road with all possible dispatch, an injunction ought not to be granted during the time which must necessarily elapse in building the bridge. Northam Bridge Proprietors v. London and Southampton Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 653; 9 L. J., Ch. 277. And see S. C. at law, 6 M. & W. 428; 9 L. J., Ex. 165.

—— Agreement.]—By the Railway Clauses Act, if a railway crosses any turnpike-road, then, except where otherwise provided for by the special act, the road is to be carried over the railway or the railway over the road. By its special act a company was authorised to make the railway "in the line and upon the lands delineated in the plans deposited"; and it was authorised to pass a certain turnpike-road on a level, and the deposited plans so represented. The plaintiff agreed to sell to the company a portion of his land adjoining the road, and the agreement recited that it was purchased for the purpose of constructing a railway "according to a certain plan and section thereof deposited," &c.:—Held, that the company, under the acts, had power to make the turnpike-road pass under the railway instead of on a level, and that this right had not been destroyed by the agreement with the plaintiff. Breynton v. L. & N. W. Ry., 10 Beav. 238; 4 Railw. Cas. 553; 2 Coop. C. C. 198; 11 Jur. 28.

Low Level causing Damage.]—By its special act, passed in 1872, a railway company whose line was made in 1857, was authorised to divert a road crossing its line on the level, and to carry it under the line by a bridge, and the soil of the diverted road was to belong to the company. The new road and bridge were to be in accordance with the deposited plans and sections, which shewed a total height from the road to the rails on the bridge of sixteen feet three inches, but did not mention the height of headway. The special act incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, and the Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (s. 49 of which provides that all bridges shall have a headway of fifteen feet), and it provided that nothing in the special act should exempt the company from the provisions of the general acts. It also gave the company power to deviate from the deposited sections to the extent of five feet. The company, without altering the levels of the line (no such alteration being shewn on the deposited plans), made the bridge of the prescribed height of sixteen feet three inches, but with a headway of only fourteen feet, and that partly gained by carrying the road below the level of the adjoining land, so that at times it was flooded from an open ditch near the line, and became impassable. If the surface of the road was raised one or two feet, all serious inconvenience from flooding would be removed, and a headway of twelve or thirteen feet would be sufficient for the traffic of the district. On an information at the relation of the road surveyors:—Held, that the attorney-general was entitled to an injunction, restraining the company from making or maintaining the bridge with less headway than fifteen feet, or any bridge which, by reason of the road thereunder being of too low a level, might cause the road to be flooded. Att.-Gen. v. Furness Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 776; 38 L. T. 555; 26 W. R. 650.

A railway company, in exercise of the powers conferred on it by an act of parliament, which gave compensation to persons whose property might sustain damage from their operation, was proceeding to erect an arch over a mill race, for the purpose of sustaining an embankment, on which the railway was to be constructed; and it appeared that injury would be done to the mill if the arch were of the proposed dimensions, but that the injury would be avoided if the arch were of certain larger dimensions; an injunction was granted to restrain the company from making over the mill race an arch of less than certain specified dimensions. Coates v. Clarence Ry., 1 Russ. & M. 181; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 72.

A railway company, in the progress of its works, proposed to cross a mill-stream, by a bridge to be supported in the centre of the mill-stream by two piles, placed sixteen feet apart. The bridge was to be six feet in height above the level of the water. The plaintiff, the owner of the mill, asserted that that height was insufficient to allow barges to pass under; and also, that placing piles in the stream would impede the flow of the water, and thereby stop the working of the mill:—Held, that nothing but necessity could justify the company in carrying on their works in such a manner, or on such a level, as would cause serious damage to the owner of the land. In a case where the affidavits on engineering points are conflicting, the court will seek for the professional assistance of some impartial engineer, to form a decision upon them. Manser v. Northern and Eastern Counties Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 380; 5 Jur. 983.

The act of parliament authorised the railway company to carry its railway over any road by means of an arch sixteen feet above the surface of the road. This was done by the company, who, at the same time, lowered the road to meet the required height, and thereby the road became flooded. Before the act was passed, the consent of the trustees of the road was obtained, on condition that the road should not be prejudiced; but no special proviso was inserted in the act:—Held, that the trustees of the road were precluded from obtaining relief, there being no express clause restricting the usual powers given to railway companies. Aldred v. North Midland Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 404; 3 Jur. 244.

Ascent and Approaches of Bridge.]—The proviso in s. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, that in the exercise of their powers the company shall do as little damage as may be, and shall make satisfaction to all parties interested for all damages sustained by them, applies only to cases of damage to individuals for which compensation may be made, and does not control the enactment in s. 50, as to the ascent of bridges over the line. Reg. v. East and West India Docks, 2 El. & Bl. 466; 1 C. L. R. 496; 22 L. J., Q. B. 380; 17 Jur. 1181; 1 W. R. 409.

Where, in consequence of a company raising the level of its railway within the limits of vertical deviation, it became necessary to raise the height of a bridge over which a road was to be carried:—Held, that there was no restriction as to the powers of the company to alter the levels of the approaches to the bridge, provided the land to be affected was included in the plans and sections deposited, or mentioned in the books of reference, and that full satisfaction was made to all parties interested for the damage sustained. Beardmer v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 Macn. & G. 112; 1 H. & Tw. 161; 5 Railw. Cas. 728; 18 L. J., Ch. 432; 13 Jur. 327.

By s. 41 of a railway act, it was enacted, that where any part of any road should be rendered impassable by the operations for making the railway, the company should cause another road to be made as convenient, and in the case of a turnpike-road, the temporary road should be set out, and the principal road restored within six months from the commencement of the operation. By s. 42, where the railway should cross any turnpike-road, either the turnpike-road should be carried over the railway, or the railway should be carried over the turnpike-road, by means of a bridge, of such construction as is thereinafter mentioned. By s. 47, where any bridge shall be erected for carrying any turnpike-road over the railway, the road over such bridge shall be formed, and shall at all times be continued of such width, as to leave a clear space between the fences of such road of not less than fifteen feet. The company lifted the road over the railway by a bridge, thirty feet wide between the parapets, and with approaches twenty-four feet wide:—Held, that, though that part of the road which might strictly be called the bridge, need not be wider than fifteen feet, the doctrine that the approaches form part of the bridge did not apply in this case. Reg. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Ry., 1 G. & D. 324; 2 Railw. Cas. 694; 2 Q. B. 47; 10 L. J., Q. B. 322; 4 Jur. 966.

—— Impossibility of Performance.]—A local board of health withdrew its opposition to a railway bill upon the insertion in the act of a clause providing that no bridge carrying a road over the railway within their district should have an approach with a slope of more than one in thirty. The making a slope of one in thirty required an encroachment on the land of a person who obtained an injunction to prevent such encroachment, and the company thereupon made a bridge with a slope of one in twenty:—Held, that the company must not have a bridge with a slope of more than one in thirty, and that it was no answer to say that this requisition could not be complied with without stopping the railway. Att.-Gen. v. Mid-Kent Ry., L. R. 3 Ch. 100; 16 W. R. 258.

Public Footpath—Level Crossing on Embankment—Obligation to build Bridge.]—Sect. 46 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, imposes no obligation on a railway company to carry a public footpath by means of a bridge over a railway on an embankment in a case where such footpath crosses the railway on a level. Reg. v. Bexley Heath Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 469; [1896] 2 Q. B. 74; 74 L. T. 540; 44 W. R. 501; 60 J. P. 454—C. A.

Over other Railway—Consent of Owner.]—By an act a company was empowered to make a railway over lands to a certain point; and it was enacted that nothing in the act should authorise the company to enter the lands of any person, without the previous consent of the owner; and that, in every case in which the railway should cross any other railway, the communication between the two railways, in case of disagreement, should be made in such manner as should be directed by two engineers (one to be chosen by each party) and an umpire, whose decision should be binding on all parties; provided, that the engineer of the company, if the owner of the railway to be crossed should, for twenty-one days after notice, neglect to appoint an engineer on his behalf, should have power to make such communication as he should think proper; that the company should make satisfaction for damage occasioned by such crossing, and should have full power at all times to cross such railway by means of such communication:—Held, that the consent in writing of the owner of a railway intended to be crossed by another railway was necessary. Clarence Ry. v. Great North of England Ry., 13 M. & W. 706; 3 Railw. Cas. 426; 7 Jur. 65. S. P. and S. C., 3 G. & D. 389; 4 Q. B. 46; 12 L. J., Q. B. 145.

The defendants, not being possessed of compulsory powers for taking land for the purpose of a railway, and it being necessary for them, in order to complete their line, to cross the plaintiffs' railway, gave notice of their intention of crossing the same, but were restrained by injunction from so doing until the question of a right could be decided at law. They had entered into a contract with an owner of land on one side of the plaintiffs' railway, by which a way leave was to be granted if the line were completed within a certain time; but this injunction would render it impossible for them to complete their contract:—Held, that the injunction should be dissolved so far as to enable the defendants to complete their contract. Clarence Ry. v. Great North of England Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 763; 6 Jur. 269.

Over Canals.]—A company was empowered to do all works necessary and convenient for constructing a railway, and among others to cross canals and make embankments in the line; and in particular to cross a canal of which the defendants were the proprietors, and to make an embankment over a valley near the same place. Subsequent clauses in the act restricted the company from doing anything which should obstruct the navigation of the canal, or any part thereof, and specified the height and dimensions of any bridge to be made and maintained for carrying the railway over the canal. The company, for the purpose of transporting earth from the higher lands on the south to the lower land on the north side of the canal for constructing an embankment, erected a temporary bridge over the canal, supported partly on piles driven into the bed of the canal:—Held, that the clause empowering the railway company to cross canals in the progress of their works was not restricted by the subsequent clauses which applied to permanent bridges. London and Birmingham Ry. v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 1 Railw. Cas. 224.

Although a railway company is not to act capriciously in regard to carrying out the powers of an act of parliament, the act constitutes it the judge of the most convenient mode of conducting the works. Ib.

Over Rivers—Notices to Owners.]—In an action by an owner of a vessel navigating a public river, against a railway company, the declaration charged the company with filling up and obstructing a part of the bed of the river, penning back the water, and preventing it from flowing in its accustomed channel and course in so ample a manner as it otherwise would have done, and preventing the plaintiff from passing along and navigating that part of the river. Plea, that the company had done the matters complained of under their special act, and under the Lands Clauses Act and the Railways Clauses Act; that plans and books of reference were deposited with the clerk of the peace; that the part of the bed of the river which was obstructed was among the lands delineated on the plans, and described in the books of reference; and that the company, for the purpose of constructing the railway, and under and by virtue of the powers and provisions mentioned in their special act and the acts of parliament therewith incorporated, and not otherwise, entered upon the same part of the bed of the river, and constructed part of the railway thereon, the same being necessary for the purpose of making the railway. Issue thereon:—Held, that the company was not bound under their plea to shew that all notices required by the acts for the purchase of such part of the river from the owners of the bed of it had been given, and all other things done which were requisite to vest that part of the bed of the river in the company. Abraham v. G. N. Ry., 16 Q. B. 586; 20 L. J., Q. B. 322; 15 Jur. 855.

—— What Rivers.]—Held, secondly, that the first clause of s. 16 of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, includes navigable rivers as well as rivers not navigable, and therefore the company was authorised by it to construct their railway upon the bed of the navigable part of the river. Ib.

—— Removal of Débris of Broken Bridge.]—The North British Railway (New Tay Bridge) Act, 1881, gave the North British Railway authority to erect a new bridge over the Tay a little higher up the river than one blown down on 28th December, 1879. S. 21 of this act provided, "The company shall abandon and cause to be disused as a railway so much of the North British Railway as lies between the respective points of junction therewith of railway No. 1 and railway No. 2; and shall remove the ruins and débris of the old bridge, and all obstructions interfering with the navigation caused by the old bridge, to the satisfaction of the board of trade." The magistrates of Perth, whose jurisdiction extends down the river to within about three miles of the old bridge, raised an action for declarator and implement:—Held (1) that the special act imposed an absolute obligation to remove the old ruins and débris of the old bridge; and s. 21 did not give the board of trade a discretionary power to dispense with the performance of any part of this obligation; and it followed that the respondents had an interest to obtain a declarator as to the extent of the obligation; but (2) dissenting from the judgment of the court below, the obligation did not become immediately prestable; and (3) the import of the expression "to the satisfaction of the board of trade" was, that though not bound to submit their plans of removal, including the time and manner, yet, as a matter of prudence, the company ought to do so; (4) that in the circumstances it would be inexpedient, though hardly incompetent, to do more now than simply ordain the company to remove the whole ruins and débris in terms of s. 21, for to order the removal "forthwith" might unduly hamper the discretion of the board of trade; and if the company were guilty of undue delay in applying to the board of trade; or if they should proceed at their own hand so as to cause obstruction to navigation; or if after obtaining the sanction of the board of trade to some scheme of removal, they failed to properly execute it, or any conditions attached, the respondents, on application to the court had an effective remedy. North British Ry. v. Perth (Provost), 10 App. Cas. 579—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Opening Span—Detention of Vessel.]—A railway company carried its line over the river D., which was a navigable river, by a bridge with an opening span:—Held, that the railway company were not bound, by s. 15 of the Railway Clauses Act, 1863, to open the bridge for a barge with a mast so constructed that it could be lowered, and that refusing to open the bridge for such a vessel was not a detention within the meaning of the act. West Lancashire Ry. v. Iddon, 49 L. T. 600; 48 J. P. 199.

Refusal to Construct—Remedy.]—A company was required to construct a bridge over a public river, so as to leave the same width of waterway under the same as then existed at the point where the river was crossed, and so that there should be a clear height of five feet above the ordinary level of the river; provided, that, after notice given to the company by an owner or occupier of lands adjoining the railway, that the bridge was not made according to the true intent and meaning of the act, it should be lawful for such owner or occupier to apply for and obtain an order from a justice of the peace, enabling such person to make such bridge accordingly, the expenses to be defrayed by the company. The company was constructing a bridge which did not comply with either of these provisions, whereupon a landowner gave them notice, requiring them to construct a bridge, leaving the former width of waterway, and the clear height of five feet above the water, in the terms of the act. The company replied that they would do the first, and would accept process as to the second. They afterwards made the bridge of the required height, and, to preserve the same width of waterway, commenced cutting the banks of the river, which they afterwards discontinued. To subsequent applications to proceed with the work they returned no answer:—Held, that these facts amounted to a refusal to do what was demanded, and that the applicant was entitled to a mandamus, notwithstanding the powers given him of applying to a justice. Reg. v. Norwich and Brandon Ry., 4 Railw. Cas. 112; 3 D. & L. 385; 15 L. J., Q. B. 24.

Over Roads—Span—Headway.]—On the plans deposited by the promoters of a railway with the clerk of the peace, a bridge of which it was proposed to carry the line across a turnpike road was described as having a span of forty-five feet:—Held, that under the Railways Clauses Act, s. 13, the company was bound to make an arch conformably to the description in the plan, and was not at liberty to build it with a span of only thirty-five feet. Att.-Gen. v. Tewkesbury and Malvern Ry., 1 De G. J. & S. 423; 32 L. J., Ch. 482; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 682; 8 L. T. 682.

A bridge, forming part of the line of railway itself, is an engineering work, within s. 14. Ib.

The effect of s. 51 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, taken in conjunction with s. 49, is that if the average available width for the passage of carriages on any road is more than thirty-five feet, the road may be narrowed to thirty-five feet under the arch; where it is less, the arch may be made the same width as the road, so that it be not less than twenty feet wide; if the road is afterwards widened, the arch must be widened in proportion up to, but not beyond, thirty-five feet. Reg. v. Rigby, 6 Railw. Cas. 479; 14 Q. B. 687; 19 L. J., Q. B. 153; 14 Jur. 329.

In this reckoning, footpaths are not to be taken into account. Ib.

By its special act, passed in 1872, a railway company whose line was made in 1857, was authorised to divert a road crossing its line on the level, and to carry it under the line by a bridge, and the soil of the diverted road was to belong to the company. The new road and bridge were to be in accordance with the deposited plans and sections, which shewed a total height from the road to the rails on the bridge of sixteen feet, three inches, but did not mention the height of headway. The special act incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, and the Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (s. 49 of which provides that all bridges shall have a headway of fifteen feet), and it provided that nothing in the special act should exempt the company from the provisions of the general acts. It also gave the company power to deviate from the deposited sections to the extent of five feet. The company, without altering the levels of the line (no such alteration being shewn on the deposited plans), made the bridge of the prescribed height of sixteen feet, three inches, but with a headway of only fourteen feet, and that partly gained by carrying the road below the level of the adjoining land, so that at times it was flooded from an open ditch near the line, and became impassable. If the surface of the road was raised one or two feet, all serious inconvenience from flooding would be removed, and a headway of twelve or thirteen feet would be sufficient for the traffic of the district. On an information at the relation of the road surveyors:—Held, that the attorney-general was entitled to an injunction restraining the company from making or maintaining the bridge with less headway than fifteen feet, or any bridge which, by reason of the road thereunder being of too low a level, might cause the road to be flooded. Att.-Gen. v. Furness Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 776; 38 L. T. 555; 26 W. R. 650.

Sect. 9 of the London and Southampton Railway Act empowered the company to make in, upon, across, under, or over any land, streets, hills, valleys, and roads, such inclined planes, tunnels, embankments, bridges, arches, and piers as the company should think proper, according to the provisions, and subject to the restrictions of the act. Sect. 74 provided, that where any bridge should be erected by the company for the purpose of carrying the railway over or across any turnpike road, or other public highway, the span of the arch thereof should be of such width as to leave a clear and open space under every such arch of not less than fifteen feet. Sect. 77 provided, that where any part of any carriage or horse-road should be found necessary to be cut through, diverted, sunk, &c., the company should previously thereto cause a sufficient road to be made instead thereof, as convenient for passengers and carriages as the road to be cut through. The company erected a bridge over a turnpike road at a place where the width of the then existing road was forty feet, but the bridge crossing obliquely, and the piers being built on the road, the passage under the arch was only twenty-four feet for the length of one hundred and sixty feet:—Held, that the restrictions of s. 77 applied only to a case where a road might be either temporarily or permanently diverted, and that under s. 9, the company might build any piers or necessary buildings for a bridge, provided they left a width under such bridge of fifteen feet, as provided by s. 74. Att.-Gen. v. London and Southampton Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 302; 9 Sim. 78; 7 L. J., Ch. 15.

For Purposes of Station.]—By local acts, paving commissioners of a parish were empowered to remove obstructions from houses and buildings abutting near any streets which, in their judgment, should obstruct the circulation of light and air, or be inconvenient to passengers. An act establishing the Northern and Eastern Railway Company empowers them to construct arches over the railway, or other works, streets, &c., and upon the railway, or any lands adjoining or near thereto, to erect stations. By another act, amending the former, the company was empowered to provide a station and depôt near the London terminus of the Eastern Counties Railway; and it was enacted, that all the "clauses, powers, provisions, directions, regulations," &c., contained in the former act should apply to the purchase of land and buildings for the railway and also for the station. It was also enacted that nothing in that act should extend to prejudice, derogate from, &c., the privilege of any parish over which the railroad should pass, under the local acts:—Held, that the Northern and Eastern Counties Railway Company was empowered by the above acts to arch over public thoroughfares in the parish not only for the construction of the railway itself, but also for the erection of a station. Att.-Gen. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 10 M. & W. 263; 12 L. J., Ex. 106.

An information was filed, at the relation of one of the commissioners appointed under 12 Geo. 3, and 57 Geo. 3, against the Eastern Counties Railway Company and the Northern and Eastern Railway Company, for the purpose of restraining it by injunction from constructing or making any covering or building over certain streets and courts within the jurisdiction of the said acts. The defendants were desirous of building a station, and for that purpose proceeded under the powers of its act to arch over certain streets within the jurisdiction of the said paving commissioners. The Court of Exchequer having certified that the defendants were entitled (if it was necessary or reasonably convenient for the construction of a station and proper warehouses) to construct such coverings or buildings, by arches or otherwise, over the streets within the jurisdiction of the paving commissioners:—Held, that the fact of the commencement of the works by the defendants was sufficient proof of the necessity for and the convenience of such buildings. Att.-Gen. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 823.

Lowering Road.]—A company was empowered to raise or lower any roads or ways, in order the more conveniently to carry the same over or under, or by the side of the railway; and where any bridge should be erected by the company over any public carriage-road, not being a turnpike-road, the centre of the arch must be of a height from the surface of the road of not less than sixteen feet. Nothing in the act was done to derogate from any of the rights or privileges of any parish over which the railway should pass, acting under any local act. By a local paving act it was enacted, "that no person shall alter the form of any pavements which shall be now made by virtue of this act without the consent of the commissioners, or in any wise encroach thereon, or put up any posts, boards," &c.:—Held, that the company was entitled, in carrying the railway by a bridge over a street under the control of the commissioners, to lower the street so as to give the height to the centre of the arch required by the statute. Reg. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 Railw. Cas. 22; 2 G. & D. 1; 2 Q. B. 569; 11 L. J., Q. B. 178; 6 Jur. 820.

A company was empowered to divert, raise, sink, or deepen any roads, in order to carry the same over, under, or by the side of the railway. By another act, enabling them to vary their line, they were authorised to carry the line of railway across a turnpike-road, by means of a bridge of the width of thirty feet at the least, and for that purpose to lower the bed of the road, provided, that, in case it should be expedient to lower the surface of the road, it should not be lawful for the company to lower or alter the bed of the road, unless the same should be lowered on both sides of such bridge, so as to leave a certain inclination, and that the company should make all new fences, and relay and re-form the road. The company made a bridge thirty feet wide over a turnpike-road forty-two feet wide, consisting of thirty feet carriage-way, and two footways of six feet each. They lowered the carriage-way of the road, but left the footways at their original level. On the trial of traverses to a return to a mandamus which had issued to the company to re-form the road, and to lower it the whole width of forty-two feet, the jury found—first, that the company had not so lowered the road; secondly, that they had re-formed the road in compliance with the act; and, thirdly, that the road made by the company was more commodious to the public than if the whole road had been lowered to the full width of forty-two feet. The queen's bench held, that the word "road" meant the whole road, including footpaths, and, therefore, that the company had not re-formed the road as required by the act, and that the finding of the jury upon the issue, as to its being more commodious, was not sufficient to dispense with a compliance with the language and meaning of the act. Manchester and Leeds Ry. v. Reg., 3 Railw. Cas. 633; 3 G. & D. 269; 3 Q. B. 528; 10 L. J., Q. B. 266.

Held, by the exchequer chamber, that it was not a good return to the mandamus, that the carriage-road and footpath, as they now exist, are more commodious and convenient to the public, &c., than if lowered as required by the writ. Ib.

But held, that by the words "bed of the turnpike-road" the act intended that the carriage-road only should be lowered, and that the full breadth of the former carriage-road was not intended to be preserved under the bridge, but only as to the part of the road lowered as it descended to the bridge on one side and ascended from it on the other. Ib.

Expense of Repair—Recovery of.]—The defendants' predecessors in title obtained an act for the formation of a road which was to pass under a railway by means of a bridge. By the act it was provided that the undertakers should not enter upon or interfere with the railway, or execute any work whatsoever under or affecting the same, until they should have delivered to the company plans, drawings, and specifications of the works intended to be executed under or affecting the railway and works thereof, such plans, &c., to describe the manner of executing the intended works, and the materials to be used for the purpose, nor until those plans, &c., should have been examined and approved by the engineer of the company; and that "the same works should be executed and thereafter maintained by the undertakers at their sole expense in all things, according to such approved plans, &c., under the superintendence and to the reasonable satisfaction of the engineer of the company." And it was further provided that the undertakers should from time to time be responsible for and make good to the company all costs, losses, damages, and expenses which might be occasioned to the company by reason of the execution or failure of any of the intended works, or of any act or omission of the undertakers. The bridge was accordingly constructed of brick piers and iron pillars, of iron girders resting upon the piers and pillars, and of timber and woodwork. In the construction of the bridge, the brick and ironwork was done by the defendants' predecessors in title, under the superintendence of the plaintiffs' engineer. The timber and woodwork, the superstructure, was done by the plaintiffs' engineer at the expense of the undertakers, and with materials provided by them. The structure was completed in 1864. In 1872 certain repairs became necessary to the superstructure of the bridge, which repairs were executed by the company, who claimed to be reimbursed their outlay in so doing by the defendants, although the defendants had had no notice nor any knowledge or means of ascertaining that the repairs were necessary:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the expenses so incurred. L. & S.-W. Ry. v. Flower, 45 L. J., C. P. 54; 1 C. P. D. 77; 33 L. T. 687.

Temporary Bridge.]—Sect. 94 of a railway act empowered a company, subject to the restrictions imposed by the act, to make and maintain the railway, and to construct in, under, upon, across, or over any hills, valleys, roads, rivers, canals, brooks, or streams, or other waters, such embankments, bridges, aqueducts, and conduits, either temporary or permanent, and to erect and construct such buildings, engines, machinery, apparatus, and other works and conveniences for the purposes of the act, as the company shall think proper. The railway company having commenced the building of the permanent bridge, erected a temporary bridge adjoining to the permanent bridge, which was used partly for building that bridge, and partly for conveying earth and materials across the river. On the application of a navigation company to restrain the erecting of a temporary bridge across the navigation, or of anything impeding the navigation in a manner not authorised by the act:—Held, that, subject to the restrictions of the act, s. 94 ought to be literally carried into effect. That the railway company had the power of erecting such a temporary bridge, the power being exercised reasonably and bonâ fide. That, in construing such power with a view to its reasonable and bonâ fide exercise, regard must be had to the peculiar purpose for which the permanent bridge was designed. That, the temporary bridge being of the dimensions specified in the act, and a navigable waterway being left as required thereby, the same was lawfully erected under s. 94, for the bonâ fide purpose of building the permanent bridge. That the temporary bridge being erected and used for a lawful purpose might also be used for other purposes, for which alone it could not have been erected. That, subject to the restrictions of the act, the company acting bonâ fide, was constituted the judge of the mode of executing its works. Circumstances upon which the court was of opinion that the temporary bridge was reasonably and bonâ fide erected. Priestly v. Manchester and Leeds Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 134; 4 Y. & Coll. 62. See also 1 Railw. Cas. 576.

Acts of parliament, giving railway companies power to build bridges, must be expounded with reference to the peculiar mode of construction of bridges in railways. Ib.

Projected Road not Finished.]—In 1850 a meeting of landowners was held for the construction of a private road from A. to join a turnpike-road at point C. In 1854 the road was constructed as far as D., which was within 250 yards of the proposed point of junction when the works were suspended. The proprietors of the new road, however, entered upon the remaining land, cut down the trees, and marked out the proposed line of road. In 1853 a railway company was projected, and the plans deposited, shewing that at the proposed point of junction of the new road with the turnpike-road the turnpike-road would be raised several feet. The new road was not referred to in the deposited plans, and in 1854 the act passed without making any provision in respect of it. The new road was afterwards completed throughout, and opened for traffic in 1855. From point D. to the point of junction with the turnpike-road the gradient of the new road was very steep; and assuming the company to have constructed its line by raising the turnpike-road, according to the deposited plans, the junction at point D. would have been impracticable. The company subsequently constructed its line, but, instead of raising the turnpike-road according to its deposited plans, it turned it, and interposed the railway between the turnpike-road and the new road. Upon a bill filed by the proprietors of the new road:—Held, that the fact of the new road being projected and completed to within 250 yards of the proposed point of junction before the railway was authorised or planned did not establish in the proprietors of the new road the right to join the turnpike-road in the same way as they would have been entitled to if the company's act had not passed; and that the proprietors of the new road were not entitled to have an archway formed under the railway, or to have the road united on either side, at the expense of the company. Gawthern v. Stockport, Disley, and Whaley Bridge Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 573.

Temporary Occupation of Land—"Roads"—Tramway — Necessity.]—A railway company proposed to take temporary possession of a piece of land adjoining their railway, in course of construction, for the purpose of laying thereon a tramway for carrying materials for their new line. The materials could be brought by the high-road, but at greater expense:—Held, that the temporary occupation was not shewn to be "necessary for the construction" of the railway within s. 32 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. The court, on motion, restrained the company from taking possession of the land, being strongly inclined to hold also that the proposed tramway was not a road within the same section. Morris v. Tottenham and Forest Gate Ry., 61 L. Diverting Public Roads.]—Sect. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, authorises the permanent diversion of public roads, and not only a temporary diversion for the purpose of constructing a railway. Phillipps v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 4 Giff. 46; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 348; 7 L. T. 663.

The powers conferred by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 16, must be understood as restricted to such acts as are necessary to the construction of the railway, and do not extend to acts done for the saving of expense or inconvenience to the company. Reg. v. Wycombe Ry., 8 B. & S. 259; 36 L. J., Q. B. 121; L. R. 2 Q. B. 310; 15 L. T. 610; 15 W. R. 489.

The power conferred on a railway by s. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to divert the course of a river or road, "in order the more conveniently to carry the same over or under, or by the side of the railway, as they may think proper," is to be taken as cut down and qualified by the proviso that it be an act necessary for making, maintaining, altering or repairing, and using the railway. Pugh v. Golden Valley Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 721; 15 Ch. D. 330; 42 L. T. 863; 28 W. R. 863—C. A.

If a railway crosses a highway without diverting it, a bridge must be made for the highway over or under the railway, but the highway may be diverted to a place where there is a level crossing, if the road so diverted will be more convenient than a bridge. Att.-Gen. v. Ely, Haddenham, and Sutton Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 258; L. R. 4 Ch. 194; 20 L. T. 1; 17 W. R. 356.

—— Danger—Injunction.]—The B. Railway Company had, by their special act, power to divert roads and make the substitutions shewn on their deposited plans. The plans shewed, as a substitute for a road passing along the side of a mountain on which part of the line was to be constructed, a curved road above the old one to be cut out of the mountain side. The railway company had taken possession of the old road and made an embankment upon it, upon which they had laid a portion of their line, which was in use for ballast trains, used in the construction of the line, but not open to the public. They had made the new road, but it was made dangerous in winter weather by the constant falling upon it of stones from the steep slope of the mountain above it. This was an action by the attorney-general on the information of the local board for the district claiming an injunction to restrain the railway company from using the old road until they had caused a sufficient road to be made in its stead:—Held, that s. 53 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, applied notwithstanding the fact that the taking of the old road and substitution of the new were authorised by the company's special act, and that the injunction must be granted. On the company's undertaking forthwith to lower the inclination of the slope of the mountain above the road so as to make the road safe, the injunction was suspended. Att.-Gen. v. Barry Dock and Ry., 56 L. Ch. D. 573; 56 L. T. 559; 35 W. R. 830; 51 J. P. 644.

—— Effect of Agreement.]—An agreement was entered into between a landowner and a railway company, that the former should not oppose a projected railway, on condition that there should be a reference to arbitration, for, among other purposes, defining the line of approach to his premises from a turnpike road which it was proposed to divert. After the award indicating such approach had been made, it became expedient for the company further to divert the turnpike-road, but within the limits of deviation, and consequently necessary to alter the line of the approach to the landowner's premises:—Held, that the company were not precluded from making such alteration. Wood v. North Staffordshire Ry., 1 Macn. & G. 278; 1 H. & Tw. 611. Reversing 13 Jur. 466.

In the month of February, 1847, P. entered into a contract with a railway company to sell certain land to the company; and the agreement contained certain stipulations as to the construction, by the company, of two bridges, and also the following words: "and a road upon the level as at present where the said P. now passes to and fro from his brick-kilns." In May, 1847, P. conveyed the land to the company, but in the conveyance no mention was made of the bridges or road. P. died, leaving the plaintiff his heir-at-law, who entered into possession of the land. The company having lately commenced their works on the lands in question, and making the road several feet lower than the original level, the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain the company from proceeding to construct the road at a lower level than the road referred to in the agreement, and from stopping up the present road, except for the purpose of carrying a new road across the land at what was the level at the date of the agreement:—Held, that although the conveyance was silent as to the bridges and road, the plaintiff was entitled to his injunction. Foster v. Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley Ry., 2 W. R. 378.

Diminishing Width.]—By an act by which a railway company was incorporated, the usual power was given to it to construct, according to the provisions and restrictions of the act, the said railway upon, across, or over any roads, &c., doing as little damage as might be. By a subsequent section it was enacted, "that where the railway should cross any turnpike-road, or other public highway, by means of an arch," such arch should be "of such width as to leave a clear and open space under such arch of not less than fifteen feet":—Held, that, under these clauses, the company was empowered to diminish the width of any turnpike-road which was crossed by the railway, provided it left an open space of fifteen feet; and an application by the trustees of a turnpike-road for an injunction to restrain a railway company from constructing a bridge over the road of less than the usual width of that road, on the ground that an inconvenience to the public would be thereby occasioned, was refused. Att.-Gen. v. London and Southampton Ry., 9 Sim. 78; 1 Railw. Cas. 283; 7 L. J., Ch. 15.

User of Road by Company.]—The preamble of the London and Brighton act, after reciting that a railway between London and Brighton would be of great public advantage, by s. 3 enacts that it shall be lawful for the company to make and maintain a main line of railway and branches, with all proper warehouses, wharves, and all other suitable and proper works, communications, &c. By s. 12 the usual powers are conferred on the company for making and maintaining the railway, and, among others, to make and construct upon, across, or over, any roads, &c., such roads, ways, cuttings, &c., as the company shall think proper. The company having purchased a private wharf, separated from one of their terminus stations by a turnpike-road, laid down on the road stone blocks, so as to form two runs or stoneways level with the road, for the purpose of facilitating the passage of goods from the wharf across the road to the station:—Held, that the company was not authorised by its act to interfere with the road in such a manner. An injunction, which had been granted to restrain the trustees of the road from removing the stone blocks, was dissolved, although, in the opinion of the court, no damage could result from the stone blocks either to the road or the passengers upon it. L., B. & S. C. Ry. v. Cooper, 2 Railw. Cas. 312.

A railway company while constructing a railway laid down sleepers and rails for some distance over one side of a high-road, and ran locomotives and trucks over it. No fence had been put up between these rails and the portion of the road left for the ordinary traffic, which was in places narrow:—Held, that although the evidence did not shew that the public had been greatly inconvenienced by this proceeding, the high-road had thereby been rendered "dangerous and extraordinarily inconvenient," and that the railway company must be restrained by a perpetual injunction from using the highway till it had made a substituted road. Att.-Gen. v. Widnes Ry., 30 L. T. 449; 22 W. R. 607—L.JJ.

Substituting other Roads.]—Sects. 53, 55, 56, of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, with respect to the crossing of roads, or other interference therewith, are applicable to the interference with roads incidentally, and do not apply where the object of the special act is to change the nature of that road substantially. Tanner v. South Wales Ry., 5 El. & Bl. 618; 25 L. J., Q. B. 7; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1215.

Motion for an injunction to restrain a railway company from stopping up a road until it should have made another, as convenient as the old road, according to the act of parliament:—Held, that it did not appear to be the intention of the defendants to break up the old road until a new one (about to be formed) was completed. The injunction could not be granted, but the motion should stand over till it was ascertained whether the company would, after making the new road, proceed in an illegal course; and whether the new road was really as inconvenient, and contrary to the clauses of the act, as the plaintiff alleged. Kemp v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 495; 3 Jur. 403.

A railway company having begun to divert a turnpike road by a crossing on a bridge over its railway, with a sharp curve, an information at the relation of two of the trustees of the road was filed, praying for an injunction to restrain the company from interfering with the road until it should have provided another as convenient as the former, or as near thereto as circumstances allowed, as required by the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 56. The court, holding that the company were not doing as little damage as could be, granted the injunction; but without prejudice to any application either party might make to the board of trade, under s. 66 of the above act. In granting such an injunction, the court cannot point out to the company what it ought to do, except by stating the reasons which induce the court to come to its conclusion, or the manner in which it appears to the court that that which seems an evil can be remedied. Att.-Gen. v. L. & S. W. Ry., 3 De G. & Sm. 439; 13 Jur. 467.

The provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, requiring a substituted road to be made in certain cases:—Held, not to be satisfied by an existing road which was alleged to be as convenient as any new substituted road could be. Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., infra.

A bill stated that a railway company was interfering with a public road by digging a trench and lowering the level of it, and causing a permanent and complete obstruction. The bill prayed for an injunction restraining the company from obstructing the road or rendering the same less convenient for the passage of carriages, &c., than it had previously been, until it had made a proper substituted road. An injunction to that effect was granted. The company then changed its plan, and, instead of lowering the road, carried the railway across it on a level, with posts and gates which were closed only during a few short and ascertained periods in the day, when trains crossed:—Held, that the general terms of the injunction were not restricted by reference to the particular nature of the injury complained of, but that it had in spirit, as well as terms, been violated. A sequestration was ordered to issue for the contempt, and was only stayed upon appeal, upon the defendants paying all the costs, and undertaking to construct a road in conformity with the provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, and in the meantime to provide and maintain a free passage at all times. Ib.

Where an injunction was granted in May against a railway company, and a sequestration was directed to issue in November for a breach of it, the court refused to suspend the latter order pending an appeal from both orders, although the result of the sequestration would be to compel the defendants to construct a bridge (which would become unnecessary if the order should be reversed), and to stop the traffic on the line in the meantime. Ib.

By s. 59 of the London and Brighton Railway Act, after reciting that it is intended to carry the railway across certain public roads or highways in the parish of C., and to alter the levels or present surface of such roads, it is enacted, that all alterations, whether temporary, permanent, of, in, or to any of the said public roads or highways, and all works connected therewith of any kind or description whatsoever, and all bridges to be erected by the company, and all future repairs of such altered roads, or any temporary roads, and the quality of the materials to be used and applied in or to such altered or temporary roads, and all future damage to such altered or temporary roads, shall be made, formed, completed, and finished under the superintendence, from time to time, and to the entire satisfaction of the board of surveyors of roads from the parish of C. By s. 60 it is enacted, that if the company shall in the doing, making, forming, completing, and finishing of all, or any, or either of such alterations or works in, to, or belonging to the said public roads or highways in the parish of C., do or cause any injury or damage to any or either of the said road or roads, or to any part thereof, and shall not forthwith proceed to repair and make good such injury or damage to the satisfaction of the board of surveyors of the parish of C.; or if the roads so to be altered shall not be properly made and completed, and kept in repair, it shall be lawful for the said board of surveyors to cause such repairs to be done. The company made a diverted temporary road, leading from one of the said roads, which diverted temporary road was crossed by the railway. The railway did not cross the old road, neither did the company alter the level or surface of the old road. The company also made and tendered to the surveyors a permanent diverted road, which the surveyors refused to approve of or accept; the company having, in the execution of its works, crossed the temporary diverted road with locomotive engines, the surveyors put up fences on either side, so as to obstruct the passage across it:—Held, that, even if the surveyors had, under ss. 59 and 60, a jurisdiction to determine in what manner the diverted permanent road should be made, they were not justified in putting up the fences across the temporary road, but ought to have applied for an injunction, or for a mandamus; that the right of the surveyors was a private right; and that they were in no way interested in the question of public safety. L., B. & S. C. Ry. v. Blake, 2 Railw. Cas. 322.

—— Notice—Plan Deposited.]—Upon one of the sections of a railway deposited with the clerk of the peace, and referred to by an act (afterwards passed) authorising the formation of the line, there was a note to the effect that a particular road, therein delineated, was to be stopped up, and another, therein also delineated, was to be a substituted road for it:—Held, that the public and the landowners were not thereby affected with notice, so as, upon the ground of acquiescence, to be precluded from obtaining an injunction upwards of four years afterwards on the company's proceeding to stop up the road. Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., 4 De G. & Sm. 75; 14 Jur. 684; 15 Jur. 387.

The works for stopping up the above-mentioned road were commenced in October, 1849, but it was not rendered entirely impassable till February, 1850:—Held, that an application for an injunction in February, 1850, was not too late. Ib.

Turnpike-road, what.]—Mandamus to a railway company reciting that the railway crossed a street and turnpike-road, which was carried over the railway by a bridge, and that the company had made the ascent to the bridge with a greater degree of ascent and inclination than one foot in thirty feet, contrary to s. 50; and that the company had deviated from the levels of their railway, as referred to the common datum line shewn in the deposited plans and sections, to an extent exceeding two feet, in the place where the railway passed through this street and turnpike-road. The writ commanded the company to make the ascent to the bridge in conformity with 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, and to make the levels of the railway, as referred to the common datum line, and as directed in the deposited plans and sections. The road was a public carriage-road, but not a turnpike-road, and the ascent was no greater than was allowed by s. 50, in the case of a public carriage-road :—Held, that as the first part of the writ failed, the prosecutor could not have a peremptory mandamus for the other part against the company. Reg. v. East and West India Docks, 2 El. & Bl. 466 : 1 C. L. R. 496 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 380 ; 17 Jur. 1181 ; 1 W. R. 409.

A carriage-road is not a turnpike-road, unless it is repaired by trustees out of tolls payable by passengers along it. Ib.

Property in Old Road.]—Where a railway company, having made a substituted road, inclosed and took possession of the portion of the old road, which had ceased by the diversion to form part of the turnpike-road :—Held, that there was nothing in the Turnpike Act (3 Geo. 3, c. 126) or in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 16, to place the company in the position of trustees of the substituted road, so as to transfer to them the soil of the old road. Salisbury (Marquis) v. G. N. Ry., 5 C. B. (N.S.) 174 : 28 L. J., C. P. 40 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 70 ; 7 W. R. 75.

Stopping-up Street Permanently.]—A railway company was by its special act empowered to stop up certain streets and passages in the metropolis, including L. C., and to appropriate and use such streets and passages, or parts so stopped up, for the purpose of the railway and works, and it was authorised to grant leases of superfluous lands. The company erected a station at the north end of L. C., and thereby completely stopped it up as a thoroughfare, and it purchased all the houses along each side of the street, but did not expressly purchase or pay for, or take any conveyance of the soil of the street itself ; nevertheless it treated the whole of the space formerly occupied by the street as well as by the houses on each side of it (which they had pulled down) as vested in it, and it surrounded it with hoarding, stopping up the south end of the street, and leased a plot of land comprising the ground at the south end of the street to the defendants for building purposes. Builders occupying premises in the street running at right angles to L. C. claimed a special right of access to them over the end of L. C., for the purpose of conveying long ladders and poles to their premises, beyond the right of the public in the street as a highway. They filed a bill to restrain the railway company from building so as to interfere with this alleged right, and moved for an injunction :—Held, that the railway company having stopped up the one end of the street which it required for the purposes of its station, and having purchased all the houses in the street, had a right to stop up and appropriate the rest of the street, and accordingly the motion was refused. Temple v. Flower, 41 L. J., Ch. 604 ; 26 L. T. 657 ; 20 W. R. 587.

A railway act obtained by the Great Eastern Railway Company for extending its line into the city of London, and making a station, incorporated the Railway Clauses Act, 1845, and declared that plans and sections had been deposited, and then gave a general power to stop up streets within a given area. Sun street was within the area, but the plans and sections had described it as crossed by an arch, and in a subsequent act, where many of the levels were altered, it was spoken of as crossed underground by a tunnel. The railway company proposed to build a station on the soil of Sun street :—Held, that the company might do so ; for that the street being within the area described, there was nothing inconsistent in the provisions of the acts, the power to cross the street by an arch or a tunnel not affecting the right to use the surface of the soil for a station to be built within the area described in the act. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., L. R. 6 H. L. 367 ; 22 W. R. 281.

Obstruction—Injunction.]—Where a railway company had obstructed an alleged public right of way, and the evidence shewed that the public right had been so dealt with that it had been lost, and did not establish a private right of way, the court refused an injunction against the company, and left the plaintiff to pursue his remedy by action on the case, under the provisions of the Railways Clauses Act. Freeman v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junction Ry., 11 Jur. (N.S.) 107 ; 11 L. T. 702 ; 13 W. R. 335.

The court will, by mandatory injunction, restrain a trespass the continuance of which will inflict irreparable damage upon persons in possession. Damage which it is impossible to measure will be deemed irreparable. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 479 ; L. R. 4 Eq. 174 ; 17 L. T. 43 ; 15 W. R. 810.

A bill was filed to restrain a railway company from placing an obstruction, partly on a public footway and partly on land belonging to the plaintiffs and a rival railway company, so as to block up the access to a station of the plaintiffs, and alleged that the injury to the traffic by allowing the obstruction to remain would be irreparable, and that the act was done without any colour of title by the defendants :—Held, that this was one of the exceptional cases in which the court would interfere to restrain a trespass by a stranger. Ib.

Substituted Railway—Remedy for Neglect.]—C. was possessed of a fireclay field, to which he had made a private railway, communicating with the M. & K. railway, belonging to the appellants. The appellants, in 1845, obtained an act for constructing a branch from their railway, in making which they interfered with the private railway. By the Railways Clauses Act the appellants were bound, within a certain period, under penalties, to cause a substituted railway to be made instead of the one interfered with. C. entered into an agreement for a lease with M. of the fireclay field, by which it was stipulated that the lessee should have the use of the private railway. The agreement also provided, that in case the appellants should fail to make the substituted railway, C. would do so at his own expense. The company not having made the substituted railway, M. brought an action against C., and recovered damages. C. then sued the appellants for the amount on an implied indemnity, and for special damage :—Held, that C. could have maintained an action ex delicto against the company for neglecting to restore the substituted railway, and that the provision contained in s. 47, as to penalties, did not extinguish such right of action, the remedy under such section being only cumulative. Nor was C. confined for a remedy to the statutory tribunal which the legislature has provided where losses are sustained in the formation of railways. That tribunal is only established to give compensation for losses sustained in consequence of what a railway company may do lawfully under the powers of the act by which it is constituted. For anything done in excess of those powers, or contrary to the provisions of the act, the proper remedy is in the ordinary tribunals of the country. Caledonian Ry. v. Colt, 3 Macq. H. L. 833; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 475; 3 L. T. 252.

Held, also, that C. was not entitled to recover the money paid by him to M., as the action brought by the latter was ex contractu on an agreement to which the appellants were not privy; whereas the cause of action by C. against the appellants was ex delicto. C. should have himself made the substituted railway, and then sued the company for the cost and any other special damage. Ib.

Impossibility of Performance.]—A railway act provided, that, where any part of any road should be cut through, taken, &c., in exercise of the powers given to the company, they should first make another road instead thereof, as convenient for passengers and carriages as the former road; and that, where such road was turnpike, "the substituted road, if temporary, shall be set out and made, and the principal road shall be restored, within six calendar months after the commencement of the operation"; and that, where any bridge should be erected for carrying any turnpike-road over the railway, "the road over such bridge" should be not less than fifteen feet wide. The level of the ascent of every such bridge was also regulated. The company made a bridge fifteen feet wide, with approaches at each end (187 and 126 yards long respectively), for conveying a turnpike-road over the railway, and took part of the former turnpike-road for the purpose of making the approaches, which were carried along and within the space which that road had occupied. On a mandamus to the company to make and restore such part of the turnpike-road according to the statute, alleging that the trustees of the road had duly required them to do so within six calendar months after commencement of the operation:—Held, that it was no sufficient return, that the approaches, though of less width, were as convenient to the public as they could be made in execution of the powers of the act, and as convenient to the public as the original road had been. Or, that the company could not now widen the approaches without taking and purchasing more land; that their compulsory powers of purchasing under the act had expired before they were called upon to widen; and that they had not the power to take or purchase land for such purpose. Reg. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Ry., 2 Q. B. 47; 2 Railw. Cas. 694; 1 G. & D. 324; 10 L. J., Q. B. 322; 4 Jur. 966.

Injunction—Temporary User.]—A railway company while constructing a railway laid down sleepers and rails for some distance over one side of a highroad, and ran locomotives and trucks over it. No fence had been put up between these rails and the portion of the road left for the ordinary traffic, which was in places narrow:—Held, that although the evidence did not shew that the public had been greatly inconvenienced by this proceeding, the highroad had thereby been rendered "dangerous and extraordinarily inconvenient," and that the railway company must be restrained by a perpetual injunction from using the highway till it had made a substituted road. Att.-Gen. v. Widnes Ry. 30 L. T. 449; 22 W.R. 607—L.JJ.

Inconvenient Alteration—Indictment.]—By a railway act a company was empowered to divert or alter any roads or ways, in order the more conveniently to carry the same over or under the railway. The company, in carrying a road under the railway, erected a skew bridge, which diverted the road to an angle of 45° instead of 34°, which was the angle made at that particular point by the old line of road. At the trial of an indictment against the company's engineer for so doing, the judge directed the jury, that, if the public sustained inconvenience by the alteration, they should find for the crown; but that, if the work was done in a mode in which an experienced engineer would do it, having reasonable regard to the interests both of the company and the public, the company had a right to make such diversion. The jury having found for the defendant on the ruling, the court refused to grant a new trial. Reg. v. Sharpe, 3 Railw. Cas. 33.

A railway company was empowered by statute to make obstructions in public or private roads, for the purpose of their undertaking, doing as little damage as might be; and a subsequent section enacted, that, wherever it was found necessary to use that power, they should, before any such road should be cut through, make a road instead thereof, as convenient for passengers as the road to be cut through, or as near thereto as may be. The company having obstructed a public road without making a new one equally convenient, or as nearly so as might be:—Held, indictable at common law for a nuisance to the old highway. Reg. v. Scott, 2 G. & D. 729; 3 Q. B. 543; 3 Railw. Cas. 187; 11 L. J., Q. B. 254; 6 Jur. 1084.

Action, whether maintainable.] — Action against a railway company for an obstruction of a right of way as appurtenant to the house of the plaintiff, by means whereof he could not have or enjoy his way as he of right ought to have done, and otherwise might and would have done, and had been and was deprived of the use, benefit and advantage of the same. Plea, justifying the obstruction complained of, for the purpose of making and constructing a railway under the powers and provisions of an act, by which the company was incorporated, and of the acts therewith incorporated. Replication, that the way was a road within the meaning of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845; that the company rendered it impassable and thereby interfered with the same, within the meaning of that act; and that the company had not caused a sufficient road to be made, instead of the road so interfered with:—Held, that by ss. 6 and 55 of the above act, the remedy by action for an interference with a private right of way was taken away, except where special damage had been suffered, and therefore that the count was bad. Watkins v. G. N. Ry., 16 Q. B. 961; 20 L. J., Q. B. 391.

An action will lie against a railway company for not restoring a road within the prescribed period where damage has been occasioned. Caledonian Ry. v. Colt, 3 Macq. H. L. 833; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 475; 3 L. T. 252.

Compensation.] — But one who sustains a private or a particular injury from the diversion or obstruction of a public road by the works of a railway company, which diversion or obstruction, if done without sanction of an act of parliament, would give a right of action, is entitled to compensation. Wood v. Stourbridge, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 222. See also LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

Penalty.]—To entitle a person to proceed against a railway company for penalties for interfering with an existing public road, under s. 57 of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, as "a person having the management of the road," he must be clothed with some duty in respect of the public ejusdem generis with that of "trustees, commissioners, or surveyor." Reg. v. Wilson, 18 Q. B. 348; 21 L. J., Q. B. 281; 16 Jur. 973.

A railway act imposed a penalty on a company for the interruption of any road, and in case of a private road, made the penalty "payable to the owner thereof":—Held, that the tenant of the farm over which the road passed could not sue for the penalty. Collinson v. Newcastle and Darlington Ry., 1 Car. & K. 546.

But the owner of a private road, entitled under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 54, to recover penalties for its interruption, is the person who, for the time being, owns such road in possession. Mann v. Great Southern and Western Ry., 9 Ir. C. L. R. 105.

—— Temporary Interference with Occupation Road—Owner usque ad medium filum.]—The owner of an occupation road usque ad medium filum can recover a penalty under s. 54 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, in respect of his half of the road where a railway company have contravened the provisions of s. 53 by failing, before commencing to interfere with an existing road, to cause a sufficient road to be made instead of the road to be interfered with. Llewellyn v. Glamorgan Vale Ry., 66 L. J., Q. B. 670; [1897] 2 Q. B. 239; 76 L. T. 778.

Semble, a railway company may be liable for the whole penalty to any person who owns any part of the road interfered with; and should they stop up a road, various portions of which are owned by different persons, they may incur as many penalties as there are owners. Ib.

Obligation to Repair.]—Under s. 46 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, a railway company having carried a highway over the railway by a bridge, is bound to keep both bridge and road, and all the approaches thereto, in repair; and such repair includes not only the structure of the bridge and the approaches, but the metalling of the road on both. North Staffordshire Ry. v. Dale, 8 El. & Bl. 836; 27 L. J., M. C. 147; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 631.

Where a railway crosses a highway, and the road is carried over the railway by means of a bridge in accordance with the provisions of s. 46 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, the railway company are bound to keep in repair the roadway upon the bridge, such roadway being part of the bridge which by the section the company are to maintain. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Bury Corporation, 59 L. J., Q. B. 85; 14 App. Cas. 417; 61 L. T. 417; 54 J. P. 197—H. L. (E.). Affirming 36 W. R. 491—C. A.

A railway company having carried a road over the railway by a bridge, is bound to keep both bridge and road, and all the approaches in repair, and such repair includes not only the structure of the bridge and the approaches, but the metalling of the road on both. North of England Ry. v. Langbaurgh, 24 L. T. 544.

But a railway company which, in carrying a railway over a highway by a bridge, lowered the level of the highway, is not bound to keep the slope of the road in repair as being part of the approaches on each side of the bridge. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Skerton, 5 B. & S. 559; 33 L. J., M. C. 158; 10 L. T. 648; 12 W. R. 1102.

By a special act, with which was incorporated the Railways Clauses Act, where the railway was proposed to cross the turnpike road leading from Newcastle-under-Lyne to Leek, the company "shall erect a proper and sufficient bridge constructed of bricks, stone, iron, or other materials, so as to carry the turnpike-road over and across the railway, such bridge also to be constructed with parapet walls of brick, stone, or other materials of five feet in height, and of the clear and open width of thirty-three feet at the least between such parapets; and that the turnpike-road shall be made and altered at the expense of the company on both sides of such bridge, so that the surface of the turnpike-road shall, when completed, have one uniform inclination on both sides, not exceeding one in thirty; and so much of the turnpike-road as shall be broken up or damaged for the purposes of the act shall be reinstated and made good with the same materials as the road is now composed of, and the fences thereof, whenever necessary, reconstructed and put into complete order by the company, and kept in repair for the space of twelve calendar months, after the making, forming and completing thereof:—Held, first, that under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 46 (without reference to the special act), the company was bound, at all times, to keep in repair the approaches to and road over the bridge. Newcastle-under-Lyne Turnpike Trustees v. North Staffordshire Ry., 5 H. & N. 160. S. C., nom. Leech v. North Staffordshire Ry., 29 L. J., M. C. 150; 1 L. T. 332; 8 W. R. 216.

Held, secondly, that their liability was not restricted by the special act to the period of twelve months from the completion of the works. Ib.

A railway company pulled down a county bridge, and erected another, at the same time entering into an agreement with the trustees of the road to repair such portions of the approaches to the bridge as had previously been repaired by the county:—Held, that the company had not interfered with the road so as to bring the case within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 58, and consequently that a mandamus to the company, commanding them to repair the road could not be granted. Exeter Road Trustees Ex parte, 16 Jur. 669.

The provisions of the Railways Clauses Act relating to the repair of approaches to bridges are not retrospective. Taff Vale Ry. v. Davies, 19 L. T. 278.

—— Where Turnpike Trust Expired.]—A special act of a railway company (incorporating the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, so far as it was not expressly varied or excepted) provided, that, if after notice the company did not, with reasonable expedition, repair a bridge over a turnpike road to the satisfaction of the surveyor of the trustees, the latter might repair and recover the costs; the Turnpike Act, however, was suffered to expire:—Held, that, though the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 65, was expressly varied by the special act, yet it revived on the cessation of the turnpike trust, and an order to repair the bridge might be made under it. L., C. & D. Ry. v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 42 L. J., M. C. 70; L. R. 8 C. P. 8.

—— Where Road before maintained by Parish.]—By 6 Will. 4, c. lxxv. s. 68, all bridges to be constructed by the South Eastern Railway Company either under or over the railway, shall be maintained and kept in repair by and at the expense of the company :—Held, that this included the duty to keep in repair the roadway of a bridge constructed over the line, although that roadway had always been maintained and repaired by the inhabitants of the parish. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 32 L. T. 858.

—— Order of Justices.]—An order of justices directing a company to repair damage done by them to a road in the course of making the railway, need not specify the particulars of the damage, nor what repairs were to be done ; it is sufficient if it states the length of the damaged part of the road, and orders the company to make good all damage done. The order and conviction for disobedience of it may include several highways in the same parish. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Wetherall, 15 Jur. 247.

A railway act enacting, that "so much of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, as relates to the mode of crossing roads and construction of bridges, shall respectively, except so far as the same may be by this act otherwise provided for, and except such of the provisions thereof as may be inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, be incorporated and form part of this act," incorporates not only all the provisions of the general act which regulate the crossing of turnpike-roads by the railway and the construction of railway bridges, together with s. 65, which imposes penalties for suffering the roads and approaches to the bridges to be out of repair, but also s. 145 and subsequent sections, which relate to the mode of enforcing such penalties. Bristol and Exeter Ry. v. Tucker, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 207 ; 7 L. T. 464.

e. Gauge.

Broad or Narrow.]—A railway act enacted that the railway should be constructed in all respects to the satisfaction of the engineer of the Great Western (a broad gauge railway), and that it should be formed of such gauge, and according to such mode of construction, as to admit of its being worked continuously with the Great Western. The court was of opinion that the railway might be constructed on the narrow gauge, as well as the broad. Beaman v. Rufford, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 550 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 537 ; 15 Jur. 914.

The act of parliament, constituting a railway company, directed that the railway, branch railways and works should be completed to the satisfaction of the engineer of a broad gauge railway company, and should be of such gauge and construction as would admit of the railway to be constructed being worked continuously with the broad gauge railway; and after reciting that the railway to be constructed was intended to be connected with two narrow gauge railways at specified junctions, the act directed, that, along the portions of the railway north of the specified point on their line, additional rails should be laid down, so as to adapt the line as well to the narrow as to the broad gauge there. The company proceeded to form a line on the narrow gauge for the whole length on the north of the specified point on its line, as also on a part of the line south of that point, with earthwork and timber-work so as to admit of the broad gauge rails being added, and of the railway being a mixed gauge line throughout, with double rails to the north of the specified point. The broad gauge company was entitled to shares in the mixed gauge railway company. And in a suit by the broad gauge company, suing on behalf of themselves and the other shareholders, against the directors of the mixed gauge company, it asked for an injunction to restrain the construction of the railway otherwise than upon the broad gauge throughout its entire length, or otherwise to restrain the laying down the narrow gauge at all south of the specified point ; also to restrain the laying down the narrow gauge north of the specified point, until the rails on the broad gauge had been laid down throughout the line, and also to restrain the opening the railway on any part till the rails on the broad gauge had been laid down on the whole line But held, that the court could not grant an injunction for any such objects. G. W. Ry. v. Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton Ry., 5 De G. & Sm. 437 ; 16 Jur. 443.

A broad gauge railway company were shareholders in a mixed gauge railway company, who, by its act, were bound to construct their line throughout on the broad gauge, and as to part on the narrow gauge also. In March, 1852, it filed a bill, stating that the mixed gauge railway company were about to construct the line throughout on the narrow gauge, although its funds were insufficient to enable them to do so, and also to comply with their act as to laying down the broad gauge. The bill sought an injunction to restrain the opening of any part of the narrow gauge line, and the further construction upon that gauge until the broad gauge was complete. In April, 1852, the injunction was refused. From that time contests were carried on in parliament between the two companies, ending in the rejection of certain bills solicited by the mixed gauge company. From August, 1852, to January, 1853, correspondence was carried on between them as to traffic arrangements. In January, 1853, the broad gauge company filed a new bill, and sought an injunction to restrain the opening by the mixed gauge railway of any portion of the line upon the narrow gauge before the broad gauge was completed. In the same month they moved for an injunction in the new suit, and also appealed from the refusal of the injunction in April, 1852 :—Held, that both motions were too late. Principles on which the court acts in refusing applications, either original or by way of appeal, on the ground of laches. Effect of objection in excluding laches. S. C., 3 De G. M. & G. 341.

Alteration of—Expenses.]—A railway company, in accordance with the provisions of an act of parliament, altered the gauge of its line,

"on the terms of being paid an equitable portion of the expense thereof, such expense and proportions to be borne by the companies whose interest would be advanced by such alteration"; and it was enacted that the plaintiffs should pay to the defendants such proportion of the expense as should be agreed upon between the parties; or, in case of their differing, as might be determined by the award of the railway commissioners. The several companies not being able to agree, the question was referred to the commissioners, and an inquiry was by them instituted, at which no person on behalf of the plaintiffs attended, and at which it appeared from the evidence that no notice was formally given them to attend, but at which expenses of the alteration were divided and apportioned among the companies. Notice of the award by the commissioners was sent to the plaintiffs, and their portion of the expenses demanded, but not being paid, an action was commenced. The plaintiffs impugned the fairness of the award inasmuch as the sum demanded was the proportion of the expense for seventy-one miles, instead of for four only. On a bill by the plaintiffs to set aside the award and to restrain the action:—Held, that the authority of the commissioners to make the award having been conferred upon them by act of parliament the court had no jurisdiction by way of appeal to set it aside; and as the plaintiffs had subsequently had recourse to, and had memorialised, the commissioners, the bill must be dismissed, with costs. Newry and Enniskillen Ry. v. Ulster Ry., 2 Jur. (N.S.) 936; 4 W. R. 781.

f. Branch Railway.

What is.]—The Taff Vale Railway obtained a lease from the trustees of the Bute Docks at Cardiff of land which they required for the purposes of their railway. The lease was for 250 years. With a view to securing that the proposed railway should not be used so as to take custom from the docks in which they were interested, the trustees inserted a covenant in the lease, on the part of the railway, that the company, so far as it was able, should cause all minerals which should be conveyed upon their line, or any part or branch of it, for shipment, to be shipped into vessels in the Bute Ship Canal (West Bute Dock), or in some basin or cut thereto belonging. Also, that when any minerals which should have been conveyed along the Taff Vale Railway, or any part or branch thereof, should be shipped into any vessel in any dock or basin whatsoever other than the Bute Ship Canal (West Bute Dock), or in some dock, basin or cut belonging thereto, the Taff Vale Railway Company should pay to the owners of the Bute Ship Canal for the time being the same wharfage dues in respect of such minerals as would have been payable for the same if such minerals had been shipped at the Bute Ship Canal. After the line of railway had been constructed on the land so leased to the Taff Vale Railway Company, the company took a lease of another line (the Penarth Railway) which terminated at Penarth Docks on the south-west side of the river Ely, the Bute Docks being on the north-east side of that river. The Penarth Docks and the Penarth Railway were one concern; the whole was leased by the Taff Vale Railway Company. The two were connected at a station on the Taff Vale Railway:—Held, that the Penarth Railway was not a part or branch of the Taff Vale Railway; that the words in the covenant, "any dock or basin whatsoever," must be controlled by some limitation, and so controlled, the covenant must be confined to any dock or basin in connection with the Taff Vale Railway, or some part or branch of it, terminating in or at a dock or basin, and that as the Penarth Railway was not a part or branch of the Taff Vale Railway, the covenant did not apply to minerals shipped or unshipped at Penarth Harbour, though they were carried for a certain distance along the Taff Vale Railway. Taff Vale Ry. v. Macnabb, 42 L. J., Q. B. 153; L. R. 6 H. L. 169; 22 W. R. 65.

Compelling Construction.]—A railway extension act enacted that it should be lawful for the company to make a branch railway, "and if they think fit," certain diverging lines to collieries shewn on the plans. The company was empowered to let on lease the diverging lines, either before or after the construction, to the owners of the collieries:—Held, that the statute did not cast upon the company the duty to make the branch railway, and therefore a mandamus would not lie. G. W. Ry. v. Reg., 1 El. & Bl. 874; 16 6 Jur. 75—Ex. Ch.

Private Powers under Private Act.]—By a statute a company was empowered to make a railway through certain districts. By s. 5, they were directed to form new roads in lieu of any existing ones that might be injured by their railway. Sect. 70 empowered proprietors of lands, mines, &c., to make railways through their own lands and those of other persons consenting, and across any road or roads, to communicate with the principal railway, and no reference was made to any former limitation of powers:—Held, nevertheless, that the power in this clause was not absolutely given, but must be subject to the provision of s. 5, or to the condition of leaving space enough, independently of the railway, for the public to pass. Rex v. Morris, 1 B. & Ad. 441.

Permission to make Communications.]—By a clause in an act (similar to s. 76 of the Railways Clauses Act), owners or occupiers of land adjoining or near the railway might lay down or extend on their own lands, or on lands on the sides thereof, belonging to the company, any collateral or continuous branch from such lands to communicate with the railway for bringing carriages upon or across the same; but all the openings and communications for that purpose were to be made at such places as might, so far as practicable, be most convenient to all the parties interested, and so as not to endanger the safety of persons travelling on the railway, and in case of difference as to the proper places for the openings, they were to be determined by two justices of the peace; provided always, that the company should not be bound to make any such opening where they should have erected any building, station or yard:—Held, that the assent of the company to an opening being made at a station was not in the nature of a licence, and could not be revoked. Bell v. Midland Ry., 3 De G. & J. 673.

Obstruction by Railway to.]—As to what acts constitute a permanent obstruction by a railway company to the right to use a private line communicating with their railway, so as to entitle the reversioner to maintain an action, see Bell v. Midland Ry., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 28; 30 L. J., C. P. 273; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 4 L. T. 293; 9 W. R. 612.

Leave of Commissioners.]—Under an act of parliament, any owner of mines, &c., lying within a certain distance of a canal, was authorised to apply to the commissioners of the navigation, to have a railway made over the lands of other proprietors, intervening between them and the canal, for the purpose of communicating with it; and if it should appear to the major part of the commissioners that such road was fitting or necessary, it was to be lawful for the proprietor of the mine, &c., to make it, subject to certain restrictions expressed in the act; and it was provided, that if any person should think himself aggrieved by anything done in pursuance of the act, he might within six calendar months appeal to the quarter sessions. Under this act, the commissioners, by their award, authorised the defendant to make a railway over the lands of the plaintiff; the plaintiff having filed his bill to restrain the execution of the work, on the ground that the railway was not fitting and necessary, an injunction was granted. Dudley v. Horton, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 104.

For what Traffic.]—The plaintiff was a lessee for a term of twenty-one years of prebendal lands, there being reserved to the lessors the woods, underwoods, mines, quarries, seams of clay, with full and free authority and power to enter and to cut down, and to dig, win, work, get and carry away the same, with free ingress, egress, way-leave and passage to and from the same, or to and from any other mines, quarries and seams of clay, on foot and on horseback, and with carts and all manner of carriages, and also all necessary and convenient ways, passages, conveniences, privileges and powers whatsoever for the purposes aforesaid, and particularly of laying, making and granting waggon-ways in and over the demised premises, paying reasonable damages. The vice-chancellor, inclining to the opinion that the reservation did not enable the lessors to grant to a public company a licence to make a railway for the purpose of conveying passengers and general merchandise, but was only intended to enable the lessors or their grantees to convey mineral produce and wood from the demised lands to and from adjacent lands, granted an injunction restraining the lessors and their licensees from proceeding to make a railway for the former purpose, previous to the precise extent of the reservation being ascertained by the decision of a court of law. Farrow v. Vansitart, 1 Railw. Cas. 602.

Semble, an agreement to grant a way-leave for the purpose of a mineral railway simply will not justify the construction of a railway for the purposes of general traffic. Meynell v. Surtees, infra.

Where, by a clause in an act of parliament, it was enacted "that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any owner or occupier of any ground through which the said railway may pass, from carrying at his or their own expense any railway or other road, or any cut or canal which such owner or occupier is authorised to make in his or her lands or grounds across the said main railway within the respective lands or grounds of such owner or occupier":—Held, that the right given by this clause was not confined to the state of the land at the time the act passed, but was intended for the convenience of the occupiers from time to time of the land partly on one side and partly on the other of the principal railway, and that without reference to the title under which it was held. Monkland v. Kirkintilloch Ry., 3 Railw. Cas. 273.

Semble, no interdict will be granted to prevent a party having the right to cross a railway from prolonging and extending it for the use of any persons with whom he might make an agreement for that purpose. Ib.

A neighbouring landowner proposed to construct a railway on his own land, and to carry it under the company's railway, and to use it as a public railway for general traffic:—Held, that he was entitled so to do, and that the clause in the act did not restrict the use of the cross railway to purposes connected with the more convenient enjoyment of the neighbouring lands. Hughes v. Chester and Holyhead Ry., 3 De G. F. & J. 352; 31 L. J., Ch. 97; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 221; 7 L. T. 197; 10 W. R. 219.

Devolution of Title—Abandonment.]—A canal act, passed in 1789, empowered the proprietors of lands and their lessees to make railways or roads across lands of other persons to convey their coal and ironstone to the canal. Fifty-four years after the act the lessees of some coal mines gave a notice to an adjoining landowner of their intention to avail themselves of the powers of the act, to enable them to make a road over his land. This resulted in an agreement which authorised the lessees to make the road, paying annually 5*l.* 15*s.* This sum was paid irregularly. At intervals the ownership of the lands was changed, and the lessees afterwards abandoned the tramroad, and apparently without any consent, except that of the tenant, made a railroad across the estate in a different direction. They also erected an engine-house, partly on the old tramroad and partly on adjoining land, and for this they subsequently agreed to pay an additional 1*l.* 15*s.* The agreement contained no limit for the continuance of the road, but six months' notice of its discontinuance was to be given by the lessees, who were to restore it to agricultural purposes. Upon the defendant becoming owner of the lands, he complained of the carriage of goods not mentioned in the act, and gave the lessees notice that he should require an annual payment of 35*l.*, and, upon their refusing to pay that sum, he gave them notice to cease the use of the railway, and subsequently he took up the rails. Upon a bill by the lessees:—Held, that the landowner was bound by the agreement of his predecessor; that the abandonment of one way for another had not affected the agreement; that the alteration as well as the erection of the engine-house had been acquiesced in by the landowners; that the payment was fixed for the railway, but not for the engine-house; that the defendant was not justified in taking up the rails, and that he must answer in damages for the loss sustained by the lessees; that they might restore the rails, and that the defendant must be restrained from interfering with them or with their use and enjoyment of the railway for all purposes. Mold v. Wheatcroft, 29 L. J., Ch. 11; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 2; 1 L. T. 226.

Offer—Acceptance.]—An iron company, owners of a private railway, being desirous of connecting its line with other railways by means of a branch line, applied to various landowners, and to O. and his mortgagees, for way-leaves through their lands, and an offer in writing was made to them in March, 1843, by O. and his mortgagees of a way-leave through their lands, by a lease for sixty years, by the payment of triple damages yearly. There was no express acceptance by the company of the offer. The iron company assigned all its interest to a railway company, which was to construct the line. In October, 1843, the proposed line was staked out over the lands of O., and in July, 1844 (all the other landowners being settled with), the works were commenced; and in 1845 the line was opened for traffic. In June, 1844, the mortgagees of O., under their power of sale, sold and conveyed the property, including the land on which part of the line was formed, to B., who sold to S. From 1844 to 1847 unsuccessful negotiations had been pending between the parties for settling the quantum of the yearly rent; and in 1847 S. brought ejectment against the company. The company then filed a bill to stay proceedings at law, and for specific performance, alleging acceptance of the offer of March, 1843, by the acts of the company, in staking out and making its line in accordance with the offer, and praying that the court would determine the quantum of rent to be paid:—Held, that the acts of the company did not amount to an acceptance of the offer so as to make it a contract binding the land, and the bill was dismissed. Meynell v. Surtees, 25 L. J., Ch. 257; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 737; 3 W. R. 535. Affirming 3 Sm. & G. 301.

Construction — Acquiescence.] — Where an incorporated company stands by and permits expensive works to be executed at the spot where its premises are situated and its operations carried on, the effect, for all purposes of knowledge and acquiescence, will be the same as in the case of an individual. Laird v. Birkenhead Ry., 1 Johns. 500; 29 L. J., Ch. 218; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 140: 1 L. T. 259; 8 W. R. 58.

The plaintiff in 1855 submitted to the directors of a railway company a project for a private branch line, to be constructed at his cost and for his accommodation, to which the directors expressed their assent and agreement generally, but the terms and details were left for future arrangement. In 1856 he, at considerable cost, constructed the branch, and the company prohibited the user until a definite understanding should be come to. Semble, that at this time the company was bound to assent to reasonable terms, and the court, if possible, would have decreed specific performance. Ib.

Agreement to Construct—Specific Performance.] —The defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to undertake to execute a branch railway according to the terms of a specification to be prepared by the plaintiff's engineer for the time being, and to give a bond to secure the performance of their contract. The plaintiffs had at the date of the agreement a bill pending to enable them to make the branch, and holding them to complete within a specified time, on pain of a suspension of dividends on the capital of their entire line. The specification was prepared by the company's engineer, but prices having risen, the defendants repudiated their agreement. The plaintiffs then filed their bill for a specific performance of the agreement according to the terms of the specification, and to have the bond executed, charging that they would have withdrawn the bill before parliament, by reason of the liabilities incurred on the passing thereof, had not the defendants (to whom, as owners of a large estate adjacent to the proposed branch, it was of great importance that the plaintiffs should be bound to make the branch) assented to the terms of the agreement, and the plaintiffs believed that they would bonâ fide carry out the same: that the defendants, by their agreement, induced the plaintiffs to come under the obligation to make and complete the lines, and the act was passed upon the faith of the agreement; and charging that the not carrying out of the agreement was a fraud on the plaintiffs, there having been a part performance on their part. On demurrer, it was held (assuming the agreement to be valid within the Statute of Frauds, and in other respects one upon which the plaintiffs could recover), first, that the agreement could not be enforced as regards the construction of the railway, because, from the nature of the works, the subject of the agreement, it was an agreement the execution of which the court could not superintend consistently with public convenience, inasmuch as the motions would be incessant for committal or otherwise for non-performance of orders with regard to the making of particular works, besides the difficulty, on the ground of reciprocity, in enforcing that part of the agreement by which the plaintiffs were to provide the land, and because the plaintiffs having by their act power to acquire the land, could make the railway for themselves; and having so ascertained the expense the defendants had put them to, would have an adequate and the better remedy in damages, and that the circumstances of fraud alleged in the bill did not prevent the application of the foregoing reasons. Secondly, that as the court could not superintend the general execution of the whole works, or enable the defendants to earn the whole of the money to which they would be entitled for the works when made, the execution of the bond would be a piecemeal performance of the agreement, which the court would not direct, and the demurrer was allowed. South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, 1 Kay & J. 186; 3 Eq. R. 70; 24 L. J., Ch. 1; 3 W. R. 3. Affirmed, 3 Eq. R. 153; 24 L. J., Ch. 87; 3 W. R. 133.

Level Crossing—Gates.]—The provisions of the Highways Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 71), as amended by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55 (for the better regulation of railways), s. 9, by which the proprietors of a railroad which crosses a highway at a level crossing are compelled to put up gates at such crossing, do not apply to a private line of railway, on private property used by the proprietors exclusively for their private purposes. Matson v. Baird, 3 App. Cas. 1082; 39 L. T. 304; 26 W. R. 835—H. L. (Sc.)

g. Streams, User and Diversion of.

Dimensions of Arch.] —A railway company, in exercise of the powers conferred on it by an act of parliament, which gave compensation to persons whose property might sustain damage from its operations, was proceeding to erect an arch above a mill race, for the purpose of sustaining an embankment on which the railway was to be constructed, and it appearing that injury would be done to the mill if the arch were of the proposed dimensions, but that the injury would be avoided if the arch were of certain larger dimensions, an injunction was granted to restrain the company from making over the mill race an arch of less than certain specified dimensions. Coates v. Clarence Ry., 1 Russ. & M. 181 ; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 72.

Relief barred — Acquiescence.] — A railway company made excavations upon its own land, the purpose of which was the partial diversion of the stream of water of a navigable river ; and the works so prosecuted necessarily occasioned the obstruction of a private road. The plaintiffs, who were the owners of a fulling mill, which was supplied with water from the river, alleged that the proposed diversion of the stream was illegal under the powers of the act. The plaintiffs, who had a right of way over the private road, also alleged that the company was interfering with the road without the performance of the conditions imposed by the railway act, as preliminary to interfering with the road :—Held, that although the company were working on their own land, the plaintiffs must be held to have had notice of the intended works of the company ; and had by an acquiescence for eighteen months, during which the company had expended a large sum of money on the works, precluded themselves from asking for the interposition of the court by injunction. Semble, the plaintiffs, although interested, by the situation of their property or the nature of their business, in preserving open the navigation of the river Calder, but not otherwise interested in the navigation, were not entitled to sustain a suit to enforce clauses in the railway acts protecting the Calder navigation from injury by the railway works. Illingworth v. Manchester and Leeds Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 187.

Powers of Diversion.]—A railway company is only justified in diverting streams and roads as authorised by s. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, when such diversions are strictly necessary to enable the company to carry out the undertaking, and therefore the right to make such a diversion cannot be insisted on where it is only convenient or economical for the company to do so. A railway company, in order to avoid the expense of making two bridges within a very short distance of each other, diverted a stream and carried it along the east side of their line, so that it no longer entered the plaintiff's land, which lay on the west side of the line. The plaintiff only used the stream for the purposes of watering cattle ; and although the company provided (by means of culverts) for a sufficient flow of water for this purpose in the old bed of the stream :—Held, that the diversion of the stream being only convenient and economical, and not strictly necessary, was not justified by the act, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to an injunction to restrain the company from interfering with the flow of the stream, as formerly enjoyed. Pugh v. Golden Valley Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 721 ; 15 Ch. D. 330 ; 42 L. T. 863 ; 28 W. R. 863.

The power conferred on a railway by s. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to divert the course of a river or road, "in order the more conveniently to carry the same over or under, or by the side of the railway, as it may think proper," is to be taken as cut down and qualified by the proviso that it be an act necessary for making, maintaining, altering or repairing, and using the railway. Ib.

By an act of parliament authorising the construction of a railway, it was provided that nothing in the act should authorise or empower the railway company "to obstruct the navigation of a river, or any part thereof, or to divert any of the waters therein or which now supply the river" :—Held, that this clause applied only to the time of construction of the railway, and did not take away the rights of the company as a riparian proprietor. Att-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 23 L. T. 344 ; 18 W. R. 1187. Affirmed, L. R. 6 Ch. 572 ; 19 W. R. 788.

User of Stream.] — The owner of land not abutting on a river, with the licence of a riparian owner, took water from the river, and after using it for cooling certain apparatus returned it to the river undiminished and unpolluted :—Held, that a lower riparian owner could not obtain an injunction against the landowner so taking the water, or against the riparian owner through whose land it was taken. Northam v. Hurley (1 El. & Bl. 665) and Sampson v. Hoddinot (1 C. B. (N.S.) 590) distinguished. Kensit v. G. E. Ry., 52 L. J., Ch. 608 ; 23 Ch. D. 566 ; 48 L. T. 784 ; 31 W. R. 603.

The ordinary right of the riparian proprietor is to take so much water as he requires for domestic or similar purposes :—Held, that the fact that the railway company did not require water for such purposes did not entitle it to take it for other purposes, such as supplying their locomotives. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., supra.

A railway company whose line crossed a stream in the immediate neighbourhood of one of their stations, took water for supplying its engines and for the general purposes of the station. On a bill filed by a millowner lower down the stream, it appeared that the abstraction of water did no damage in wet weather, and never shortened the working of the mill for more than a few minutes a day :—Held, that the company, as riparian owner, was entitled to take a reasonable quantity of water for its purposes, and that in this case the quantity taken was reasonable. Sandwich (Earl) v. G. N. Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 225 ; 10 Ch. D. 707 ; 27 W. R. 616.

h. Level Crossings.

Inconvenience Caused by — Damages.] — Damages are not recoverable for stoppages and other mere inconveniences incident to the crossing of a public road by a railway on the level, under the sanction of parliament. Caledonian Ry. v. Ogilvy, 2 Macq. H. L. 229.

A level crossing in such a case is a grievance to be endured without complaint by private persons, from a consideration of the benefit gained by the public. Ib.

Hence where a railway passed within some few yards of a gentleman's lodge, across a public road, forming the chief access to his residence ; although he was liable to constant stoppages by the closing of the gates on the level crossing ; although the passing of trains frightened his horses and terrified his visitors, "particularly ladies" :—Held, that these annoyances did not ground a claim of damages against the company. Ib.

Held, also, that the inconvenience felt in such a case is one to which all the Queen's subjects are exposed, and for which no particular or individual remedy exists. Ib.

Agreement—Effect of, on General Rights.]—Where a person has made a special agreement as to crossings on a line of railway running through his land, if, from particular circumstances, that agreement is not carried into effect, he cannot, on the ground of any general rights, under the railway acts, claim to have any other crossings made according to the discretion of the court, for that would be to get the court to substitute a new agreement, and not to enforce the performance of the original. Darnley (Earl) v. L. C. & D. Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 404; L. R. 2 H. L. 43; 16 L. T. 217; 15 W. R. 817.

Instead of Bridge—Obligation to Construct.]—Where a special railway act provided that the line should be made according to the level shewn on the deposited plans, and that it should be lawful for the company to carry the line across a specified street on the level of the street:—Held, that the latter provision was not obligatory, and did not prevent the company from carrying their line across the street according to the provisions of the general act. Dover Harbour (Warden) v. L. C. & D. Ry., 3 De G. F. & J. 559; 30 L. J., Ch. 474; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 453; 4 L. T. 387; 9 W. R. 523.

A mandatory injunction will not lie to compel a railway company to construct a bridge instead of a level crossing pursuant to an order of the Board of Trade where the company is wholly without funds. Bristol and North Somerset Ry., In re, 47 L. J., Q. B. 48; 3 Q. B. D. 10; 37 L. T. 527; 26 W. R. 236.

Duty to Repair.]—When a railway, under the powers of an act of parliament, crosses a highway on the level, it is the duty of the company to keep the part of the way used by the public in a state of repair suitable for the ordinary and regular traffic. Oliver v. N. E. Ry., 43 L. J., Q. B. 198; L. R. 9 Q. B. 409.

Duty to Protect.]—A plaintiff negligently fastened his horse by the bridle to a railing in the open yard of a public-house, within which he remained for two hours. The highway leading from the house crossed a railway on a level, and the company had set up gates across both ends of the highway at the crossing. The gates opened outwards from the railway, and closed with a catch, but were easy to open, and would open when a train passed, and there was no gatekeeper at the crossing. During the plaintiff's absence the horse escaped from the railing, owing to the negligent fastening, strayed to the highway and along that to the crossing, and, the gate there not being closed, through the gateway to the railway, where it was killed by a passing engine of the company:—Held, that, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, s. 9, an obligation was imposed on the company to keep the gates closed against any stray cattle on the highway; that the accident had been caused by their statutory misconduct; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from them the value of the horse. Dickinson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 H. & R. 399.

Where a tramroad ran parallel on land of a railway company with the line for some distance, and afterwards crossed the line on a level, there being gates at the crossing, and a person, who had a licence from the company to use the tramroad with his carts and horses, paying toll therefor to them, had his horse startled, and in consequence the horse, having dashed through the gates (which had been left open by the company), was killed by a passing train, and the jury, in an action to recover for the loss of the horse, found that there was no negligence on the part of the owner, but that the company was guilty of negligence in leaving the gates open:—Held, that a duty arose out of the circumstances, between the company and the owner, to use ordinary care in the management of the gates, and that the company was therefore liable for this loss as arising out of their neglect of that duty. Marfell v. South Wales Ry., 8 C. B. (N.S.) 525; 29 L. J., C. P. 315; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 290; 2 L. T. 629; 8 W. R. 765.

A railway crossed a highway at a level, gates were provided at each side for carriages, and swing gates for foot passengers, and a watch-box and attendant to close the gates. A boy came to the crossing and followed a cart on to the line; then seeing an up train approaching he waited till it had passed but was caught and killed by a down train, which he might also have seen:—Held, evidence of negligence, the company being bound by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 47, to have the gates closed at the time. N. E. Ry. v. Wanless, 43 L. J., Q. B. 185; L. R. 7 H. L. 12; 30 L. T. 275; 22 W. R. 561.

At the point where a railway crossed a high road by a level crossing there were two large gates, which, when closed, covered the entire width of the metalled road and fenced in the line therefrom. At the side of the large gates, and beyond the width of the metalled road, but communicating therewith by a short footpath, there was a small gate for foot passengers. A piece of fence, which stood immediately beyond the small gate, and against which it rested, was allowed by the railway company to get out of repair, and became rotten, in consequence whereof, some horses belonging to the plaintiff, which were straying on the high road, were enabled, by passing along the short footpath and pushing against the fence, to get on to the line, where they were killed by a passing train:—Held, that the company had failed to satisfy the obligation to fence their line imposed on them by s. 47 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and were liable in an action for damages. Charman v. S. E. Ry., 57 L. J., Q. B. 597; 21 Q. B. D. 524; 37 W. R. 8; 53 J. P. 86—C. A.

A declaration stated that the railway of a railway company crossed a public highway on a level, yet the company, disregarding their duty, and the statutes in that behalf, did not keep gates across the highway, at the point where the same is crossed by the railway, constantly closed, by reason whereof two horses of the plaintiff, lawfully being on the highway near to the railway at the point aforesaid, went and escaped from the highway into and upon the railway, and were by a locomotive engine and train of carriages run over and killed. Plea, that the horses were not lawfully on the highway at the time when the injury was done. The horses, which were grazing in the plaintiff's field, had leaped over the hedge into a turnpike-road, and had strayed thence into a new road formed by the company leading across the railway on a level into an old highway, and, one of the gates at the crossing being open, had got upon the railway:—Held, first, that the road formed by the company was a highway, though the parish might not be bound to repair it. Fawcett v. York and North Midland Ry., 16 Q. B. 610; 20 L. J., Q. B. 222; 15 Jur. 173.

Held, secondly, that the company being required by their act, and by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, s. 9, to keep the gates at the crossings constantly closed, the horses were, as against them, lawfully on the highway, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover against the company. Ib.

Where Gates a Nuisance.]—If a railway company makes the railway so as to intercept a public highway in a manner not authorised by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 47, or some other act, by putting up gates at the point of intersection, so as to constitute a nuisance in blocking up the way, a passenger along the highway is not justified in prostrating those gates to make his way good across the line of railway, but should seek his remedy by mandamus or other legal proceeding against the company. Ellis v. L. & S. W. Ry., 2 H. & N. 424; 26 L. J., Ex. 349; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1008; 5 W. R. 682.

Duty to keep Attendant.]—A railway company, acting under the provisions of special acts, which embodied the Railways Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), constructed a railway crossing a highway on a level, and erected at the crossing sufficient gates, but did not employ persons to open and shut them. A person coming along the highway at night arrived at the crossing, and finding no person in attendance to open the gates, proceeded to open them himself, and was injured in consequence:—Held, that he had no right of action against the company. Wyatt v. G. W. Ry., 6 B. & S. 709; 34 L. J., Q. B. 204; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 825; 12 L. T. 568; 13 W. R. 837.

The effect of s. 47 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, is to make a road at a level crossing of a railway only a highway when the gates are opened by one of the railway company's servants, and if a servant when called upon does not come, and a person using the road opens the gates, that person commits an unlawful act, but if damage ensues, it is a question for the jury whether the damage was the reasonable natural consequence of the unlawful act. Wyatt v. G. W. Ry. (34 L. J., Q. B. 204) questioned, but followed. Reg. v. Strange, 16 Cox, C. C. 552.

The offence of failing to erect and maintain a lodge or watchman at a level crossing over a turnpike-road or public carriage road mentioned in s. 6 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1863, applies to any turnpike-road or public carriage road, and is not limited to such similar roads as are specifically mentioned in the special act authorising the construction of the particular railway. Quære, whether such roads where marked for level crossings on the statutory plan deposited under the special act, though not specifically mentioned in that act, may not be held to be turnpike or public carriage roads "authorised by the special act" for level crossings within s. 5 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1863. Reg. v. Longe, 66 L. J., Q. B. 278.

Delay in opening Gates—Obstruction of Highway.]—The plaintiff a medical man, whose time was of pecuniary value, was, while driving along a public highway, detained for twenty minutes at a level crossing by the unreasonable and negligent delay of the defendant railway company's servants in opening the gates at the crossing:—Held, that the defendants were liable in damages to the plaintiff for such delay. Boyd v. G. N. Ry., [1895] 2 Ir. R. 555.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Erection of Fence and Hand-rails.]—Under s. 62 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, justices have no power to order the erection by a railway company of fences and hand-rails at a level crossing on a public carriage road, that section being ministerial only in respect of jurisdiction thereinbefore conferred by the act, and no provision applicable to the case of such a highway being contained in any previous section. Reg. v. Schofield, 5 R. 575; 69 L. T. 313; 58 J. P. 132.

Private Railway Gates.]—The provisions of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, s. 9, as to making and maintaining gates where a railway crosses a road on a level, do not apply to a railway belonging to private owners, and not constructed under parliamentary powers, nor used for the conveyance of passengers. Matson v. Baird, 3 App. Cas. 1082; 39 L. T. 304; 26 W. R. 835—H. L. (Sc.)

A horse escaped from a field without any negligence on the part of its owner, and strayed for two miles along a public highway to a point where the road was crossed on a level by a private railway. The horse then strayed along the railway for about half a mile farther till it reached the place of junction between the private line and the line of the North British Railway Company, where it was killed by a passing train. The private railway was not constructed under parliamentary powers, nor used for the conveyance of passengers, and there were no gates either at the level crossing or at the junction:—Held, that the owners of the private railway were under no obligation to erect gates at the level crossing, and were not liable at the suit of the owner of the horse. Ib.

Private Way over—How affected by Statute.]—Lands were bought by the crown under an act enabling the crown to buy lands for the purpose of fortifications, but providing that the lands were not to be built upon or sold. By an act authorising a railway to be made through these lands, the railway company was obliged to make level crossings giving access to part of the lands then a marsh or pasture. The crown, under the authority of a subsequent act, sold a part of the lands, and the purchasers proposed to build houses thereon:—Held, that the purchasers could build houses thereon, and that the occupiers of the houses would be entitled to make use of the level crossings, and an injunction granted against obstruction of the level crossings, but not so as to prevent the company from using the railway for the reasonable working of their traffic. United Land Co. v. G. E. Ry., 44 L. J., Ch. 685; L. R. 10 Ch. 586; 33 L. T. 292; 23 W. R. 896.

A private railway act contained a recital that it was expedient that certain footways which were crossed by the railway on the level should be dealt with as by the act provided, namely, "that as regards five of such footways, the rights of way in respect thereof should be extinguished, and that the other footway should be carried by a bridge over the railway." One of the five footways to be extinguished was the subject of a previous agreement between the owners and the company, under which the owners, their heirs, tenants and assigns, were to have a free way of passage with horses, carts, waggons and carriages over the said footway. The act provided no compensation for the extinguishment. The company erected a fence across the level crossing without any notice to the owners, who brought their action to restrain the company from so doing:—Held, that their private rights were not taken away by the act, which only dealt with public rights of way. Wells v. London, Tilbury, and Southend Ry., 5 Ch. D. 126; 37 L. T. 302; 25 W. R. 325—C. A.

Negligence at.]—See CARRIERS—NEGLIGENCE.

i. Fences.

Duty to Owners of Lands.]—Sect. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, imposes an absolute obligation on railway companies as between them and the owners and occupiers of adjoining lands, to make and maintain fences to prevent cattle straying on the line. Buxton v. N. E. Ry., 9 B. & S. 824; 37 L. J., Q. B. 258; L. R. 3 Q. B. 549; 18 L. T. 795; 16 W. R. 1124.

The liability to fence imposed by s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, is the same liability as that which is imposed on an adjoining owner by prescription at common law. Wiseman v. Booker, 3 C. P. D. 184; 38 L. T. 292; 26 W. R. 634.

The obligation of a railway company to fence under s. 68, against the owners and occupiers of lands adjoining the railway, is co-extensive only with the common-law prescriptive obligation to repair fences. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Wallis, 7 Railw. Cas. 709; 2 C. L. R. 573; 14 C. B. 243; 23 L. J., C. P. 85; 18 Jur. 268; 2 W. R. 194.

Sect. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, is a substitution for s. 10 of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55. Ib.

Sect. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, requiring companies to fence their lines against adjoining landowners, does reach a case where the adjoining land belongs to the company themselves. Marfell v. South Wales Ry., 8 C. B. (N.S.) 525; 29 L. J., C. P. 315; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 240; 2 L. T. 629; 8 W. R. 765.

The duty imposed upon railway companies by s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, as to the making and repairing of fences between their railways and the adjoining lands is not more extensive than that imposed upon ordinary tenants by the common law. Ricketts v. East and West India Docks, 7 Railw. Cas. 295; 12 C. B. 160; 21 L. J., C. P. 201; 16 Jur. 1072.

In consequence of the fences of a railway being out of repair, some sheep got upon it, which were run over and killed by a locomotive engine guided by a servant of the company who had received orders from them to travel at a certain rate per hour:—Held, that the remedy of the owner of the sheep against the company was in case, and not in trespass. Sharrod v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 Ex. 580; 14 Jur. 23.

B. folded his sheep in a field adjoining a railway, using the quickset hedge forming the company's fence as one side of the inclosure. Some of the sheep escaping through a small hole in the hedge, got upon the railway and were killed:—Held, that the company was liable, and that it was no misdirection to tell the jury that by s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, the company was bound to keep their fences sufficiently strong to prevent sheep and cattle from straying out of the adjoining lands, the jury having found as a fact that the fence was insufficient. Bessant v. G. W. Ry., 8 C. B. (N.S.) 368.

In 1862 a railway acquired lands under their statutory powers, and, in constructing their line, fenced it off from adjoining lands, occupied by plaintiff's predecessor, by a ditch or gripe, and bank with posts and rails on top; the ditch being on the plaintiff's side, the bank on the railway side, of the fence. In 1890 plaintiff's cow slipped into and was found dead in the ditch:—Held, that the fence was properly and sufficiently constructed by the defendant company. Colley v. L. & N. W. Ry. (5 Ex. D. 227) followed. Corry v. G. W. Ry. (7 Q. B. D. 322) distinguished. Ryan v. Great Southern and Western Ry., 32 L. R., Ir. 15.

Owner releasing Right to Accommodation Works.]—The plaintiff in 1846 became tenant from year to year of land belonging to one G. In 1847 the defendants, a railway company, acquired part of the land in the exercise of their statutory powers, and by arrangement with G. paid him compensation in lieu of all accommodation works, including the right to have his land fenced from the railway, G. releasing the defendants from their statutory obligation in that respect. The defendants, however, made a fence of posts and rails between the land so occupied by the plaintiff and a ditch in the defendants' land adjoining the railway, and they planted a hedge on the side of the ditch nearest the railway itself, sufficient to prevent animals from straying thereon. They, however, neglected to keep up the posts and rails, and in consequence of their neglect to do so a cow belonging to the plaintiff, in 1879, whilst the plaintiff so continued in the occupation of the land under the original tenancy which had never been determined, fell into the ditch and was killed:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the loss of the cow, for that their arrangement with the owner did not exonerate them from their liability under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68, to maintain the fence for the benefit of the occupier, and so as to prevent his cattle from straying from his land. Corry v. G. W. Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 386; 7 Q. B. D. 322; 44 L. T. 701; 29 W. R. 623; 45 J. P. 712—C. A.

Duty to Passengers.]—Sect. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, imposes no duty on a railway company towards its passengers to keep up the fences, and a railway company is not bound, at common law, to maintain fences sufficient to keep cattle off the line under all circumstances, but is bound to use every reasonable care to prevent them straying on to the line. Buxton v. N. E. Ry., 9 B. & S. 824; 37 L. J., Q. B. 258; L. R. 3 Q. B. 549; 18 L. T. 795; 16 W. R. 1124.

There is no duty in a railway company to fence their line of railway as towards passengers or persons already on the line. The duty in them to fence is towards persons off the line, to prevent the latter from getting or straying upon it. Harrold v. G. W. Ry., 14 L. T. 440.

Rights of Third Parties.]—A railway company let surplus land to a tenant, separating it from the adjoining land not taken by means of an open post-and-rail fence four feet high. The tenant planted his land with vegetables. Horses kept on the adjoining land of the defendant, by reason of the insufficiency of the fence, passed their heads through and over it, and did damage to the defendant's crops:—Held, that, the duty of fencing being by the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68, imposed upon the railway company, the defendant was not responsible to their tenant for the trespass of his cattle. Wiseman v. Booker, 3 C. P. D. 184; 38 L. T. 292; 26 W. R. 634.

Duty of adjoining Landowner to Servant of Company.]—The plaintiff, a platelayer, in the employment of a railway company, was returning from his work in a trolley propelled by hand, when some pigs belonging to the defendant, which had escaped through the fence, got in the way of the trolley and upset it. The fence erected by the company was sufficient to keep out horses, oxen, and sheep: — Held, that the fence was insufficient, but that the plaintiff was identified with the company, to whose neglect the accident was to be attributed. Childs v. Hearn, 43 L. J., Ex. 100; L. R. 9 Ex. 176; 22 W. R. 864.

Licensee.] — When a railway company has neglected the duty imposed on them by the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68, to fence its line from the adjoining lands, and in consequence of such neglect cattle in the adjoining lands pass on to the line and are injured by the company's trains, an action for the injury may be maintained against the company by the owner of the cattle, though he has no more interest in the adjoining lands than a licence from the occupier to graze the cattle there. Dawson v. Midland Ry., 42 L. J., Ex. 49; L. R. 8 Ex. 8; 21 W. R. 56.

To Fence off their own Yards.]—A colt strayed from a field on to a public road, abutting upon which was a yard not fenced from a railway, the gate of which was, through the neglect of the company's servants, left open. Whilst the colt was being driven back to the field by the servant of the owner, it escaped into the yard, and thence on to the railway, where it was killed by a passing train:—Held, that the company was responsible. Midland Ry. v. Daykin, 17 C. B. 126; 25 L. J., C. P. 73; 4 W. R. 16.

A count stated that a company was the owner and occupier of a railway, and of a station thereon for the loading, unloading and delivery of cattle carried thereby, and of a yard adjoining the station and railway, into and through which yard cattle brought by the railway to the station were used and accustomed, and were obliged to pass in going from the station to a common highway near thereto; and that the company, by reason of the premises, ought to have made and maintained sufficient fences between the yard and the railway, so as to prevent cattle lawfully being in the yard from straying thereout into or upon the railway; but that they omitted to make and maintain such fences, whereby a bull of the plaintiff, lawfully being in the yard on his way to the highway, without default or negligence on his part, strayed from the yard on to the railway, and was killed by a passing train:—Held, that there was no liability upon the company, either by the common law or by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 68, to fence their yard from the railway, and consequently that the count disclosed no cause of action. Roberts v. G. W. Ry., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 506; 27 L. J., C. P. 266; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1240.

Level Crossings.]—See ante, col. 1449.

Proof of Negligence.]—A count alleged that a bull of the plaintiff was lawfully in a close adjoining a railway, of which the company was the owner and occupier, along which railway they had not made any fences for preventing cattle being in the close from straying thereout upon the railway, and that whilst the bull was lawfully in the close, the company and their servants negligently and wrongfully chased, startled and frightened the bull, and so caused it to run upon the railway, where it was killed. At the trial it appeared that the bull, with other cattle, which had been brought by the railway, being in the station yard, a place unlighted and not fenced from the railway, a porter came out of the office with a lantern, such as was ordinarily used by porters, in his hand; and that the light startled some of the beasts, and caused the bull to run upon the line, where it was knocked down and killed by a passing train:—Held, no evidence for the jury that the company's servants had been guilty of negligence. Roberts v. G. W. Ry., supra.

A party kept bullocks on a marsh, which was separated from the railway line by a gate put up by the railway company, under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68. Three of his bullocks were found dead upon the line, and the gate had been broken down. The gate had become thin and the post decayed; it had been hanging upon hooks without anything to prevent its being lifted off. Hair like that of one of the bullocks was found upon the gate, and a horn of one of the dead animals appeared to have been rubbed. Afterwards the company put bolts into the posts, which prevented the gates from being lifted:—Held, in an action for the value of the bullocks, that these facts constituted evidence of negligence on the part of the company; that the owner was not bound to apply to justices under the Railways Clauses Act, s. 69; and that evidence of what the company did to this gate and posts after the accident was admissible. Page v. G. E. Ry., 24 L. T. 585.

—— Different Species of Animals.]—A platelayer in the employment of a railway company was returning from his work along their line upon a trolley propelled by hand, when the defendant's pigs got through the fence of his field, which adjoined the railway, on to the line in front of the trolley; the trolley ran over the pigs and was upset, and the plaintiff was injured. The defendant was owner of the adjoining land; the fence erected by the company under s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, was sufficient against horses, oxen, and sheep; but there was enough space between the lowest rail of the fence and the ground for pigs to crawl through, and the pigs had in fact crawled under the fence. There was evidence to shew that the defendant had been warned on a former occasion of his pigs being on the line, but there was no evidence to shew how the pigs got from the defendant's farmyard, where they were last seen, into the field adjoining the railway. In an action against the defendant for the injury sustained by the plaintiff:—Held, that the word "cattle" in s. 68, included pigs, and that the fence was, therefore, insufficient. Childs v. Hearn, 43 L. J., Ex. 100; L. R. 9 Ex. 176; 22 W. R. 864.

Contributory Negligence.]—A railway crossed land on a level, and there was an accommodation road over the railway. Two descriptions of fastenings were provided by the company for the gates leading from this road to the railway, and it was arranged between the owner and the company that one should be used by day and the other by night. The former was insufficient; the latter sufficient. Complaints had been made to the company of the insufficiency of the day fastening, of which no notice was taken. The owner's servants, notwithstanding its insufficiency, continued to use it. A pony strayed through one of the gates on to the line, and was killed, and in an action against the company to recover the value of the pony, the jury found that the company had not provided a sufficient protection, but that the servant had not used the precaution he ought:—Held, that upon this finding, the verdict was rightly entered for the company. Haigh v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 F. & F. 646; 8 W. R. 6.

A railway crossed an occupation way which connected lands of the plaintiff lying on each side of the railway, and which was also a public footway. The crossing being on the level, at the point of intersection the company set up high gates, of which they gave a key to the plaintiff. The gates obstructed the footway, but the company did not make a bridge over the railway, or provide a stile for foot-passengers, in pursuance of ss. 46, 61, 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. The key having been lost, one of the gates was left open, and some colts of the plaintiff having escaped on to the railway, were killed by a passing train:—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether the plaintiff, by his own negligence, had contributed to the accident. Ellis v. L. & S. W. Ry., 2 H. & N. 424; 26 L. J., Ex. 349; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1008; 5 W. R. 682.

Remoteness of Damage.]—Cattle were being driven along a road across which were some sidings belonging to a railway company, when some trucks of the company were negligently allowed to run down the siding, across the road, separating the cattle from the drovers, and frightening them so that some of them ran down the road, broke through an imperfect fence into an orchard, whence they strayed upon the line and were killed by a passing train:—Held, that the company was liable, and that the damage was not too remote; and that the imperfect state of the orchard fence afforded no defence to the action. Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 1; 1 Q. B. D. 42; 33 L. T. 372; 24 W. R. 99—C. A.

j. Junctions.

Expenses of Erecting Signals.]—Under the Railways Clauses Act, 1863, s. 12, where a railway forms a junction with another railway, the company with whose railway the junction is made is empowered to erect such signals and conveniences incident to the junction, as may be necessary for the prevention of danger to or interference with the traffic at or near the junction; and the expenses of erecting and maintaining such signals and conveniences are at the end of each half year to be repaid by the company making the junction:—Held, that, to sustain an action for such expenses, proof must be given that they have been actually paid: proof that a liability has been incurred for them is not enough. Carmarthen and Cardigan Ry. v. Manchester and Milford Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 262; L. R. 8 C. P. 685.

—— Private Siding—Board of Trade Order.]—The plaintiff and his predecessors in title, as owners of land adjoining a single line of railway, had ever since the year 1861 used a junction siding connecting the railway with a foundry on their land, the siding being the only access to the foundry. The defendants, the railway company, having doubled their line, the board of trade, acting on the report of their inspector, and as a condition for certifying the line to be fit for traffic, required the company either to provide the junction of the siding with the modern and improved system of interlocking and signalling apparatus, or to remove the junction, which was of an old-fashioned description. The company then called upon the plaintiff to execute the work or pay the costs of it, but this the plaintiff declined to do, whereupon the company took up the junction points:—Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that the plaintiff had, under s. 76 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, a statutory right to the use of his siding in connection with the company' railway, the company's parliamentary powers being subject to that right; and an injunction was therefore granted restraining the company from continuing to prevent communication between his siding and the railway, and compelling the company to restore the junction:—Held, on appeal, that as the plaintiff's predecessors in title had acquired a perpetual right to use the siding under a clause as to sidings in an old local act for making a tramway, which had since been converted into the railway of the defendants, and the subsequent acts contained saving clauses sufficient to protect all rights acquired by the plaintiff under the old act, the case did not depend on the Railways Clauses Act, and that the plaintiff retained the right acquired under the old act to use the siding without contributing to the expense of the new apparatus, such act containing nothing to oblige the plaintiff to make or pay for the interlocking apparatus. Woodruff v. Brecon and Merthyr Tydvil Ry., 54 L. J., Ch. 620; 28 Ch. D. 190; 52 L. T. 69; 33 W. R. 125—C. A.

Held, also, that if the case had turned on s. 76 of the Railways Clauses Act, the court would not have decided the question whether the plaintiff was bound to pay for the interlocking apparatus, without first ascertaining what, in the year 1845, was included in the terms "offset plates" and "switches" used in that section. Ib.

Rendered Impossible—Constructing Line.]—Semble, that companies have a right to carry on their railway according to the plan laid down in their act, although a junction contemplated in procuring such act may be frustrated by the abandonment of the line with which it was the original intention of the company to unite. Clarence Ry. v. Great North of England Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 763; 6 Jur. 269.

k. Tunnels.

Deviation.]—The effect of ss. 13—15 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, taken together, is, in the case of a tunnel marked on the deposited plans, that the tunnel must be made in the exact position indicated, and that the line cannot deviate at all at that portion of it without the consent required by s. 13, or special powers in the special act. Little v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 280; 12 C. B. 753; 22 L. J., C. P. 39; 17 Jur. 209; 1 W. R. 81.

Right to Support.]—The grant to a railway company of the right to make, maintain and use a tunnel does not give the company such a right to support to their tunnel that the grantor, acting duly in accordance with the Railways Clauses

Act, ss. 77 and 78, cannot work or have the benefit of mines under and adjacent to the tunnel. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Ackroyd, 31 L. J., Ch. 588; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 911; 6 L. T. 124; 10 W. R. 367. See MINES AND MINERALS.

Payment for User of Land.] — Semble, that under the Railway and Lands Clauses Acts companies are entitled permanently to use the land for the purposes of tunnels without doing more than paying for the permanent user and occupation of the land. Pinchin v. London and Blackwall Ry., 2 Eq. R. 1172; 24 L. J., Ch. 417; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 241; 2 W. R. 696. See LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

Sale of Land — Acquiescence.] — A railway company, having constructed a tunnel, proceeded to dispose of the ground under which the tunnel ran, and contracted on the 5th June to sell a portion to B., subject to the condition that he was to erect no buildings nor make any excavations, &c., but according to a specification approved in writing by the principal engineer. B. entered immediately, and sent in plans in August to the resident engineer, for the approval of the principal engineer. The resident engineer never submitted them to the principal, but told B. verbally that he might proceed. B. thereupon proceeded till the 26th October, when the conveyance was completed, and the company's solicitor, finding him carrying on building operations, asked if he had the approval in writing of the principal engineer, and told him he must procure it. The principal engineer then for the first time saw the plans of the proposed buildings, and immediately condemned them as dangerous to the tunnel, and therefore, of course, also dangerous to the proposed houses. B. insisting on proceeding, the company caused an information to be filed to restrain him, on the ground of danger to the public. A counter information was thereupon filed against the company to restrain it from running its trains, on the same ground of danger to the public. The fact of danger to the public by the continuation of B.'s plans was fully made out. An injunction had been obtained on the first information, and refused on the second:—Held, at the hearing, first, that the approval of the company's resident engineer was not binding on the company; and, secondly, that the defendant B. having been allowed to continue his works from August to the 26th October was, under the circumstances, not such an acquiescence on the part of the company as to exempt B. from being restrained from further prosecuting his building. Att.-Gen. v. Briggs, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1084.

—— Buildings over.]—A railway company acquired land under special acts, which contained no provision as to sale of superfluous lands, but incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. It made its line in a cutting, which it covered over with an arch forming a tunnel:—Held, that the company had no right to grant building rights over the crown of the tunnel. Metropolitan District Ry. and Cosh, In re, 40 L. T. 482.

Right to Construct — Cul-de-sac.]—In 1871 the plaintiff became the purchaser in fee simple of hereditaments, described in the deed of conveyance as "all that piece of ground with the sixteen messuages thereon." The houses were divided into two blocks by a cul-de-sac or passage open at one end only, which had been dedicated to the use of the public for twenty years, but the soil of which the plaintiff claimed as his private property by virtue of his conveyance. A railway company, being about to tunnel under this cul-de-sac, gave the plaintiff a notice to treat in respect of three houses on each side of it, but not in respect of that part of the cul-de-sac between them, the company contending it was a public way or street:—Held, that the cul-de-sac was a public way or street, and that the company was entitled to tunnel under it without paying the plaintiff any compensation. Souch v. East London Ry., 42 L. J., Ch. 477; L. R. 16 Eq. 108.

Agreement to Construct — Acquiescence.] — Circumstances of acquiescence and part performance, under which a railway company was held bound by an agreement for making a tunnel running into and upon their land, although no contract had been executed pursuant to the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, s. 97, and although the terms of such agreement were not ascertained without some difficulty. Laird v. Birkenhead Ry., 1 Johns. 500; 29 L. J., Ch. 218; 6 Jur (N.S.) 140; 1 L. T. 259; 8 W. R. 58.

1. Accommodation Works.

Discretion of Company as to the most Convenient Mode of doing the Works.] — Lands required by a railway company for accommodation works are lands required for the purposes of "the undertaking" or "of the railway." Every work which a railway company is empowered to do, not merely what it is compelled to do, is a purpose of the undertaking. The word "necessary" in s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, refers to the obligation to make good the interruption, and does not confine the company to any particular mode of doing the works. Where there are several modes of doing the works, the company, acting under the advice of their engineer, are the sole judges which mode should be adopted; but if they do not act bonâ fide, the court will interfere. A railway company having intersected the lands of two adjoining landowners, A. and B., by an embankment, proposed to connect the severed portions of A.'s land by an arch through the embankment, and to give B. a right of way through the same arch, which they proposed to connect with his land by an occupation road carried through A.'s land. The strip of A.'s land proposed to be taken for this road was included in the lands delineated. A. objected to this arrangement, as being beyond the powers of the company:—Held, that the company had power to take the strip of land compulsorily for the proposed purpose. Wilkinson v. Hull, &c., Ry. and Dock Co., 51 L. J., Ch, 788; 20 Ch. D. 323; 46 L. T. 455; 30 W. R. 617—C. A.

Agreement — Effect on General Rights.] — Where a person has made a special agreement as to crossings on a line of railway, and, from particular circumstances, he allows that agreement to fall through, he cannot afterwards set up general rights under the railway acts to have other crossings made. Darnley (Earl) v. L. C. & D. Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 404; L. R. 2 H. L. 43; 16 L. T. 217; 15 W. R. 817.

Specific performance will not be decreed of an act which the defendant cannot lawfully carry into execution, and which would be useless to the plaintiff if it were carried into execution. A railway company ordered to make a drain contracted for. Powell v. South Wales Ry., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 773.

What are—Insufficient Drains.]—The owners of mines extending under a railway, which had been made by a railway company under the powers of their act, which contained provisions similar to those in the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, gave notice to the company in 1858 of their intention to work the mine under the line of railway, and the company declined or neglected to purchase. At this point the line of railway was in a deep cutting, and the company had made drains upon the line for the purpose of carrying off the water which fell upon the railway and ran from the sides of the cutting. The working of the mine had caused the land on which the railway was constructed to sink, so that the company was compelled to fill up such sinkings in order to preserve the level of the railway, and thereby the drains had become in some places choked up, and the water percolated through the broken strata, and through the cinders used by the company for filling up the sinkings, and so passed into the mines:—Held, that these drains were not accommodation works within ss. 68, 69 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Reg. v Fisher, 3 B. & S. 191; 32 L. J., M. C. 12; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 571; 7 L. T. 325; 11 W. R. 69.

Duty to Fence where Owner releases Right to.]—See ante, col. 1454.

Whether Action lies for Insufficiency.]—A railway company constructed a culvert to carry off water from land adjacent to the railway. No complaint was made by the owner of the land of the insufficiency of the culvert, and no application was made to justices for additional accommodation works within the five years limited by s. 73 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. An injury having subsequently arisen to the land from the insufficiency of the culvert to carry off all the water, an action in respect of such injury was brought by the occupier against the railway company, in which it was alleged that the culvert was insufficient:—Held, on demurrer, that the action would not lie. Colley v. L. & N. W. Ry., 49 L. J., Ex. 575; 5 Ex. D. 277; 42 L. T. 807; 29 W. R. 16; 44 J. P. 427.

A railway company was, by its special act, required to construct and maintain such culverts, drains, &c., under the railway as two justices should, upon the application of any landowner in case of dispute, judge to be necessary for his accommodation. In 1841 the company constructed an embankment for the railway across lands belonging to the plaintiff's predecessors, and made a culvert under the embankment for the purpose of draining the lands. Twenty years afterwards the plaintiff came into possession of the lands, and found that, owing to the height of the bottom of the culvert, the water could not be properly drained off. Upon a suit by him to compel the company to provide a proper drain:—Held, that the Court of Chancery, independently of the question whether it had jurisdiction or not, would not interfere in questions of accommodation works, but that such questions ought to be referred to two justices, as provided by the act. Hood v. N. E. Ry., 40 L. J., Ch. 17; L. R. 11 Eq. 116; 23 L. T. 433; 19 W. R. 266.

A railway was carried along an embankment upon low lands lying between a river and A.'s land. The low lands were separated from A.'s land by a bank which, before the railway embankment was placed there, sufficed to protect his land from the flood-waters of the river; but, in consequence of the embankment, the flood-waters were unable to spread themselves over the low lands as formerly, and flowed over the bank into his land:—Held, that although the company were not required by their act to make flood-openings to their embankment, and would not be compellable by mandamus to make them, yet, as they might by proper caution have prevented the injury sustained by A., an action was maintainable against them for such injury. Lawrence v. G. N. Ry., 16 Q. B. 643; 6 Railw. Cas. 656; 20 L. J., Q. B. 293; 15 Jur. 652.

By a railway act it was provided, that, where any part of any carriage, horse or foot road, railway or tramroad, quay, wharf, slope, or other communication, either public or private, shall be found necessary to be cut through, raised, sunk, taken, or so much injured as to be impassable, or inconvenient for the passengers, cattle, or carriages, or for the transporting, conveying, landing, shipping, or depositing of any goods or merchandise; the company shall, at their own expense, before any such road, quay, wharf, slope, or other communication shall be cut through, raised, sunk, taken, or injured as aforesaid, cause another good and sufficient road, quay, wharf, slope or other communication as the case shall require, to be set out and made instead thereof as convenient for passengers, and for transporting goods and merchandise, as the road, quay, wharf, slope, or other communication so to be cut through, raised, sunk, taken, or injured as aforesaid, or as near thereto as may be. B. had a wharf on the river Humber, between which and the low-water mark the company constructed their railway (in the line prescribed by the act of parliament), thereby rendering the communication between the wharf and river inconvenient and dangerous:—Held, that the wharf was thereby injured, within the meaning of the section (which was not confined to an injury done bodily to the wharf itself); that he was entitled to have a new wharf constructed for him by the company, and was not bound to apply for compensation under another section, which empowered a jury to assess the sum payable for any future, temporary, or perpetual, or recurring damages, done or sustained by reason of the taking of land for the purposes of the act. Bell v. Hull and Selby Ry., 6 M. & W. 699; 2 Railw. Cas. 279; 9 L. J., Ex. 213.

—— Delay.]—A railway company had constructed its line so as to leave for the passage for a private road two intervals of nine feet three inches each. The interval required by the Railways Clauses Act, for a similar right of way, was twelve feet. The plaintiff's right of way was not disputed; but he had lain by and allowed the railway works to proceed, and the damage accruing to the plaintiff in consequence was of small amount:—Held, that he, having delayed the assertion of his legal right, and the damage being slight, the court would not grant an injunction to restrain the infringement on the legal right. Wintle v. Bristol and South Wales Union Ry., 6 L. T. 20; 10 W. R. 210.

Order of Justices.]—Under ss. 68, 69 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, justices have power only to order accommodation works with reference to the present use of the land, not prospectively. Therefore a jury summoned should assess compensation for severance of agricultural land, valued as building land, on the assumption that no remedy could be afforded by accommodation works ordered by justices. Reg. v. Midland and S. W. Junction Ry., 8 B. & S. 456.

Fence Erected more than Five Years after Opening of Railway—Damage from Insufficiency—Liability.]—The general obligation imposed upon a railway company by s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to make and maintain sufficient fences, is not affected by the provision in s. 73 that the company shall not be compelled to make "any further or additional accommodation works" after five years from the opening of the railway, in a case where the company have made no such works at all within that period. A railway company are therefore liable for injury arising from the defective state of a fence erected by them after the expiration of the five years. Dixon v. G. W. Ry., 66 L. J., Q. B. 132; [1897] 1 Q. B. 300; 75 L. T. 539; 45 W. R. 226—C. A.

"Accommodation Works"—"Insufficient"—Landowner's Power to make Additional Works.]—In s. 71 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, the words "accommodation works" mean such works as are mentioned in s. 68—that is, works for the benefit of lands adjoining the railway; and "insufficient" means insufficient for the use of the lands in the condition in which they were when the line was made. Rhondda and Swansea Bay Ry. v. Talbot, 66 L. J., Ch. 570; [1897] 2 Ch. 131; 76 L. T. 694—C. A.

Sect. 71 does not enable owners of adjoining lands to construct accommodation works at their own expense, unless there have been some previous accommodation works made by the railway company which have proved insufficient. Therefore where, on the purchase of the site of the line, the company and the landowner have agreed that no accommodation works shall be made by the company, the landowner cannot subsequently construct works under that section. Ib.

Compensation—Mandatory Injunction.]—The metropolitan board of works, under the powers conferred on them by the Thames Embankment Act, 1862, cut off from its river frontage a piece of land belonging to the defendant. The question of compensation was referred to an umpire, who made his award in the belief that the land had been made inaccessible to carriages by the embankment works. By s. 62, the board of works was bound to provide means of access to the land. The defendant filed a bill to compel them to make the land accessible to carriages, and at the same time commenced an action for the whole amount awarded. The board of works filed a bill for an injunction against the action:—Held, that the action must be restrained until the hearing of the cause. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Salisbury (Marquis), 26 L. T. 390; 20 W. R. 507.

S. was entitled to houses in Cecil and Salisbury streets, and to a piece of low level ground at the south ends of these streets. The low level communicated by means of two lanes at the banks of the streets with the Strand on the north side, and by means of wharves, with the river Thames on the south side. In 1862 the Thames Embankment Act authorised the construction of the embankment road and of the ornamental gardens alongside of the river. These improvements were completed in 1870; their effect was to deprive the low level ground in question, and also the two streets, of all communication with the river or with the embankment on the south side. S., as the owner of the depreciated property, had obtained 10,000*l.* as compensation assessed by an umpire; but under s. 2 of the act of 1862, S. was entitled besides to full and free communication to the embankment road and the river, and he claimed that such right belonged to him in respect as well of the houses in Cecil and Salisbury streets as of the low level ground, and that the right in dispute was to a wheel or a cartway, and not to a footway merely. The makers of the improvements had offered to construct a convenient footway across the gardens to the embankment road, but such offer had not been entertained. A wheel or cartway would have seriously injured the ornamental gardens:—Held, that having regard to the circumstances of the property in 1862, and to an act of Geo. 3, relative to the buildings upon it, the act of 1862 did not reserve any right of way, much less a wheel or cartway, to the low level; and that a mandatory injunction to construct a convenient footway for the occupiers of Cecil and Salisbury streets could not be granted on the state of the pleadings, or an inquiry directed at that stage of the suit. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Salisbury (Marquis), 21 W. R. 259

User of Accommodation Bridge — Tramway.]—An estate was intersected by a canal under the powers of its act, and an accommodation bridge was built by the company, over which a private road, leading across the property to a high road, was carried. Coal pits were opened upon the estate, which, when the canal was made, had been used as a farm. For some time the coals were carried down to the canal by a tramway which did not cross the bridge. The coal-owners subsequently carried the tramway across the bridge (excavating the soil of the roadway on the bridge and approaches), in order to carry their coals to a line of railway on the other side of the property. An action for trespass having been commenced, and a writ of injunction applied for by the canal company, the coal-owners submitted in the action to judgment for 1*l.* damages and costs, and gave an undertaking not to repeat the trespass complained of. The coal-owners having, a few months afterwards, again laid down the tramway, but without breaking the soil on the bridge:—Held, that, independently of the undertaking in the action, by which the right of the canal company had been recognised and established, the defendants' right of access to and passage over the accommodation bridge did not justify the making by them of a tramway upon the bridge and the approaches thereto, and an injunction was granted accordingly:—Held, on appeal, that the undertaking given by the defendants formed a good ground for the interference of the court, without going into the question of their right to make the tramway. Neath Canal Co. v. Ynisarwed Resolven Colliery Co., L. R. 10 Ch. 450.

Repair — Abandonment — Severed Land—Different Ownership.]—A railway company which on cutting through a landowner's property has been obliged, under s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to make accommodation works, is not bound to keep up such works when the two parts of the lands so severed have passed into the hands of different owners neither of whom has any right of passing over the other's land. The right to such works is then abandoned, and finally extinguished, and will not revive even if the whole of the land afterwards belongs to one owner. Midland Ry. v. Gribble, 64 L. J., Ch. 826; [1895] 2 Ch. 827; 12 R. 513; 73 L. T. 270; 44 W. R. 133—C. A. Affirming 60 J. P. 55.

Expenses of Communication—Costs.]—When a party has required a communication to be made between adjoining lands, and it is found by a jury that the expense of making the communication will be greater than the value of the land, which the company then tenders, electing to take the land; this is not a case of disputed compensation, and the claimant is not entitled to his costs by reason of the omission of any previous offer of compensation. Cobb v. Mid-Wales Ry., 35 L. J., Q. B. 117; L. R. 1 Q. B. 342; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 228; 13 L. T. 342; 14 W. R. 775.

Supply of Water — Duration of Duty.]—A clause in an agreement by a railway company to purchase land, binding the company to procure a supply of water as good as the supply of water cut off by the construction of the line from the severed lands of the vendor, only binds the company to do once for all that which may reasonably be expected to insure a sufficient supply of water, and does not bind them to do whatever may be necessary from time to time to secure that result. Gray and Metropolitan Ry., In re, 44 L. T. 567.

Transfer of Undertaking — Nonperformance of Covenants—Liability of Transferee Company.]—By a conveyance dated in December, 1873, certain lands comprised in a settlement were conveyed to the L. company for the purpose of their undertaking, and the company entered into covenants with all persons claiming under the settlement to make and maintain certain accommodation works and to perform certain personal services upon such lands. By an act passed in 1892, the line having then been closed for some years, the undertaking was, "subject to the contracts, obligations, debts and liabilities" of the L. company, transferred to the C. company, provision was made for the dissolution of the former company, and "claims" against that company unknown to them, not notified within a certain time, were to be barred. In August, 1893, the covenants having remained unperformed up to that date without objection from any person claiming under the settlement, and no claim having been notified within the time limited, the then tenant for life thereof brought an action against both companies, claiming specific performance of such covenants:—Held, that he was entitled to an order against the C. company. Fortescue v. Lostwithiel and Fowey Ry., 64 L. J., Ch. 37; [1894] 3 Ch. 621; 8 R. 664; 71 L. T. 423; 43 W. R. 138.

Agreement—Enforcement of.]—Where land is taken by a railway company, not under its compulsory powers, but by private contract, the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to secure to the vendor the easements he contracted for is not ousted by the provisions of the railway acts. Sanderson v. Cockermouth and Workington Ry., 2 H. & Tw. 327; 19 L. J., Ch. 503. Affirming 11 Beav. 497.

A railway company, about to sever the plaintiff's land by its railroad, agreed to purchase the necessary portion of land, "subject to the making such roads, ways and slips for cattle as might be necessary":—Held, that, although it was very difficult to execute an agreement thus expressed, yet that the plaintiff was entitled to a specific performance; that the word "necessary" must receive a reasonable interpretation. The expression was held to mean "such roads, ways and slips for cattle as might be necessary and proper for convenient communication between the severed portions of the plaintiff's land"; and a reference was therefore directed to ascertain what was necessary and proper. Ib.

In a contract between a railway company and a proprietor of land to be crossed by the line of railway, the Railways Clauses Act should be expressly referred to, if the company intends to claim the benefit of its provisions. Therefore, where a company contracted "to provide and erect a suitable bridge over a street (marked in a plan referred to in the deed) as then planned and intended"; and the plan shewed that the street was intended to be forty-two feet wide:—Held, in the absence of any reference in the deed to the act, that the company was not at liberty to narrow the street to the dimensions specified in s. 49 (twenty-five feet), but must make a bridge, with an arch of the full width of the street (forty-two feet). Clarke v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 1 Johns. & H. 631.

A railway company obtained a conveyance, for the purposes of the railway, of land from C.; and in the conveyance the company bound themselves to erect and maintain a bridge over the road leading to C.'s property, which was to be, according to the plans, thirty-five feet wide and leaving a road under it of fifteen feet wide. Afterwards this bridge was made, but the company, some years later, amalgamated with the H. company, and the latter company's act authorised a junction with the former railway, at a point near this bridge. The two companies then agreed as to the mode of effecting the junction; and part of the plan was to widen the arch or bridge over C.'s road so as to extend the bridge from thirty-five feet to fifty-five feet wide, thereby darkening the road beneath. C. applied for an injunction to restrain the companies from carrying out this plan:—Held, that the first company having, in the first instance, obtained the conveyance from C., on certain conditions as to the width of the bridge, was bound not to depart from those conditions; and the H. company was equally bound, as claiming under the first company; for it was part of the consideration to maintain the bridge of the height and width originally fixed. Edinburgh and Glasgow Ry. v. Campbell, 4 Macq. H. L. 570; 9 L. T. 157.

—— Power of Statutory Officer to bind Company.]—Where by a local act the promoters of a railway company were authorised to take lands for the purposes of their undertaking to be acquired by them through a government officer appointed under s. 20, compensation being payable by the government, and the owners of the lands being entitled by s. 29 to such accommodation works as may be fixed by agreement at the time when the amount of compensation is being settled :—Held, that the statutory duty of conducting the assessment of compensation having been intrusted to such government officer, the making of agreements for accommodation works was also within the scope of his authority, and he could within reasonable limits bind the company thereby, although the statutory duty of defraying the costs thereof was imposed upon the company. West India Improvement Co. v. Att.-Gen. of Jamaica, [1894] A. C. 243 ; 70 L. T. 80—P. C.

Substituted Agreement for making Roads.]—A landowner through whose land a railway company proposed to pass, agreed in May, 1864, to withdraw his opposition to their bill on the terms that the company would vary the course of their line and make certain bridges, works and approaches. The company gave a notice to treat, and on the 20th of March, 1867, they went into possession. On the 27th of May, a further agreement was come to that the company should pay 2,250*l.* for purchase-money and compensation, and should construct the bridges askew according to an agreed plan. The company constructed the line as agreed upon, but did not complete the works, nor pay the purchase-money, nor the interest, though the completion of the works was demanded in July, 1868, and payment of interest in December, 1868. On the 6th of February, 1869, a substituted agreement was made between the landowner and the company, whereby it was agreed that an estimate should be made by the company's engineer of the costs of completing the road, and submitted to A., the landowner's agent, "for approval ; in case of difference the amount to be determined by B." ; the amount when agreed or determined to be paid to the landowner, in discharge of all obligations as to the road ; and the purchase to be completed forthwith. In December, 1871, A. died ; and in May, 1872, the company, for the first time, sent in an estimate for the cost of completing the road. The purchase had not been completed, and neither the purchase-money nor any interest had been paid. B. was living : —Held, that the submission of the estimate to A. for approval was of the essence of the agreement of the 6th of February, 1869 ; and that inasmuch as by his death the agreement was incapable of being performed in the manner and form therein specified, the court could not enforce performance of it. Firth v. Midland Ry., 44 L. J., Ch. 313 ; L. R. 20, Eq. 100; 32 L. T. 219 ; 23 W. R. 509.

A railway company agreed with a landowner to make a bridge and other accommodation works, and upon the works being commenced in a manner at variance with the agreement, the landowner filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement, and for an injunction to restrain the completion of the works in progress. The motion for an injunction was ordered to stand over until the hearing of the cause, upon the company's undertaking to deal with the work as the court should direct. Before the hearing of the cause the works were completed, and the line of railway was open for public use :—Held, that the possible inconvenience to the public was no ground for refusing specific performance of the agreement ; and a decree was made according to the prayer of the bill. Raphael v. Thames Valley Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 209 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 147 ; 16 L. T. 1; 15 W. R. 322.

In consideration of certain landowners obtaining from the admiralty a waiver of an obligation imposed upon a railway company by their act to construct certain works, and upon conveyance of the necessary land by the landowners, the company entered into an agreement with them to make a carriage road between certain specified points, and also to make and maintain a wharf for loading and discharging vessels at a specified place, of a stipulated length and of a suitable and convenient height. The obligation imposed upon the company by its act had been waived by the admiralty, and the land required had been conveyed to the company, which had commenced, but had not finished, the road, and had not commenced the wharf :—Held, first, that having obtained the benefit of the agreement by being released from an onerous obligation, and allowed to substitute something more easy of performance, the company would not be allowed to evade the agreement. Wilson v. Furness Ry., 39 L. J., Ch. 19; L. R. 9 Eq. 28; 21 L. T. 416, 553; 18 W. R. 89.

Held, secondly, that the agreement was not ultra vires, and might be enforced against it. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the attorney-general was not a necessary party to a suit for specific performance of an agreement entered into with a company by certain persons on their own behalf, and as representing the inhabitants of the district. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that if necessary, the court might permit the plaintiffs themselves to do the work at the company's expense. Ib.

Insufficient Watering-Places.] — A company was required to make watering-places for cattle in all cases where, by means of the railway, the cattle of persons occupying lands adjacent thereto should be deprived of access to their ancient watering-places, and to supply the same with water. After the act passed, by deed made between the company and M., in consideration of the latter withdrawing his opposition to the progress through parliament of a bill to amend that act, the company covenanted to pay M., as and for the special damage to be thereby occasioned to his estate, and particularly to his mansion-house, 5,000*l.*, and that whenever any close of his should be intersected by the railway, the different parts adjoining should be thrown together, and properly levelled ; and that the company should at their own expense make and complete such good and sufficient fences, drains, gates, stiles and other conveniences, as might be necessary for the redividing of the fields which might be intersected by the railway, and for laying them to the adjoining fields of the same estates, for the purpose of convenient occupation, or otherwise would pay to M. the costs incurred by him in so doing. The money was paid by the company. A mandamus issued reciting these acts, and suggesting that the company made their railway through and intersected eight closes of M., in which there were ponds or watering-places for cattle, so as to cut off the ponds from such one portion of the closes respectively ; and that application had been made to the company, but refused. The writ, therefore, commanded the company to make proper watering-places for cattle in such portions respectively of the several closes. The return stated the deed, and a notice under it by M., that he required the company to make, amongst other conveniences, the ponds in question, and that they executed the works except the ponds, alleging that the cutting off the ponds was part of the damage covered by the 5,000*l*., and also the ponds were not conveniences within the meaning of the deed. The Queen's Bench held, that the deed furnished no sufficient answer; that even if the ponds could be included in the word "conveniences," they were not intended to be provided for by the 5,000*l*., and a peremptory mandamus was, therefore, issued. But held, by the exchequer chamber, that the writ was bad, as it ordered the company to do more than the act required, namely, to make a pond in each of the portions of the closes, there being nothing to shew that one watering-place would not have been sufficient for all the portions. York and North Midland Ry. v. Milner, 3 Railw. Cas. 764; 15 L. J., Q. B. 379.

m. Unauthorised Application of Funds.

Interference by Court—General Principles.]—Although the court will not interefere with a company merely because a particular act has been done in an informal way, which may afterwards be legally set right by it, the rule does not apply to cases of misapplication of funds which could not under any circumstances be rendered legal. Bagshaw v. Eastern Union Ry., 2 H. & Tw. 201; 2 Macn. & G. 389; 6 Railw. Cas. 169; 19 L. J., Ch. 410; 14 Jur. 491.

The doctrine of ultra vires as explained in Ashbury Ry. Carriage Co. v. Riche (L. R. 7 H. L. 63) is to be maintained, but is to be applied reasonably, so that whatever is fairly incidental to those things which the legislature has authorised by an act of parliament ought not (unless expressly prohibited) to be held as ultra vires. In a railway act granting special powers, what is not permitted is prohibited. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 545; 5 App. Cas. 473; 42 L. T. 810; 28 W. R. 769—H. L. (E.)

There is no principle of public policy which renders void a traffic agreement between two lines of railway for the purpose of avoiding competition. Though a public company constituted for a particular purpose will not be allowed to apply its funds in a manner not sanctioned by the constitution of the company, the court will not interfere with a traffic agreement between two lines of railway to divide the nett earnings in certain definite proportions. Hare v. L. & N. W. Ry., 2 John. & H. 80; 30 L. J., Ch. 817; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1145.

A railway company is bound to apply all its moneys and property for the purposes directed and provided for by the act of parliament, and not for any other purposes whatever. Any application of or dealing with the capital funds or money, in any manner not distinctly authorised by the act, is illegal; and where directors, for purposes not authorised by the act, are proceeding to involve the company or shareholders in liabilities to which they never consented, relief may and ought to be given in this court. In such a case one shareholder may sue on behalf, &c. Salomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 339; 6 Railw. Cas. 289, 303; 19 L. J., Ch. 225; 14 Jur. 279, 471.

Promotion of Bill.]—Although it is competent to directors of every railway company, on complying with the Wharncliffe Order, to apply to parliament for an extended line, or for any other extension of their powers, they will be restrained from defraying the expenses of such application out of the assets of the company, and from issuing new shares, purporting to be shares in the company, except for the purposes and under the powers of existing acts. Vance v. East Lancashire Ry., 3 Kay & J. 50.

The majority of shareholders in a company incorporated by act of parliament, approved at a meeting of a contract to sell the concern to F., who was one of the committee of management, and passed a resolution that the contract should be confirmed by a special act, and that if the act should not be passed the expenses of promoting the bill and of the agreement should be partly borne by the company. At a Wharncliffe meeting subsequently held, a resolution was passed by a majority of more than thirty to one, authorising the presenting by the company of a bill in parliament to enable it to dispose of the concern. One of the dissentients at the Wharncliffe meeting moved to restrain the company from carrying out the agreement, and from presenting the proposed bill in parliament, and from applying any part of its funds towards its promotion. On the company undertaking not to apply any of its funds towards promoting the bill, the court refused the motion. Mathias v. Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co., 34 L. T. 346.

It is not lawful to apply the funds of a company in an application to parliament for powers to extend the business of the company beyond the objects for which it was constituted, and the court will interfere, by injunction, at the suit of a shareholder, to restrain any such application. Simpson v. Denison, 10 Hare, 51; 16 Jur. 828.

The same principles which regulate the rights of parties in ordinary partnerships are applicable in determining the duties of the managing bodies in joint stock companies, as between them and members of such companies. Ib.

Railway—River Navigation.] — A railway communicated with a river, upon the banks of which the company was empowered to erect wharves, &c., and take tolls. The navigation of the river having become deteriorated, the company was about to support a bill for improving it. An injunction was granted to restrain the application of the funds of the company towards that object. Munt v. Shrewsbury and Chester Ry., 13 Beav. 1; 20 L. J., Ch. 169; 15 Jur. 26.

—— Other Railway Undertakings.] — It is improper and wrong for railway companies to embark their funds in other railway undertakings; and they have no right to engage or pledge their funds or entangle their affairs, in unauthorised transactions, upon the speculation that they may obtain parliamentary authority for doing acts which are beyond their powers at the time when they are done. Logan v. Courtown (Earl), 13 Beav. 22; 20 L. J., Ch. 347.

A railway company, incorporated, by act of parliament, is bound to apply all the funds of the company for the purposes directed and provided for by the act, and for no other purpose whatsoever. A company, incorporated by an act of parliament for making and maintaining a railway and works, was empowered to raise money to be applied in discharging the costs incurred in obtaining the act, and the remainder towards making and maintaining the railway and works; and the profits of the company, after defraying the expenses of making, maintaining and working the railway, were to be divided amongst the proprietors. The company afterwards covenanted with a railway company, to take a lease of their line, and to find the capital necessary for the construction of the branches and works authorised to be constructed by bills then pending in parliament, and to pay the costs of preparing and promoting such bills :—Held, that the railway company having a limited authority only, and being a corporation only for the purpose of making and maintaining the railway sanctioned by the act, could only apply its funds for the purposes provided by the statute ; and that such an agreement was illegal, though the object of it might have been the increase of the profit of their railway. East Anglian Ry. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 150 ; 11 C. B. 775 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 23 ; 16 Jur. 249.

—— Steam Vessels.]—The directors of a railway company, for the purpose of increasing the traffic, proposed to guarantee certain profits, and secure the capital of an intended steam-packet company, which was to act in connection with the railway :—Held, that such a transaction was not within their powers, and they were restrained by injunction. Colman v. Eastern Counties Ry., 10 Beav. 1 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 73 ; 11 Jur. 74.

A railway company had authority to keep steam-vessels for the purposes of a ferry :—Held, that such vessels, when otherwise unemployed, might be used by the company for excursion trips to the sea. Forrest v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 30 Beav. 40.

A railway company having a branch terminating at Milford Haven, declared upon a contract whereby the defendant undertook to provide a suitable steam-vessel to run between that place and Dublin and Cork, for the conveyance of passengers, goods, &c., in connection with the railway ; and alleged that the defendant provided a vessel which was unseaworthy, and a master who was incompetent, whereby certain pigs and cattle intrusted to them for carriage were damaged and lost. Plea, that the contract was entered into contrary to and in violation of the purposes for which the company was incorporated, and was one which the company could not lawfully enter into, and was void :—Held, that there was no illegality of contract apparent on the face of the declaration, the contract being strictly in furtherance of the object of the company's incorporation ; and that the plea afforded no answer. South Wales Ry. v. Redmond, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 675 ; 4 L. T. 619 ; 9 W. R. 806.

—— Canals.]—By a private act a railway company was authorised to purchase a canal, and was bound to maintain the canal and keep it open for traffic when purchased. By this act it was provided that, as soon as the purchase was completed, the railway company might exercise all the rights, powers and privileges which the canal company might, before the sale, have exercised in relation to the canal under any acts relating to the canal which might be in force at the time of the conveyance. The canal company did not, before the sale, take any steps to adopt the powers of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 42. After the purchase the railway company proceeded, under the 8th section of that act, to take a lease of the tolls of another canal :—Held, that by the purchase of the canal the railway company had become a canal company, so as to be entitled to avail itself of the powers given to canal companies by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 42 ; and that the taking of such lease was not ultra vires. Rogers v. Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton Ry., 2 De G. & J. 662.

Injunction refused—Delay.]—An incorporated railway company having powers within a fixed time to complete a branch line, commenced, but afterwards, by a vote of the proprietary, suspended for a time the works. Before its powers expired, the works, on a resolution of the shareholders, were resumed, and actively prosecuted. After a lapse of nearly a year, the powers having then expired, and the branch railway still being unfinished, two shareholders, on behalf of themselves and the other shareholders, filed a bill to restrain the further prosecution of the works. On a motion for an injunction :—Held, that the plaintiffs having been aware of the intention to construct the line, and not having applied with diligence, the court would not grant the injunction. Effooks v. L. & S. W. Ry., 1 Sm. & G. 142 ; 17 Jur. 365 ; 1 W. R. 175.

A shareholder who had acquiesced in the recommencement of the works, afterwards sold his shares to a purchaser, who objected to the further prosecution of the works :—Held, that the purchaser was bound by the acquiescence of his vendor. Ib.

Unauthorised Trading.]—A railway company will be restrained, at the information of a relator, from carrying on a trade not authorised by the act constituting the company. Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., 29 L. J., Ch. 794 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1006 ; 8 W. R. 556.

The information may be filed without the certificate of the board of trade, mentioned in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85. Ib.

n. User of Land, Extent of.

Specified Purpose.]—Where purchases of land are made under the compulsory powers of an act of parliament, the purchasers on the one hand, and the vendors on the other, have a right to confine the exercise of the ownership to the specified purpose. Bostock v. North Staffordshire Ry., 3 Sm. & G. 283 ; 5 De G. & Sm. 584 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 325 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 248 ; 4 W. R. 336.

The rights of ownership in fee conferred on public companies by act of parliament are, by the settled doctrine of the court, restricted and qualified by the terms of the legislative contract ; and therefore where in an act of parliament it was said in express words that the fee-simple and inheritance of property were to vest in a company "to and for the use of navigation, but to or for no other use or purpose whatever" :—Held, that the words were inserted for the benefit of the vendors of the land, and the company was restrained from using the land for any purpose not authorised by the act. Ib.

A provision in an act for making a railway, that certain land to be purchased by the railway company should be appropriated to, and used solely for, the purposes of the railway and the buildings connected therewith (except such part as might be required by the board of ordnance, or for widening approaches to the station), and should not be used or employed for erecting thereon any coke ovens, or for any other purposes (the necessary railway purposes only excepted) by which any nuisance might be created, or the other property of the vendors in any way damaged :—Held, to refer to the use of the land, or the mode in which it was to be laid out or applied, and not to refer specifically to the use of the buildings which might be erected upon the land; that "buildings connected therewith" did not mean buildings only connected locally with the railway, but meant buildings especially applicable to the uses of that particular railway, and that the construction of the clause was not to be governed by considerations of what would or would not be connected with other and different railways; that the building erected by the company being used as a custom-house for the examination of the luggage of passengers landing from the Continent, many of whom travelled by the railway, such user was for the purpose connected with the railway, and that, the use being to some extent for such purpose, it did not cease to be so, within the meaning of the provision, merely because all the purposes for which the building was used were not purposes connected with the railway. Dover Harbour (Wardens) v. S. E. Ry., 9 Hare, 489; 21 L. J., Ch. 886.

Where there is a parliamentary power to sell in fee, but with a restriction of the rights of ownership in the purchaser, and a conveyance to an owner in fee is made under such power, sound construction requires that the restriction imposed upon the purchaser, who becomes the owner in fee, shall not be extended beyond its necessary limits. Ib.

A railway company purchasing land for the railway acquires an absolute fee simple, but such fee simple is acquired solely for the purposes of constructing and using the railway. Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 859; 9 Ch. D. 623; 39 L. T. 25. Affirmed 13 Ch. D. 268; 41 L. T. 429; 28 W. R. 173—C. A.

—— Rights of Adjoining Owner—Injunction.]—A railway company who had acquired land compulsorily, on part of which their railway was subsequently built on arches, such arches being let on very short terms to tenants, will not be restrained by injunction from using the arches and the land necessarily occupied therewith, or from permitting such arches and land to be used in a manner not incompatible with the purposes of their undertaking (not amounting to a nuisance), at the instance of an adjoining owner who complained that he had been inconvenienced by such user. Foster v. L. C. & D. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 65; [1895] 1 Q. B. 711; 14 R. 27; 71 L. T. 855; 43 W. R. 116—C. A.

Where part of an estate, which is subsequently developed as a building estate, has been compulsorily taken by a railway company for the purposes of their undertaking, the temporary letting of a small portion of the lands (not required for the immediate purposes of the railway) for the erection of a chapel is not an unreasonable user of the land, nor inconsistent with the purposes for which the railway company has been formed. And this would be the case even if it were shewn that some damage was likely to accrue to the owners of the building estate from such a user. Onslow v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 64 L. J., Ch. 355; 72 L. T. 256.

1. OPENING LINE.

Power of Board of Trade.]—When an inspector of the board of trade reports to the board of trade that the opening of a railway will be attended with danger to the public by reason of the incompleteness of the works, and gives the grounds of his opinion, the requisitions of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, s. 6, are satisfied. The board of trade has exclusive jurisdiction in the matter, and the court will not enter into the question whether the reasons given by the inspector do not shew on the face of the report that he has come to a wrong conclusion. Att.-Gen. v. G. W. Ry., 46 L. J., Ch. 192; 4 Ch. D. 735; 35 L. T. 921; 25 W. R. 330—C. A.

—— Incompleteness.]—The term "incompleteness" in s. 6 of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, includes defectiveness or imperfection generally, and such incompleteness may arise from the state of the works upon a neighbouring line with which the railway in question is connected. Ib.

Previous Notice to Board of Trade, when Necessary.]—Under statutory powers junctions were made between the main line of a railway company and two branches of a railway on opposite sides of the main line, so that trains coming from one of the branch lines ran for some distance along the main line and then passed on to the other branch line. Some years afterwards the company laid down a line of railway parallel to their main line for about a mile and substituted for one of the original junctions a new junction, nearly opposite to the other original junction, so as to form between the two branch lines a level crossing over the main line. The company also made two new stations on this new line:—Held, that the new line was a railway or a portion of a railway which, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, s. 4, could not be opened without previous notice to the Board of Trade. Att.-Gen. v. G. W. Ry., L. R. 7 Ch. 767.

Opened for Public Traffic.]—When a petition was presented by a judgment creditor for the appointment of a receiver of the tolls of a railway company, and it appeared that the line had not been used by the company, although a portion of it had been occupied, and maintained by another company, without payment of compensation:—Held, that the railway had not been opened for public traffic within the meaning of its act. Beddgelert Ry., In re, 19 W. R. 427.

Opening of Part Sanctioned.]—A railway company, being empowered by their act to make a double line of mixed gauge lines, opened the down line of rails on the mixed gauge with the sanction of the board of trade. Afterwards they gave notice to the board of trade that the up line was ready to be opened, and the board of trade appointed an inspector, who reported that the up line was not safe by reason of the incompleteness of the permanent way. The board accordingly gave notice to the company, under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, to postpone the opening of the line for a month. The company disregarded the notice and opened the line. The attorney-general filed an information to restrain the company from using the up line without the sanction of the board of trade:—Held, on a motion for an injunction, first, that the board of trade were not functi officio by reason of having sanctioned the opening of the down line; secondly, that the court of chancery will interfere at the instance of the attorney-general to restrain an act which has been declared by a competent authority to be illegal, without considering the grounds on which the act has been declared illegal; thirdly, that in the present case the court would grant an injunction without looking at the grounds on which the inspector had given his certificate. Att.-Gen. v. Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton Ry., 2 W. R. 330.

Opening of Part—Payment.]—It being proposed to form a railway from A., through N. and G., to B., and it being known that the line when open from A. to N. would compete with and injure the N. canal, and when open from N. to G. would in like manner compete with and injure the G. canal, a special act of parliament was obtained, which authorised the formation of the whole railway from A. to B., and which stated that it was intended that the canals and railway should be worked in connection, and that the canal companies should be incorporated with the railway company, and also provided that the railway company should be liable to pay to the canal companies a certain price per share for all their shares "from and immediately after the opening of the railway between A. and G. for public use." The railway was afterwards made and opened for a portion only of the space from A. to G., namely, from N. to G.:—Held, that the opening for public use of any portion of the line between A. and G. rendered the railway company liable to pay for the canal shares. Grantham Canal Co. v. Ambergate Ry., 21 L. J., Q. B. 322; 15 Jur. 991—Ex. Ch.

Before Construction of Branch and Junctions.]—A declaration stated that, before and after the passing of an act for making a railway from Chester to Birkenhead, the plaintiff was the owner of a ferry across the Mersey, from Tranmere to Liverpool; and that by the act the company was empowered to make a railway, with all necessary stations, commencing in Chester, and terminating at or near Grange lane, in Birkenhead. The declaration then stated a section of the act, whereby the company was prohibited making a railway from the station at or near Grange lane, in or to communicate with Woodside ferry, until a branch railway should have been made from the main line to Birkenhead and Tranmere ferries, and alleged that the company wrongfully, and for the purpose of evading the act, opened a railway from Grange lane station to and to communicate with the shore of the Mersey between Woodside ferry and Birkenhead ferry, and near Woodside ferry, and conveyed passengers along the same to the Grange lane station, although no branch had been made from the main line to Tranmere ferry, in contempt of the act, and to the plaintiff's damage:—Held, first, that the declaration was bad, inasmuch as it did not contain any averment that the company had made a railway to, or to communicate with, Woodside ferry, or anything which amounted in terms to an infringement of the act. Chamberlaine v. Chester and Birkenhead Ry., 1 Ex. 370; 18 L. J., Ex. 494.

Held, secondly, that had the declaration contained such an averment, the action might have been maintained without any allegation of special damage, the prohibition being obviously for the special protection of a particular person. Ib.

An information was filed praying a declaration that a railway company, constituted for making a principal and a diverging line of railway, was bound to construct the diverging line as well as the principal, and to open the whole for public traffic simultaneously, and for an injunction to prevent it from making one line until another was made, or until the notices to treat were given to the landowners preliminarily to making such other line. A general demurrer to this bill was allowed, the vice-chancellor guarding himself from expressing any opinion as to what he should have done if this had been a bill by a shareholder, or an information and bill, instead of an information only. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham and Oxford Junction Ry., 3 Macn. & G. 453; 16 Jur. 113. Affirming 4 De G. & Sm. 490.

If the public interests represented by the attorney-general were entitled to have the second line of railway made, they should proceed by mandamus. Ib.

The defendants were, by act of parliament, authorised to make a short line uniting their main line with the plaintiffs' line; but the defendants were prohibited from opening their main line until the junction should be completed. In default of the defendants making the junction within a specified time, the plaintiffs were author-ised to make it. The defendants proposed opening their main line before the completion of the junction:—Held, that the plaintiffs had a sufficient interest to entitle them to an injunction to prevent this proceeding, and that it was not necessary to resort to an information for that purpose, and an injunction was granted, although the delay in opening the main line might be prejudicial to the public. Cromford and High Peak Ry. v. Stockport, Disley, and Whaley Bridge Ry., 24 Beav. 74; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 5 W. R. 636.

Held, on appeal, that it is not imperative on the court to enforce by interlocutory injunction a statutory prohibition, and where a railway company was about to violate a clause in its act expressly prohibiting the opening of a main line until a junction line was opened, but which appeared to have been introduced merely for the purpose of obliging the company to complete speedily the junction line, the court, on an undertaking being given to complete the junction line, with all practicable diligence, suspended an interlocutory injunction granted by the court below to restrain the opening of the main line. S. C., 1 De G. & J. 326.

2. User of Railway by the Public.

Court cannot compel Use of Signals.]—A railway company having refused to allow a colliery company to run engines and carriages over part of its line under the powers of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 92, the colliery company filed a bill for an injunction to restrain the railway company from preventing its exercise of the right:—Held, that inasmuch as the colliery company could not run over the line unless the points and signals on the line were properly worked by the railway company, the court could not grant relief, as it does not order the performance of a continuous act like working signals, the doing of which requires continuous attention, and cannot be seen to by the court. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co. v. Taff Vale Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 575; L. R. 9 Ch. 331; 30 L. T. 208. Affirming 22 W. R. 182. See S. C., 26 L. T. 357; 20 W. R. 460.

The absence of a proper method of enforcing the provisions of s. 92 is no reason for extending the jurisdiction of the court. Ib.

Motive Power.]—Upon the construction of a contract between an individual and a railway company:—Held, that nothing had taken place which could give him a right to use horses, as the moving power, against the will and consent of the company. Thorne v. Taw Vale Ry., 13 Beav. 10.

A plaintiff sued as one of the public to restrain a railway company from closing it:—Held, that such a suit could not be maintained. Ib.

The court will enforce, by injunction, the provision of s. 115 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, that no engine or other description of moving power shall be brought or used upon a railway unless the same shall have been approved by the railway company as therein mentioned, notwithstanding the practice of railway companies has been to rely on each other with respect to the fitness of their respective engines, and not to enforce the provision of the act; and notwithstanding also that to enforce such right of inspection would occasion great inconvenience to the public traffic, and although it may appear that the provision is sought to be enforced, not from any apprehension of the use of improper engines, but for the purpose of impeding the traffic over its line of a competing company. Midland Ry. v. Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston Ry., 10 Hare, 359; 1 W. R. 162.

Approval, under s. 115, of the engines to be used, is a condition precedent to the user of the line under s. 92. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co. v. Taff Vale Ry., supra.

A railway company has a common law right of distress damage feasant on an engine incumbering the railway, if there is no certificate of approval. Ambergate Ry. v. Midland Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 793; 23 L. J., Q. B. 17; 18 Jur. 243.

Whether inclusive of Power to use Stations.]—Although the expression "the railway" is, by the interpretation clause of the Railways Clauses Act, s. 3, defined to mean "the railway and the works by the special act authorised to be constructed," and these words have been construed to include a station, yet it is doubtful whether the power reserved to the public by s. 92 to use "the railway" with engines and carriages, upon payment of tolls which are calculated at a certain rate per mile, includes the power of using also the stations of the company. Midland Ry. v. Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston Ry., 10 Hare, 359; 1 W. R. 162.

Liability of Company for Condition of Foreign Trucks.]—A railway company is compelled to forward foreign traffic from other lines, and they must take due care that trucks belonging to other persons are in such a state as to travel safely. But the company cannot stop all foreign trucks and empty them for the purpose of a minute examination; to do so would practically destroy the right given by statute to other companies of having the traffic forwarded, and give a monopoly to the company itself. There must be some reasonable limit to the amount of examination required, and the substantial question in cases of accident is, whether the mode of examination adopted by the forwarding company was reasonable. Richardson v. G. E. Ry., 1 C. P. D. 342; 24 W. R. 907—C. A. Reversing 37 L. T. 248.

Derelict Line — Statute of Limitations.]—A railway company constructed under their statutory powers a railway through certain quays, and one of the clauses of their act provided that the line should be so constructed as not to unnecessarily interfere with or inconvenience the general traffic on the quays or the roads leading therefrom and thereto. After 1875 the railway company never made any use of this line. There was evidence that the public, including the occupiers of the quays, passed over the line as they wished, and a tenant of the owner of the lands compulsorily taken for the construction of the line was in the habit of carting coal and salt, in which he dealt, over the railway:—Held, that no title had been acquired under the Statute of Limitations by the original owner or the occupiers of the quays. Duffy's Estate, In re, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 307. Affirmed in C. A.

Station—Right of Access to—Jurisdiction—Railway Commission.]—So long as there is no decision to the contrary by the railway commission, it is within the discretion of the owner or managers of a railway station either to exclude from the station, or to admit upon such conditions as may be thought fit, any person not using or being desirous of using the railway. Any complaint as to want of facilities, undue preference, or other matters, which a member of the public may have to make, must be addressed to the railway commission, and a court of law can give him no remedy. Perth General Station Committee v. Ross, 66 L. J., P. C. 81; [1897] A. C. 479; 77 L. T. 226—H. L. (Sc.)

The appellants claimed an interdict against the respondent from unlawfully entering their station by his boots or other servant, and particularly from sending his boots in uniform or wearing a badge of the respondent or of the Royal British Hotel, of which he was proprietor:—Held (Lord Morris diss.), that, subject to the terms of any order or regulation to be hereafter made by the railway commission, the respondent had no right by himself or his servants to enter upon or use the appellants' railway station, except with the leave of the appellants or subject to such terms as they might prescribe. Ib.

3. Rolling Stock.

Contract to supply, whether ultra vires.]—The doctrine of ultra vires, as explained in Ashbury Ry. Carriage Co. v. Riche (L. R. 7 H. L. 63), is to be maintained, but is to be applied reasonably, so that whatever is fairly incidental to those things which the legislature has authorised by an act of parliament ought not (unless expressly prohibited) to be held as ultra vires. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 545; 5 App. Cas. 473; 42 L. T. 810; 28 W. R. 769; 44 J. P. 648—H. L. (E.)

In an act of this kind granting special powers, what is not permitted is prohibited. Ib.

Per Lord Watson: The test applied in the Ashbury Case to the powers of a joint-stock company (limited) registered under the Companies Act, 1862, applies with equal force to the case of a railway company incorporated by act of parliament. Ib.

An act of parliament authorised a company to make a railway to T. and S. There were two other railway companies which were afterwards combined into one called the Great Eastern Railway Company. This latter company entered into a contract with the T. and S. Company, with which it was in connection in several respects, to supply it with rolling stock upon receiving a certain annual payment, and having certain other advantages. The contract was adopted by the shareholders of both companies. An action was brought against the Great Eastern Company, and an injunction asked for to restrain it from executing this contract. One of the acts relating to the two companies contained (clause 14) the following provision: "The two companies may enter into agreements with respect to the working, maintenance, and management of the extension railway (this was the T. and S. Railway), or any part thereof, and of the railways of the two companies connected therewith (these were the two companies which had been incorporated under the name of the Great Eastern), and with respect to the apportionment of the traffic, and of the tolls, fares, and charges for traffic on the extension railway, and the railways of the two companies, the appointment of a joint committee, or any other matters incident to the carrying out the purposes of this act." The 15th clause of the act was in these words: "The directors of the T. and S. Company and the directors of the two companies respectively may (subject to the sanction of the shareholders) enter into any contracts or agreements for effecting all or any of the purposes of this act, or any objects incidental to the execution thereof, and every such contract or agreement may contain such covenants, clauses, powers, provisions, and conditions as may be mutually agreed upon between the parties thereto":—Held, that the contract of the Great Eastern Company to supply the T. and S. Company with rolling stock was not ultra vires, but was warranted by the words of these sections of the act. Ib.

A railway company being in want of money, and being advised that they had no power to borrow, sold part of their rolling stock to a waggon company for 30,000*l.*, at the same time making a contract with the waggon company for the hire of this rolling stock at a rent which would repay the 30,000*l.* and interest in five years. At the same time three of the directors of the railway company guaranteed to the waggon company the payment of the rent. The waggon company brought an action against the sureties and the railway company for rent due:—Held, that the transaction, being bonâ fide and what it purported to be, was not an illegal and void transaction under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 19, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 127, s. 4, by being a cloke for borrowing money. Yorkshire Ry. Waggon Co. v. Maclure, 51 L. J., Ch. 857; 21 Ch. D. 309; 47 L. T. 290; 30 W. R. 761—C. A.

Held, also, that if the transaction had been a mere device for borrowing money, it would have been illegal. Ib.

Rights of Debenture-holders.]—Although the fact of the railway company having a debenture debt could not affect the liability of the railway company on the contract, debenture-holders have some sort of security on the rolling stock for the time being, subject to the right of the railway company to use and otherwise deal with it in the ordinary course of business, but the railway company cannot sell the whole of the rolling stock to pay debts which are subsequent in priority to the debentures. Ib.

—— "Working Expenses"—"Proper Outgoings."]—A railway company sold its rolling stock to a waggon company for a sum of money, and the waggon company let the rolling stock back to the railway company at a rent, on payment of which for a term the railway company were to become repossessed of the rolling stock, the rent being equal to the purchase-money and interest. The court of appeal decided that the transaction was a bonâ fide sale and rehiring, and not a sham transaction as a cloke for a borrowing. (See Yorkshire Waggon Co. v. Maclure, supra.) A receiver of the railway company's undertaking having been appointed under s. 4 of the Railways Companies Act, certain moneys which represented rent of some of the rolling stock let by the railway company to another company and proceeds of sale of other rolling stock were paid to the receiver. Debenture-holders who had become such after the date of the above-mentioned agreement of sale and rehiring, and also the waggon company, claimed the money:—Held, that, although by s. 23 of the act "all money borrowed . . . by a company on . . . debenture stock . . . shall have priority . . . over all claims on account of any debts . . . or engagements" (except as in the section specified), that section was subject to s. 4, by which moneys received by a receiver under the act were not payable to creditors until after due provision for the working expenses of the railway and other proper outgoings in respect of the undertaking, and that the rent of the rolling stock was a "working expense," and a "proper outgoing," and entitled to priority over the claim of the debenture-holders. Cornwall Minerals Ry., In re, 48 L. T. 41—C. A.

Exemption from Distress.] — A locomotive engine, which was hired by a railway contractor from the respondents, was seized under a distress for rent due from the contractor to the appellants. At the time the engine was seized it was standing in a shed which the contractor rented from the appellant, and which was connected by a siding with the railway:—Held, that the engine was rolling stock in a "work" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Railway Rolling Stock Protection Act, 1872, and was therefore not liable to distress for rent payable by the tenant of the work. The "work" in s. 3 means any establishment or place, used for the purpose of trade or manufacture, which is connected with a line of railway by sidings along which the rolling stock may be propelled. Easton Estate Co. v. Western Waggon Co., 54 L. T. 735; 50 J. P. 790.

By s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, the rolling stock of a railway company is protected from distress. Eyton v. Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 74.

—— Though Railway be closed.]—The protection from seizure in execution by a judgment creditor, given by the Railway Companies Act, 1867, s. 4, to the rolling stock and plant of a railway, after such railway is open for public traffic, continues although the railway is afterwards closed for traffic. Midland Waggon Co. v.

Potteries Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 6; 6 Q. B. D. 36; 43 L. T. 511; 29 W. R. 78.

Execution against — Railway ancillary to Docks.]—The protection against seizure afforded by the Railway Companies Act, 1867, ss. 3, 4, applies to the railway plant of every company constituted by a statute for the purpose of constructing or working a railway, even although the railway is merely a subordinate and ancillary part of the undertaking authorised by the statute. By two local statutes a company was authorised to construct a wet dock, a lock forming an entrance to the dock, and two short railways, each about half a mile long, to connect the dock with other railways. The plaintiffs had lent money to the company upon mortgage-debentures. The defendants were creditors of the company, and having obtained judgment, seized in execution certain railway plant belonging to it. The plaintiffs having brought an action for an injunction to prevent the defendants from realising their execution:—Held, that the dock company was a "company" within the Railway Companies Act, 1867, s. 3, and that the railway plant belonging to it was protected from seizure by s. 4. G. N. Ry. v. Tahourdin, 53 L. J., Q. B. 69; 13 Q. B. D. 320; 50 L. T. 186; 32 W. R. 559—C. A.

—— Agreement between Companies—Statutory Obligation—"Action on a Contract."]—Sect. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, prohibits the issue of execution against the rolling stock and other chattels of a railway company in two classes of cases—namely, first, where the judgment is recovered in an action on a contract entered into after the passing of the act (August 20, 1867); and, secondly, where the judgment is recovered in an action not on a contract commenced after the passing of the act. Under the terms "action on a contract" and "action not on a contract," as used in s. 4, every kind of action is included. Where three railway companies entered into an arrangement in 1861, which was ultra vires, but was followed and sanctioned by a private act of parliament in 1862, empowering one of the companies to construct and maintain certain works, and in respect thereof to receive certain payments, and imposing on the other companies an obligation to make such payments to be recoverable by action, an action to enforce the liability is not an "action on a contract" within the meaning of s. 4 of the act of 1867, but an action on a statute, and consequently leave to issue execution against the rolling stock and other chattels of the company against which judgment has been recovered will not be given. Rothes (Countess) v. Kirkcaldy Waterworks Commissioners (7 App. Cas. 694) discussed and distinguished. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 139; [1897] 1 Ch. 276; 75 L. T. 416; 45 W. R. 331.

Valuation—Stock taken over—Working Railway.]—By a contract under seal between a railway company and J. it was agreed that the rolling stock of the company should be valued and handed over to J., who was to work the railway at certain mileage rates to be paid monthly, subject to a deduction by way of remuneration for the use of the stock, and also to a deduction on the value of the stock, as a "depreciation fund." Valuations of the stock were made at the commencement and during the continuance of the contract, on the assumption that the "depreciation fund" was merely a "guarantee fund" in the hands of the company, and was not to belong to them eventually, save so far as it was necessary to meet actual depreciation. On the faith of the depreciation fund being a guarantee fund only, J. made considerable expenditure, which diminished or prevented the depreciation of the rolling stock. Upon the determination of the contract, J. brought an action at law against the company, in which it was determined that the depreciation fund was not a guarantee fund, but belonged to the company in all events. It was held by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, but overruled on appeal, that an equity had arisen from the dealings between the parties subsequently to the contract, and that J. was not precluded by the result of the action from obtaining relief in equity. The Lord Chancellor was of a different opinion as to the rule of equity, and Lord Wensleydale as to the facts assumed by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, as the ground of the equity on which he decided. Per the Lord Chancellor: The fact that a person has acted upon a mistaken view of his right under a contract, does not entitle him to relief in equity or at law. Midland Great Western Ry. v. Kinder, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 643; 6 W. R. 510.

4. Lease of Line.

Effect of—New Rights acquired by Lessor.]—In 1846 the Reading Company proposed to make a railway meeting the South Eastern and the South Western lines and another railway. Part of the line proposed to be made ran so nearly in the same direction with part of a branch line proposed to be made by the plaintiffs, that it was proposed that the Reading Company should, for that space, adopt the line to be made by the plaintiffs. The Reading Company and the plaintiffs obtained acts of parliament in 1846, which came into operation on the same day. By s. 44 of the Reading Act, after reciting that a bill was then pending in parliament for enabling the plaintiffs' company to make the portion of the line, and that it was thereby intended that the Reading Company should have the use of it for the purposes of their traffic, it was enacted, that, if the plaintiffs' company did not complete the portion of the line, the Reading Company might make it; and they were empowered to lease their railway to the defendants' company, for such term and upon such conditions as should be agreed upon between the two companies. By the plaintiffs' company's act, after reciting that a bill was then pending in parliament for making the Reading Railway, it was enacted that, in case the bill should pass into a law, the Reading Company might use the portion of the line, and the stations, warehouses, works, and conveniences belonging thereto, subject to such reasonable terms as should be agreed upon between the plaintiffs' company and the Reading Company. By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 113, which was incorporated into these special acts, in cases where a railway is authorised to lease its line, or any portion of it, such lease shall entitle the lessees to enjoy all the powers and privileges granted to and enjoyed by their lessors. In 1847 an agreement was entered into between the Reading Company and the plaintiffs, to the effect that the Reading Company should have the right in perpetuity of using, for the purposes of their traffic, the above-mentioned portion of railway, upon certain terms. In 1850 the Reading Company leased their line, with all their powers, privileges, and all the benefit and advantage to be derived from the agreement of 1847, to the defendants for 1,000 years, subject to the obligations and liabilities of the company:—Held, that, by virtue of the special acts of parliament, the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, incorporated therewith, and the lease of 1850, the agreement of 1847 was binding upon the plaintiffs and defendants; and that the defendants were entitled, as against the plaintiffs, to stand in respect of the agreement, in the situation of the Reading Company. L. & S. W. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 8 Ex. 584; 22 L. J., Ex. 193—Ex. Ch.

Construction of—Passenger Traffic.]—The plaintiffs had constructed a railway which joined the defendants' railway and the Great Western; and by their act, if they abandoned any part of the railway, or if after its completion it ceased to be used for three years, the land purchased was to revert to the owners of the adjoining lands. An agreement was entered into between the plaintiffs and the Great Western Company, by which the latter covenanted to construct a station at the point of junction of the two railways, and to stop their trains at this station. An act was obtained, which empowered the plaintiffs to lease to the defendants their railways, stations, &c., and all their rights, powers and privileges in relation thereto. A lease was accordingly executed, in which there was a covenant that the defendants should "efficiently work and repair the railway and works demised, and indemnify the plaintiffs against all liabilities, loss, charges, and expenses, claims and demands, whether incurred or sustained in consequence of not working, or in any manner connected with the working of the railway and works":—Held, first, that the defendants were not bound to work the demised railway for passenger traffic. West London Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 11 C. B. 327; 7 Railw. Cas. 477; 22 L. J., C. P. 117; 17 Jur. 301—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the defendants were not bound to work for passenger traffic, even if such traffic presented itself. Ib.

—— Stopping Trains at Junction.]—Held, thirdly, that the rights of the plaintiffs, under the agreement with the Great Western, were vested in the defendants, and that the defendants had power to compel a performance of the covenant to stop trains by the Great Western, that being a covenant running with the estate in plaintiffs' railway. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that although the defendants had power to compel the Great Western to stop their trains at the point of junction, they were not bound to exercise that power. Ib.

—— Mode of Working.]—Held, fifthly, that the defendants were not bound to work the plaintiffs' line in connection with the Great Western, nor with trains on their own line, if they could efficiently work the plaintiffs' line without so doing. Ib.

Held, sixthly, that the defendants must not be treated for the purpose of considering their liability under the covenant, as if they were lessees of a separate and independent line, having no control over any other line, but the covenant must be construed with reference to the subject-matter and character of the defendants, the degree of efficient working by the defendants being different and greater than would be required from a company or an individual possessed only of the demised railway. Ib.

No Evasion of Agreement before Lease.]—By a deed between the plaintiffs and defendants, two railway companies, it was recited that a portion of a line was common to the plaintiffs and another company, and that a bill had been introduced into parliament to enable the latter company to lease the undertaking to the defendants, and that such bill had been opposed by the plaintiffs, but that they had agreed to withdraw their opposition, on its being mutually agreed between the plaintiffs and defendants that the covenants in the deed after contained should, upon the passing of the bill, be entered into; and it was further recited that the bill had passed; whereupon it was covenanted and agreed between the plaintiffs and defendants, that the companies working on the common line should, during the lease authorised by the bill, keep accounts of traffic thereon, and should during the lease divide the profits earned thereon; and that during the lease the defendants and the other company should not in any way carry passengers, cattle, &c., between certain points, so as to compete for any traffic which properly belonged to the plaintiffs; and there was a covenant between the plaintiffs and defendants that the agreement come to between them should not in any way be evaded or eluded by the defendants, and that no arrangement, scheme, device, or contrivance should be resorted to or attempted by them for that purpose:—Held, that the last-mentioned covenant was operative upon the passing of the bill, before the granting of the lease; that a breach by which it was averred that the defendants had evaded the agreement, was good, although there was no averment that the lease had been granted; and that the agreement to withdraw their opposition to the bill in parliament was no fraud upon parliament, so as to make the agreement between the companies invalid. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 17 Q. B. 652; 21 L. J., Q. B. 89; 16 Jur. 311.

Agreement for Lease — Validity.] — The Brighton and South Western Railway Companies jointly became purchasers, under an act obtained in 1847, of a line of railway called the Portsmouth Extension Railway, including the station known as the Landport station. A section enacted, that each of the two companies might at all times thereafter use the joint line for the purposes of conveying passengers, animals, and things upon the same, and for all such other purposes as should be necessary for the traffic or business thereon of the respective companies. There were provisions for the tolls to be demanded, and for enabling the companies to enter into a contract between themselves for the purpose of ascertaining the profits of the joint line and the division of such profits. The South Western and the Portsmouth Companies entered into an agreement in 1858, by which they agreed to apply to parliament in the then ensuing session for an act to enable the latter company to lease their line to the former company for the term of 999 years, at a rental of 18,000*l.* a year; and, if unsuccessful in obtaining the act, that they should repeat their efforts in 1860, and that in the meantime the South Western should work the Portsmouth line and pay the rent. By this arrangement the traffic of the South Western was greatly increased:—Held, that the agreement for the lease between the two companies was illegal, being unauthorised by parliament; and that the South Western was not entitled to use the joint station for passengers or goods conveyed under such agreement. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. L. & S. W. Ry., 4 De G. & J. 362; 28 L. J., Ch. 521; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 801; 7 W. R. 591.

A railway company entered into an agreement to lease its line to another company. The agreement contained provisions which were legal, and others which were ultra vires, but an application was to be made to parliament for power to carry out such provisions as should be ultra vires:—Held, that as the agreement provided for a number of things to be done, which were all for the purpose of accomplishing an object that was ultra vires, the parties had no right by virtue of that agreement, until they had obtained the authority of parliament to do even those acts which, independently of the agreement, they did not require the authority of parliament to do. The court, in granting an injunction to this extent, refused to restrain two directors, appointed under the agreement, from acting on the ground that the shareholders had power to remove them, and that their removal might be detrimental to the business of the company. Hattersley v. Shelburne (Earl), 31 L. J., Ch. 873; 10 W. R. 881.

An act of parliament empowered one railway company to grant, and another company to accept, a lease of railway upon such terms as should be agreed upon, provided that the power to lease should not arise till the board of trade had certified that it had been proved to their satisfaction that half the capital of the leasing company had been raised, and applied for the purposes of its acts: and it was also provided that no lease should be of any effect unless previously sanctioned by three-fifths of the shareholders of each company voting at a special meeting:—Held, that no lease, or binding agreement for a lease, could be made before the certificate had been obtained. Kent Coast Ry. v. L. C. & D. Ry., L. R. 3 Ch. 656; 19 L. T. 174; 16 W. R. 1027.

—— Ratification by reference in Act.]—Heads of agreement for a lease were sanctioned by majorities of three-fifths at meetings of the two companies without any certificate of the board of trade being obtained, and were acted upon for several years, but no formal lease, or agreement for a lease, was ever executed. The heads of agreement were also invalid as providing for payment of the rent out of profits not so applicable:—Held, that the arrangement was not ratified by references to it in subsequent local and personal acts of parliament not expressing any direct intention to confirm it. Ib.

—— Specific Performance.]—Where a contract between two companies proves to be one by which one of the contracting parties will gain considerable advantages, at the expense of the other, while the other will receive no corresponding benefit, whether such contract is or is not legally valid, equity will not aid in enforcing it by a decree for specific performance. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 H. L. Cas. 113; 26 L. J., Ch. 482; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

A private act of parliament authorised one railway company to accept a lease of another railway; the directors of the first company then entered into an agreement with the directors of a third company, the stipulations of which were to be performed during the continuance of such lease. No lease within the provisions of the act was ever granted. The agreement appeared to be, if legally valid, at least unfair to the shareholders of one of the companies:—Held, that equity could not enforce it by a decree for specific performance. Ib.

An act of parliament recited three other acts, one only of which had relation to an agreement entered into between the plaintiffs and defendants. By the 1st section, on the completion of the works of the three lines of railways, by the recited acts authorised to be made, so as to be opened for public traffic, or at such other period as might be agreed upon, the S. U. R. Co. were empowered to grant to the L. & N. W. R. Co. a lease in perpetuity of the undertaking. By the 11th section of the same act, it was enacted, that as each of the lines of railway should be completed, the same should be worked and used by the L. & N. W. R. Co., and for the purposes of such working, the L. & N. W. R. Co. were to exercise the powers before given by the act to the S. U. R. Co. in relation to every such completed railway. Other sections of the act spoke of the "lease of the said railways," and the "making of such lease":—Held, that according to the true construction of the act, there was no postponement of the rights of the parties to the benefits of the provisions of the lease until the whole of the three lines had been completed. S. C., 2 Macn. & G. 324; 2 H. & Tw. 257; 20 L. J., Ch. 90; 14 Jur. 921, 1125.

5. Running Powers.

Right dependent on Rules and Regulations.]—A right to run over a line of railway cannot be claimed independently of the rules and regulations which, by act of parliament, the directors are empowered to make for the management of the line. Rhymney Ry. v. Taff Vale Ry., 29 Beav. 153; 30 L. J., Ch. 482; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 202; 4 L. T. 227; 9 W. R. 222. Affirmed 4 L. T. 534; 9 W. R. 362—L.C.

Rules and Regulations — Reasonableness — Enforcement.]—Parties, whose right to use a railway is secured by act of parliament, cannot insist upon their right, and at the same time contend that the rules and regulations made for the security of the line, the passengers, and the traffic, are unreasonable, unnecessary, and inapplicable to their particular traffic. Ib.

Where a railway company, over whose line another railway company has running powers, is empowered to make regulations as to the construction of the carriages to be used on the railway, the onus lies upon the company having the running powers to shew that the regulations are unreasonable and unnecessary. Ib.

The fact of the regulations having been wholly or in part relaxed in the past is no reason for the court to interfere to restrain them from being strictly enforced in the future. Ib.

Joint Station.]—A railway, associating, allying, and connecting itself with another, does not thereby become equitably "amalgamated" with it; and an agreement to amalgamate as from a time past may possibly in equity amount to amalgamation, but an agreement to do so at a future period will not until that period arrives. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. Stour Valley Ry., 2 De G. M. & G. 866.

Pending the progress of a bill through parliament, authorising the S. V. Company to lease its line to the N. W. Company, the bill was opposed by the S. B. Company, and, upon a compromise, a clause was inserted, securing to the S. B. Company the use of part of the land and the joint use of a station, subject to the cesser of these rights in the event of the S. B. Railway Company being leased to or amalgamated with a fourth company, viz., the G. W., who were rivals to the N. W. Company. At this time the S. B. Company was under no engagements to the G. W. Company. Subsequently, however, those two companies entered into agreements, giving facilities and preference to each other's traffic, and agreed to amalgamate at a future time, if the sanction of parliament could be obtained:—Held, that this was not such a change of circumstances produced by the conduct of the S. B. Company as to exclude it from equitable relief by injunction for the enforcement of the right of user conferred on it by the act. Ib.

The court may interfere between two railway companies entitled to the joint use of a station by prescribing regulations for its management; but such interference is not to take place without grave occasion. The court may also direct a partition of the station, and appoint a receiver, if necessary. But where provisions exist for the settlement of disputes on the above subjects by arbitration, the court will withhold its interposition until the remedy thus provided has been resorted to. Ib.

Three railway companies, under an act of parliament, being entitled to the joint use of a station, one of them, as it was alleged by one of the others, unfairly used the station to the detriment of such other company, which filed a bill to restrain the use of the station by such other company, except in accordance with the act. A general demurrer was put in to the bill, on the ground chiefly that a committee of the three companies was, under the act, the proper tribunal, and it was overruled. Mid-Wales Ry. v. Cambrian Ry., 21 L. T. 16.

Joint Line.]—The Brighton Railway Company and the South Western Railway Company jointly became purchasers, under an act obtained in 1847, of a line of railway called the Portsmouth Extension Railway, including the station known as the Landport station. The 13th section enacted "that each of the two companies might at all times thereafter use the joint line for the purposes of conveying passengers, animals, and things upon the same, and for all such other purposes as should be necessary for the traffic or business thereon of the respective companies." There were provisions for the tolls to be demanded, and for enabling the companies to enter into a contract between themselves for the purpose of ascertaining the profits of the joint line, and the division of such profits. The South Western and the Portsmouth Companies entered into an agreement in 1858, by which they agreed to apply to parliament in the then ensuing session for an act to enable the latter company to lease its line to the former company for the term of 999 years, at a rental of 18,000*l.* a year; and, if unsuccessful in obtaining the act, that they should repeat their efforts in 1860, and that in the meantime the South Western Company should work the Portsmouth line and pay the rent. By this arrangement the traffic on the South Western Company was greatly increased. On a bill filed by the Brighton Company to restrain the other companies from using the joint station for the traffic coming from the Portsmouth line, and for an account:—Held, that the act of 1847 did not create a joint tenancy carrying with it the right of using for every kind of traffic a station appurtenant to the joint line, and that the South Western had no right to use it except for what was properly traffic of that company. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. L. & S. W. Ry., 4 De G. & J. 362; 28 L. J., Ch. 521; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 801; 7 W. R. 591.

Payment for Accommodation, Conveniences, and Facilities.]—A special act provided that the H. company should afford to the G. company all needful accommodations, conveniences, and facilities at a station of the H. company, and provided for payment in respect of the accommodation and conveniences:—Held, that the forwarding of through traffic and the convenient timing, number, and speed of trains were facilities and not accommodation and conveniences for which payment could be demanded, and that the G. company were not liable to pay a proportion of the annual cost of working and other annual charges or interest on the capital expenditure on the station. Highland Ry. v. Great North of Scotland Ry., 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 90.

Condition Precedent.]—A special act provided that the T. railway should have running powers over the B. railway, and that "any differences which may from time to time arise between the two companies as to the terms and conditions on which the T. railway may exercise such running powers and the tolls, or as to the sufficiency, extent, or cost of sidings, shall be settled by arbitration":—Held, that it was not a condition precedent to exercising running powers that certain differences should be settled by arbitration. Taff Vale Ry. v. Barry Dock, 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 52—C. A.

6. Working Agreements.

Validity of—Generally.]—There is no principle of public policy which renders void a traffic agreement between two lines of railway for the purpose of avoiding competition. Hare v. L. & N. W. Ry., 2 Johns. & H. 80; 30 L. J., Ch. 817; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1145.

A stipulation not to compete upon parts of the line held to be no such fraud upon the public as rendered the agreement between the companies invalid. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 17 Q. B. 652; 21 L. J., Q. B. 89; 16 Jur. 311.

An agreement between two railway companies, that the one company will not carry traffic over a particular portion of its line:—Held, obiter, not illegal. Lancaster and Carlisle Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 2 Kay & J. 293; 25 L. J., Ch. 223; 4 W. R. 220.

Alienation by an incorporated railway company of the tolls to arise from any portion of its line of railway is contrary to public policy as well as ultra vires of the directors of the company. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 22 L. J., Ch. 682; 17 Jur. 845; 1 W. R. 172.

The managing body of a railway company has no power to enter into a contract fixing and regulating the future traffic which may be carried upon a line of railway which the company may thereafter be empowered to construct, so as to give to another railway company an interest in such traffic and profits. Midland Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 35 L. J., Ch. 831; L. R. 2 Eq. 524; 15 L. T. 264; 15 W. R. 34.

Certain railway companies, including the plaintiffs, entered into an agreement by which, having provided that it should relate to and include all traffic of whatever description despatched or carried from either of two specified routes from or to the several places therein mentioned, they stipulated that all through traffic from or to any of those places should be carried and sent by them along and over the said two routes, and the gross profits divided between them in certain proportions; a special clause in the agreement provided that none of the companies, parties thereto, should, by any of the devices there particularised, or by any other means or inducement whatsoever, cause or promote the said traffic to go or pass, so that the same should not be treated as part of the traffic to which the agreement related, and the profits derived therefrom be apportioned accordingly. The plaintiffs subsequently acquired and opened a new route to and from the termini specified in the agreement. Upon the question whether the traffic proceeds of this new route were within the terms of the agreement:—Held, that the agreement only embraced the traffic on the then existing lines, that there was nothing to prevent the formation of a new line by the plaintiffs, and that it was not compulsory upon them to bring into the common fund the proceeds of their new route. Ib.

Semble, that the agreement would have been illegal and ultra vires if it had contained an express or implied condition prohibiting any of the companies from making or being party to the making of any new line, except on the terms of the agreement. Ib.

—— Agreement to apply for Powers.]—An agreement between two companies for an application to parliament for the necessary powers to enable one company to work the line of the other is innocent, and equity will not interfere to prevent a company from putting its seal to such an agreement. Winch v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 5 De G. & S. 562; 16 Jur. 1035.

—— Delegation of Statutory Powers.]—An agreement between two railway companies, made without the authority of the legislature, whereby one company delegates to another all the powers which have been conferred upon it by parliament, is an unlawful attempt to effect that which parliament alone can authorise, and is against public policy; and a court of equity will not interfere to assist either of the parties in obtaining a collateral benefit, which the agreement would give, or aid them in any manner which would promote the object of the agreement. G. N. Ry. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 9 Hare, 306; 7 Railw. Cas. 643; 21 L. J., Ch. 837.

A railway company agreed with contractors that the contractors should work the line and keep the engines and rolling plant in repair at a specified remuneration, and that the contract should be in force for seven years, but with a proviso for its determination if the contractors did not, within forty-eight hours after notice given by the company, obey the instructions contained in such notice. Quære, whether such an agreement is consistent with public policy. Johnson v. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry., 3 De G. M. & G. 914; 22 L. J., Ch. 921; 17 Jur. 1015.

An agreement that another railway company shall work a particular line of railway, and that the property and plant shall be handed over for that purpose, implies a delegation of the powers conferred by statute on the particular company, which cannot be made by them nor accepted by the other company, without the authority of parliament. Winch v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 5 De G. & S. 562; 16 Jur. 1035.

A railway company, constituted under an act of parliament, agreed with two other railway companies that the whole concern, without incumbrance when completed, should be worked by those two companies, who should have perfect control and exercise all the rights of the first-mentioned company, and who should find stock and work the concern for twenty-one years:—Held, that the agreement was illegal, as being in violation of the act under which the first-mentioned company was constituted. Beman v. Rufford, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 550; 20 L. J., Ch. 537; 15 Jur. 914.

An agreement between two companies provided that one company, in the event of their exercising certain running powers, should be at liberty to have their own staff of clerks at the stations on the other company's line, and should carry the local traffic if required to do so:—Held, that this was not a handing over of the management of the one company to the other such as would be contrary to the spirit of the railway acts if done without express parliamentary sanction. Llanelly Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 7 H. L. 550; 32 L. T. 575; 23 W. R. 927.

A. company, being owner of a station, entered into agreement with B. company to make a new junction between their respective lines, so that B. company may use such station. C. company, having running powers over A. company's line, subsequently entered into an agreement with B. company for use of B. company's line. An attempt of C. company to go from B. company's line to A. company's line over the junction was resisted on the ground that C.'s agreement with B. was ultra vires and invalid, as being a delegation of statutory powers, and as such against public policy:—Held, that the agreement as stated did not amount to a delegation of statutory powers, nor was it ultra vires. Midland Ry. v. G. W. Ry., 42 L. J., Ch. 438; L. R. 8 Ch. 841; 28 L. T. 718; 21 W. R. 657.

—— Giving Interest in Profits.]—The managing body of a railway company has no power to enter into a contract fixing and regulating the future traffic which may be carried upon a line of railway which the company may thereafter be empowered to construct, so as to give to another railway company an interest in such traffic and profits. Midland Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 35 L. J., Ch. 831; L. R. 2 Eq. 524; 15 L. T. 264; 15 W. R. 34.

An agreement between two groups of railway companies, being respectively the owners of independent conterminous routes, to divide the profits of the whole traffic in certain fixed proportions, calculated on the experience of the past course of traffic, being bonâ fide, is not ultra vires. Hare v. L. & N. W. Ry., supra.

An agreement between two railway companies that they shall work together, and that the profits shall be shared, so as to give a certain percentage to each, is beyond the powers of the companies, and illegal. Charlton v. Newcastle and Carlisle Ry., 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1096 ; 7 W. R. 731.

A bill in parliament to authorise a railway company to grant a lease in perpetuity to another railway company of certain projected lines was opposed by a third railway company, who withdrew their opposition on an agreement being come to that during the continuance of any lease to be authorised by the act the companies should participate in portions of each other's profits, and that the two former companies should not take traffic on specified portions of their lines :—Held, that the agreement was ultra vires, and ought not to be decreed to be specifically performed. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 De G. M. & G. 115 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 682 ; 17 Jur. 845. Affirmed 6 H. L. Cas. 113 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 482 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

A stipulation to divide the profits earned upon the common portion of line held to be no such fraud upon the shareholders of either company as rendered the agreement between the companies invalid. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 17 Q. B. 652 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 89 ; 16 Jur. 311.

Effect of s. 87 of Railways Clauses Act.]—The object of s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, is to enable one railway company to contract for the passing of its trains to the limits of the railway of another company, with the incidents which ordinarily attach to such power of passing, including that of stopping at the stations on the line, and carrying passengers and goods to and from such stations. But it does not enable one railway company, under colour of passing over the line of another company, to carry the whole of the traffic of the other railway over which it may agree to pass. Simpson v. Denison, 10 Hare, 51.; 16 Jur. 828.

An agreement by one railway company for the payment to another of such an amount as will, after answering all expenses and liabilities, furnish a certain dividend on the paid-up capital of such other capital, is not an agreement for the payment of a toll within s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act. Ib.

Semble, a toll is a payment for the right of passing along a highway, public or private ; it is a payment connected with the passing over, and should probably be reserved with reference to the number of carriages passing over the line. Ib.

A railway company contracted with another for the use of the line of the latter for a term, at graduated tolls, according to the tonnage carried, which were to be a charge on the tolls and dues of the former company. The former company had no express parliamentary power thus to charge its tolls :—Held, that the charge was of too doubtful legality to be enforced by an injunction to restrain the former company from paying a dividend to its shareholders until the sums due upon the agreement were provided for, no case being made out shewing a probability of there being no fund forthcoming to answer the demand at the hearing. South Yorkshire Ry. v. G. N. Ry., 3 De G. M. & G. 576; 22 L. J., Ch. 761; 1 W. R. 203.

Semble, that such an agreement is not a contract for the use of a line, nor for any apportionment of tolls within s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Ib.

Heads of a proposed agreement were arranged between the directors of two railway companies, by which one company was to allow the other company, for ninety-nine years, to work the lines, and use the property and plant of the granting company, except certain specified lands and buildings, upon certain terms of allowance for working expenses and charges, and the maintenance for works and ways, the property and plant to be restored on the termination of the agreement, on terms of profitable return to the granting company ; and provision was made for application to parliament for powers, if needful. On a bill by a shareholder in the granting company, on behalf of himself and all the other shareholders in that company except the directors, against that company and the other company :—Held, that such an agreement is not distinguishable on principle from a lease, to grant which, is clearly not within the statutory powers of the granting company, and that s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act merely gives to one company a limited power to run a portion of its traffic only, when it is necessary for the purposes of its own traffic, over the line of another railway company. Winch v. Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Ry., 5 De G. & Sm. 562 ; 16 Jur. 1035.

A bonâ fide agreement by deed was executed by the plaintiffs and the defendants, two railway companies. The deed provided, first, that the defendants might, for twenty-one years, pass over the railway of the plaintiffs, and have free use of their works and conveniences, with engines and waggons, for the purpose of carrying coal. Secondly, that such passage should be had and made on payment of the tolls, and under the following restrictions and conditions ; that is to say, when the quantity of coal carried over any part of the plaintiff's railways to the defendants' railway, and thence to certain places, should not amount to 125,000 tons in the period of six calendar months, during the term of twenty-one years, then the defendants would pay to the plaintiffs such toll for such passage for such period of six calendar months as would, with any clear profit which might be made by the plaintiffs before the same period after payment of all annual and half-yearly charges for interest and outgoings, and all expenses of management or otherwise, be sufficient to enable the plaintiffs to pay such dividends as might become payable in respect of any guaranteed or preference stock of the plaintiffs already issued or thereafter to be issued with the consent of the defendants, and also a clear net dividend at the rate of 3*l.* per cent. per annum for such period of six calendar months upon the ordinary capital stock for the time being of the plaintiffs ; and when the quantity of coal for any such period of six calendar months should exceed 125,000 tons and not 150,000 tons, such sum as would make up in manner before mentioned the demand upon the preference stock, and 3*l.* 5*s.* per cent. upon the ordinary stock ; and when the quantity of coal during the like period of six calendar months should exceed 150,000 tons and not 175,000 tons, such sum as would make up in like manner the dividend upon the preference stock, and 3*l.* 10*s.* per cent. upon the ordinary stock, and so on progressively up to the carriage of upwards of 400,000 tons during any such period of six calendar months, in which case the defendants were to pay the plaintiffs such sum as with the clear profits made by plaintiffs during the same period would pay the dividends upon the preference stock, and 6*l.* per cent. upon the ordinary stock. The deed went on to provide with respect to the calculations of the number of tons, and that if the payment made by the defendants for any period of six months once made up 4*l.* 10*s.* per cent. upon the ordinary stock of the plaintiffs, it should never otherwise recede:—Held, that the contract was not ultra vires, but one which the companies were competent to enter into, and valid in law, the payments to be made being tolls within s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act. G. N. Ry. v. South Yorkshire Ry., 9 Ex. 642; 23 L. J., Ex. 186—Ex. Ch.

By an agreement between the directors of two railway companies, the North Western Company was to have running powers over the Llanelly Railway Company's lines, subject to its by-laws; was to be at liberty to have its own staff at its stations, and be allowed a reasonable sum for cartage, clerkage, &c.; the latter company was to be at liberty to call on the North Western Company to carry passengers and goods for the Llanelly Company upon its local lines, and both sets of directors bound themselves to send by each other's lines all traffic not otherwise consigned. Such an agreement appeared to be authorised by s. 87 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845; and any differences arising between the two companies occasioned by any hardship felt in the working of the agreement, on either side, might be made the subject of arbitration under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 59. Llanelly Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J. Ch. 539; L. R. 7 H. L. 550; 32 L. T. 575; 23 W. R. 927.

Whether s. 92 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, does or does not convert railways into public highways, and whether that section be or be not controlled by s. 87 of the same act, giving powers to companies to enter into agreements as to passing over or along each other's lines, yet when an agreement as to the terms of passing over or along each other's lines has been entered into between railway companies, their rights in respect of such passing depend upon the terms of the agreement, and are no longer governed by the provisions of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act. G. N. Ry. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 9 Hare, 306; 7 Railw. Cas. 643; 21 L. J., Ch. 837.

Construction of Agreement.]—Construction of an agreement between two railway companies, enabling one to pass over and use the railway stations, watering places, and sidings upon and appertaining to the other, and giving the right of access to such parts of the stations and appurtenances as were necessary to the traffic on and over the other, with a covenant to give the same facilities and assistance as its own traffic of the like character should receive. Ib.

One railway company having granted to another the use of its lines and of all conveniences upon the lines, cannot object to its grantees using the rights so granted for any purposes to which it may be able to apply them, even if the grantors were not entitled to use them for such purposes, semble. Ib.

—— Maintenance in Substantial Repair—Original Defects.]—A working agreement provided that the Scarborough company were to complete their railway, and that twelve months after the opening of the railway for public traffic, the North Eastern company were "ever thereafter to maintain the same in substantial repair and in good working order and condition." Landslips from time to time occurred at various places on the railway during the eight years after its opening for traffic. The North Eastern company alleged that the landslips occurred owing to the nature of the strata through which the cuttings had been made, and the original defective construction of the line. The North Eastern company executed certain works to make the line safe for working. In so doing they made good defects in the original construction of the line, the cost of which they sought to recover from the Scarborough company:—Held, that on the true construction of the working agreement, the expenditure incurred should be borne by the North Eastern company. N. E. Ry. v. Scarborough and Whitby Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 157—C. A.

—— Maintenance and Possession of Premises.]—The S. railway company were authorised by their act to "make and maintain" a railway, with all proper stations, approaches and works, and were empowered to transfer or sell the railway before or after completion, and all the powers of the company, to the D. railway company. By a working agreement, the terms of which were incorporated in the act, it was provided that the S. company were to complete the line, and that, when completed, it should be maintained and worked by the D. company in perpetuity, and that they were to pay an annual sum to the D. company. On the completion of the line the D. company took possession of and worked the same under the agreement, but no sale to them of the railway had been effected. While the D. company was thus in possession the S. company, acting under the alleged powers in the act, in order to provide a better access to a station on the line, erected some stone steps in the station yard, which the D. company removed. In an action for a mandatory injunction to compel the D. company to restore the steps:—Held, that, on the true construction of the act and working agreement incorporated therewith, the D. company were entitled to the exclusive possession and right of maintenance of the railway and works; and that the erection of the steps was a work of maintenance, and was a wrongful act on the part of the S. company. Sevenoaks, Maidstone, and Tunbridge Ry. v. L., C. & D. Ry., 48 L. J., Ch. 513; 11 Ch. D. 625; 40 L. T. 545; 27 W. R. 672.

Under a power to "maintain" a railway and works, reasonable improvements, consistent with the purpose of the undertaking, are included. Ib.

—— Local Traffic—What is.] — When two railway companies gave mutual running powers to one another over parts of their respective lines, with a stipulation that local traffic should be respected:—Held, that by local traffic was meant the traffic between two stations, both being on one of the lines over which the running powers extended. Midland Ry. v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 22 L. T. 601.

—— Rights on Amalgamation.]—A railway company, A., made an agreement with another railway company, B., to allow B. to carry passengers and goods over the A. line on certain terms. There was a station at the A. line, towards the increased extent and accommodation of which the B. company was to contribute a limited sum. The A. company amalgamated with other companies, obtained several branches, and assumed a different name. The B. company did the same :—Held, that the agreement applied to all traffic coming from the B. line upon the A. line, however originating, whether only upon the original B. line, or in, from, or through any of its amalgamated lines. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. East Lancashire Ry., 5 H. L. Cas. 792; 25 L. J., Ex. 278; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 4 W. R. 780.

—— User of New Junction or New Connection.]—A. company, being owner of a station, entered into agreement with B. company to make a new junction between their respective lines, so that B. company might use such station. C. company, having running powers over A. company's line, subsequently entered into agreement with B. company for use of B. company's line. An attempt of C. company to go from B. company's line to A. company's line over the junction was resisted on the ground that C.'s agreement with B. did not give a right to use such junction: —Held, that the effect in law of the right to make the junction was to make the two lines one continuous line, which the public had a right to use, and therefore also a company working under arrangements with companies owning the two lines. Midland Ry. v. G. W. Ry., 42 L. J., Ch. 438; L. R. 8 Ch. 841; 28 L. T. 718; 21 W. R. 657.

The court refused to restrain one railway company from using the station of another, under an agreement which was made between the two companies before a connection had been established between the company using the station and a third company, which brought such third company into competition with the company to whom the station belonged, it not being clear that the right of the defendants to use the station was not intended to be given by their special act, the agreement being open to the construction that the extent and terms of the station accommodation were from time to time to form the subject of reference to arbitration, and there being no award specifying the time at which it should determine; the rival or competing company having also been in existence at the time the agreement was made, and the plaintiffs being therefore at that time aware of the possibility of the competition afterwards arising; and, supposing the question to be doubtful, the balance of convenience preponderating against granting the injunction. Midland Ry. v. Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston Ry., 10 Hare, 359; 1 W. R. 162.

Enforcement.]—Where an agreement was entered into by two railway companies giving mutual rights of running trains on each other's lines, and company A. had possessed and enjoyed for several years the rights granted to them, while company B. took no steps to enforce the stipulation in their favour, and allowed the time to expire within which it should have been performed, an injunction was granted to restrain company B. from disturbing the enjoyment of the rights of company A. G. N. Ry. v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 1 Sm. & G. 81. See G. N. Ry. v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 5 De G. & Sm. 138; 16 Jur. 146, infra.

By an agreement between two railway companies, which was to last for fifty years, the Great Northern Company should book and invoice, and cause or permit to be conveyed or despatched by and along the lines of the Sheffield Company, all traffic originating upon any of the lines of the Great Northern Company, for which the railways of the two companies formed a convenient route "not otherwise specially consigned or addressed," or the subject of agreements (if any) subsisting with other companies. The Sheffield Company in like manner contracted to carry on its lines (mutatis mutandis). By an agreement between the Sheffield Company and the Midland Company, by which running powers and access to Manchester over the Sheffield lines were conceded to the Midland Company, the effect was to give the latter company a through route to Manchester wholly independent of the Great Northern Company. On application for an injunction to restrain the Sheffield company from carrying out this latter agreement :—Held, that the Sheffield Company had not been guilty of fraud or breach of that agreement, and the injunction refused. G. N. Ry. v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 5 L. T. 667.

How Determinable.]—The usage and rules of law applicable to the determination of contracts for hiring, service or partnership, have no application to contracts between railway companies. An agreement between railway companies not ultra vires, and by its terms unlimited in duration of time, can only be determined, failing mutual consent, by an act of parliament. Llanelly Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 7 H. L. 550; 32 L. T. 575; 23 W. R. 927.

The Llanelly Railway Company executed an agreement by which it conceded to the London and North Western Railway Company running powers over its lines, subject to the company's by-laws and to the payment of dues. The agreement specified no limit as to its duration, nor that either company was to have power to determine it, but some of its terms indicated that it was intended to be permanent. It provided that, whether the running powers were exercised or not, there should be a complete system of through booking, and that the two companies should send by each other all traffic, not otherwise consigned, to or from stations on the lines of each whenever such lines formed the shortest route :—Held, that these provisions constituted a sufficient consideration to support the agreement, so that neither company could determine it without the consent of the other on the ground of want of reciprocity, although it neither gave to the Llanelly Company any running powers over the lines of the London and North Western Company nor laid any obligation on the latter company to exercise the powers conceded to it. Ib.

In 1848 the East Lincolnshire Railway Company agreed with the defendants that a station on the defendants' line should be used equally by both companies, but should be subject to the by-laws of the defendants, and that a committee of three from each board should be appointed to arrange the working of the traffic, &c.; that the cost and maintenance of the station and the working should be borne by the two companies equally; that the defendants should afford to the East Lincolnshire Railway Company facilities for access to the Great Grimsby Docks; and that the East Lincolnshire Railway Company should give up a piece of land to the defendants; that the defendants should have the right of running with their engines, &c., on the East Lincolnshire line between Great Grimsby and Louth; and that the East Lincolnshire Railway Company should have the same right over the defendants' line between Great Grimsby and New Holland, paying in either case 66 per cent. of the gross receipts to the company whose line was used; and that each company should provide station accommodation for the other at New Holland and Louth respectively for three years, as therein mentioned. The said East Lincolnshire line of railway became vested in the plaintiffs as lessees thereof, for 999 years. Disputes arose between the companies, which ended in the defendants preventing the plaintiffs from running their engines, &c., on the line between Great Grimsby and New Holland, and giving them a formal notice to determine the agreement. On motion, an injunction was granted to restrain the defendants from obstructing the plaintiffs running their engines, &c., over that part of the defendants' line mentioned in the agreement:—Held, that the agreement was permanent, and could not be determined without the consent of both parties, and was not a mere licence revocable at the will of either. An agreement to grant an easement of this nature to a corporate body need not be by deed, and might be permanent, although it was to the company only, and not to the company and its successors. G. N. Ry. v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 5 De G. & Sm. 138; 16 Jur. 146.

Held, also, that the terms of the contract were not too vague, but that the user conceded was one consistent with the proper engagement of the railway, the subject-matter of the contract, and with the rights of the granting party; held, also, that this court will grant an injunction, restraining the defendants from acting contrary to a negative agreement, although it cannot specifically enforce the performance of the whole of the agreement. Ib.

Railway Commissioners—Jurisdiction to Revise.]—In 1858 two railway companies entered into a working agreement under a special act, which enabled them so to do, with this proviso, "That no such agreement shall be valid until the same has been approved, both as to the period of its continuance and in other respects, by the board of trade." The 17th clause of the agreement empowered the board of trade, once in every ten years, "to cause this agreement to be revised, but in the interest of the public only." In 1873, the powers and duties of the board of trade "under any special act with respect to the approval of working agreements between railway companies" were transferred to the railway commissioners:—Held, that the power given under clause 17 of the agreement to the board of trade, was a power with respect to the approval of a working agreement, and was also a power under a special act, so that the railway commissioners had power to revise the agreement, and to consider it, in the interest of the public. Huddersfield Corporation v. G. N. Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 587.

—— Reference to Arbitration of.]—See post, col. 1526.

Arbitration Clause—Notice to Terminate.]—An agreement between two railway companies by which one had a right to run over the other's lines, contained a clause referring all matters in difference between the parties to arbitration. The lessor company gave the lessee company notice that they should consider the agreement at an end after a fixed day: the lessees took no heed of the notice and continued running their trains:—Held, that the matter came within the terms of the agreement for reference to arbitration and must accordingly be referred. Llanelly Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 20 W. R. 898. Affirmed 45 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 7 H. L. 550; 32 L. T. 575; 23 W. R. 927.

—— Ouster of Jurisdiction of Court.]—By an agreement of the 26th of February, 1866, and afterwards confirmed by act of parliament, the plaintiff company agreed to construct a line of railway between certain termini, and the defendant company agreed to work it, and during the continuance of the agreement to develop and accommodate the local and through traffic thereon, and to carry over it certain traffic particularly specified; and it was agreed that all differences under the agreement should be determined by a standing arbitrator to be named by the companies in January in each year, or failing such nomination, by the board of trade on the application of either company in February in each year; and that all such clauses of the acts of parliament for the time being in force in regard to railways as should relate to the settlement of disputes by arbitration should, as far as applicable, and except as therein otherwise provided, be deemed incorporated with the agreement, and that the agreement should continue for 999 years from its date. The plaintiff company constructed the line, and the defendant company entered into possession thereof, but carried a large proportion of traffic which ought to have passed over the plaintiffs' line by other lines belonging to the defendant company, and a bill was filed to restrain the defendant company from so doing:—Held, first, that inasmuch as no standing arbitrator had been appointed in accordance with the agreement, the jurisdiction of the court was not ousted; and secondly, that the case was one in which the court could interfere by injunction. Wolverhampton and Walsall Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 131; L. R. 16 Eq. 433.

—— Injunction to Restrain from Proceeding.]—The Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8, has given no power to the high court to issue an injunction in a case in which no court before that act had power to give any remedy whatever. Therefore the high court has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction to restrain a party from proceeding with an arbitration in a matter beyond the agreement to refer, although such arbitration proceeding may be futile and vexatious:—Semble, per Brett, L.J., that the Judicature Act, 1873, has dealt only with procedure, and not with jurisdiction at all, and that if no court had power to issue an injunction before that act, the high court has no such power now. North London Ry. v. G. N. Ry., 52 L. J., Q. B. 380; 11 Q. B. D. 30; 48 L. T. 695; 31 W. R. 490—C. A.

Transfer of Line — Commencement of Payment.]—The Caledonian Railway Company for thirteen years up to July, 1879, had been proprietors of the D. & A. railway, and had incurred certain liabilities in respect to payment of dividends to preference and ordinary shareholders of the D. & A. line. The preamble of the North British Railway (D. & A. joint line), passed July, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. clv.), set forth that it was expedient that the Caledonian and North British companies should have equal rights and powers, and be subject to equal liabilities over and with respect to the D. & A. line. Sect. 3 provided that on and after the 1st February, 1880, called the "vesting period," all interest which the Caledonian possessed should be transferred to the Caledonian and North British jointly and in equal proportions in manner hereinafter provided by the act. Sect. 6 provided that the consideration for the transfer of the joint line should be as follows: "(1) From and after the vesting period the company (the North British) shall pay to the Caledonian Railway Company half-yearly, on the 1st of March and 1st of September in each year, a sum equal to one-half of the aggregate of the following half-yearly payments, for which the Caledonian Railway Company are now liable in respect of their acquisition of the D. & A. railway." The Caledonian Railway Company claimed that under this section, there was a half-yearly payment amounting to 5,903*l.* 15*s.* due on the 1st of March, 1880:—Held, that the liability to make payment in 1880 did not arise till September, the time of payment applicable to the first six months following the 1st of February, 1880. Caledonian Ry. v. North British Ry., 6 App. Cas. 114; 29 W. R. 685—H. L. (Sc.)

7. Amalgamation.

Position of Officers on.]—A bill was filed by a former officer of a railway company to obtain distribution of a sum of money which had been set apart for the compensation of the officers of the company on its amalgamation with another company. An inquiry was directed, and the chief clerk found that he was an officer of the company, at an average salary of 500*l.* a year, although at the actual time of the amalgamation he only held the appointment of consulting engineer, at the annual retaining fee of 100*l.*, and in arriving at this result the chief clerk took into consideration his former engagement of traffic manager. The chief clerk submitted to the court what shares the persons entitled were to take. The other parties appealed from the decision of the chief clerk as to the right of the party to participate in the fund:—Held, that he was an officer of the company, and that the shares of the parties entitled to share must be determined on the principle of annuities, having regard to their several ages and the amount of their salaries. Bruff v. Cobbold, 30 L. T. 597.

Action on a bond given by a party to the L. & C. railway company, as surety for the due performance by G. of his duties as clerk. The condition of the bond was, that if G. should render to the L. & C. railway company, or to the committee for managing the London terminus of the L. & C., L. & B., and S. E. railways, a true account of all the receipts and payments of him, as such clerk, and also should pay to the L. & C. railway company, or to the committee, all sums as he should receive on account of the company or committee, then the obligation to be void. The surety pleaded that the bond was made before the passing of an act to consolidate the L. & B. and L. & C. railway companies, and that the action was commenced afterwards, and that the L. & C. railway company thereby became dissolved:—Held, that the plea was bad, and was no defence to the action, inasmuch as the new company was the same as the two old ones, with additional powers, and that the amalgamation of the companies did not affect the responsibilities of the surety or G. L. & B. Ry. v. Goodwin, 6 Railw. Cas. 177; 3 Ex. 736; 18 L. J., Ex. 337. See S. C., 3 Ex. 320; 18 L. J., Ex. 174; Eastern Union Ry. v. Cochrane, 9 Ex. 197; 7 Railw. Cas. 792; 2 C. L. R. 292; 23 L. Effect of, on Agreement to withdraw Opposition.]—A landowner, being a peer of parliament, entered into an agreement with the projectors of a railway, stipulating that they should take certain portions of his land, and pay him specified sums for the same, and by way of compensation for permanent injury to his mansion and estate, that they should execute certain works of utility and ornament on his property, and make and maintain a station adjoining or near to a particular road, at which all trains passing along the railway should stop for the accommodation of passengers, and for the receiving and unloading of goods, luggage, carriages and horses; with a provision that the landowner should withdraw his opposition to the bill of the projectors and co-operate with them, and use his best endeavours to prevent the bill of a rival company from passing into law, but that if the bill of the rival company should pass, then the first-mentioned company should pay him certain sums for the land the rival company might take, and recover from the latter and pay to the first-mentioned company the largest amount of price and compensation which could be obtained; and also a provision that either of the parties might determine the agreement by notice to the other, if the bill of the first-mentioned company should not pass within six months; and a further provision that if the two projected companies should be amalgamated, the amalgamated company should pay certain sums to the landowner as purchase-money and compensation; and that the covenants and agreements concerning the purchase and taking of land, not making deviations without his consent, and the making and maintaining such station, and all other the covenants and agreements thereinbefore contained on the part of the first-mentioned company, so far as the same should be applicable, should be performed by the amalgamated companies. By an act passed within six months, the subscribers to the two projected companies were incorporated in one body, and authorised to make certain of the projected lines of railway, and it was enacted that the shareholders of each company should be entitled in certain rates or proportions to the shares of the united company:—Held, that, notwithstanding the bill of the first-mentioned company did not pass, the agreement could not be determined by a notice given by the projectors who were parties to the agreement, or by the amalgamated body. Lindsey (Earl) v. Capper, 2 Ex. 801—Ex. Ch. Affirmed 3 H. L. Cas. 293.

The amalgamated company having then taken the land referred to in the agreement, and paid for it the price thereby stipulated, and having, in a suit in equity brought against them by the landowner, claimed the benefit of the agreement, he filed a bill for a specific performance of his contract with the projectors of the first-mentioned company:—Held, in equity, that the union and incorporation of the shareholders of the two companies in one body and the consolidation of their several shares under the act of parliament, constituted an amalgamation within the meaning of the agreement, and that the amalgamated company was bound by the agreement entered into with the landowner by the projectors of the first-mentioned company. Lindsey (Earl) v. G. N. Ry., 10 Hare, 665 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 995 ; 17 Jur. 552 ; 1 W. R. 527.

Powers of Directors—Effect of Act.]—Two companies proposing to construct railways which would necessarily interfere with each other, their respective subscribers' agreements empowered the respective managing committees or directors "to demise or sell the undertaking, or any part thereof, or to amalgamate the same, or any part thereof, with any other railway or railways." In pursuance of the powers thus conferred upon them, the directors of the two companies agreed to amalgamate and to form a united company, and this agreement was carried into effect by resolutions made at board meetings of the respective committees, and by a deed executed by a competent number of the directors of each company :—Held, that the power to amalgamate was vested in the two boards, and that those powers were well and effectively exercised, and that the company so united and amalgamated might maintain an action for calls against a shareholder of either company who had executed the parliamentary contract and subscribers' agreement. Cork and Youghal Ry. v. Paterson, 18 C. B. 414.

A company for making a railway from Dublin to Mullingar was incorporated in July, 1845, under the name of the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland. Some of its directors provisionally registered another company for making a railway from Mullingar to Galway, to be called "The Galway and Mullingar Junction Railway Company." Three months afterwards this name was altered at the registration office to "The Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland (extension from Mullingar to Galway)." Most of the directors of the two companies were the same. L. applied for and received scrip certificates in the extension company, and paid deposits thereon, and received receipts headed with the altered name, and signed the shareholders' agreement and parliamentary contract. The Midland Great Western presented in its own name and under its corporate seal, a petition to parliament for an act to make a railway from Mullingar to Galway, undertaking at its own expense to make the railway. The act which was passed upon this petition, in July, 1846, only gave authority to make the railway from Mullingar to Athlone, or but a part of the distance. The directors had power under the act to raise the necessary sums, "by contributions among themselves or by the admission of other parties." The additional capital required for extension was directed to form "part of the general and original capital of the company" ; and the provisions of the recited act (that of 1845) were to extend to and be read with the new act. The expression "the company," in the new act, was declared to mean the Midland Great Western Company. In September, 1846, at a meeting of the directors of the Midland Great Western, a resolution was passed stating on what terms the holders of the extension scrip should be entitled to certificates in the joint company, and another resolution approving of and confirming those terms. At that meeting the seal of the Midland Great Western was affixed to the shareholders' book, which, however, did not then contain the names of the shareholders in the extension line. The latter were added in March, 1847, when one of them, that of L., was inserted ; three calls were made, the first was dated previously to the insertion of the extension subscribers in the shareholders' book ; the two others after that insertion :—Held, that the act did not amalgamate the two companies, and that even if the directors possessed a power of amalgamation, the resolution of September, 1846, was not an exercise of that power so as to render L. liable for any one of the calls at the suit of the Midland Great Western. Midland Great Western Ry. v. Leech, 3 H. L. Cas. 872.

Referee under Contract.]—A contract between a railway company and certain contractors for works upon the line, contained a stipulation, that any difference arising thereon should be referred to T., "if and so long as he should continue to be the company's principal engineer." After the making of the contract, the railway company became merged in and amalgamated with another railway company, under an act which provided that, notwithstanding the amalgamation, and the partial repeal of the special act of the first-mentioned railway company, all contracts should be proceeded with and enforced as if such repeal had not taken place, the new railway company being in all respects with reference to such matters substituted for the former railway company :—Held, that T., who still continued to be the engineer of a portion of the former railway, but was not the "principal engineer" of the amalgamated company, was the proper referee in cases of disputes arising out of the contract. Wansbeck Ry. and Trowsdale, In re, L. R. 1 C. P. 269 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 746.

Arbitration—Method of taking Accounts—Jurisdiction.]—On an amalgamation of railway companies under an act of parliament, some of the shareholders filed a bill for the purpose of determining the principle upon which the accounts were to be taken :—Held, that the question being merely one of account as between two classes of shareholders for the determination of which the act of parliament had provided sufficient machinery by means of arbitration, the court would not interfere, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Yool v. *G. 8. Trains.

Express Trains, what are.]—The trains called "express trains," in the bills of the Great Western Railway Company, are not within the exception contemplated in a covenant to cause "all trains carrying passengers, not being goods trains, or trains to be sent express or for special purposes," to stop for refreshments at the refreshment rooms of the lessee of the company ; and the lessee has a sufficient interest, without his sublessee, to carry on a suit ; and where the material rights of parties rest on covenant each is primâ facie entitled to sue either at law or in equity, though such party may be liable at the time in respect of other covenants. Rigby v. G. W. Ry., 4 Railw. Cas. 175 ; 1 Coop. C. C. 7 ; 10 Jur. 488. See also Rolfe v. Rolfe, 1 Coop. C. C. 8, n. ; 10 Jur. 61.

A train on a local line running in connection with trains between London and Scotland cannot be said to lose its character of an express train by stopping at junctions connecting the line with other important lines, although it should stop at two such junctions within eight miles of one another. Hood v. N. E. Ry., 19 W. R. 523.

Ordinary Trains.]—When a branch railway act gave a landowner the right to stop by signal all ordinary trains: — Held, that accelerated trains, forming part of fast through trains from London, were not ordinary trains, though the fares charged were at the ordinary rate. Turner v. L. & S. W. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 430; L. R. 17 Eq. 561.

When an act confers upon a landowner a private right creating a burthen upon a railway, and restraining the directors from regulating the traffic so as best to accommodate the public, it must be construed strictly. Ib.

Not under Control of Company.]—A railway company covenanted with the builders of refreshment rooms at a station on the line of railway that all trains which should pass the station carrying passengers, not being goods trains or trains to be sent express or for special purposes, and except trains not under the control of the company, should stop for a reasonable period of about ten minutes. The postmaster-general, proceeding under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 98, which was passed before the covenant was made, required the company to run a train carrying mails at a certain hour, and stopping at the station for five minutes only:—Held, that such a train was a train "not under the control of the company" within the meaning of the exception. Phillips v. G. W. Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 614; L. R. 7 Ch. 409; 26 L. T. 532; 20 W. R. 562.

"All Passenger Trains."]—By feu charter, dated 1863, between A., the proprietor of land through which a railway was authorised to run, and the railway company, it was provided that the company should be bound to erect on a piece of ground conveyed to them by A. at a nominal feu rent, "a station for passengers and goods travelling by the said" railway, "at which all passenger trains shall regularly stop," to be called Crathes station. The station was erected. Subsequently certain trains were run, namely (1) excursion trains at low fares to certain places on the line, but not to Crathes station. They were advertised by special handbills, and were not included in the time tables except in error. (2) Trains called the Queen's messenger trains, ran by arrangement with the home office, who paid the railway company a subsidy. (3) Trains called the post-office trains, ran by arrangement with the post-office, for which a subsidy was also paid. The Queen's messenger trains and the post-office trains only ran during her majesty's stay at Balmoral; but they were advertised in the railway company's time table, and through passengers were allowed to travel by them. They stopped at Crathes by signal, but did not stop regularly for setting down or taking up passengers. There was no contract with the home office or post-office that they should not do so. A. sought declarator that all trains, including the above, except only such as might be hired for an individual or individuals for his or their exclusive use, should regularly stop:—Held, that the trains called the Queen's messenger trains, and the post-office trains, fell within the terms of the contract; but that the excursion trains in the circumstances materially differed from ordinary passenger trains, and did not come within the obligation. Burnett v. Great North of Scotland Ry., 54 L. J., Q. B. 531; 10 App. Cas. 147; 53 L. T. 507—H. L. (Sc.)

Amalgamation—Injunction.]—In 1846 two competing lines of railway, the D. N. and the L. & Y., being before parliament, L. agreed with eleven persons (the promoters of the D. N. railway) to give them certain portions of land, at different prices; to withdraw all parliamentary opposition from them, and offer every description of opposition to the L. & Y. railway; and that if an amalgamation took place on any grounds, he would not oppose the amalgamated company. In case of the amalgamated company obtaining their bill, they were to adopt this agreement and all the covenants, &c., one of which was that the D. N. railway company were to build a station near T., at a point to be approved by L., at which station all trains should stop. The two companies did amalgamate, by the name of the "G. N. Railway Co." Litigation took place, both in equity and at law, upon the construction of the agreement, the validity of which was never impeached in such litigation. The G. N. company now refused to stop their express trains at the T. station:—Held, first, that the agreement was legal in itself, was now decided by authority, but, semble, that if such authority had been wanting, it would not have been open to the defendants now to impeach it, after having brought it forward as a defence in former litigation. Secondly, that the balance of inconvenience on stopping such trains was in favour of a specific performance of the agreement, and that the court would not hesitate to interfere to restrain a breach of it on interlocutory application. Thirdly, that the amalgamated company's act having been passed without opposition by L., which might reasonably be supposed to be in consequence of the agreement, acts done by the company under their act were to be looked at as if done under the agreement. Lindsey (Earl) v. G. N. Ry., 10 Hare, 665; 22 L. J., Ch. 995; 17 Jur. 522; 1 W. R. 257.

"First-class Station."]—A railway company having covenanted with a landholder that they would use a piece of land purchased from him as a first-class station for the purpose of taking up and setting down passengers, was restrained from running any trains other than mail or express or special trains without stopping at the station built thereon. Hood v. N. E. Ry., L. R. 8 Eq. 666; 20 L. T. 970; 17 W. R. 1085.

9. Bookstalls.

Lease—Construction.]—A railway company granted to two lessees the sale and exclusive licence and privilege, for ten years, of selling books and other publications at such of the company's stations as the lessees should think fit, and of using the bookstalls thereat respectively, and covenanted that all books sent by the lessees to be sold, pursuant to such licence, should be conveyed by the company's train to any such station without any charge; and warranted quiet and peaceable enjoyment:—Held, first, as to stations where bookstalls were in existence at the date of the grant, that the company must be taken to have granted the user of those specific stalls, and if not, still it was incumbent on the company to shew that stalls to which it attempted to remove the lessees would be equally convenient. Holmes v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 Kay & J. 675 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 737 ; 5 W. R. 870.

Held, secondly, as to other stations, that if the lessees could be entitled, in any case, to erect stalls thereat, the court would make a declaration to that effect, because the court could not judge whether sales from stalls, or by colportage, should be adopted ; and also, because such a declaration would lead to continual applications with reference to the gradual increase in size of the stalls. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the privilege of selling books, &c., authorised a bonâ fide sale to passengers and such other persons as ordinarily attended the company's stations on business connected with railways, and not a general agency, consequently that the lessees were not entitled to free carriage, except in respect of books to be so sold. Ib.

10. REFRESHMENT ROOMS.

Covenant as to Stopping Trains.]—In a lease by a railway company of their refreshment rooms at Swindon, the company covenanted with the lessee that all trains carrying passengers, not being goods trains or trains to be sent express or for special purposes, and except trains not under the control of the company, which should pass the Swindon station either up or down, should, save in case of emergency or unusual delay arising from accidents, stop there for refreshment of passengers for a reasonable period of about ten minutes, and that, as far as the company could influence the same, trains not under its control should be induced to stop for the like purpose. The postmaster-general having in the exercise of his power required that trains carrying mails should not stop at Swindon more than five minutes :—Held, first, that those trains were not as regards stopping under the control of the company ; and secondly, that the company was not by its covenant prohibited from carrying passengers by such trains. Phillips v. G. W. Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 614 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 409 ; 26 L. T. 157 ; 20 W. R. 562. And see Rigby v. G. W. Ry., 4 Railw. Cas. 175 ; 1 Coop. C. C. 7 ; 10 Jur. 488, supra, col. 1502.

—— Specific Performance — Termination of Occupation.]—In 1840 a railway company entered into an agreement under seal to grant A. a lease for ninety-nine years of the hotel to be erected at X. station, with power for the company to determine the lease if any complaint as to the mode of carrying on the business should not be remedied within three months after notice of such complaint. It was also agreed that the lessees "should have the occupation of the refreshment rooms at X. station, subject to the same restrictions and provisions as relate to the carrying on the business of the hotel, both as regards the quality and prices of provisions, and management thereof." The lease granted in pursuance of this agreement was confined to the hotel, and contained no mention of the refreshment rooms. The refreshment rooms on the up line adjoining the hotel had been always occupied with it. In 1849 B., a director of the company (head of a firm at X., who were assignees of the lease of the hotel), erected at a cost of 200*l.* refreshment rooms on the down line, pursuant to an alleged agreement with the company that his firm should have a lease of such refreshment rooms for a term co-extensive with the lease of the hotel. The only evidence of such agreement was this minute in the books of the company : "A ground rent of 6*l.* per annum was ordered to be fixed for the new refreshment rooms built by the lessees at the down station in X." In 1867 the company gave notice to C., the assignee from B. of the lease and occupier of both refreshment rooms, that its arrangements with reference to a new station (recently erected) at X. would involve the determination of his tenancy of the existing refreshment rooms :—Held, first, as to the refreshment rooms on the down line, that no agreement of which the specific performance could be granted was proved, and that in any case the court could not enforce specific performance of an agreement by a director with the company for the benefit of himself or his firm ; and, secondly, as to the up-line refreshment rooms, that the occupation was not determinable at the mere will of the company, and that C. was entitled to have the agreement of 1840 carried into effect by having a deed executed to him as the assign of A., with all proper provisions granting the right of occupation of the upper refreshment rooms to him, his assigns and nominees, being tenants of the hotel, subject to the provisions and restrictions contained in the agreement. Flanagan v. G. W. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 117 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 116 ; 19 L. T. 345.

11. CLEARING-HOUSE.

Sureties—Demand of Secretary.]—The defendants as sureties for a railway company by deed covenanted to pay to the plaintiffs as trustees for the railway clearing committee under the Railways Clearing Act, 1850, such balances and sums as, from time to time, should be settled and adjusted by the secretary of such committee as due from the company pursuant to the said act, or should be settled or determined by such secretary as the amount to be from time to time contributed to the funds of the clearing system by the company, or should in case of difference respecting the accounts of the clearing system be decided by such committee to be the balance or sum payable by the company to the committee, or should in any way become a debt due by the company to the committee pursuant to the said act, or should by such secretary be demanded of the company by a written demand in the form given in the schedule to the said act, and reciting that it was of paramount importance that the adjustment of such accounts by the clearing system should not be disputed and should be indisputable, it was by the said deed further declared and agreed that the said sureties were not to be at liberty to dispute the amount which should be so settled and adjusted by such secretary, as due from the company to such committee, or which should be settled and determined by such secretary as the amount to be contributed to the funds of the clearing system by the company, and which should be decided by the clearing committee to be the balance or sum payable by the company, or the amount which should as aforesaid be demanded by the secretary ; and every such amount should be payable and forthwith paid by the said sureties, notwithstanding any error or alleged error in law, in principle or in fact, and no plea or defence should be admissible or evidence be necessary or required in any action or proceedings under the said deed which should be admissible or required against the said company under the said act:—Held, that construing the words of the covenant according to their obvious and ordinarily reasonable meaning, the demand of the secretary made in accordance with the terms of the covenant was alone sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to sue the defendants for the amount so demanded. it being the manifest intention of the parties that such demand should be conclusive in the matter; and also that the word "or" prefixed to the several alternative clauses in the deed of covenant was meant to have its usual meaning as a disjunctive conjunction, and could not therefore be read in a conjunctive sense as "and." Benson v. Dunn, 23 L. T. 848.

D. TRESPASS ON RAILWAY.

By Cabs.]—A railway company was possessed of a thoroughfare which had the appearance of a public street. The company allowed certain cabs to stand in the thoroughfare upon payment of a weekly sum by the drivers. A person, not being one of the drivers who paid, stood his cab in the thoroughfare, and refused to leave when requested on behalf of the company to do so:—Held, that he was a wilful trespasser within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 16. Foulger v. Steadman, 42 L. J., M. C. 3; L. R. 8 Q. B. 65; 26 L. T. 395.

Van outside Public-house.]—G. kept his van standing for twenty minutes outside a public-house, during part of which time he was refreshing himself within. The ground upon which the van stood was part of the premises of a railway company, whose station was close by, but the only access to the public-house was across this ground, and the customers frequently went there with vehicles. G. was charged under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 16, with wilfully trespassing on railway premises, but the justices considered his claim of right to use the ground as a customer of the public-house to be bonâ fide, and their jurisdiction to be ousted thereby:—Held, that, as there might be a legal foundation for this claim of right, the justices came to a proper conclusion. Wilkinson v. Goffin, 33 L. T. 824.

Undue Preference.]—If a railway company licenses one man to ply with carriages for passengers within their station yard, any person not so licensed may not do so, and if in attempting to do so he commits a trespass within the meaning of s. 16 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, the justices cannot acquit him on the ground that such licence is, in their opinion, an undue preference, and, therefore, contrary to 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 2. Hole v. Digby, 27 W. R. 884.

By adjoining Owner—After receipt of Compensation.]—An owner of lands severed by a railway claimed compensation from the company, and it was submitted to a jury, who awarded to him compensation, on the footing that there was to be a total separation of the land without any communication being made, and he received from the company the amount awarded as such compensation:—Held, that the verdict of the jury, and the receipt of compensation under it, was an arrangement with the company; and that the party had no right afterwards to cross the railway for the purpose of the occupation of his lands, and was, in so doing, a trespasser within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 16. Manning v. Eastern Counties Ry., 12 M. & W. 237; 13 L. J., Ex. 265; 3 Railw. Cas. 637.

—— Where no Accommodation Works.]—By the construction of the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. xxxiv., establishing a railway, a party whose property has been cut through by the railway is entitled to cross it at any point by himself, his servants and cattle, in order to get to his land on the other side, unless the company, under the provisions of the act, makes a sufficient and proper communication for him to pass from one side of it to the other. Grand Junction Ry. v. White, 8 M. & W. 214; 10 L. J., Ex. 292.

Public Right of Way before making Railway—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—The appellant was convicted by justices in petty sessions—(1) under s. 38 of 45 & 46 Vict. c. 214, for having unlawfully trespassed on a railway in such a manner as to expose himself to danger, and (2) under s. 23 of the Regulations of Railways Act, 1868, for having been unlawfully on the railway after receiving warning not to go or pass thereon. There was, prior to the making of the railway, and prior to the acts of parliament authorising the same, a public right of way for persons on foot over the land now occupied by the railway at the place where the appellant crossed, and the appellant went upon and crossed the railway in the assertion of the right of way which formerly existed, and believing that he was entitled to do so by virtue thereof:—Held, that the conviction on both summonses was wrong—(1) because the claim of the right of way set up by the appellant ousted the jurisdiction of the justices to determine the case; and (2) because there was no provision in the act of parliament extinguishing the right of way, which was consequently still in existence. Cole v. Miles, 57 L. J., M. C. 132; 60 L. T. 145; 36 W. R. 784; 53 J. P. 228.

Workman of Third Party—Wilful Trespass.]—Upon complaint against A. before justices for wilfully trespassing upon the premises of a railway company, and refusing to quit them upon request, it appeared that A. had gone on to the premises for the purposes of repairing, under a contract to do so, a carriage which was there, by the permission of the company, and which belonged to a third party; that he had previously been prohibited by the company from entering; and that, upon being requested by the company to quit, he refused to do so, insisting on his right to remain, for the purpose of completing the repair, without which repair the carriage could not quit the yard. The magistrates having refused to convict:—Held, that they were not bound to convict, inasmuch as it was competent to them, if they thought fit, to decide that A. was not a wilful trespasser. Jones v. Taylor, 1 El. & El. 20.

Obstruction to Railway—Evidence.]—Upon an information before justices on behalf of a railway company, for an offence against its act of incorporation, in placing stones and rubbish on the railway, and thereby obstructing the free passage of the same, evidence that the act was done by certain persons employed by the defendant to repair a wall between the railway and his premises adjoining; and that on one occasion the defendant himself, who was standing by nodded his head, and directed the workmen to go on, is sufficient to warrant the justices in convicting him. Roberts v. Preston, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 208. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 35.

Accidental Obstruction through Carelessness.]—By a railway act it was enacted "that if any person shall do any act, matter or thing to obstruct the free passage of the railway or any part thereof," he shall be liable to a penalty:—Held, that, to render a party liable, he must have intended to have committed the obstruction complained of. Batting v. Bristol and Exeter Ry., 3 L. T. 665; 9 W. R. 271.

Where, therefore, a person was crossing the railway at a crossing which he had a right to use, with a waggon laden with timber, and the waggon got accidentally hitched with the gate-post, and a collision occurred with it and a train whilst it was so hitched:—Held, that, although the party was guilty of carelessness, yet, as he did not intend to create an obstruction, he was not liable to a penalty. Ib.

By Telegraph Company.]—An act which incorporated an electric telegraph company enacted, that it shall be lawful for the company to lay down and place their pipes and wires under any public roads, streets and highways, and along or across the same for the telegraph, and to break up the pavement or soil for that purpose, but that nothing in this provision contained shall extend to any railway or canal, except that it shall be lawful for the company to carry their wires and pipes "directly, but not otherwise, across any railway." A railway company had carried their railway on a level across a part of a public highway, the public having the full use of the highway, except when the trains were passing:—Held, that the highway was not a highway within the telegraph act, and that it was a trespass to dig and bore under the railway for the purpose of carrying the telegraph under the spot where the railway crossed the highway. S. E. Ry. v. European and American Electric Printing Telegraph Co., 9 Ex. 363; 2 C. L. R. 467; 23 L. J., Ex. 113.

Distress Damage feasant—Engine.]—A railway company has a common-law right of distress damage feasant on an engine incumbering the railway, if there is no certificate of approval. Ambergate Ry. v. Midland Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 793; 23 L. J., Q. B. 17; 18 Jur. 243.

Proceedings against Persons for Obstructing Trains and Signals.]—See CRIMINAL LAW.

Liability of Passengers in respect of Fares and Tickets.]—See CARRIERS (Of Passengers).

E. PASSENGER DUTY.

Cheap Trains.]—A cheap train within the meaning of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 6 (the fares of passengers travelling in which are exempted from the payment of duty to government), must necessarily be a train carrying third-class passengers at an uniform rate of one penny a mile, both for the whole distance between the termini of the railway on which it travels and for the intermediate distances between any one station and another on such railway. North London Ry. v. Att.-Gen., 45 L. J., Ex. 315; 1 App. Cas. 148; 34 L. T. 297; 24 W. R. 852—H. L. (E.)

A cheap train must necessarily stop for the purposes of taking up and setting down passengers at every passenger station between each end of the trunk, branch, or junction line on which it travels. Ib.

To constitute a train complying in other respects with the statutory requirements, a cheap train within s. 6 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, entitling the railway company to exemption from passenger duty under s. 9, no third-class passenger must be charged more than the parliamentary fare. Att-Gen. v. Metropolitan Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 573.

—— Workmen's Trains.]—A train is not the less a "workmen's train" within the meaning of the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, because a railway company run first and second class carriages with the third-class carriages. Metropolitan Ry., In re, 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 32.

Powers of Board of Trade.]—The power conferred on the board of trade by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 8, of dispensing with "any of the conditions hereinbefore required with regard to the conveyance of passengers," does not authorise the board of trade to dispense with either of the above-mentioned requisites. North London Ry. v. Att-Gen., supra.

The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, exempts from the duty imposed by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79, upon passenger traffic, the receipts of any company in respect of passengers conveyed by the trains at one penny a mile, required by that act to be run by every company, upon conditions subject to the approval of the board of trade. A company ran cheap trains over a line, but could not comply with one of these conditions, and the board withdrew its approval:—Held, that such cheap trains were not within the exemption. G. W. Ry. v. Att.-Gen., 35 L. J., Ex. 123; L. R. 1 H. L. 1; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 417; 14 L. T. 33; 14 W. R. 519.

On Sums charged to cover Duty.]—By s. 2 of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79, and the schedule to that act, a duty at the rate of 5 per cent. is made payable upon all sums received or charged for the hire, fare or conveyance of passengers conveyed for hire upon any railway. The defendants, by a local act, were prohibited from charging to their passengers more than certain specified sums per mile, which sums were to include all expenses incidental to their conveyance, except government duty. The defendants, in addition to the sum charged by them to their passengers for conveyance, charged to and received from such passengers a further sum at the rate of 5 per cent. on the former, to cover the government duty. The crown claimed duty on the latter sum as well as on the former:—Held, that the crown was entitled to duty on the whole amount received from the passengers, even though such amount should exceed the maximum charge for conveyance fixed by the local act. Att.-Gen. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 170; 6 Q. B. D. 216; 44 L. T. 236; 29 W. R. 346; 45 J. P. 390—C. A.

On Sums charged for Sleeping Accommodation.]—The defendants attached to certain of their night trains sleeping carriages for the accommodation of such of their first-class passengers as might choose to avail themselves of it. For the use of these carriages such passengers were charged an extra sum in addition to the ordinary first-class fare. In addition to couches with pillows, sheets and blankets, each carriage contained a lavatory, water-closet, and other conveniences. Passengers using such carriage were not disturbed during the night by demands for their tickets; and if they arrived at their destination in the middle of the night the carriage was put into a siding, and the passengers allowed to remain in their beds until the morning. A special servant was employed to wait upon them, call them in the morning, and bring them hot water. The crown claimed duty upon the sums charged to passengers for the accommodation provided in the sleeping carriages:—Held, that such accommodation was incidental to the conveyance of the passengers, and that the crown was entitled to the duty claimed. Ib.

By what Company Payable—Working Agreement.]—The Midland was entitled, upon payment of a percentage, to use a loop line belonging to the Great Western, for the purpose of traffic originating in or extending to their own line, and they exercised their powers by their own trains and servants, but the moneys paid at the stations on the loop line were collected by the clerks and servants of the Great Western:—Held, that the Great Western was bound to keep the accounts, and pay the duty required by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79. G. W. Ry. v. Att.-Gen., 35 L. J., Ex. 123; L. R. 1 H. L. 1; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 417; 14 L. T. 33; 14 W. R. 519.

F. ARBITRATION.

Agreement to refer Disputes—Action in High Court—Jurisdiction.]—Where there is an agreement between railway companies to refer their disputes to arbitration under the provisions of the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859, the true effect of ss. 4 and 26 of that act is to make it obligatory upon the court, if either of the companies insists on it, to make an order to refer the disputes in accordance with the agreement; but these sections do not deprive the court of jurisdiction to deal with the matter and adjudicate upon any dispute of the companies if neither of the companies insist on their right to have the dispute referred to arbitration under the agreement. L., C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 58 L. J., Ch. 75; 40 Ch. D. 100; 60 L. T. 370; 37 W. R. 65—C. A.

Where an action has been brought by one railway company against another in respect of a dispute between them, and the court has tried and adjudicated on the matter without either of the companies insisting on the point that the matter ought to be referred to arbitration, though the point had been raised by one of the companies in their defence, it is too late for the unsuccessful company to raise, at the hearing of an appeal, the point that the dispute should be referred to arbitration under the provisions of the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859. Ib.

An agreement to refer under the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859, if insisted on, ousts the jurisdiction of the court. Watford and Rickmansworth Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 449; L. R. 8 Eq. 231; 21 L. T. 81; 17 W. R. 814.

Two railway companies entered into an agreement for making a line, by which they agreed that "in every case in which any difference should arise touching anything done or omitted in pursuance of the agreement, or touching its incidents or consequences, or touching any breach or nonfulfilment of the agreement, it should be referred to arbitration according to the provisions of the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859." Differences subsequently arose between the companies, and one of them filed a bill in equity against the other for an account, when the other company insisted on the agreement to refer:—Held, that though the account was of such a complicated nature as to render it a proper subject of a suit in equity, yet that the court was bound to give effect to the agreement to refer under the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859, s. 26, and could not entertain the suit. Ib.

Failure to appoint Arbitrator—Injunction.]—By an agreement of the 26th of February, 1866, and afterwards confirmed by act of parliament, the plaintiff company agreed to construct a line of railway between certain termini, and the defendant company agreed to work it, and during the continuance of the agreement to develop and accommodate the local and through traffic thereon, and to carry over it certain traffic particularly specified; and it was agreed that all differences under the agreement should be determined by a standing arbitrator to be named by the companies in January in each year, or failing such nomination, by the board of trade on the application of either company in February in each year; and that all such clauses of the acts of parliament for the time being in force in regard to railways as should relate to the settlement of disputes by arbitration should, so far as applicable, and except as therein otherwise provided, be deemed incorporated with the agreement, and that the agreement should continue for 999 years from its date. The plaintiff company constructed the line, and the defendant company entered into possession thereof, but carried a large proportion of traffic which ought to have passed over the plaintiff's line by other lines belonging to the defendant company, and a bill was filed to restrain the defendant company from so doing:—Held, first, that inasmuch as no standing arbitrator had been appointed in accordance with the agreement, the jurisdiction of the court was not ousted; and, secondly, that the case was one in which the court could interfere by injunction. Wolverhampton and Walsall Ry., v. L. & N. W. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 131; L. R. 16 Eq. 433.

Agreement with Ultra Vires Clauses—Injunction.]—Where an agreement made between two railway companies under their common seals contains clauses which are beyond the powers of the directors of one of the companies, and clauses for referring to arbitration all disputes arising under the agreement, a court of equity will, at the suit of a shareholder of that company, restrain both companies from proceeding to arbitration in respect of alleged breaches of those clauses. Maunsell v. Midland Great Western Ry., 1 Hem. & M. 130; 32 L. J., Ch. 513; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 660; 8 L. T. 826; 11 W. R. 768.

But no such injunction will be granted at the suit of a shareholder of the other company on the ground that the stipulations of any such clause are beyond the powers of the directors of the company in which the plaintiff is not a shareholder. Ib.

Right to bring Action.]—On an amalgamation of railway companies under an act of parliament, some of the shareholders filed a bill for the purpose of determining the principle upon which the accounts were to be taken:—Held, that the question being merely one of account as between two classes of shareholders for the determination of which the act of parliament had provided sufficient machinery by means of arbitration, the court would not interfere, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Yool v. G. W. Ry., 39 L. J., Ch. 562; 22 L. T. 781; 18 W. R. 825.

Traffic Facilities.]—An agreement between two railway companies by which one had a right to run over the other's lines, contained a clause referring all matter in difference between the parties to arbitration. The lessor company gave the lessee company notice that they should consider the agreement at an end after a fixed day; the lessees took no heed of the notice and continued running their trains:—Held, that the matter came within the terms of the agreement for reference to arbitration, and must accordingly be referred. Llanelly Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 20 W. R. 898. Affirmed, 45 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 7 H. L. 550; 32 L. T. 575; 23 W. R. 927.

—— Through Rates—"Connected with."]—The special act of the C. W. Railway provided that the L. & N. W. Railway, the G. W. Railway and other companies (seven in all) should afford all proper and sufficient facilities, including through rates, to traffic passing to, from, or over the C. W. Railway, from or to any railway of the seven companies on any railway connected with them, and that the terms and conditions, pecuniary or otherwise, on which the traffic facilities should be respectively afforded, and the amount and apportionment of the through rates should failing agreement, be determined by arbitration in manner provided by the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873:—Held, that such special act requires facilities to be afforded to all traffic passing over the C. W. Railway which either comes from or is destined to some point upon and which during its whole course passes uninterruptedly over railways belonging to one or more of the seven companies, or connected for purposes of management or working with one or more of the said seven companies; that the said special act does not grant through rates absolutely; that the sufficiency of through rates existing at any time and the propriety of granting others are among the matters which, failing agreement, are required by the special act to be referred to arbitration; and that the words "connected with," in the said special act, mean connected for the purposes of management or working, and not merely physically connected. G. W. Ry. v. Central Wales Ry., 5 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1.

—— Authority of Arbitrators — Defective Arrangement.]—The Eastern Counties Railway Company were proprietors of a line between London and Colchester, at which place it joined the Eastern Union Railway, incorporated by act of parliament, and differences having arisen between the companies as to the interchange and transmission of traffic from one of the lines to the other, it was enacted that if either company should so require, then within fourteen days after a notice in writing by the company so requiring it, the other should refer to arbitration, to determine what arrangement should be made by the two companies, or either of them, for affording proper facilities and convenience for the conveyance and all other accommodation of passengers, animals and goods, to be conveyed from the Eastern Union Railway upon and along the Eastern Counties Railway between London and Colchester, and from the Eastern Counties Railway between London and Colchester upon and along the Eastern Union Railway, to determine the conditions on which such use, conveyance and accommodation should be offered, and generally to determine all matters incident to the arrangements, or which might be necessary or expedient for giving effect to the same. Arbitrators were appointed, who awarded, first, that the Eastern Counties Railway Company should, for the conveyance and accommodation of passengers to be conveyed from the Eastern Union Railway upon and along the Eastern Counties Railway line, run every day (except Sundays) an express train from the junction at Colchester to London, such train to leave Colchester at 10 a.m. and to arrive at London at 11.30 a.m.; secondly, that the Eastern Counties Railway Company should, for the conveyance and accommodation of passengers to be conveyed upon and along the Eastern Union line, run an express train from London to Colchester, and should cause such train to depart every day (Sundays excepted) from London at 7.45 p.m., and to arrive at Colchester at 9.15 p.m., and should by such train convey all such passengers as should offer themselves; thirdly, for affording proper facilities and convenience for the conveyance and accommodation of passengers to be conveyed from the Eastern Union line upon and along the Eastern Counties line between London and Colchester, that the Eastern Counties Railway Company should use and employ for the conveyance of the same passengers and passengers' luggage on their line all such carriages and vans as should have been employed for the conveyance of the same passengers and passengers' luggage on the Eastern Union line, and which should be tendered to them and be ready for their use at Colchester five minutes at least before the departure of their trains:—Held, that all the matters awarded upon were within the authority of the arbitrators; that if the speed directed were dangerous, it should have been set up as an answer to the award, and that the arrangement was not defective, because not limited in point of time, as either party might at any time, by a notice, require a fresh arbitration. Eastern Union Ry. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 530; 22 L. J., Q. B. 371.

Jurisdiction of Railway Commission.]—See infra.

G. RAILWAY COMMISSION.

I. Reasonable Facilities for Traffic.

Order to reopen closed Station — Right of Railway Company to close Line or Stations.]—The railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to order a railway company to rebuild and reopen for passenger traffic a station which the company has closed and pulled down, the reasonable facilities for traffic which, by s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, a railway company is required to afford, having no application to stations that are not in use. Winsford Local Board v. Cheshire Lines Committee (24 Q. B. D. 456) overruled. Darlaston Local Board v. L. & N. W. Ry., 63 L. J., Q. B. 826; [1894] 2 Q. B. 694; 9 R. 712; 71 L. T. 461; 43 W. R. 29; 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 216—C. A.

Per Lord Esher, M.R. and A. L. Smith, L.JJ.:

Unless a railway company is required by its act to keep open its line and stations, it is entitled to close any part of its line or any of its stations whenever it desires to do so. Per Kay, L.J.: Even if the duty to afford "reasonable" facilities applied to a station which had ceased to be used, that duty could not require the reopening of a station which had been closed in consequence of the railway company finding that its continuance involved a heavy loss. Ib.

Order on Company to resume Abandoned Traffic.]—A railway company discontinued the carriage of passenger traffic over a branch line, a section of their railway system, alleging that they were unable to work such traffic otherwise than at a loss:—Held, that since the railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, such action on the part of the company was subject to the control of the railway commission court, which consequently had jurisdiction to entertain an application for an order enjoining the railway company to afford reasonable facilities for receiving and forwarding passenger traffic. Winsford Local Board v. Cheshire Lines Committee, 59 L. J., Q. B. 372; 24 Q. B. D. 456; 62 L. T. 268; 38 W. R. 511; 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 72.

Structural Alterations to Station.]—The railway commissioners, to whom has been transferred the jurisdiction of the Court of Common Pleas under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, have under that act jurisdiction to hear and determine a complaint against a railway company of not, according to its powers, affording all reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding, and delivering passengers and other traffic at and from any of its stations which are used by the company for such passengers or other traffic; and although the commissioners have no jurisdiction to order the company to make a new railway station, or to order any particular works, or otherwise to interfere with the discretion of the company in the mode of performing its obligation to afford such facilities, according to its powers for the receiving, forwarding and delivering of the traffic, yet they have jurisdiction to order such facilities, even if their doing so would necessitate the making by the company of some structural alteration of such station. S. E. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 201; 6 Q. B. D. 586; 44 L. T. 203; 45 J. P. 388.

Passenger Traffic—Line used only for Mineral and Goods Traffic.]—Where as a necessary incident of opening a line for passenger traffic the structural alterations involved would be so large as to be beyond the jurisdiction of the commissioners to order, an order for facilities for passenger traffic will not be made. Glamorganshire County Council v. G. W. Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 196.

Where an application to the commissioners seeks to compel a railway company to give facilities for a particular class of traffic on a branch line which is part of a larger railway system, and on any part of that larger system that particular class of traffic is carried, it is not an answer going to jurisdiction for the railway company to say that they have never carried that particular class of traffic on that branch line. Ib.

Charge for Water-closets at Stations.]—The mere fact that railway companies make a charge to their passengers for the use of water-closets at their stations is not, in the absence of undue preference, a breach of their obligations under s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, to "afford all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of (passenger) traffic"; and the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to enjoin railway companies to provide free water-closets and desist from making a charge for the use of them. G. W. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, Brown, In re (7 Q.B. D.182) followed. West Ham Corporation v. G. E. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 340; 72 L. T. 395; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 7.

Place of Shelter.]—Semble, it is a good ground of complaint that there is no place of shelter provided at the junction, for passengers on the branch line waiting the arrival of trains; the public being entitled in this respect to reasonable accommodation. Caterham Ry., In re, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 410; 26 L. J., C. P. 161.

Number and Time of Trains.]—To induce the court to interfere on a complaint by the proprietors of a branch line, that a sufficient number of trains of the main line does not stop at the junction, or stop at convenient times, it must be distinctly shewn that sufficient accommodation is not afforded to meet the fair requirements of the public. Ib.

Tickets.]—It is no ground of complaint that the company working the main line refuses to grant third-class return tickets to the branch line, if it appears that no such tickets are issued to other branches similarly situated. Ib.

The court refused to grant a rule for an injunction against the Eastern Counties Railway Company to compel them to issue season tickets between Colchester and London, on the same terms as they issued them between Harwich and London, upon a mere suggestion that the granting the latter (the distance being considerably greater) at a much lower rate than the former was an undue and unreasonable preference of the inhabitants of Harwich over those of Colchester. Jones v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 C. B. (N.S.) 718.

Through Traffic—Order on Two Companies.]—The railway commissioners made an order, under the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, requiring the London, Chatham and Dover and South-Eastern Railway companies to make arrangements and to afford facilities for the transference of traffic from the line of one company to the other; to arrange the arrivals of their trains at a junction in a particular manner, and directing the former company to run trains over a disused branch line; and, upon non-compliance with the order, made a further order imposing penalties upon both companies for their disobedience:—Held, that the first order was invalid, and that a prohibition must be granted to restrain the commissioners from enforcing it; for, assuming that they had jurisdiction to require each company separately to give facilities according to its powers, they were not entitled to order two companies to act jointly in doing what neither could do separately. Toomer v. L., C. & D. Ry., 47 L. J., Ex. 276; 2 Ex. D. 450; 37 L. T. 161; 26 W. R. 31.

—— Public Convenience.]—To justify the interference of the court to enforce the running of through trains on a continuous line of railways, it must be shewn that public convenience requires it, and that it can reasonably be done.

Barret v. G. N. Ry., 1 C. B. (N.S.) 423 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 83.

The court will not interfere, at the instance of an individual, where there is a continuous line by which through tickets may be obtained, though by a somewhat longer route, no additional cost, or serious loss of time, being thereby incurred, and no substantial inconvenience being thereby occasioned to the public, and it appearing that no complaints had been made of the inadequacy of the existing accommodation. Ib.

—— Through Rates for Goods—Reasonable Route—Through Booking.]—Any one of the public intending to send traffic over the railways of two or more railway companies forming together a continuous route, may, under s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, require the companies to combine to carry his traffic at a single booking and for a single payment as an accommodation reasonable to be granted to him. If there are grounds for the court allowing something claimed as a proper facility for using railways, an objection grounded on its inconvenient consequences to railway companies by reason of arrangements made by themselves will not suffice for not allowing it. Didcot, Newbury and Southampton Ry. v. G. W. Ry. and L. & S. W. Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 210. See S. C., in C. A., infra.

An order by the railway commissioners for through booking is not a matter of right. Through booking is a facility within the meaning of s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, and s. 25 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, and upon an application for an order for through booking the commissioners must have regard to the considerations mentioned in those sections. Per Lord Esher, M.R., and Rigby, L.J. :—An order of the railway commissioners for through booking necessarily involves an order for a through rate, although the through rate is only the sum of the local rates of the several lines over which the traffic passes. Didcot, Newbury and Southampton Ry. v. G. W. Ry. and L. & S. W. Ry., 66 L J., Q. B. 33 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 33 ; 75 L. T. 401 ; 45 W. R. 282—C. A.

—— Application by Company with no Rolling Stock.]—The Central Wales Company applied to the railway commissioners for an order under s. 11 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1876, allowing through rates in respect of the traffic in certain goods between Chester and Haverfordwest, the route claimed being from Chester, over lines owned or worked by the London and North Western Railway Company, and over the applicants' own line, which was worked by the same company under an agreement with the applicants, and thence to Haverfordwest over the Great Western Company's line, which was worked and owned exclusively by that company, and vice versâ from Haverfordwest to Chester. The applicants had no rolling stock, and did not work their railway, but maintained and managed their line, and collected, forwarded, and delivered their own traffic, the whole of the staff at their stations being employed and paid by them, and subject to their orders :—Held, that the traffic was "through traffic to and from" the applicants' railway, and that the applicants were a railway company entitled to request a through rate in respect of such traffic, within the meaning of s. 11, and therefore that the railway commissioners had jurisdiction to make the order. Central Wales Ry. v. G. W. Ry., 52 L. J., Q. B. 211 ; 10 Q. B. D. 231 ; 48 L. T. 234, 315 ; 31 W. R. 321 ; 4 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 110.

—— Construction of Agreement.]—A clause in an agreement made between certain railway companies provided that the M. company and the L. company should agree upon through rates for coal and other traffic from and to the collieries, to and from all places on the system of the M. company and C. L. committee, and that these through rates should be viâ a reasonable and convenient junction or junctions to be agreed upon or to be settled by arbitration :—Held, that the reasonable and convenient junctions contemplated by this clause were not confined to the particular line with which the agreement was principally conversant, but extended to all convenient junctions, wherever situate, on the M. company's system ; but, semble that, whatever might be the effect of the clause, it would not prevent either of the companies, parties to it, from applying for through rates under s. 11 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, and that such through rates might be granted by any convenient routes, whether such routes were or not contemplated by the agreement. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1.

—— Two Stations—Connection with Port.]—A railway company had a passenger station at N., close to the port of N., but all goods and cattle had to be taken nearly a mile along a road between their goods station and the port for shipment :—Held that the company by not connecting their passenger station with the port had not contravened the provisions of s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, in not affording reasonable facilities for merchandise and cattle traffic. Newry Navigation Co. v. G. N. Ry., 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 176.

—— Stations Connected—Section unused.]—Two railways ran trains to A., and each had a station there ; the stations were less than a mile apart, and were connected by a line belonging to one of such companies, but no passengers were conveyed on the line between the stations :—Held, that the two companies must afford all due and reasonable facilities for forwarding passenger traffic over the connecting line, and must make mutual arrangements to carry such order into effect, and submit a scheme to the court for approval. Maidstone Corporation v. S. E. Ry., 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 99.

—— Passenger Traffic — Covered Footpath between Two Stations.]—Two railway companies ran trains to M., and each had a station there. The stations were half a mile apart, and were connected by a line of railway belonging to one of such companies and which was used for goods only. On an application to the court for an order enjoining the two companies (i.) to afford to the public the advantages which ought to be derived by means of the continuous lines at and through M. of the two companies between stations on their respective railways and to provide through passenger trains and through booking of passengers over such continuous lines, (ii.) to modify and arrange the times of arrival and departure of trains belonging to each of the two companies respectively, at and from M., so as to allow passengers travelling by trains of the one company to avail themselves of the other company's trains without delay or inconvenience and without change of carriage :—The court held that an order for reasonable facilities, without specifying what they were, must issue, and intimated that no case had been made out of public necessity which would justify the court in requiring the companies to work a through service of trains, or even of carriages, from the one system to the other, and further intimated that if the two companies complied with such order by making a good covered footpath between the two stations, and by providing the necessary porterage to accommodate persons with luggage desiring to pass from the one to the other, and by establishing through booking, they would amply meet the necessities of the existing traffic. Sussex County Council v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 17.

—— Interchange of Traffic—Continuous Line of Railway.]—The D. railway company, by means of a loop line and junction with the M. railway company, formed a continuous line of railway communication, connecting towns and places on the D. railway with places in the south of Ireland situated on the G. S. railway company's lines. Although the junction had been passed by the board of trade as safe for passenger traffic the M. railway company refused to exchange traffic there or allow it to be used, on the ground that such junction was unsafe for passenger traffic, and also that trains coming over the loop line and junction would unreasonably interfere with their own traffic. The court held that the D. railway company were entitled to a general order for facilities, as it was proved that traffic forwarded by the loop line would not be an unreasonable interference with the M. railway company's traffic at that particular place. This loop line and junction being likely to be of public service and benefit, and having been made under statutory powers and sanctioned by the board of trade, the court refused to presume against the security of the line. Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford Ry. v. Midland Great Western Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 39.

—— Merchandise Traffic—Forwarding Traffic—Continuous Line of Railway.]—A steampacket company had their wharf connected by a horse tramway with a branch of the M. railway company's railway. The S. railway company had running powers over the M. company's railway to a junction with such branch. An arrangement was made for carrying the traffic inwards and outwards between the S. company's railway and the steampacket company's wharf by the S. company bringing the wagons to the junction with the M. company's branch line, where the wagons were detached and shunted and delivered to the M. company, who hauled them by horse power along their line and the tramway and delivered them at the steampacket company's wharf. This arrangement continued for ten years without complaints from anyone. At the end of that period the M. Railway company notified the steampacket company that they could not continue such interchange of the traffic. The steampacket company applied for an order that the M. railway company afford them all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of through traffic, and that the existing arrangements and facilities should be declared to be reasonable. The M. railway company made no offer of other facilities of equal value in place of those they sought to withdraw, and it was proved that the traffic could be exchanged at the point of junction with ease and safety :—Held, that the aforesaid arrangement was a due and reasonable facility for dealing with the traffic, and that the facilities should continue to be afforded. City of Dublin Steam Packet Co. v. Midland Great Western Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1.

—— Passenger Traffic — Continuous Line — Application by Owning against Working Company.]—Where an agreement between two railway companies does not provide for the carrying of through passenger and coaching traffic, the commissioners have jurisdiction to entertain an application under s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, for an order to afford due and reasonable facilities for such traffic. That the applicants for such an order are the owning railway company, and the defendants the working railway company, does not of itself prevent such an application under the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts being entertained. Solway Junction Ry. v. Caledonian Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 177.

Rates and Charges.]—See infra.

2. Rates and Charges.

Restraining Excessive Charges.]—The mere fact that railway companies make charges for the conveyance of passengers in excess of those authorised by their special acts, but without any undue preference, is not a breach of their obligation under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 2, to "afford according to their respective powers all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of traffic upon and from the several railways and canals belonging to or worked by such companies respectively, and for the return of carriages, trucks, boats, and other vehicles." And the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain the making of such excessive charges. G. W. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, Brown, In re, 50 L. J., Q. B. 483 ; 7 Q. B. D. 182 ; 45 L. T. 206 ; 29 W. R. 901 ; 46 J. P. 35—C. A.

Semble, per Brett, L.J., and Cotton, L.J., that if the overcharges were of such an amount and of such a nature that they had the effect, or it could be presumed that they were made with the intention, of preventing the use by passengers of particular trains and stations, the commissioners might have jurisdiction to entertain a complaint in respect of them as being a refusal of "facilities" within the meaning of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 2. Ib.

The words in s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, "every railway company shall afford all due and reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding of traffic," do not refer to the fares charged for passenger traffic—per Bramwell, L.J. Ib.

The mere refusal by a railway company to receive and forward the traffic of persons in general except upon prepayment of charges somewhat in excess of the maximum authorised rates is not a denial of "reasonable facilities," nor subjecting the senders of such traffic to "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" within the meaning of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 2, or the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, and the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction under those acts to restrain a railway company from making such charges, and cannot give themselves jurisdiction by finding as a fact that the demand of prepayment of such charges is a denial of "reasonable facilities" or subjecting persons or their traffic to "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" within s. 2 of the act of 1854. Reg. v. Distington Iron Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 233; 22 Q. B. D. 642; 60 L. T. 606; 37 W. R. 446; 6 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 108; 53 J. P. 533.

Inequality of Dues—Railway and Dock Company.]—The duties imposed on railway companies by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 2, are confined to traffic; therefore, the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to determine complaints against a railway and dock company for inequality of dues levied in respect of a dock forming a distinct part of their undertaking, although such company be also owners of other docks not distinct from but connected with their railway. East and West India Dock Co. v. Shaw, Savill & Co., 57 L. J., Ch. 1038; 39 Ch. D. 524; 60 L. T. 142; 6 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 94.

Increase of Rates—Unreasonableness of.]—Upon a complaint under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, s. 1, that a railway company had, since 1st January, 1893, unreasonably increased their rates for coal for shipment from the applicants' colliery to the Tyne Dock and Sunderland by an addition of 5*d.* to the rate per ton:—Held, that the increase was not unreasonable, the railway company having proved that the cost of working the applicants' traffic had increased by certain detailed items. Charlaw and Sacriston Collieries Co. v. N. E. Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 140.

—— Jurisdiction—Traders' Complaint—Cartage Charges outside Terminal Station—Increase since Given Date.]—The decision of a dispute between traders and a railway company relating to the increase of charges for cartage outside a terminal station since December 31, 1892, is by s. 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, within the jurisdiction of the railway commissioners, and is not confined by the 5th section of the schedule of the London and North Western Railway Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, to the decision of an arbitrator appointed by the board of trade. Mansion House Association v. L. & N. W. Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 209; [1896] 1 Q. B. 273; 74 L. T. 463; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 174.

—— By Railway Companies jointly—Joinder of Respondents.]—Where a complaint is made under the 1st section of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, that a rate increased by a railway company jointly with other railway companies since the 31st of December, 1892, is unreasonable, the complainant must join all the railway companies concerned as respondents to the complaint. Mapperley Colliery Co. v. Midland Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 272; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 147.

—— Rates Raised since December 31, 1892—Presumption of Reasonableness—Justification of Increase.]—The Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, s. 1, applies retrospectively to increase of rates since the last day of December, 1892. On January 1, 1893, a railway company raised their rate for the carriage of coal, but not to the maximum. Prior to the passing of the act of 1894 all rates below the maxima for their class were presumed to be reasonable:—Held that s. 1, in the case of rates raised after the last day of December, 1892, removed that presumption, and cast upon railway companies the onus of shewing that the increase was reasonable, but did not limit their justification of the increase to circumstances arising after the date named in the act. The presumption that the old rate was high enough might be rebutted by shewing that the expense of performing the service had increased. Rickett, Smith & Co. v. Midland Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 274; [1896] 1 Q. B. 260; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 107.

—— Complaint by Traders' Association—Rates Unreasonably Increased.]—A complaint may be made to the railway commissioners by a traders' association within s. 7 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, without proof that there has been any complaint to the association by any particular traders, or that the association represents individuals who are aggrieved. Mansion House Association v. G. W. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 434; [1895] 2 Q. B. 141; 14 R. 429; 72 L. T. 523; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 58—C. A.

Such an association may complain, under s. 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, that a railway company has unreasonably increased its rates, although it cannot be liable to pay to the company, under sub-s. 4 of that section, any sum in respect of the rates complained of, that sub-section not applying to a complaint by an association which is proceeding under s. 7 of the act of 1888, and is not itself aggrieved by the increased charges. Ib.

—— Particulars—Names of Traders Represented by Applicants.]—Upon a complaint made by a traders' association, certified under s. 7 of the act of 1888, to the railway commissioners that the rates in respect of general classes of goods have been unreasonably increased by a railway company, the association will not be ordered to give particulars as to the names of the traders whom it represents, or in respect of what particular articles the rates are alleged by it to have been unreasonably increased. Ib.

Unequal Rates—Differential Rates—Interests of "the public."]—The public referred to in s. 27 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, is the public of the locality or district affected, and any considerable proportion of the population in general, as opposed to an individual or association of individuals, will satisfy the description. Liverpool Corn Traders' Association v. G. W. Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 114—C. A.

—— Leave to appear—Not "in opposition."]—An application by the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce under s. 7 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, asking leave to appear at the hearing of the case, was refused because they were not prepared to say whether it was "in opposition" or not that they desired to appear. Ib.

Altering Tolls fixed by Statute—Absence of Party interested.]—Under an act in 1846 the B. canal company were authorised to charge certain tolls, rates and dues for goods traffic in respect of the canals and other works of the company, and were prohibited from making an order to reduce, advance or otherwise vary all or any of such tolls, rates or dues, without the consent of a railway company, who guaranteed that, if the income of the canal company in any year was insufficient to pay a dividend of 4*l.* per cent. on the capital of the canal company, the railway company would make up the deficiency. The B. canal company was one link in a chain of canals owned by various companies, and forming a continuous line of navigation between two points. In pursuance of an application made to them by one of those companies, the railway commissioners, under the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, s. 11, made an order allowing through rates for goods traffic between those two points, the effect of which would be to reduce the tolls of the B. canal company below the maximum allowed by the act of 1846, and below the amounts theretofore charged by the company. The railway company were not represented before the commissioners, and did not consent to the order or to any variation of the tolls:—Held, that the order was made without jurisdiction, and must be restrained by prohibition. By Kelly, C.B., because the commissioners could not make an order affecting the liability of the railway company under their guarantee without at least hearing them. By Pollock, B., and Hawkins, J., because the consent of the railway company had not been obtained, and the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, gave the commissioners no power without such consent to reduce the tolls, rates or dues as authorised by the act of 1846. Warwick Canal Co. v. Birmingham Canal Co., 48 L. J., Ex. 550; 5 Ex. D. 1; 40 L. T. 846.

Dissection of Rates—Charge for Conveyance only—Sufficiency of Account.]—A railway company making a single charge to a trader for conveyance of traffic within the maximum rate is bound, in answer to an application by the trader under s. 33, sub-s. 3, of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, to render an account distinguishing the charge for conveyance from other charges, if any; but if, in the return of such an account, the railway company make a formal statement that the whole charge is for conveyance, and no charge is shewn for any other services, that is a sufficient answer to the application. New Union Mill Co. v. G. W. Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 493; [1896] 2 Q. B. 290; 74 L. T. 791; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 152.

—— Customers' Sidings forming no part of Station.]—The power to dissect rates contained in s. 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, does not apply to sidings and junctions belonging to customers that form no part of a station belonging to a railway, and the court has no jurisdiction under s. 34 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, to order dissection of rates in books kept at the stations nearest these sidings and junctions in accordance with the last-mentioned section. Pelsall Coal Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 36.

—— Booking to Foreign Station—Through Rates—Quoting a Rate.]—Where a railway makes a practice of regularly accepting goods of their customers on definite terms to be conveyed from a station on their own system to a station on a foreign system, they are to be held to "book" to such foreign station; and cannot evade their duties and liabilities, under s. 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, by calling such acceptance of the traffic "quoting a rate" to such foreign station. The commission court have power, under this section, to order the division by the booking company of through rates for the information of customers, where the booking company has the information necessary for such division. Pelsall Coal Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 23 Q. B. D. 536; 61 L. T. 257; 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1.

—— "Persons Interested" — Competitive Rates—Practice.]—Any person who makes out by proper evidence that the rates which he seeks to have divided are really and substantially competitive rates with his own is a "person interested" within the meaning of s. 14, and is entitled to have such rates divided for his information. Applicants claiming to be persons interested and to have the information afforded to them, must make out their interest, by proper and legal evidence, before the court will make an order for such information. Ib.

—— "Person Interested"—Private Branch Railway.]—The applicant, the owner of a branch railway communicating with the defendants' line, collected and loaded goods upon trucks, and then handed over such trucks to the defendants at the junction with their line; she also received from the defendants, at the junction, traffic for delivery at the other end of the line:—Held, that the applicant was "a person interested" within the meaning of s. 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, and that she was entitled to an order requiring the defendants to distinguish the rates in such books as they were by statute required to keep. Tomlinson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 63 L. T. 86; 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 22.

Terminal Accommodation—Siding Rent—Reasonableness of Charge—Liability as Carriers Ceasing.]—Sect. 5, sub-s. 4, of the Railway Rates Confirmation Acts, 1891 and 1892, gives railway companies power to impose a charge of a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate for (inter alia) the use or occupation of any accommodation for such period as may be reasonably necessary for enabling the company to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery. The coal traffic on a certain railway was conveyed in waggons belonging to the traders themselves, and the practice was for the railway company to allow the waggons, on their arrival with coal at the terminal station, to remain on the company's sidings for an indefinite time until the consignees had discharged the coal from the waggons, and no charge was made for siding rent beyond the conveyance rate and the station terminal. Owing to the increase of traffic the company, under the above section, imposed a new charge for siding rent of 6*d.* a day per waggon for each day the waggon continued on the sidings after the expiration of four days:—Held, that four days was a sufficient time during which the obligation of the company as carriers should continue; that, as the statute gave the company power to make a charge for accommodation after their duty as carriers had ended, the charge for siding rent was not a direct or indirect increase of any rate or charge within the meaning of s. 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, and that the company therefore were not called upon to justify the same; but that the reasonableness of the amount of such charge in any individual case was a matter, not for the court, but for an arbitrator appointed by the board of trade. Manchester and Northern Counties Federation v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 76 L. T. 786.

Detention of Waggons under Load—Charge for Accommodation after Conveyance.]—Sect. 5 of the schedule to the Midland Railway Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, enacts that the company may charge, in addition to the tonnage rate, a reasonable sum for certain services rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, including (inter alia) the detention of trucks, or the use and occupation of any accommodation before or after conveyance, beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the consignee to take delivery thereof, and services rendered in connection with such use and occupation; and further, that any difference arising under such section shall be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the board of trade at the instance of either party. The railway commissioners having been appointed to determine a difference which had arisen between the Midland Railway Co. and S.:—Held, that the sum of 6*d.* per day per waggon was a reasonable sum to be charged by the Midland Railway Co. to S. for the use and occupation of any accommodation by waggons under load after four days, exclusive of the day of their arrival, and for services rendered by the railway company in respect of such use and occupation. Midland Ry. v. Sills, 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 161.

Rebate on Sidings' Rates—Station Accommodation and Terminal Services.]—Sect. 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894 (which provides for a rebate being allowed by a railway company in respect of merchandise received or delivered by the company at any siding or branch railway not belonging to the company), gives a rebate in proportion to the extent the railway company do not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services, and the jurisdiction of the railway commissioners is not ousted on proof of the fact that the terminal service, e.g. covering, is performed by the railway company. Pidcock v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 45.

The Birmingham Corporation had coal consigned to them and delivered by the railway company at (1) the corporation's private siding at Saltley, (2) the railway company's station at Lawley street. The rates charged by the company to the applicants for the carriage of coal to the Saltley siding were the same as the rates charged for the carriage of coal from the same points of departure to Lawley street station. Upon an application to determine what was a just and reasonable rebate to be made from the rates charged by the company for the carriage of coal to the Saltley siding:—Held, that the fact that the company performed for the applicants various services at Saltley siding for which they were entitled to charge under s. 5 of the schedule to the Railway Rates and Charges Order Confirmation Acts, 1891 and 1892, might be used by the company if not as a defence as a set-off to a claim for a rebate under s. 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894; and that it having been proved that the value of the services received by the applicants at the Saltley siding were at least as great as the value of the services received at Lawley street station, the rates might fairly be equal in both cases. Birmingham Corporation v. Midland Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 165.

Voluntary Rate.]—At the request of the applicants the Midland Railway Co. made arrangements for the transit of grain traffic at a certain rate "without rebate" over its own line and the North Western Railway Co.'s line to the junction with the applicants' sidings. The applicants applied under s. 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, for a rebate from the rate charged for their traffic so delivered, in respect that the railway companies did not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services:—Held (1) that the applicants were not entitled to the benefit of s. 4, as their traffic was carried over the lines of the two railway companies at a voluntary rate, a rate, therefore, which, if the applicants accepted it at all, they must accept on the conditions offered; (2) that as by the terms of the contract the applicants' traffic was not to be delivered at or near the Midland Co.'s terminal station, but at a siding off the Midland Co.'s system altogether, where they charged no one for station accommodation or terminal services, the commissioners had no jurisdiction to deal with the case under s. 4. Watson, Todd & Co. v. Midland Ry. and L. & N. W. Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 90—C. A.

3. Arbitration by.

Jurisdiction.]—Before the H. railway company was formed, B., purporting to act on its behalf, entered into an agreement with two other companies for the working of the H. railway. When the H. company was formed and obtained its private act, the following section was contained in it: "The heads of agreement, bearing date April 29, 1865, between B. on behalf of the H. company; C. on behalf of the Midland Railway Company; and Y. on behalf of the Great Western Railway Company; which heads of agreement are set forth in schedule 1 to this act, are hereby confirmed and made binding on the said companies respectively." By clause 18 of the agreement in the schedule, "all differences between the three companies, or any two of them, and all questions as to the carrying into effect of the provisions of this arrangement, shall be determined by arbitration under the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859." By s. 8 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, it is provided that "where any difference between railway companies . . . is, under the provisions of any general or special act, . . . required or authorised to be referred to arbitration, such difference shall, at the instance of any company party to the difference, and with the consent of the railway commissioners, be referred to the commissioners for their decision in lieu of being referred to arbitration." The H. company applied to the commissioners for an order enjoining the Great Western and Midland Railway companies to work the H. line, and the Great Western Company objected that the H. company had not constructed certain platforms:—Held, by A. L. Smith, J. (Grove, J., dubitante), that the provision of the agreement requiring all differences to be referred to arbitration was not, although made binding by the act, a provision of any general or special act, within s. 8 of the act of 1873, and that the railway commissioners had, therefore, no jurisdiction. G. W. Ry. v. Halesowen Ry., 52 L. J., Q. B. 473; 48 L. T. 710; 4 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 224.

By clause 1 of the agreement, "the H. company agree, at their own expense, to make and complete the railways, stations, buildings and works by this act authorised, including a terminal station at H., with the necessary conveniences thereto, and proper sidings at the junction with the Midland Railway for the convenient interchange of traffic in passengers and goods, to the satisfaction of the respective engineers of the three abovenamed companies; or, in case of their difference, to the satisfaction of an engineer to be appointed by the board of trade." By clause 2, "from and after the time when the railways are so completed, the Midland Company and the Great Western Company, at all times, at their own joint expense and risk, shall work the H. line":—Held, that the question as to the necessity for the platforms was within clause 1, and that, as the application of the H. company did not, and could not, allege that the works had been completed to the satisfaction of the engineers, clause 18 of the agreement did not apply, that, on that ground, the railway commissioners had no jurisdiction, and that the H. company should be prohibited from proceeding further with the application. Ib.

Two railway companies were empowered by a special act to enter into a working agreement, but no provision was made respecting arbitration. The agreement made under this act contained a clause providing that any difference between the companies should be determined by arbitration, in accordance with the provisions of the Railway Arbitration Act, 1859. Difference having arisen, one of the companies called upon the railway commissioners to decide the differences under s. 8 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873. The other company accordingly issued a writ for an injunction against the first company, which was amended by making the railway commissioners parties, and asking for a prohibition:—Held, that the railway commissioners had no jurisdiction to undertake the arbitration, and prohibition was issued accordingly. Stokes Bay Railway and Pier Co. v. L. & S. W. R. (2 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 143) and Portpatrick Ry. v. Caledonian Ry. (3 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 189) disapproved. G. W. Ry. v. Waterford and Limerick Ry., 50 L. J., Ch. 513; 17 Ch. D. 493; 44 L. T. 723; 29 W. R. 826—C. A.

The clause in s. 8 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, which enables one party to apply for the arbitration of the railway commissioners, "where any difference between railway companies is, under the provisions of any general or special act, required or authorised to be referred to arbitration," does not apply to all cases in which the agreement under which the difference has arisen has been made under the provisions of a general or special act, but only to cases in which the specific difference has been required or authorised by a general or special act to be referred to arbitration. Ib.

An agreement was entered into between two railway companies, one of the clauses of which provided that all questions in difference arising out of the agreement should be determined by arbitration in manner provided by the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859. A private act of parliament was subsequently passed, in which the agreement was set out verbatim as a schedule, and it was provided by the act that the scheduled agreement should be "confirmed and made binding" upon the parties thereto. Differences having arisen, one of the companies applied to the railway commissioners to determine the questions in dispute under the provisions of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873. The other company having obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition, on the ground that without their consent the railway commissioners had no jurisdiction to entertain the application:—Held, that the right to refer differences to arbitration was derived from the agreement itself; that the difference was not "required or authorised to be referred to arbitration under the provisions of any general or special act" within the meaning of s. 8 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, and that the railway commissioners had no jurisdiction to undertake the arbitration. Reg. v. Midland Ry. or G. W. Ry., 56 L. J., Q. B., 585; 19 Q. B. D. 540; 57 L. T. 619; 36 W. R. 270; 5 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 267; 51 J. P. 550.

Gauge — Setting aside Award.]—A railway company, in accordance with the provisions of an act of parliament, altered the gauge of its line, "on the terms of its being paid an equitable portion of the expense thereof, such expense and proportions to be borne by the several companies whose interest would be advanced by such alteration"; and it was enacted that the plaintiffs should pay to the defendants such proportion of the expense as should be agreed upon between the parties; or, in case of their differing, as might be determined by the award of the railway commissioners. The several companies not being able to agree, the question was referred to the commissioners, and an inquiry was by them instituted, at which no person on behalf of the plaintiffs attended, and at which it appeared from the evidence that no notice was formally given them to attend, but at which the expenses of the alteration were divided and apportioned among the several companies. Notice of the award by the commissioners was sent to the plaintiffs, and their portion of the expenses demanded, but, not being paid, an action was commenced. The plaintiffs impugned the fairness of the award, inasmuch as the sum demanded was the proportion of the expense for seventy-one miles instead of for four only. On a bill by the plaintiffs to set aside the award, and to restrain the action:—Held, that the authority of the commissioners to make the award having been conferred upon them by act of parliament, the court had no jurisdiction by way of appeal to set it aside; and as the plaintiffs had subsequently had recourse to, and had memorialised the commissioners, the bill must be dismissed with costs. Newry and Enniskillen Ry. v. Ulster Ry., 2 Jur. (N.S.) 936; 4 W. R. 781.

4. Practice.

Power to state Special Case.]—On the hearing of an application made under the regulation of Railways Act, 1873, s. 15, the railway commissioners have power to state a special case for the opinion of the High Court. Hall v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 15 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. T. 345; 5 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 28.

Appeal to Court of Appeal on Case stated.]—There is no appeal to the Court of Appeal from the decision of a divisional court upon a case stated by the railway commissioners under s. 26 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, even though leave to appeal has been given. Sect. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, does not apply to appeals from the railway commissioners. Hall v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 328; 17 Q. B. D. 230; 54 L. T. 713; 34 W. R. 558; 5 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 28—C. A.

Discretion as to Costs.]—The railway commissioners have no jurisdiction under the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, s. 28, to order a railway company, in whose favour they have decided upon an application to them against such company, to pay costs to the unsuccessful applicant. Foster v. G. W. Ry., 51 L. J., Q. B. 233; 8 Q. B. D. 515; 46 L. T. 74; 30 W. R. 398; 4 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 58—C. A.

Sect. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, enacts that "in proceedings before the railway and canal commissioners, other than disputes between two or more companies, the commissioners shall not have power to award costs on either side, unless they are of opinion that either the claim or the defence has been frivolous and vexatious":—Held, that this section dealt only with the costs of the case itself and did not take away the commissioners' power under s. 19 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, to deal with the costs of and incidental to other proceedings such as interlocutory applications. Rickett, Smith & Co. v. Midland Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 107.

Costs of Appeal.]—On an appeal from a decision of the railway commissioners in a dispute other than between two or more companies, the Court of Appeal has power to give the costs of the appeal to the successful party, notwithstanding s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894. Mansion House Association v. G. W. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 434; [1895] 2 Q. B. 141; 14 R. 429; 72 L. T. 523; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 58—C. A.

Costs—Exchange of Traffic—Bonus Payable.]—Upon an application to determine the amount of bonus to be paid for traffic carried over the applicants' railway, the applicants made exorbitant claims, and put forward tables of figures full of fallacies and inaccuracies, the court ordered them though successful to pay half the defendants' costs on the ground that they had unduly protracted the inquiry. Taff Vale Ry. v. Barry Dock, 7 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 41.

Some Matters within and some without Jurisdiction.]—In a declaration in prohibition by a railway company against the railway commissioners it appeared that a complaint, under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, had been made to the commissioners against the company, and that the commissioners proposed to order certain things to be done by the company in respect of such complaint, and that the company denied the jurisdiction of the commissioners to hear and determine the complaint or any part of it, and prayed for a writ to prohibit the commissioners "from further proceeding in any way touching the premises before them." The court being of opinion that the commissioners had jurisdiction over the general matter of the complaint, and that they had jurisdiction to order some of the things they proposed ordering, though not to order the others:—Held (Brett, L.J., dissenting), that a general demurrer by the commissioners to the whole declaration should be allowed. S. E. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 201; 6 Q. B. D. 586; 44 L. T. 203; 45 J. P. 388.

Prohibition.]—If the railway commissioners acted beyond their powers, prohibition would lie, notwithstanding the power of the court of common pleas over railways under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, was transferred to such commissioners by the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873. Ib.

Mandamus—Special Case—Question of Fact.]—Upon an application for a mandamus to the railway commissioners to state a case raising certain points of law for the consideration of the high court, where it appears from the evidence that it was possible to arrive at the conclusions contained in their judgment, the court will not interfere. Rhymney Iron Co. v. Rhymney Ry., 6 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 89—C. A. Affirming 53 J. P. 309.

Previous Decisions of Railway Commission.]—The decisions of the railway commission since its commencement are binding on the court. Didcot, Newbury, and Southampton Ry. v. G. W. Ry. and L. & S. W. Ry., 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 210.

J. Abandonment, Arrangement, Winding-up, and Execution.

1. Abandonment.

Branch Undertaking—Return of Deposit—General Assets.]—A railway company in 1873 obtained an act of parliament authorising them to construct a branch line, the parliamentary deposit being paid by B., who was the principal proprietor in the company, and the act containing the usual provisions for return of the deposit, if, as happened, the requirements of the act were not complied with. In 1875, a receiver of the branch undertaking was appointed, and in 1876, an act was obtained extending the time for completion of the line to May, 1881. In 1880, an act was obtained for the abandonment of the undertaking, providing that rights to compensation should not be affected thereby, and that, subject to such rights, and the protection of the company's creditors, the court might order the deposit money to be repaid to the persons named in the parliamentary warrant. There were no creditors' claims in respect of the branch undertaking, but the costs of the act of 1876 and the abandonment act were owing to B., who had paid them, and the general creditors of the company had large claims. On the application of B., as representing the persons named in the warrant, for the payment to him of the deposit money: — Held, that the deposit money had become part of the general assets of the company, and must be applied for the benefit of the general creditors. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, 45 L. T. 129.

Distribution of Parliamentary Deposit.]—See PARLIAMENT.

Costs of Depositor's Petition.] — A railway having been abandoned under the Railways Abandonment Act, the costs of a petition by the depositor for the transfer out to him of the bulk of the deposit moneys were ordered to be paid out of the general assets of the company. Laugharne Ry., In re, L. R. 12 Eq. 454; 19 W. R. 1108.

Costs of Solicitors and Parliamentary Agents.] — Claims in respect of expenses incurred by parliamentary agents in getting the bill of a projected railway company passed through parliament, and for moneys advanced by the intending contractor for the same purpose, are debts which have been incurred on account of the promotion of the company; and the court, under the discretion given by the Railways Abandonment Act, 1869, s. 5, will not hold it reasonable, as between such creditors and the surety to the bond, that their debts should be paid out of the bond, which, by the warrant for the abandonment of the railway, has been directed to be applied as part of the assets of the company. Brampton and Longtown Ry., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 681; L. R. 10 Eq. 613; 23 L. T. 356; 18 W. R. 994.

A board of trade warrant of abandonment of a railway, under the Abandonment of Railways Act, 1850, and the Railway Companies Act, 1867, was made with a condition that moneys deposited in the court of chancery as security should be applied as part of the assets of the company:— Held, that the solicitor and parliamentary agent, not being promoters of the company, were entitled to be paid thereout their costs and charges for obtaining the act. Kensington Station Act, In re, L. R. 20 Eq. 197; 32 L. T. 183; 23 W. R. 463.

A solicitor was employed in the promotion of a railway and in obtaining the act for its incorporation. He was then appointed solicitor of the company, and was employed in obtaining two other acts by which the scheme was amended and fresh powers granted. The undertaking proved abortive, and the railway was never constructed. A warrant of the board of trade was obtained under the Railways Abandonment Act, 1869, for the abandonment of the railway, which contained the usual clause that the bond which had been given for the completion of the railway should be assets of the company:—Held, that the costs of the solicitor incurred in getting up the company, and, after its incorporation, in obtaining the subsequent acts, were costs incurred on account of the promotion of the company within s. 5 of the Railways Abandonment Act, 1869, and ought not to be paid out of the bond. Barry Ry., In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 206; 4 Ch. D. 315; 36 L. T. 125; 25 W. R. 201—C. A.

Proof of Claims.] — G., having entered into a provisional contract for the construction of a railway, expended considerable sums of money for the use of the company, in payment of the costs of promoting one of the special acts of the company, of office rent, stationery, &c. No resolutions of the board of directors authorising the payments appeared in the minute books, but the secretary and some of the directors were at the time aware that such expenses were being defrayed by G. The railway was afterwards abandoned, and an order was made for the winding-up of the company:—Held, that the sums paid by G. constituted a liability on the part of the company, and that a claim by his assignees for the amount should be allowed. Dublin and Rathcoole Ry., In re, Stevens, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ir. 98.

A claim for sums paid by G. to the secretary of the company, but not proved to have been applied for the company's benefit, was disallowed. Ib.

In order to obtain from the Board of Trade an extension of the time limited by the act for completing the line, G. executed a bond to the crown in 40,000*l.* The company subsequently obtained a further act, allowing an additional extension of time for the completion of the railway, but containing a clause saving the liability of G. on foot of the bond. By the warrant of abandonment it was provided that the sum due on foot of the bond should be applied as assets of the company, and the bond was assigned by the lords commissioners of the treasury to the official liquidator. G.'s claim against the company had been previously assigned to T. & Co. for valuable consideration:—Held, that the official liquidator could not set off against the claim of T. & Co. the amount due on foot of the bond. Ib.

Form of Order.]—In a warrant of abandonment of a railway issued by the board of trade on condition that the money deposited as security for the completion of the railway or the securities in which the same was invested should be applied as part of the assets of the company, it is not necessary, under the Railways Abandonment Act, 1869, s. 5, to save the rights of a party who has advanced the deposit. His rights may be asserted and allowed in the administration of the assets of the company under the winding-up order. Waterford, Lismore, and Fermoy Ry., In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 490; 19 W. R. 145.

Indemnity—Mode of Cancelling Bond.]—The plaintiff gave a bond to the crown conditioned to be void if a certain railway was completed within a given time, and the defendants undertook to indemnify the plaintiff against all liability which he might incur in giving such bond. The railway was not completed, and the plaintiff, under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, which was passed after the giving of the bond, applied to the board of trade to authorise the abandonment of the railway and to cancel the bond, which was ordered upon condition that the money secured by it should be applied as assets of the company. The company was accordingly wound up, and the plaintiff paid, under an order of the court, a part of the money secured by the bond, which was then cancelled. The plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount so paid from the defendants on their undertaking to indemnify. On demurrer to the statement of claim:—Held, that the payment made by the plaintiff to obtain the cancelling of the bond was a liability incurred by him in giving the bond, for which the defendants were liable to indemnify him, although the Railway Companies Act, 1867, enabling the plaintiff to take proceedings to cancel the bond, was not passed when the indemnity was given. Webster v. Petre, 4 Ex. D. 127; 27 W. R. 662.

Winding-up—What Company.]—A company, by its special act, was authorised to construct docks and a railway. The railway was only about half a mile long, and for the purpose of connecting the docks with the London and South-Western Railway, and the special act prescribed the fares for the railway. On a petition to wind up the company:—Held, that the company was not a railway company within the exception contained in the Companies Act, 1862, s. 199. Exmouth Docks Co., In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 110; L. R. 17 Eq. 181; 29 L. T. 573; 22 W. R. 104.

—— Who may Petition.]—A creditor of a railway company whose works have been abandoned by warrant of the board of trade, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 83, cannot petition for an order to wind up the company. North Kent Extension Ry., In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 356; 20 L. T. 867; 17 W. R. 789.

—— Jurisdiction of Court.]—A warrant of abandonment of a railway was issued by the board of trade on condition that the money deposited as security for the completion of the railway or the securities in which the same was invested should be applied as part of the assets of the company:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make an order for winding-up the company without the consent of a party who had advanced the deposit on a security from the railway company. Waterford, Lismore, and Fermoy Ry., In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 490; 19 W. R. 145.

2. SCHEME OF ARRANGEMENT.

Assent of Shareholders.] — A petition was presented for the confirmation of a scheme of arrangement between a railway company and their creditors, which had been assented to by all the preference and ordinary shareholders present at an extraordinary general meeting. The special act of the company enacted that all preference shares should confer the like right of voting at meetings as ordinary shares:—Held, that the special act did not qualify the enactments of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, and that the assent of the preference shareholders must be given in writing. Cambrian Ry., In re, 24 L. T. 417; 19 W. R. 871.

A company was incorporated with a capital of 72,000*l.* divided into 7,200 ordinary shares of 10*l.* each. Under a power contained in the company's special act, 4,960 shares had been split into preferred and deferred half shares. The holder of any two halves was entitled in respect thereof to such right of voting and other advantages as were incident to one entire share, but two half shares did not become one entire share. Upon a petition being presented under s. 16 of the act of 1867 for the confirmation by the court of a scheme of arrangement:—Held, that the holders of the preferred half shares could not be treated as a class of preference shareholders within s. 12 of the act of 1867 whose assent was required to the scheme of arrangement, but that any rights of priority belonging to the holders of the preferred half shares as between themselves and the holders of the deferred half shares would be protected by the provisions of s. 17 of the act of 1867. Brighton and Dyke Ry., In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 329; 44 Ch. D. 28; 62 L. T. 353; 38 W. R. 321—C. A.

—— Rights "prejudicially affected."]—The assent of the statutory majority of a class to a scheme of arrangement under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, cannot be dispensed with under s. 15, if any existing right of that class is prejudicially affected, it being for them and not for the court to consider whether the scheme gives them such benefits that their rights on the whole are not prejudicially affected. Neath and Brecon Ry., In re, [1892] 1 Ch. 349; 66 L. T. 40; 40 W. R. 289—C. A. Affirming 61 L. J., Ch. 172.

Who bound by—Debenture Holders.]—After a scheme of arrangement by a railway company with its creditors has been assented to, in writing, by three-fourths in value of the debenture holders, although dissenting debenture-holders are entitled to appear and oppose the scheme, the scheme is binding upon the minority, unless it can be shewn that the vote of the majority was obtained by fraud. East and West Junction Ry., In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 522; L. R. 8 Eq. 87; 21 L. T. 86.

A debenture-holder, although he has obtained judgment and issued execution against a railway company before the filing of a scheme of arrangement under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, still remains a debenture-holder for the purposes, and is therefore bound by the scheme when assented to by three-fourths in value of the holders of the company's debentures, and after inrolment of the scheme will be restrained from taking any further steps to enforce his judgment. Potteries, Shrewsbury, and North Wales Ry. v. Minor, 40 L. J., Ch. 685; L. R. 6 Ch. 621; 25 L. T. 522; 19 W. R. 883.

When at a duly convened meeting of the debenture-holders of a company in a ruined condition, a scheme for the reconstruction of the company was assented to by an overwhelming majority, the court held the will of the majority to be binding on the minority. Tunis Rys., In re, 30 L. T. 512; 22 W. R. 639. Affirmed 31 L. T. 264.

Unpaid vendors of land sold to the company, and debenture-holders of the company, do not, by accepting debenture stock under the provisions of a scheme, lose any priority which they previously had over an elegit creditor, who is not bound by the scheme. Stevens v. Mid Hants Ry., 42 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 8 Ch. 1064; 29 L. T. 318; 21 W. R. 858.

—— Creditors.]—A scheme of arrangement is not binding upon outside creditors who have not assented thereto. Bristol and North Somerset Ry., In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 851; L. R. 6 Eq. 448; 16 W. R. 1112.

Whenever confirmation of such a scheme prejudicially affecting the interests of outside creditors is sought, the court, before confirming it, will require the written assent thereto of all the outside creditors. Ib.

A scheme of arrangement under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, is not, by s. 18, made binding upon unpaid landowners or general creditors of the company, but only on persons who have assented thereto, or are members of classes which, under the previous sections of the act, have become bound by the assent of the requisite majorities. Cambrian Ry., In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 409; L. R. 3 Ch. 278; 18 L. T. 522; 16 W. R. 346.

An outside creditor is not bound by a scheme of arrangement filed by a railway company under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, and cannot derive any indirect benefit from it; his rights are entirely unaffected by it. Stevens v. Mid Hants Ry., 42 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 8 Ch. 1064; 29 L. T. 318; 21 W. R. 858.

Parties who have recovered a judgment against a railway company, and converted it into a statutory mortgage under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 29, are not bound by a scheme of arrangement under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, to which they have not assented. Stephens v. Cork and Kinsale Junction Ry., Ir. R. 6 Eq. 604.

Confirmation by Court.]—When, upon a petition for the confirmation of a scheme of arrangement between a railway company and its creditors, some of the outside creditors appeared and opposed the scheme, the court, on its appearing that their opposition was reasonable, and based on a due regard to their own interests, dismissed the petition. Somerset and Dorset Ry., In re, 21 L. T. 656; 18 W. R. 332.

When a scheme under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, provided for the borrowing of large sums of money, and that the entire authorised loan capital should be applied, first, in completing and stocking the line, and then to all lawful purposes of the company, and did not contain any special provisions for the payment of or arrangement with creditors, the court refused to confirm it as a scheme of arrangement with creditors. Letterkenny Ry., In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 538.

A scheme of arrangement under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, provided that, upon the allotment of certain debenture stock to the creditors, all their debts and claims should be deemed to be satisfied and their securities given up, to which almost all the outside creditors gave their assent; and as none of them opposed the petition to confirm the scheme, the court made an order confirming it, upon the company giving their personal security to make no allotment of the debenture stock to any of the outside creditors who had not given their assent. West Cork Ry., In re, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 96.

The court cannot sanction a scheme under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, giving to the holders of debenture stock the right to vote like shareholders. Stafford and Uttoxeter Ry., In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 777; 20 W. R. 921.

Confirmation by the court of a scheme under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, enabling a railway company to create and issue debenture stock to an amount in excess of its powers under its acts of parliament, and providing for payment of creditors in such stock, the preliminaries prescribed by the act having been complied with, and nine-tenths in value of the creditors appearing and assenting to the scheme. Teign Valley Ry., In re, 17 L. T. 201.

A company was authorised to make, and had made, a railway through the principal part of its undertaking, which consisted of its docks and the works connected therewith; and, being unable to pay its debts, a scheme of arrangement between the company and its creditors was prepared under the Railway Companies Act, 1867. The scheme was prefaced, as required by that act, by a declaration, under the seal of the company, that it was unable to pay its debts, and contained various provisions designed to enable it to ultimately discharge its obligations. Contractors who had constructed certain docks for the company, and who claimed to be creditors of the company for a large amount, but who held no security for their debt, opposed the confirmation of the scheme. Other unsecured creditors likewise opposed:—Held, that the scheme was a reasonable and honest one, and that as the scheme did not in any way exceed the powers afforded by the statute, nor deprive the creditors of any legal rights which they possessed, but was likely to benefit all persons concerned, the secured and the unsecured creditors as well as the shareholders, no sufficient objections to it had been established, and that therefore the scheme ought to be confirmed. East and West India Dock Co., In re, 44 Ch. D. 38; 62 L. T. 239; 38 W. R. 516—C. A.

A scheme which would convert mortgages of a railway company into irredeemable debenture stock is within the scope of the Railway Companies Act, 1867; and the court has jurisdiction to confirm such a scheme, if assented to by the majority of the mortgagees required by the act, and the court is satisfied that it would be beneficial to the company. Irish N. W. Ry., In re, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 190.

A petition was presented by a railway company asking that the scheme of arrangement between the company and its creditors might be confirmed by the order of the court. Another railway company had agreed to purchase the undertaking of the petitioning company, and a bill was prepared to be presented in the session of 1893 to carry the sale into effect:—Held, that the court ought not, on behalf of unsecured creditors, to approve a scheme on the hypothesis that a bill before parliament would pass into law; that the petition must, therefore, stand over, with liberty to apply. Eastern and Midlands Ry., In re, 67 L. T. 711.

When at a duly convened meeting of the debenture-holders of a company in a ruined condition, a scheme for the reconstruction of the company was assented to by an overwhelming majority, the court held the will of the majority to be binding on the minority. Tunis Rys., In re, 30 L. T. 512; 22 W. R. 639. Affirmed 31 L. T. 264.

Effect of—Restraining Proceedings against Company.]—Sects. 7 and 9 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, apply only to the time between the filing of a scheme of arrangement and its inrolment, and after inrolment the court has no jurisdiction without a bill being filed to restrain an action against the company. Potteries, Shrewsbury, and North Wales Ry., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 273; L. R. 5 Ch. 67; 22 L. T. 53; 18 W. R. 155.

The court has, however, jurisdiction under ss. 7, 9, to restrain proceedings by creditors or unpaid landowners during the maturing of the scheme. Cambrian Ry., In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 409; L. R. 3 Ch. 278; 18 L. T. 522; 16 W. R. 346.

The court will not restrain proceedings by a creditor or unpaid landowner, unless the scheme makes reasonable provision for the payment of the claims of creditors and landowners. Ib.

Notwithstanding s. 17 of the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 127, a scheme filed under that act, but not confirmed within three months, will, until the application for confirmation has been heard, be considered as still pending so far as regards the protection by interim order against creditors afforded by s. 7. Robertson v. Wrexham, Mold and Connah's Quay Ry., 17 W. R. 137.

But that protection will not be afforded against a suit for specific performance before decree by an unpaid landowner, except upon the terms of the company submitting to a decree in the suit. Ib.

Where a scheme of arrangement has been filed under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, the circumstance that one of the judgment creditors of the company has before the filing of the scheme served notice of motion for equitable execution is not a ground upon which the court will give such creditor any exceptional position when making an order against judgment creditors for stay of proceedings. Devas v. East and West India Dock Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 522; 61 L. T. 217.

Amending Scheme.]—A railway company constituted by the amalgamation of various other railway companies had filed a scheme for the future management and carrying on of the company. Leave was given by the court to amend the original scheme so filed. Cambrian Ry., In re, 18 L. T. 530.

Inrolment of Order.]—When a scheme of arrangement between a railway company and its creditors had been confirmed, inrolment of the confirmation order was restrained on the application of outside creditors who had, within thirty days from the date of the order, set down a motion for leave to file a petition for a rehearing. Devon and Somerset Ry., In re, L. R. 6 Eq. 615.

3. Judgment against.

a. Registration of.

A judgment may be registered as a mortgage against an incorporated railway company, under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 29. Bagnall, Ex parte, Bagnalstown and Wexford Ry., In re, 13 L. T. 63.

Where, in an affidavit to register judgment as a mortgage, the company is described as a railway company, it is unnecessary further to set forth the trade of the company, inasmuch as the description "railway company" clearly imports that the trade of the company is that of a common carrier. Ib.

b. Sale of Surplus Lands.

Order when Made.]—A writ of execution having been sued out on a judgment debt against a railway company, upon petition, the court ordered inquiries and a sale of the company's lands in default of payment of this debt. Hull and Hornsea Ry., In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 838; L. R. 2 Eq. 262; 14 L. T. 855; 14 W. R. 758.

Upon the petition of a judgment creditor of a railway company, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, praying for the sale of surplus lands of the company, the court will not make an immediate order for sale, but will direct inquiries. Gardner v. L. C. & D. Ry., L. R. 2 Ch. 385; 15 L. T. 644; 15 W. R. 324.

The court will not make an order for immediate sale, unless it sees with certainty that the property in question is saleable. Ib.

Nature of the inquiries directed. Ib.

Form of order on petition by a judgment creditor for sale of superfluous lands of a railway company under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, s. 4. Ib.

A judgment dated in April, 1867, was obtained for 30,000*l.* against a railway company, and an elegit issued in June. In November the company filed a scheme of arrangement, and in January, 1868, an order for sale was made under the writ. In July, 1868, the scheme was dismissed, and a petition presented by the creditors for an inquiry whether the lands in respect of which the elegit had been issued were surplus lands, upon which ground the company opposed the claim:—Order made for the inquiry as in Gardner v. L. C. & D. Ry. (L. R. 2 Ch. 385). Bristol and North Somerset Ry., In re, 20 L. T. 70.

Upon the petition of a judgment creditor of a railway company an order was made, without directing inquiries, for a sale of surplus land of the company, not required for the undertaking and not used for building purposes, which had been delivered in execution to the petitioner under an elegit, the registry of which was still in force. The company was ordered to execute a proper conveyance. Calne Ry., In re, L. R. 9 Eq. 658.

An existing railway company was authorised to make an extension line by an act which enacted that the capital might be raised by an issue of new shares, to be called extension shares, and that the works authorised by it should, for financial purposes, form a separate undertaking, and that the capital and new shares created under its powers should constitute a separate capital; and that the profits of the extension line applicable to dividend should be wholly applied in payment of dividend on the extension shares; and that the extension shareholders should not be entitled to dividends out of any other profits of the company, and that the company might raise by mortgage any additional sums not exceeding 28,000*l.*, but not till all the extension capital had been subscribed for and half of it paid up; and that the money raised by new shares or mortgage should be applied only for the purposes of the extension act. A contractor, to whom the company was indebted in respect of the construction of the original line, obtained judgment against the company, extended certain surplus lands acquired under the powers of the extension act, and then applied to the court for a sale:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to an order for sale, for that, whatever might be the rights of the different classes of shareholders inter se, the lands were lands of the company, liable to be sold for payment of any judgment debts of the company. Ogilvie, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 336; L. R. 7 Ch. 174.

Priority—Debenture-holders.]—Sect. 23 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, does not give to creditors of a railway company in respect of mortgages, bonds or debenture-stock, any lien or charge which they did not possess before the act, so as to entitle them to payment in priority out of the proceeds of surplus lands of the company, which have been sold on the application of the judgment creditors of the company. Hull, Barnsley, and West Riding Ry., In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 205; 40 Ch. D. 119; 59 L. T. 877; 37 W. R. 145—C. A.

c. Receiver.

i. Under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 127, s. 4.

In what Cases Appointed.]—A railway company which has never commenced to acquire the lands, or construct the railways authorised by their act, is not an "undertaking" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, of which a receiver can be appointed under that section. Birmingham and Lichfield Junction Ry., In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 594; 18 Ch. D. 155; 45 L. T. 164; 29 W. R. 908.

A receiver would be properly appointed under s. 4 when the railway is a leased line or, under a working arrangement with another company, merely receives the rent and the tolls. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, Cambrian Ry., Ex parte, infra.

In 1879 a railway company, whose line was partially completed, gave their secretary (the petitioner) a certificate of indebtedness, and an undertaking to pay a certain sum with interest, upon which he recovered judgment and issued execution. The amount was due for services partly rendered prior to the passing of the Railway Companies Act, 1867. It appeared that the company was in considerable financial difficulties, and that there were judgment creditors to a large amount prior to that of the petitioner. The portion of the line open (about eight miles) was being worked by another company at a remuneration of 60 per cent. of the gross earnings. The court, on the application of the petitioner, granted a receiver over the portion of the line open for traffic, with liberty to extend him over any part of the line which might thereafter be opened. Southern Ry., In re, Quinton, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ir. 165.

When a petition was presented under s. 4 of the act of 1867 by a judgment creditor for the appointment of a receiver of the tolls of a railway company, and it appeared that the line had not been used by the company, although a portion of it had been occupied and maintained by another company, without payment of compensation; that the contract on which the judgment was recovered had been entered into previously to the passing of the act:—Held, that the railway had not been opened for public traffic within the meaning of the act; and that as the judgment had been recovered upon a contract entered into before the passing of the act it could have no effect. Beddgelert Ry., In re, 24 L. T. 122; 19 W. R. 427.

—— Railway ancillary to Dock.]—A company formed by act of parliament for the purpose of making a dock was afterwards authorised, by an act of parliament obtained by a railway company, to make a short piece of railway over its own land connected with the line of the railway company, and to work it for through traffic:—Held (Lopes, L.J., doubting), that the dock company was a company "constituted by act of parliament for the purpose of making a railway," and so was a railway company within the meaning of the Railway Companies Act, 1867; that a receiver and manager could therefore be appointed on the application of a judgment creditor; and that the receiver and manager must be appointed of the whole undertaking of the company, and not merely of the railway belonging to it. East and West India Dock Co., In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 1053; Ch. D. 576; 59 L. T. 237; 36 W. R. 849—C. A.

—— Discretion of the Court.]—In exercising the jurisdiction afforded by s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, relative to the appointment of a receiver and manager of a railway company at the instance of judgment creditors, the court, whilst not assisting in anything of a speculative nature with regard to the future, should take a fair broad view of the present position and exigencies of the company, and act for the general benefit of all the creditors. But in exercising such jurisdiction the court is not to consider itself fettered by any contract or arrangement which may have previously been entered into between the railway company and any person, although in the exercise of its discretion the court will have regard thereto. Hull, Barnsley, and West Riding Ry., In re, 57 L. T. 82.

On a petition for a receiver by a judgment creditor of the company, it appeared that the baronial guarantee fund was dedicated to the payment of the dividend on the share capital, and was not general assets of the company for payment of its debts; and, it being satisfactorily shewn that the undertaking was worked at a loss, the application for a receiver was refused. Waterford, Dungarvan, and Lismore Ry., In re, Finlayson, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ir. 584—C. A.

—— Matter of Right—"If necessary."]—Under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, s. 4, whenever a judgment creditor of a railway company is unpaid, the appointment of a receiver, or if necessary a manager, is a matter of right, and amounts to a sort of equitable execution. The words "if necessary" point to the necessity of carrying on the business, and whenever a railway company is carrying on business in the ordinary way and conducting its own traffic, a manager is necessary within the meaning of the act, and such manager should be appointed by the court. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, Cambrian Ry., Ex parte, 49 L. J., Ch. 365; 14 Ch. D. 645; 42 L. T. 714—C. A.

Who Appointed, and by whom.]—As a general rule, under s. 4 of the act of 1867, the directors or some of them would be appointed managers where they were acting fairly, and the order will generally be made without prejudice to any application by the directors to propose themselves or some of their number as managers. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, Cambrian Ry., Ex parte, supra.

Evidence in support of Application.] — The only evidence requisite in support of a petition by a judgment creditor for a manager under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, is an affidavit verifying the fact that he is a judgment creditor, that his judgment debt is unpaid, and that the company is a going concern conducting its own business. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, Cambrian Ry., Ex parte, supra.

Service of Petition.] — When a petition was presented by a judgment creditor for the appointment of a receiver of the tolls of a railway company, and it appeared that the service of the petition had been effected at a house which had formerly been, but was no longer, the office of the company, and on a person who had acted as, but who was not properly constituted, the secretary:—Held, that service of the petition was insufficient. Beddgelert Ry., In re, 24 L. T. 122; 19 W. R. 427.

Who may be Heard.]—A receiver and manager of the company's undertaking having been appointed, on the petition of a judgment creditor, the rolling stock contractors brought in a claim for the balance of rent due to them. It was contended, on behalf of the debenture-stock holders, that the agreement was not a bonâ fide hire-and-purchase agreement, but was in fact a borrowing by the railway company :—Held, that a debenture-stock holder, attending the proceedings, was entitled to be heard on the question of the legality of a claim against the assets of the company on which he depended for payment of his interest. Eastern and Midlands Ry., In re, 65 L. T. 668.

Priority.]—A judgment creditor of a railway company obtained an order for a receiver and manager under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867. After this, another judgment creditor applied for a similar order, which was made without prejudice to the former order :—Held, on appeal, that a judgment creditor gains no priority by obtaining a receivership order, that when a receivership order has been made and is in force, another judgment creditor gains no benefit whatever by obtaining a similar order, and that such subsequent order ought not to be made. The second order was therefore discharged. Mersey Ry., In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 283 ; 37 Ch. D. 610 ; 58 L. T. 745 ; 36 W. R. 372—C. A. See Navan and Kingscourt Ry., In re, infra.

—— Unpaid Capital—Execution.]—The appointment of a receiver of the undertaking of a railway company under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, does not affect the right of a judgment creditor to issue execution against unpaid capital under s. 36 of the Companies Clauses Act, 1845. Unpaid capital is not receivable by a receiver appointed under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867. West Lancashire Ry., In re, 63 L. T. 56.

Powers of.]—Semble, the powers of a receiver appointed under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, do not extend to getting in unpaid calls. Birmingham and Lichfield Junction Ry., In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 594 ; 18 Ch. D. 155 ; 45 L. T. 164 ; 29 W. R. 908.

In order to make "due provision" for the working expenses of the company required by the section, the court will assume control over the management of the railway and the power of seeing that the money spent is applied to the proper management of the railway. Manchester and Milford Ry., In re, Cambrian Ry., Ex parte, 49 L. J., Ch. 365 ; 14 Ch. D. 645 ; 42 L. T. 714—C. A.

When a receiver and manager of the undertaking of a railway company has been appointed by the court, under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, the powers of management remain the same as before ; but instead of being exercised by the officers of the company they are assumed into the hands of the court, and are exercised by the receiver and manager as the servant or officer of the court. Eastern and Midlands Ry., In re, 66 L. T. 153.

"Working Expenses"—"Proper Outgoings."]—The expense of the promotion of a bill in Parliament to empower a railway company to work its trains by electricity instead of by steam does not come within the "working expenses" or "other proper outgoings in respect of the undertaking," within s. 4 of the Railways Companies Act, 1867 ; and money in the hands of a receiver and manager appointed under that section cannot be applied for such a purpose. Mersey Ry., In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 623 ; 72 L. T. 535.

A railway company sold its rolling stock to a waggon company for a sum of money, and the waggon company let the rolling stock back to the railway company at a rent, on payment of which for a term the railway company was to become repossessed of the rolling stock, the rent being equal to the purchase money and interest. The Court of Appeal decided that the transaction was a bonâ fide sale and re-hiring, and not a sham transaction as a cloak for borrowing. (See Yorkshire Waggon Co. v. Maclure, 21 Ch. D. 309.) A receiver of the railway company's undertaking having been appointed under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, certain moneys which represented rent of some of the rolling stock let by the railway company to another company, and proceeds of sale of other rolling stock, were paid to the receiver. Debenture holders, who had become such after the date of the above-mentioned agreement of sale and re-hiring, and also the waggon company, claimed the money :—Held, that, although by s. 23 of the act "all money borrowed . . . by a company on . . . debenture stock . . . shall have priority . . . debenture stock . . . shall have priority . . . over all claims on account of any debts . . . or engagements" (except as in the section specified), that section was subject to s. 4, by which moneys received by a receiver under the act were not payable to creditors until after due provision for the working expenses of the railway and other proper outgoings in respect of the undertaking ; and that the rent of the rolling stock was a "working expense," and a "proper outgoing," and entitled to priority over the claim of the debenture holders. Cornwall Minerals Ry., In re, 48 L. T. 41.

When a receiver of the undertaking of a railway company has been appointed in pursuance of s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, the moneys received by him must be applied first in providing for the "working expenses" of the railway, even if by the company's special act a fixed dividend on shares and the interest on debentures, forming the capital raised for a particular undertaking of the company, are charged on the gross receipts of that undertaking. Eastern and Midlands Ry., In re, 45 Ch. D. 367 ; 63 L. T. 604—C. A.

When a railway company has purchased rolling stock on the terms of paying for it by a series of instalments at fixed times, the stock not becoming the property of the company until the complete payment of all the instalments, and the vendor having the right to seize the stock on default in payment of any one instalment, the "working expenses" include such instalments as they become due, and also overdue instalments. Ib.

By virtue of a special act of a company a certain loop line was constituted a "separate undertaking," and the capital raised for the purpose of constructing the loop line was constituted "separate capital." A receiver having been appointed under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867 :—Held, upon the construction of the special act as a whole, that the dividend upon, and interest in respect of, the separate capital were not "working expenses" or "proper outgoings" within the meaning of s. 4, and were to be postponed to working expenses. Ib.

The E. Co. recovered judgment against the N. & K. Railway for the sum of 2,881*l.* for rails supplied to make the line. The N. & K. Railway, being unable to meet their engagements, and indebted inter alia upon mortgages prior to the judgment to the extent of 37,900*l.*, filed a scheme of arrangement in the English Court of Chancery, and obtained power to issue debenture stock to the amount of 70,000*l.* to pay off their debts, viz., 20,000*l.* A. stock and 50,000*l.* B. stock, which were declared by the scheme to be respectively first and second charges on the undertaking of the N. & K. Railway. The E. Co. appeared on the settlement of the scheme, and had it altered (article 3) so as to provide for payment of one-third of their debt out of the A. stock, they undertaking not to proceed for the balance until one month after the completion of the line, or six months after the confirmation of the scheme; and by the order confirming the scheme it was declared that it did not prejudice outside creditors, save so far as the rights of judgment creditors were affected by article 3 so amended. The debenture stock was then issued. The E. Co., not having been paid, filed a bill to compel payment, and the suit was compromised. P., another judgment creditor of the railway, commenced proceedings for a receiver. Upon a reference to settle priorities:—Held (1), that the claim of the E. Co. came under the head of "debts" of the company, and not under the head of "working expenses" or "other proper outgoings" within s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867; and (2) that the effect of the E. Co.'s assent to the scheme implied from their intervention, was to postpone their claim to the A. and B. debenture stocks. The claimant company having appealed, the court were equally divided, and the judgment therefore stood. Navan and Kingscourt Ry., In re, Price, Ex parte, 17 L. R., Ir. 398—C. A.

ii. In Other Cases.

Charge on Tolls.]—Where there were several judgments against a railway company, the tolls of which were wholly inadequate to meet the debts of the company, the judgment creditors held entitled to a charge on the tolls, and one of the judgment creditors was appointed receiver. A sale of the lands was refused, but inquiries were directed as to the best means of making the railway profitable. Furness v. Caterham Ry., 27 L. J., Ch. 771; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1213.

Statutory bondholders of a railway company are not entitled to an equitable charge on the tolls and traffic receipts of the company, or to have a receiver appointed over such tolls and receipts for the purpose of paying their demands. Imperial Mercantile Credit Association v. Newry and Armagh Ry., Ir. R. 2 Eq. 524; 16 W. R. 1070.

A judgment creditor of a railway company to whom the company's land (including the line) has been delivered under an elegit is entitled to a receiver of the tolls and earnings, and is not accountable as a mortgagee in possession if he has not obtained beneficial possession. Kingston v. Cowbridge Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 152.

By whom Appointed.]—Sect. 33 of the special act empowered bond creditors and mortgagees of a company to enforce the payment of the arrears of principal and interest by the appointment of a receiver:—Held, that having regard to ss. 53 & 54 of the Companies Clauses Act, 1845, the receiver indicated in s. 33 of the special act was the receiver to be appointed by two justices under ss. 53 and 54 of the former act. Russell v. East Anglian Ry., 2 Mac. & G. 125; 20 L. J., Ch. 257; 15 Jur. 935.

Expenditure of Moneys.]—When a receiver is appointed over a railway, the court has jurisdiction to control expenditure in the management and repairs of the railway, though the directors individually are not parties to the suit. Belfast and County Down Ry. v. Belfast, Holywood and Bangor Ry., Ir. R. 3 Eq. 581.

The remuneration of directors is a proper expenditure, and should be allowed, though the company is insolvent. Ib.

Repairs and improvements of the line and stations, wire fencing, gas fittings and the like, are expenses properly paid out of revenue, if there is no capital immediately available for such purposes. Ib.

A receiver was appointed over the tolls, &c., of a railway company, and certain parties recovered damages in an action against the company for injuries suffered by a collision. On an application in the suit, in which the receiver was appointed, an order was made that he should pay such damages as part of the working expenses, &c., of the half year in which the accident occurred. Thurgood, Ex parte, 18 L. T. 18.

d. Leave to Issue Execution.

Railway Companies Act, 1867.]—Sects. 7 and 9 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, apply only to the time between the filing of a scheme of arrangement and its inrolment, and after inrolment a judgment creditor does not require the leave of the court to issue execution. Potteries, Shrewsbury and North Wales Ry., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 273; L. R. 5 Ch. 67; 22 L. T. 53; 18 W. R. 155.

Sects. 7 and 9 are co-extensive, and after the enrolment of the scheme there is no right to come to the court under s. 9 for leave to make process available against the property of the company. Ib.

After publication in the "Gazette" of notice of the filing of a scheme of arrangement by a railway company, creditors of the company will not be allowed, without first obtaining leave of the court, to issue execution upon a scire facias against shareholders of the company; the amount of capital remaining to be paid, in respect of which the scire facias has been obtained, being property of the company. Devon and Somerset Ry., In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 914; L. R. 6 Eq. 610; 18 L. T. 631; 17 W. R. 133.

When a railway company has filed a scheme under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, which has been sanctioned by one branch of the court, a motion for leave to issue execution must be made in that branch of the court by which the scheme was sanctioned. Christ Church (Dean) v. East and West Junction Ry., 17 W. R. 819.

In other Cases.]—The Cambrian Railway Company's Act, 1868, restrains the commencement or continuance of actions and suits against the company by creditors except with leave of the court. The court will not in general give leave unless it is shewn that the company has money applicable to the payment and refuses to pay. Parry, In re, 22 L. T. 116; 18 W. R. 416.

Upon an application under the Companies Clauses Act, s. 36, for leave to issue execution against shareholders of a company which had been ordered to pay a sum of money and failed to do so, the court will give the shareholders an opportunity of questioning the validity of the order; but is not bound to do so by directing a scire facias to issue. Healey v. Chichester and Midhurst Ry., 39 L. J., Ch. 387; L. R. 9 Eq. 148; 21 L. T. 811; 18 W. R. 270.

The company having raised large sums of money by bond and on mortgage, and being also considerably indebted on simple contract, agreed with one of their simple contract creditors to suffer judgment to be entered up against the company at a future day. After this agreement, various negotiations took place between the bond and other creditors of the company, and the company, with the view of postponing on certain terms the enforcement of all claims, as well by specialty as simple contract, against the company for seven years: these terms were accepted by the great majority of the creditors, but rejected by the simple contract creditor. After such rejection, but before the period for issuing execution had arrived, a bill was filed by one of the bond creditors against the company and its other specialty creditors for the enforcement of his alleged equitable lien, and for the appointment of a receiver. The receiver was appointed by the consent of all parties to the suit, and entered into the possession of all the chattels of the company. The simple contract creditor then sued out execution against the company:—Held, on the petition of the simple contract creditor, that, inasmuch as the order appointing a receiver was obtained by a surprise on the court, and did not rest on an equity which could be maintained, and would not have been made if all the circumstances of the case had been brought before the court, the simple contract creditor ought to be allowed to levy upon the goods and chattels of the company notwithstanding the order. Russell v. East Anglian Ry., 3 Macn. & G. 125; 6 Railw. Cas. 501; 20 L. J., Ch. 257; 15 Jur. 935.

I. POOR-RATES AND RATES IN GENERAL.

A. MAKING RATE.

1. VALUATION LIST.

Time for Taking and Depositing.]—J. and P. were the occupiers of rateable property situate in a parish within the limits of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67). Upon the 27th of September, the overseers made and deposited a valuation list, in which the property was assessed at certain amounts. The list was transmitted to the assessment committee on the 18th of October. On the 7th of December the assessment committee met, when J. and P. objected to the amounts at which their property was assessed, and these were reduced by the committee; after the meeting of the assessment committee no special sessions were held to which J. and P. could have appealed, but they appealed to the assessment sessions, who confirmed the list:—Held, that delay in making, depositing, transmitting and approving the valuation list within the times prescribed by s. 42 of the Metropolis (Valuation) Act, 1869, did not make it a nullity, for the provisions of that section were directory and not imperative. Reg. v. Ingall, 46 L. J., M. C. 113; 2 Q. B. D. 199; 35 L. T. 552; 25 W. R. 57.

Power to Amend—Notice of Objection.]—Under the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1—which enables the assessment committee to hear objections against a valuation list approved by the committee, and to amend such list, "after notice given at any time in the manner prescribed by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, with respect to objections"—an amendment of the list is valid, although no notice of the meeting of the committee was given to the overseers of the parish to which the list relates as required by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 19. Reg. v. Langriville Overseers or Copping Syke Overseers, 54 L. J., Q. B. 124; 14 Q. B. D. 83; 52 L. T. 253; 33 W. R. 213; 49 J. P. 54.

Objection—Who may Appear—Agent of Objector.]—An assessment committee has no right to refuse to hear a surveyor who has been sent by a ratepayer to appear as his agent before the committee in support of an objection to a valuation list. Reg. v. St. Mary Abbot's, 60 L. J., M. C. 52; [1891] 1 Q. B. 378; 64 L. T. 240; 39 W. R. 278; 55 J. P. 502—C. A.

Re-deposit after Alteration.]—The valuation list of a parish under the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 103), must, when altered by the committee, be deposited for inspection, and if not so deposited, it is invalid, together with any contribution order based upon it. Reg. v. Chorlton Union, 42 L. J., M. C. 34; L. R. 8 Q. B. 5.

It is the duty of the overseers to deposit the valuation list, after alteration by the assessment committee, in the place where the rate-books are kept, and to give due notice thereof in the same manner as in the case of the original deposit of the valuation list. Reg. v. Chorlton-on-Medlock, 35 L. J., M. C. 56; 12 L. T. 581; 13 W. R. 925.

—— After Appeal.]—Notice of appeal against a poor-rate having been given to the assessment committee under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, they amended the valuation list, and gave notice to the overseers, but the list was not re-deposited as required by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 21:—Held, that it was not necessary to re-deposit the list. Reg. v. Edmonds, 43 L. J., M. C. 156; L. R. 9 Q. B. 598; 31 L. T. 237; 22 W. R. 944.

A contribution order, based on the list as so altered, having been brought up by certiorari and a rule obtained to quash it on behalf of a ratepayer, whose rating was but inappreciably affected by the alterations; no recognizances having been entered into; the court discharged the rule with costs, as a vexatious abuse of the process of the court. Ib.

Time for Signing.]—The 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, s. 42, is directory and not imperative, and non-compliance with its directions as to dates does not make a valuation list void, which was in fact signed and approved in time to be discussed and adjudicated upon, on the hearing of appeals against it at the general assessment sessions, and in such cases the justices cannot, under s. 35, order another list to be made. Reg. v. Ingall, 46 L. J., M. C. 113; 2 Q. B. D. 199; 35 L. T. 552; 25 W. R. 57.

Approval before Expiration of Statutory Period—Validity.]—The effect of s. 18 of the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, is to render void any valuation list which has been approved by the assessment committee before the expiration of twenty-eight days after public notice of the deposit of such list by the overseers, and also any rate made in conformity with such list, and that effect is not taken away by s. 1 of the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864. Reigate Union v. S. E. Ry., 63 L. J., M. C. 65; [1894] 1 Q. B. 411; 70 L. T. 353; 42 W. R. 585; 58 J. P. 264.

Contents of—Mode of Valuation.]—Valuers employed by an assessment committee under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, to value a farm, furnished a valuation list giving the estimated acreage of each of the several fields comprising the farm, but not the gross estimated rental or the rateable value of each or any of the fields separately, but giving these two last-named amounts in lump sums in the proper columns at the end of the several items comprising the entire farm:—Held, that such a list was sufficient, and in conformity with the requirements of the act of parliament, and that it was unnecessary to give the value of each individual field of the farm separately. Rawlence v. Hursley Union, 47 L. J., M. C. 31; 3 Ex. D. 44; 37 L. T. 503; 26 W. R. 81.

—— Gross and Rateable Value.]—In making out the valuation list under the above act, the gross value and rateable value, as defined by s. 4, of each hereditament, must be inserted, without reference to any privilege of being assessed on an exceptional principle of valuation. Reg. v. Foundling Hospital (Governors), 41 L. J., M. C. 41; L. R. 7 Q. B. 83; 25 L. T. 562; 20 W. R. 92.

Houses not Let or Occupied.]—Houses finished and fit for occupation, but not let or occupied, which had been omitted in the valuation list made by the overseers under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 14, are rateable hereditaments, and ought to be inserted in the valuation list by the assessment committee. Reg. v. Malden Overseers, 10 B. & S. 323 ; 38 L. J., M. C. 125 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 326.

Expenses—Making and Copying.]—An assessment committee required the overseers of one of their townships to make out and copy a valuation list under 25 and 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 26. The board of overseers passed a resolution that its clerks and collectors had no time to do the work required, and that certain persons should be employed for the purpose. The overseers obtained a resolution of the vestry that the expense of this employment, which had then been defrayed, should be charged upon the poor-rates. The poor law auditor disallowed this charge, on the ground that the overseer's ordinary clerks and collectors ought to have done the work themselves :—Held, that by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 7, when a vestry consents to such a charge, even after the expense has been defrayed, the auditor has no power to disallow it. Reg. v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers, 45 L. J., M. C. 33 ; 1 Q. B. D. 62 ; 33 L. T. 526 ; 24 W. R. 110.

—— When Vestry Clerk Employed.] — The duties of a vestry clerk under the Vestry Clerks Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 57), s. 7, do not include that of preparing a valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67) ; but the overseers may employ the vestry clerk to prepare such list, and if they do so, may charge his reasonable remuneration therefor, not limiting it to his actual disbursements, upon the poor-rate under the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 39), s. 7. Reg. v. Cumberlege, 46 L. J., M. C. 214 ; 2 Q. B. D. 366 ; 36 L. T. 700 ; 25 W. R. 605.

—— Survey and Valuation.]—A charge was made on the poor-rates for the expenses of a survey and valuation of the parish made under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 3. In the bond creating the charge were inserted provisions for paying off not less than one-fifth of the sum charged, with interest in each succeeding year, till the whole was repaid :—Held, that the charge under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 2, was a charge on the rates generally, and might be enforced against the rates in years subsequently to the five years next after the making of the charge. Reg. v. Hurstbourne Tarrant Overseers, El. Bl. & El. 246 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 214 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 783 ; 6 W. R. 521.

—— Valuer Appointed by Committee.]—The assessment committee of a union acting under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 14, directed the overseers of a township within the union to send in a valuation list within three months. Before the expiration of that time the committee appointed a valuer for themselves. Subsequently the overseers sent in their valuation, which the committee rejected as unsatisfactory. The valuer then made his valuation, which exceeded by one-sixth that of the overseers :—Held, first, that the power of the overseers to make the valuation was superseded by the appointment of the valuer by the committee. Reg. v. Richmond, 6 B. & S. 541 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 186.

Held, secondly, that the parish was not liable for the expense of the valuation made by the committee either as costs or as compensation. Ib.

General District Rate, Basis of.] — General district rates made under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55, are not required to be based on the poor-rate. where, in the opinion of the local board, the poor-law valuation list is an unfit criterion for making them. N. E. Ry. v. Scarborough Local Board, 38 L. J., M. C. 65 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 163 ; 17 W. R. 574.

2. Rate.

a. By Whom Made.

De facto Vestrymen.]—A poor-rate, which is lawfully made in other respects, is not rendered invalid by the circumstance that some of the vestrymen who concurred in making it were vestrymen de facto and not de jure. Scadding v. Lorant, 3 H. L. Cas. 418.

Commissioners.]—The 54 Geo. 3, c. 4, s. 16, authorising the levying of a gaol rate, directed that the overseers of each parish should levy it in the same way as the poor-rate :—Held, that where the power to levy the poor-rate in a particular parish was in certain commissioners, they were the proper persons to make the gaol rate, and not the overseers. Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 106.

b. How Made.

"Made," Meaning of.]—A poor-rate was not made until it was signed by the overseers, according to 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96 (Parochial Assessment Act). Ainsworth v. Creeke, 38 L. J., C. P. 58 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 476 ; 19 L. T. 824 ; 17 W. R. 229 ; 1 Hopw. & C. 141.

The word "made" in 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102 (Representation of the People Act, 1867), s. 3, par. 3, is to be construed as completely made ; and therefore where a poor-rate, purporting to be made on the 18th July, 1867, was allowed by the justices on the 4th September, 1867, and published on the 8th September, 1867 :—Held, that it was not made during the time of occupation of a claimant seeking to qualify for the twelve months succeeding July 31, 1868. Jones v. Bubb, 38 L. J., C. P. 57 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 468 ; 19 L. T. 483 ; 17 W. R. 205 ; 1 Hopw. & C. 128.

Time for Making.]—A poor-rate need not be made monthly. Rex v. St. George Overseers, 2 W. Bl. 694.

Mandamus to Make Rate.]—An overseer may sue out a writ of mandamus, commanding the churchwardens and overseers to make a poor-rate, and the writ need not state in express terms that a poor-rate was necessary. Rex v. Edlaston Overseers, 1 N. & P. 20 ; 2 H. & W. 429 ; 6 L. J., M. C. 36. S. P., Rex v. Gadsby, 1 N. & P. 572.

The rule for a mandamus, to concur in making a rate, is absolute in the first instance. Ib.

Where it appears that the parish officers are without funds for the relief of the poor, and that for want of the concurrence of some of the officers a rate cannot be made, the court will order a peremptory mandamus in the first instance commanding them to make a rate. Rex. v. Soham Overseers, 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 73.

—— Retrospective Rate.]—At the time when the parish of B. was by a provisional order separated from the local government district of

M., the special district rates of that district were mortgaged for the unexpired period of twenty-three years to secure the repayment of a debt which had previously been incurred by the local board of the district of M. The statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 39, which confirmed the provisional order, apportioned the amount which the parish of B. should contribute towards the payment of such debt, and provided that the overseers of that parish should raise the annual instalments required to pay off the sum the parish of B. was to contribute in the name and as part of the rates levied within such parish for the relief of the poor. In July, 1883, the local board of M. paid off the last instalment of principal and interest due under the mortgage, and on the 25th March demanded from the overseers of the parish of B. payment of the amount due from the parish since the 13th January, 1879, up to which date the parish had duly contributed in accordance with 24 & 25 Vict. c. 39. The demand not having been complied with, an application was made for a mandamus to compel the overseers to levy a rate in order to pay the amount in arrear:—Held, that the obligation imposed by the statute on the parish of B. was that they should pay their proportion of the debt annually, and that the effect of granting the mandamus would be to enforce the levy of retrospective rates, and the court therefore discharged the rule. Reg. v. Beddington Overseers, 48 J. P. 486.

—— Payment of Debts Act, 1859—Prosecution of Action with due Diligence.]—An action was brought by an engineer, within the time limited by s. 1 of the Payment of Debts Act, 1859, for services rendered to the defendants, who were a rural sanitary authority acting under the Public Health Act, 1875. After issue joined the plaintiff took out a summons to refer the matter to arbitration; this summons was opposed by the defendants, and was dismissed. The plaintiff then allowed two assizes at Leeds (where the action was to be tried) to pass without giving notice of trial; the defendants then took out a summons to dismiss the action for want of prosecution, after which the plaintiff gave notice of trial for the assizes then coming on. At the trial, the learned judge, with the consent of the parties, ordered the matter to be referred to an arbitrator, who found for the plaintiff for a certain sum. In an action for a mandamus to the defendants to levy a rate to satisfy the award:—Held, granting the mandamus, that, as the action was a proper one to be referred to arbitration, and as the plaintiff had taken out a summons to refer, which the defendants opposed, the plaintiff had not, under the circumstances, failed to prosecute the proceedings in the action "with due diligence" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Poor Law Boards (Payment of Debts) Act, 1859. Rhodes v. Pateley Bridge Union, 51 L. T. 235; 48 J. P. 168.

Concurrent Rates.]—A rate may be made and levied, although there is another rate existing at the time, which was made on a former day for the same purpose, but is not wholly collected; but concurrently existing rates are illegal if made for the same period of time. Reg. v. Best, 2 B. C. Rep. 90; 2 New Sess. Cas. 655; 16 L. J., M. C. 102.

A concurrent rate, made for the same period as a former subsisting rate, is illegal. Reg. v. Fordham, 3 P. & D. 95; 11 A. & E. 73; 9 L. J., M. C. 3.

Special Bargain in lieu of Rate—Validity—Serjeants' Inn.]—Disputes having arisen between Serjeants' Inn and the parish of St. Dunstan as to whether or not the inn was part of that parish and liable to the parochial burthens there, it was agreed, under the sanction of a private act of William 4, that the inn should pay the parish 80*l.* a year, and that the parish should accept that sum as "a full satisfaction and discharge of all poor-rates from time to time due or claimed to be due in respect of the inn":—Held, that this special bargain was not repealed or affected by the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 107), s. 7, or the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 122), s. 27. or by any of the intermediate general acts for the regulation of parishes or the assessment or collection of poor-rates therein. Thorpe v. Adams, 40 L. J., M. C. 52; L. R. 6 C. P. 125; 23 L. T. 810; 19 W. R. 352.

Composition—Resolution Distinct from Assessment.]—When the local authority under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, had determined to convert a certain ditch into a sewer, and had under s. 22 assessed all premises then using the same for the purpose of sewage to certain annual payments, and had upon the same day passed a resolution enabling the parties liable to compound for such payments, which resolution was entered in the rate-book, and appended to the notice of assessment, from which also it was sworn to be distinct:—Held, that the resolution formed no part of the assessment, and that the assessment was not bad because it did not provide for the case of houses and premises thereafter using the sewers. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 4 W. R. 562.

Application to have Name inserted—To whom made.]—By a local act, the management of a parish and the relief of the poor were intrusted to trustees, but the vestry was to make the poor-rates, and a collector was to collect them. The overseers had nothing to do with making the rates or their application:—Held, that the overseersers were not the proper parties to whom a person who wished to have his name inserted on a poor-rate should make application for that purpose. Reg. v. Islington Overseers, 3 B. & S. 46; 32 L. J., M. C. 257; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 155; 8 L. T. 331; 11 W. R. 760.

"Rated," Meaning of.]—By a local act no person shall be qualified to be elected a commissioner under the act, unless at the time of his being elected he shall be rated in the rate made for the relief of the poor of a township. E.'s name was not in the last rate made previously to the declaration at the time it was allowed, but he came into occupation of premises after the rate was made, and his name was inserted, in the rate-book, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 12, before the day of election:—Held, that he was not rated within the meaning of the local act, and therefore was not qualified. Reg. v. Eddowes, 1 El. & El. 330; 28 L. J., Q. B. 84; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 469; 7 W. R. 63.

Authority to Rate—Construction of Statutes.]—Whenever it is sought to impose a rate, the burthen lies on those seeking to enforce it to shew that the words used by the legislature are clear and unambiguous in order to charge the subject. Ingram v. Drinkwater, 44 L. J., P. C. 83 ; 32 L. T. 746—P. C.

Acts in order to infringe upon the legal rights of the subject, and especially to impose a tax, must be expressed in language clear beyond all reasonable doubt. Shaw v. Ruddin, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 214. S. P., Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 35.

Notice of Meeting—Private Act—Trustees.]—An act enabling the building of a bridge, and making a rate on landowners for that purpose, enacted that certain persons by name, and all others deriving 100*l.* a year out of the lands liable to be affected, should be trustees ; and the trustees were to have notice by circular of all meetings ; but the interpretation clause said that trustees meant those acting by virtue of the act :—Held, that a person qualified to be a trustee, yet not having been named in the act, nor having acted by virtue of it, was not entitled to require notice. Kerr v. Wilkie, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 383 ; 1 L. T. 501 ; 8 W. R. 286—H. L.

Held, also, that where notice of a meeting had been properly given, there was no necessity for notice of its bonâ fide adjournment. Ib.

c. For what Purpose.

Retrospective Rate.]—It is a principle of rating, that the rate shall not be imposed to reimburse for past expenses, but the rule is subject to necessary exceptions. Reg. v. Read, 13 Q. B. 524 ; 4 New Sess. Cas. 7 ; 18 L. J., M. C. 164 ; 13 Jur. 789.

A rate cannot be made to repay money borrowed to repair and rebuild a workhouse. Rex v. Wavell, 1 Dougl. 116.

There is no rule of law which prohibits a retrospective rate. Harrison v. Stickney, 2 H. L. Cas. 108.

In every case of rating the question is, whether the act under which a rate is made, either expressly or impliedly, prohibits such rate from being retrospective. Ib.

Where a body of persons is by statute constituted trustees for certain public purposes, and powers are conferred on them to levy rates upon the district to a limited amount, they are authorised, if not expressly prohibited, to apply the rates of any year in the payment of debts properly incurred in a previous year in the execution of their trust. Secus, if their power of rating is unlimited in amount. Att.-Gen. v. Church, 2 Hem. & M. 697 ; 4 N. R. 89.

Bill in Parliament.]—A court of equity will not allow money raised for poor-rates, under a local act, to be applied in payment of the expenses of a bill in parliament promoted by the guardians, but rejected. Att.-Gen. v. Southampton, 17 Sim. 6 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 393 ; 13 Jur. 669.

The jurisdiction of the court is not taken away by the power given to the poor-law commissioners, by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, of remitting lawful disallowances. Ib.

Costs of Opposing Bill.]—A bill before parliament provided for the punctual payment of interest on the share capital of the undertaking, for which authority was sought by declaring that the overseers of the parish in which such undertaking was situated should when required so to do raise as part of the poor-rate money for the payment of such interest. The overseers opposed the bill, which was rejected by a committee of the house of lords. On an application for a writ of certiorari to bring up and quash the certificate of the district auditor allowing the taxed costs of such opposition :—Held, that the overseers were entitled to charge the costs of the opposition on the poor-rate. Reg. v. White or Sibley, Ex parte, 54 L. J., M. C. 128 ; 14 Q. B. D. 358 ; 52 L. T. 116 ; 33 W. R. 248 ; 49 J. P. 294—C. A.

Borrowing Powers—Rate made to Pay Interest.]—Where trustees under a local act were authorised to borrow, by annuity, or at common interest, a sum not exceeding 30,000*l.* for the purpose of building a chapel, and the moneys so borrowed, and the interest, were to be made payable out of the burial fees, and out of the rates and assessments to be made in pursuance of the act ; and the trustees, in fact, borrowed 32,636*l.*, and made a rate to pay the interest of that sum :—Held, that the trustees had exceeded their power, as the act only empowered them to borrow a specific sum, and as the rate was made to pay the interest due upon the whole sum borrowed, it was bad in toto, although the defect did not appear on the face of it. Richter v. Hughes, 3 D. & R. 788 ; 2 B. & C. 499 ; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 61 ; 26 R. R. 424.

It is in the power of the vestry to borrow on the security of any particular rate ; but they cannot pledge any other rate as a security, that is, they cannot borrow in aid of one rate on the security of another. Att.-Gen. v. Daniel, 9 L. J., Ch. 394 ; 4 Jur. 790.

A vestry have no power to apply the produce of one class of rates to objects for which they are empowered to raise another class of rates ; and they have no power to make good the deficiencies of any one of the rates out of the produce of the other rates. Ib.

Repayment of Money Borrowed.]—By an act of parliament, commissioners were appointed, who were to expend money in improving a town ; they were authorised to levy rates on the town and to borrow money on the security of the rates, giving bonds for the money so borrowed, of which 100*l.* at the least should be chosen by lot, and paid off every year. Interest on the bonds had been duly paid, and except in two years, 100*l.* had been paid off every year, but above 15,000*l.* remained on the security of the bonds :—Held, that holders of bonds to the amount of 800*l.* were not entitled to immediate payment out of the rates or to a receiver of the rates. Preston v. Great Yarmouth Corporation, 41 L. J., Ch. 310 ; 26 L. T. 235. Affirmed, 41 L. J., Ch. 760 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 655 ; 27 L. T. 87 ; 20 W. R. 875.

Commissioners were authorised by act of parliament to raise money for parish purposes, and to secure it by debenture or assignment of the rates. They gave a debenture for 1,000*l.* to A., who was treasurer, and also a commissioner. A. advanced nothing at the time, but he subsequently advanced the amount, and from that time only he received interest. By subsequent receipts of rates the balance was turned, and A. had funds in hand :—Held, that the transaction was not invalid, and that A. was entitled to charge full interest on his debenture until he had been formally paid off. Fletcher v. Gibbon, 23 Beav. 212.

—— By Order of Court of Chancery.]—Creditors who had advanced money to corporation established for maintenance of poor of a certain district:—Held, entitled to compel assessment of rates sufficient, after maintenance of poor, to pay principal and interest of their debts. Jones v. Montgomery (Parishes of), 3 Swan. 203.

An order of vestry is made for building a workhouse in a parish, and that in case any one will lay down the money, the parish shall repay; equity will decree a parish rate to be made to reimburse the party who lays down this money. Blackbourne v. Webster, 2 P. Wms. 632.

Amount Limited.] — Where commissioners with power to raise money resolved that it was necessary to raise a sum not exceeding 1,300*l.*:—Held, that the fair import of the resolution was, that such was the smallest sum necessary, and that it was sufficiently certain. Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 106.

Where the commissioners made at the same time two rates, one for the poor and the other for the highways, and it appeared that the first, if the whole had been collected, would have exceeded the sum required, held good, as the act did not require separate rates for the poor and the highways, and the entire sum directed to be raised would not exceed the sum required:—Held, also, good, because it was impossible ever to collect the whole of the rate, and the sum actually collected was less than that required. Ib.

By a local act a town council was empowered, for certain purposes therein specified, to make rates, "provided that the amount to be levied for all and any of the purposes shall not in any year exceed 1*d.* in the pound upon the rateable value of the property within the borough liable to such rate":—Held, that such deficiencies as might arise in levying the rate, by reason of insolvency of occupiers and other causes, were not to be cast upon the general body of ratepayers, by charging them in excess of the rate of 1*d.* in the pound. Brown, Ex parte, Liverpool Corporation, In re, 31 L. J., M. C. 108; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 642; 6 L. T. 241.

By a local act for improvement of a town, commissioners were invested with all the powers, provisions and authorities, and were to be in the receipt and possession of all compositions, rates, &c., granted by 13 Geo. 3, c. 78; and the surveyors to be appointed by the commissioners were to have the same powers of demanding, collecting and recovering payment of such compositions, &c., as under that act. The surveyors of the highways within the ambit of the act were, on a day to be appointed by the commissioners, to produce to them their accounts, and to pay over all balances in their hands to the treasurer of the commissioners, and thenceforward their office was to be determined. The commissioners were empowered, in order to raise money for carrying the purposes of the act into execution, to lay one or more rates once in every year, or oftener, if necessary, on all houses, shops, &c., within the town, so as such rates should not exceed 8*d.* in the pound in a year on their yearly value. By a subsequent act, reciting that the commissioners had borrowed considerable sums of money on the rates, and that they were inadequate to the purposes of the act, the power of rating houses, shops, &c., was extended from 8*d.* to 1*s.* in the pound in the year:—Held, that the commissioners had no power, in case the rates so levied proved insufficient for the purpose of the act, to levy a subsidiary rate by application to be made to the justices by the surveyor under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 45. Higgins v. Green, 10 M. & W. 703; 12 L. J., M. C. 27.

Damages Recovered against Parish Officers—Local Act.] — Parish officers having received information that a person was a pauper lunatic, likely to do mischief, caused an order to be left with A. B., who lived at his house, and appeared to have the care of him, for his removal to the workhouse. A. B. soon afterwards, assisted by other persons, took him forcibly to the workhouse in a strait waistcoat. He remained in the workhouse about a week, at the expiration of which he was brought before a magistrate and discharged. He then brought an action for an assault and false imprisonment, and an action of trespass against the parish officers, and in one of them recovered 400*l.* damages, which, upon a motion for a new trial, was reduced by consent to 200*l.*, no new trial being granted. The other action was not tried. The trustees of the parish having, under a local act, authority to manage the parish accounts, and to superintend the treatment of the poor, charged the damages and costs incurred in these actions against the poor-rates of the parish. The rates so charged were subsequently allowed in open vestry, and the charges paid out of them. Upon an information filed against the trustees for the purpose of compelling them personally to refund the money so paid as for a breach of trust, the court dismissed the information, being satisfied, upon the evidence before it, without regard to the proceedings at law, that the parish officers had not participated in the forcible removal of the lunatic, and had in other respects acted reasonably, though perhaps not strictly according to law, in the discharge of their duty: consequently, that they were entitled to be allowed the payment so made, either under the 26th section of the local act, which provided that all costs and expenses to be incurred by the trustees or any persons employed by them in prosecuting or defending any action touching the execution of the act should be defrayed out of the money arising by virtue of the act, or the general law applicable to overseers and their accounts. Att.-Gen. v. Pearson, 2 Colly. 581; 10 Jur. 651.

Paving — District Rate — Local Act.]—By a local act of Geo. 3, commissioners were appointed for paving the footways and cleansing, lighting and watching the streets in the town of Monmouth, and were authorised once in every year to rate and assess any sum not exceeding 1*s.* in the pound upon or in respect of all houses, &c., ... being within the limits of the town of Monmouth, and the persons paying such rates were exempted from all charges and expenses of paving, lighting, watching, cleansing or fencing off any part or parts of the footways and cross-paths of the town and borough. By the Public Health Act, 1872, the borough of Monmouth (within which was the town of Monmouth) was created an urban sanitary district, and the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of the borough, acting by the town council, were the urban sanitary authority for such district. By s. 16, all expenses incurred or payable by an urban sanitary authority under the sanitary act shall . . . . be defrayed . . . . in the case of the council of a borough out of the borough fund or borough rate. By the Sanitary Law Amendment Act, 1874, all the powers and duties of the commissioners under the Local Paving Act relating to any objects or purposes of the sanitary acts were transferred to the council. By the Public Health Act, 1874, s. 144, every urban authority shall, within their district, exclusively of any other person, execute the office of and be surveyor of highways, and have, exercise and be subject to all the powers, authorities, duties and liabilities of surveyors of highways. By s. 207, all expenses incurred or payable by any urban authority in the execution of this act, and not otherwise provided for, shall be charged on and defrayed out of the district fund and general district rate leviable by them under this act. The town council, as the urban sanitary authority for the borough of Monmouth, made a general borough rate to meet expenditure, which included the paving, lighting and cleansing of the town. A ratepayer, who occupied a house within the borough, but outside the town of Monmouth, appealed on the ground that the rate was made in part for raising money towards defraying the expenses of carrying the Monmouth Paving Act into execution:—Held, that the rate was invalid. Monmouth Corporation v. Monmouth Overseers, 38 L. T. 612.

d. Allowance and Publication.

Necessity of.]—A rate is not a complete and valid rate until allowance and publication. Bushell v. Luckett, 2 C. B. 111.

Allowance by Justices—Jurisdiction.]—The allowance of a poor-rate by the justices is purely a ministerial act; and if the rate is good on the face of it, they cannot inquire into its validity. Reg. v. Godolphin (Lord), 1 D. & L. 830; 1 New Sess. Cas. 1; 13 L. J., M. C. 57; 8 Jur. 574. S. P., Reg. v. Yarborough (Earl), 12 A. & E. 416; 3 P. & D. 491; 9 L. J., M. C. 62.

Where a poor-rate had been made by the overseers of a parish alone, there being also two churchwardens who had not been sworn in, and the justices had refused to allow it, as not being made by the majority of the parish officers, a mandamus to the justices to sign and allow the rate was granted. Ib.

A mandamus to justices to allow a poor-rate is absolute in the first instance. Ib.

A poor-rate which has not been allowed by two justices is a nullity, although there has been no appeal against the rate. Fox v. Davies, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 97; 6 C. B. 11; 18 L. J., C. P. 48.

In allowing a rate two justices may act separately. Rex v. Hamstall Ridware, 3 Term Rep. 380. And see Wootton v. Harvey, 6 East, 75.

—— Notice of.]—The notice of allowance need not be signed, and therefore a notice signed only by an overseer and an assistant overseer is good. Burnley v. Methley Overseers, 1 El. & El. 789; 28 L. J., M. C. 152; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 914; 7 W. R. 422.

Publication—Notice of.]—Notice of a publication of a poor-rate need not state that the rate has been allowed. Paynter v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 908; 16 L. J., M. C. 136; 11 Jur. 973—Ex. Ch.

In Church—Next Sunday.]—If a poor-rate was not published in the church on the Sunday next after it was allowed under 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1, it was a nullity. Rex v. Newcomb, 4 Term Rep. 368; 2 R. R. 414.

Notice of the allowance of a rate affixed, the next Sunday after allowance, to the door of the only church of the parish, previously to the commencement of the usual afternoon service, and after the conclusion of the usual morning service, is a sufficient publication. Burnley v. Methley Overseers, 1 El. & El. 789; 28 L. J., M. C. 152; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 914; 7 W. R. 422.

—— On what Doors and Buildings.]—It is not necessary to publish a poor-rate on all the doors of any church or chapel, nor on the door of a church or a chapel in which divine service has ceased to be performed, nor on the door of any building, not being a church or chapel, in which divine service is performed. Ormerod v. Chadwick, 16 M. & W. 367; 2 New Sess. Cas. 697; 16 L. J., M. C. 143.

It is a sufficient publication, if a copy of it is affixed before divine service on the Sunday next after its allowance, on the principal or most usual door of all the churches or chapels of the Established Church within the parish in which divine service is performed. Ib.

In the same place a room was hired for a school-house, in which divine service was regularly celebrated on Sundays, according to the rites of the Church of England:—Held, that it was not necessary to affix any notice on the door of the school. Ib.

It is sufficient if the notice is affixed to the principal door of the church. Ib.

—— Where District has its own Church.]—Where a rate is made for a district within a parish, which district has its own church, and maintains its own poor; the rate is sufficiently published, if notice of it is affixed on the door of such church, although there are chapelries within the parish, having their own respective chapels, all which belong to some vicarage, with the church. Reg. v. Marriott, 12 A. & E. 779; 4 P. & D. 440.

The notice need not be affixed at such chapels; nor at the church of a neighbouring parish in the same town, though the churches nearly adjoin each other, belong to the same vicarage, and are used indiscriminately by the same persons, the one being sometimes frequented by the congregation of the other while that is closed; and although many persons have rateable property in both parishes. Ib.

—— Where more than one Established Church.]—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, for lighting and watching parishes, the overseers are required to proceed in the same manner for the purpose of collecting, raising and levying the rate under that act as for levying money for the relief of the poor. A lighting and watching rate was made for the township of Clitheroe, and written notice of it was affixed to the door of the church of St. Michael, in the township, which was stated to be the only place where rates had theretofore been published. At the time of the publication of the rate, there were two other churches of the Established Church in the township of Clitheroe, on the doors of which no notice of rate was affixed:—Held, that the publication of the rate was insufficient. Reg. v. Whipp, 4 Q. B. 141; 3 G. & D. 372; 12 L. J., M. C. 64; 7 Jur. 194.

—— Where no Church or Chapel.]—By 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1, public notice of every rate for the relief of the poor shall be given in the parish church the next Sunday after the allowance of the rate by the justices, "and no rate shall be esteemed or reputed valid and sufficient so as to collect or raise the same unless such notice shall have been given"; and by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45, a written notice, to be affixed on the doors of all the churches or chapels in the parish, is substituted for any notice theretofore by any law or statute given in churches or chapels. By 20 Vict. c. 19, s. 1, every extra-parochial place wherein no rate is levied for the relief of the poor shall for all purposes of assessment to the poor-rate and the relief of the poor "be deemed a parish." The overseers of a parish which, before the passing of 20 Vict. c. 19, was an extra-parochial place, made a rate for the relief of the poor, but did not publish any notice of the rate within the parish, in which there was no church or chapel:—Held, that the rate could not be collected. Reg. v. Dyott, 51 L. J., M. C. 104; 9 Q. B. D. 47; 30 W. R. 799; 47 J. P. 54. But see now 45 & 46 Vict. c. 20, s. 4.

e. In what Parishes and Places.

Parish, what is.]—By 20 Vict. c. 19, s. 1, after the 31st December, 1857, every place entered separately in the report of the registrar-general on the last census, which now is, or is reputed to be, extra-parochial, and wherein no rate is levied for the relief of the poor, shall, for all the purposes of the assessment to the poor-rate, be deemed a parish. In the report, "Thornbury with Netherwood" was entered as one place, with the following note: "Netherwood, deemed extra-parochial, maintains its own poor, but pays church rate to Thornbury parish":—Held, that Netherwood was not a "place entered separately," and therefore was not to be deemed a parish for the purpose of the poor-rate. Reg. v. Mytton, 2 El. & El. 557; 29 L. J., M. C. 109; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 341; 2 L. T. 12; 8 W. R. 275.

Pier below Low Water-mark.] — See post, PIERS AND HARBOURS, col. 1647.

Accuracy of Locality.]—W. appealed against a poor-rate by which he was rated in the parish of H., as occupier of land to an amount named and of a value named. The sessions affirmed the rate, subject to a case which stated that W. did occupy that quantity of land in H., and that it was of the value stated; but that he also occupied land in the adjacent parish of C.; and that it was not known which portion of the land was in H., and which in C., though the quantity occupied in each was known, and the value was rightly assessed whichever portion was in H.:—Held, that the rate should stand, the sessions not being bound to determine the particular portion which was within H. Reg. v. Woods, El. Bl. & El. 481; 27 L. J., M. C. 289; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1233; 6 W. R. 595.

Usage — Extra-parochial Place.] — When a parish has for several hundred years acquiesced in the notion that a particular place is extra-parochial, a very strong case should be made out before a jury can be called upon to find that such place is within the parish. King v. Butterworth, 2 Car. & P. 391.

—— Two Parishes treated as One.]—The parish of M. has for all secular purposes since 43 Eliz. been treated as one parish. In fact, it consists of two distinct rectories and advowsons, and for all ecclesiastical purposes it constitutes two distinct parishes:—Held, that a rate for the relief of the poor of M., treating it as one parish, is good, such long usage being conclusive as to M. being before and at the passing of 43 Eliz. one parish by reputation. Reg. v. Mablethorpe, 2 W. R. 533.

The hamlet of T. had for a hundred years past, and for anything that appeared to the contrary before that time, been rated to the poor and highway rates of the adjacent township of H., which maintained its own poor and highways separately, and together with another township formed the parish of H. On the other hand, the lands in T., from the earliest period, were titheable to the adjacent parish of K., as being situate in that parish, and the occupiers were rated to and paid church rates in that parish, and also Easter and other ecclesiastical dues, and never paid tithes, &c., to H.:—Held, that there was no ground for disturbing the long-established usage of rating T. to the poor-rates of H., as it was impossible to say that this usage could not have had a legal origin from the tithes having been severed from T. and conferred upon the parish of K., while T. itself was associated with H. as one township for rating purposes according to 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12. Reg. v. Watson, 9 B. & S. 219; 37 L. J., M. C. 153; 18 L. T. 556; 16 W. R. 977.

Allotments under Inclosure Act.]—An inclosure act gave power to the commissioners to award in what townships the allotments should be assessed to the rates and taxes. They awarded that certain allotments, which before were within the district of H., were within the township of C.:—Held, that they did not thereby become ratable in C. Fenton v. Boyle, 1 Taunt. 344. And see S. C., 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 399.

On the inclosure of a waste in the parish of A., on which the landowners of B. had a right of common appurtenant, the allotments given in lieu of that right shall be assessed in the parish of A. Kempe v. Spence, 2 W. Bl. 1244.

Subdivision of Parish.]—The inhabitants of a part of a parish entered in 1714 into an agreement with the rest of the parish to maintain their own poor, and ever afterwards did so, and from that time the part was treated as distinct from the parish. In 1753 separate overseers were appointed, and from that time the part by a distinct name appealed and resisted appeals against orders of removal, and made and received such orders, and among them orders to and from the parish of which it had been a part. In 1775 and afterwards poor-rates were made and allowed, and in 1800 a constable was appointed:—Held, that these facts did not shew a legal separation from the original parish so as to entitle the part to obtain a rate in aid upon another, not the original parish. Rex v. East Church (Inhabitants), 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 76.

In Aid of different Parish.]—An order of justices for assessing contribution to the poor-rates, in aid of a parish situate in a liberty, upon a place also within the same, is warranted by 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 3, when that is a division of country equivalent to a hundred. Rex v. Milland, 1 Burr. 576; 2 Ld. Ken. 267.

An order for taxing one parish in aid of another, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 3, is valid. Rex v. St. Helen, Worcester, 2 East, 417.

—— Jurisdiction.]—County justices cannot rate a parish within their jurisdiction in aid of another parish, lying within a borough, which has an exclusive jurisdiction. Rex v. Holbeche, 4 Term Rep. 778.

f. Form.

The words "of no force," &c., in 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 2, apply solely to default in signing the declaration, and where default in following the form given in the columns has not been made a ground of appeal by the statute, the sessions have no power to quash a rate for such default. Reg. v. Fordham, 3 P. & D. 95; 11 A. & E. 73; 9 L. J., M. C. 3; 4 Jur. 218.

The poor law commissioners have no power to require compliance with a schedule varying from or more full than that in the statute. Ib.

A poor-rate is not invalid because the declaration at its foot is not in the very words of the form given by the schedule to the statute. Paynter v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 908; 16 L. J., M. C. 136; 11 Jur. 973—Ex. Ch.

A rate, without giving a specification of the property, for which each individual is rated, is bad. Rex v. Aire and Calder Navigation, 4 D. & R. 253; 2 B. & C. 713; 26 R. R. 535.

The amount to be inserted in the column headed "rateable value," of the valuation under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, is the true rateable value of the property, independently of whether such property is subject to the provisions of the Small Tenements Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, or not. Sunderland-near-Sea Overseers v. Sunderland Union, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 531; 34 L. J., M. C. 121; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 688; 13 L. T. 239; 13 W. R. 943.

A rate made in fact for the relief of the poor, but which does not shew by intrinsic evidence, either by the heading or by something in the body of the rate, for what purpose it is made, is void, and the court discharged a rule in lieu of a mandamus to order justices to issue their distress warrant to levy such a rate. Reg. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 5 El. & Bl. 974; 25 L. J., M. C. 49; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 161; 4 W. R. 261.

Rule calling upon justices to issue their warrant against the goods of a railway company for the amount assessed upon them for the relief of the poor, by two rates. It appeared that one was headed, "Parish of M., May 24, 1855"; the other was properly headed, but the property rated was described as "land, &c.":—Held, that the first rate was void independently of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, but the second was irregular only. Ib.

g. On Whom made.

Resident Inhabitants.]—"Inhabitant or other," in 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, means resident inhabitant or other inhabitants. Rex v. North Curry, 7 D. & R. 424; 4 B. & C. 953; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 65.

—— Partners.]—Only one of several partners resided in a parish:—Held, that he must be rated in respect of his share only of the partnership property. Rex v. Gosse, 7 B. & C. 236; 9 D. & R. 759; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 97.

A poor-rate in which the overseers omit a class of inhabitants on account of poverty is not void. Reg. v. Check, 11 Jur. 86.

When Nature of Rate Limited.]—Under a local act improvement commissioners were appointed, with power to make rates. It enacted, "that no person shall be rated in pursuance of this act on account of any arable, meadow, or pasture land exceeding two acres . . . or the farmhouses, and buildings used exclusively for farming purposes." The commissioners became an urban sanitary authority under the Sanitary Act, 1873. By s. 43 of that act, any limit imposed on, or in respect of any rate, by any local act of parliament, shall not apply to any rate required to be levied for the purpose of defraying any expenses incurred by a sanitary authority for sanitary purposes:—Held, that the word "limit" did not apply to the exemption in the local act, so as to authorise the commissioners to impose a rate for expenses incurred for sanitary purposes, on a person on account of land exceeding two acres. Walton Improvement Commissioners v. Walford, 44 L. J., Q. B. 74; L. R. 10 Q. B. 180; 31 L. T. 825; 23 W. R. 292.

By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 159, where it appears to any vestry or district board that all or any part of the expenses for defraying which any sum is by such vestry or board ordered to be levied, have or has not been incurred for the equal benefit of the whole of their parish or district, such vestry or board may by any such order direct the sum or sums necessary for defraying such expenses or any part thereof to be levied in such part, or exempt any part of such parish or district from the levy, or require a less rate to be levied thereon, as the circumstances of the case may require:—Held, that a precept which required the rate to be levied as regards such parts of the parish as consisted of land used as arable, meadow, or pasture land only, or as woodland, orchard, market garden, hop, herb, flower, fruit, or nursery ground in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the nett annual value of such land, was good, although the classes of land so mentioned in the precept did not lie together or form any particular division marked out by metes and bounds, but were scattered through the parish. Reg. v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 48 L. J., M. C. 116; 4 Q. B. D. 389; 40 L. T. 716; 27 W. R. 783. Affirmed, 49 L. J., M. C. 32; 5 Q. B. D. 89; 41 L. T. 577; 28 W. R. 288—C. A.

B. PERSONS AND PROPERTY LIABLE.

1. Owners and Occupiers in General.

a. Liability.

Of Occupier.]—The poor-rate is not a tax upon the land, but a personal charge in respect of the land. Rowls v. Gells, Cowp. 452; 1 Dougl. 304.

And the occupier is rateable by whatever tenure he holds. Bute (Lord) v. Grindall, 1 Term Rep. 343; 2 H. Bl. 265; 1 R. R. 220. S. P., Rex v. Bell, 7 Term Rep. 598.

Occupation by Servants or Agents.]—The residence in a lighthouse by a servant of the owner, at an annual salary to take care of the light, is the occupation of the master, who alone can be rated in respect of such occupation of the lighthouse. Rex v. Tynemouth, 12 East, 46; 11 R. R. 328.

The mere fact of an employer's paying the rent and taxes of his clerk, does not make the occupation of his clerk the occupation of his master; if the clerk is responsible to the landlord, he is, except under special circumstances, the occupier, and as such, liable to be rated. Reg. v. Lynn, 3 N. & P. 411; 8 A. & E. 370; 1 W. W. & H. 366; 7 L. J., M. C., 85; 2 Jur. 541.

S. was a collier, and resided in a house belonging to his employers, for which he paid no rent; he was not entitled to any notice to quit, and the occupation of the house would cease at the time when his service ceased. His employers had several houses, and they filled these up with their workmen in their discretion, giving preference to married men. A workman could not go into a house without the owner's concurrence. Some of the workmen were single men, and no house was given to them; these got the same wages as all other workmen, but no allowance for rent. If there were not sufficient houses an allowance was made to the married men to assist them in paying their rent. If a house was vacant the owners would call upon a married man to go into it: if he did not go his allowance would cease. It was not absolutely necessary for a workman to live in one of the houses to perform his work. The employers of S. did not compound for their rates under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, but paid upon the full amount, and were rated to the poor as occupiers of the houses. The overseers of the township in which S.'s house was situate were summoned before justices for that they had negligently omitted to enter the name of S. in the occupier's column of the rate-book, contrary to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 19:—Held, first, that the occupation by S. was not that of a servant, but that of a tenant. Smith v. Seghill Overseers, 44 L. J., M. C. 114; L. R. 10 Q. B. 422; 32 L. T. 859; 23 W. R. 745.

Held, secondly, that 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 19, was not confined to the cases mentioned in ss. 3 and 4, but was of general application, and that S. was entitled to have his name entered in the occupier's column of the rate-book. Ib.

One who went from home with his family for nearly a year, but left his assistant to carry on his business in his shop in one room of the house, which for this purpose was parted off by laths from the rest, and left the key of the house door with a friend, and had the garden cultivated for his own benefit as usual:—Held, that he was liable to be rated as occupier of the whole house. Rex v. Aberystwith, 10 East, 354.

—— Caretaker.]—Y. had been put into a dwelling-house, No. 157, Plymouth Grove, in the township of Chorlton, by his own master, who was one of the joint owners of the house, and in whose employment Y. had been for some time previously. At the time the dwelling-house was empty, and Y. was put into it with his wife and children, for the purpose of taking care of it while it was so empty. Y. was not otherwise in the employment of the said owners, and, except the benefit of living rent free with his wife and children in two rooms of the said dwelling-house, he received no remuneration for his services in taking care of the same. A. had been for some years previously in the employment of the joint owners of the dwelling-house, No. 163, Plymouth Grove. His duties were to look after and attend to any houses in the neighbourhood of Plymouth Grove belonging to the said owners, which might from time to time be vacant, to prevent trespass being committed thereon, to look after the gardens, and to show unlet houses to persons coming to see the same. The dwelling-house, No. 163, Plymouth Grove, being vacant, A. with his wife and children was put into it by the owners, as caretaker, performing the same duties to the owners as before. A. was liable and ready to leave the said house at the command of the owners at any time. Under these circumstances Y. and A. were assessed by the rating authority to the relief of the poor as occupiers of the said houses respectively. Upon appeal to the general quarter sessions of the peace for the city of Manchester, the recorder allowed the appeal, but stated two cases for the opinion of the court:—Held, that Y. and A. were not liable to be rated for the relief of the poor in respect of the said premises, on the ground that the occupation in each case was that of a servant and not that of a tenant. Yates or Almond v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Union, 48 L. T. 872; 47 J. P. 630.

H. was owner of a house of seventeen rooms and premises usually of 83*l.* rateable value, but the house being advertised to be let for two years, he put into it G., as a caretaker, giving him 2*s.* 6*d.* per week, and the rooms, which G. and his family occupied rent free. G. was to show the house and was bound to leave at a week's notice:—Held, that H. was the occupier of the house by means of G. as servant, and was properly rated to the poor as such occupier. Hicks v. Dunstable Overseers, 48 J. P. 326.

—— Partial Use of Premises by Owner.]—A house belonging to the respondent was in charge of a caretaker and his wife. The respondent had some furniture in the house, wine in the cellar, and some sacks in the stable, and the garden was cultivated by his gardener, but he himself never slept in the house or had eaten food in it:—Held, that he was in rateable occupation of the premises. Bursledon Overseers v. Clarke, 61 J. P. 261.

Owner of Vacant Land—Legal Possession.]—The appellant purchased, in 1885, a plot of building land, with the intention of building thereon; but the land was never inclosed, cultivated, used, or let by the appellant. A bill stating that the land was "to let" was affixed to a tree growing on it. The cattle of a neighbour, without the knowledge or permission of the appellant, were in the habit of straying on to the land and eating the grass. The appellant, who had been rated in respect of the plot of land, objected that he could not be so rated, as he was not the occupier. The respondents contended that he was not only the owner of the plot, but also the constructive occupier, so as to render him liable to be rated:—Held, that the appellant was not the occupier within the meaning of 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, and was therefore not liable to be assessed to the poor-rate in respect of the plot of land. Smith v. New Forest Union, 60 L. T. 927; 53 J. P. 661. Affirmed, 61 L. T. 870; 54 J. P. 324—C. A.

Quære, whether the owner of a farm composed partly of grass land, who, upon the determination of a lease, takes possession of the farm by a servant, who occupies it for the purposes of protection, but without dealing with the land, is liable to be rated to the poor as a party beneficially occupying. Rex v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 3 N. & M. 68.

Occupier going out before Rate wholly discharged, and leaving Premises unoccupied.]—An occupier assessed in a poor-rate, but who ceases to occupy before the rate has been wholly discharged, is not relieved by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 16, from liability to pay the whole rate, unless some one succeeds or comes into the occupation who is liable to pay a proportionate part of such rate; and semble, that such occupier remains liable to the whole rate until the name of some one liable to be assessed is substituted for his in the rate-book. The Metropolitan Board of Works purchased Putney Bridge of the Fulham Bridge Company, who transferred the bridge to the board under the provisions of an act of parliament, which required the tolls in respect to the bridge to cease, and enacted that the bridge should be open free to the public, and should be maintained by the board, the justices of Surrey paying an annual sum to the board in discharge of the liability of that county to maintain the bridge. Before the transfer the Fulham Bridge Company received tolls for the passage over the bridge, and were duly assessed to the poor-rate in the parish of Putney in respect of the bridge, and at the time of the transfer there remained undischarged a rate for which the bridge company had been so assessed, and which had been made by that parish for a period extending beyond the transfer:—Held, that the board had no beneficial occupation of the bridge in respect of which they were capable of being rated, and that, therefore, as there was no succeeding occupier liable to be rated, the bridge company remained liable for the whole rate. Hare v. Putney Overseers, 50 L. J., M. C. 81; 7 Q. B. D. 223; 45 L. T. 337; 29 W. R. 721; 46 J. P. 100—C. A.

The 16th section of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, relieving the occupier who was in occupation at the time of making the rate, but who has gone out before it was wholly paid, from the rate, except in proportion to the time he has occupied, applies only to the case where there is an incoming occupier, and not where the premises are left unoccupied. St. Werburgh, Derby, Overseers v. Hutchinson, 49 L. J., M. C. 23; 5 Ex. D. 19; 42 L. T. 153; 28 W. R. 153.

P. was the owner of grass lands, and his tenant quitted on 11th October, 1881. A rate was made on the 25th October, 1881, stating the previous tenant as still occupier. Another rate was made on 25th April, 1882, stating the occupier blank. On 7th July, the land still being unlet, P. entered and cut the grass and stacked the hay, and offered to pay the rate as from 7th July, but the overseers insisted on both rates being paid entire from 11th October, 1881, and entered P.'s name as occupier from that date. The justices found that P. occupied all the time, and issued a distress warrant:—Held, that the occupation commenced from 7th July only, and that the overseers had no power retrospectively to enter P. as occupier before that date. Pembroke v. Wye Overseers, 47 J. P. 359.

Unoccupied Buildings.]—The defendant, who was owner of certain premises (farms, farm-houses, and outhouses), having evicted the tenants, occupied the land himself, but the buildings remained unoccupied. In the valuation lists a bulk valuation was put upon the lands and buildings comprised in each farm, and the guardians assessed the defendant for each farm as a rateable tenement as "house, offices and lands." The defendant did not appeal against the assessment:—Held, that the defendant was not liable for the portion of the rate attributable to the buildings. New Ross Union v. Byrne, 30 L. R., Ir. 160.

Disused Mill.] — A cotton mill, owing to depression in the cotton trade, was no longer worked, but was maintained at some expense as a factory, with its machinery in a fit state for working when the trade should revive:—Held, that the occupiers were rateable for the mill. Staley v. Castleton Overseers, 5 B. & S. 505; 33 L. J., M. C. 178; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1147; 10 L. T. 606; 12 W. R. 911.

In March, 1863, the owner of a silk mill gave up his business, with the intention of never resuming it, and the mill had not since been worked, but, with the machinery and other articles and things in it, had been advertised for sale. All the contents of the mill were essential articles and things for a tenant to have in working it for the manufacture of silk. The machinery, some of which was affixed to the floors and ceilings, was in the nature of tenants' fixtures. A man occasionally went to the mill in order to protect the property against trespass or depredation:—Held, that the owner of the mill was rateable for the mill. Harter v. Salford Overseers, 6 B. & S. 591; 34 L. J., M. C. 206; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1036; 13 W. R. 861.

M., the lessee of a corn mill, evicted, for non-payment of rent, her sub-tenants, who had been in occupation of the premises, and who had rebuilt the mill and provided new machinery for it. M. was in possession at the time when a rate was struck by the plaintiffs. M. had put a caretaker in charge, who kept the machinery in order, and the premises were advertised to be let by her as a going concern. M. had not used the premises as a mill at any time:—Held, that the court was not bound to hold as matter of law that M. was in immediate use and occupation so as to be liable as rateable occupier. Midleton Union v. M'Donnell, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 228.

Unoccupied House.]—By 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 12, where any person shall come into or occupy any house, out of which any other person assessed to any poor-rate shall be removed, or which, at the time of making the rate, was empty or unoccupied, every person so removing from, and every person so coming into or occupying the same shall be liable to pay such rate, in proportion to the time that such person occupied the same respectively. A poor-rate for eleven months having been made on the appellant on the 25th of October, 1866, in respect of a house which he was then occupying, he went out of occupation on the 8th of November following; the house remained unoccupied till the 10th of May, 1867, when a new tenant entered:—Held, that the appellant was liable to pay to the rate for the time the house remained unoccupied, as well as for the fourteen days during which he occupied it. Edwards v. Rusholme Overseers, 38 L. J., M. C. 153; L. R. 4 Q. B. 554; 17 W. R. 821.

Houses newly erected, and not yet occupied, are rateable hereditaments within the Union Assessment Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 103), and ought to be inserted in the valuation lists. Reg. v. Malden Overseers, 10 B. & S. 323; 38 L. J., M. C. 125; L. R. 4 Q. B. 326.

A local act of parliament gave a corporation power to levy rates "on the occupiers of all such kinds of property as by the laws in force for the time being are assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor":—Held, that the owners of unoccupied and unfurnished premises were not liable. Sligo Corporation v. Wynne, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 465.

Furnished House.]—The owner of a house in Dublin furnished it suitably for letting. The house so furnished was occasionally let; but during certain intervals of time remained unlet and unoccupied, except by the furniture which remained in it:—Held, that he was liable to rates in respect of the premises, both while the house was let and while it was so unlet. Staunton v. Powell, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 182; 15 W. R. 362—Ex. Ch.

Occupation by Poor Tenant—Landlord's Liability.]—A landlord cannot be rated in respect of houses let to tenants who have been excused their rates on account of poverty. Rex v. Hull Dock Co., 5 D. & R. 359; 3 B. & C. 516.

Occupation by Liquidator.]—A poor-rate was made upon premises which had been occupied by a joint-stock company, then being wound up by order of the court, and whilst the official liquidator was carrying on the company's business on the premises. In the rate-book the name of the company appeared, and also the name of the liquidator, with the description of "official liquidator." Upon nonpayment of the rate, application was made to a magistrate for a distress warrant upon the liquidator's goods and chattels, but was refused:—Held, upon a rule to compel the magistrate to issue the warrant, that whether or not the liquidator was in form rated as the occupier of the premises, he was not such an occupier as to be liable for the rate in respect of his personal goods and chattels, and that the court would not compel the magistrate to issue his warrant. Reg. v. Curzon, 46 L. T. 159; 30 W. R. 521; 47 J. P. 37.

Occupation on Default under Agreement.]—An agreement was entered into between the owners of certain limestone quarries and a canal company, whereby the former covenanted to deliver to the latter, yearly, for ever, as much limestone as they should require, in a merchantable state, paying 7*d.* per ton, with a stipulation that if the owners neglected to supply the stone required the company should themselves be at liberty to enter upon the quarries and work them, paying 2*d.* per ton to the owners; and the latter having made default, the company entered upon and worked the quarries on the terms stipulated:—Held, that they were not rateable occupiers of land. Rex v. Trent Navigation Co., 6 D. & R. 47; 4 B. & C. 57; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 140; 28 R. R. 212.

Occupation of Part of a House—Owner.]—If the owner of a house occupies part of it, he is liable to be rated for the whole, unless there is a distinct occupation of the rest by some other person. Rex v. St. Mary-the-Less, Durham, 4 Term Rep. 477; 16 R. R. 811.

—— Structural Severance.]—A house not structurally severed was let partly to one tenant and partly to another, and each had the exclusive occupation of the part let to him. There was a staircase leading from the front door to the upper rooms, and a joint user of the front garden and the back yard, in which was a closet. The tenants were jointly assessed in respect of the whole house, and rated as joint occupiers. The rate was confirmed by the respondents. On a case stated by quarter sessions:—Held, that the tenants could not be rated as joint occupiers, but that each was the occupier of a separate tenement capable of being rated, and each should be rated separately. Allchurch v. Hendon Union, 61 L. J., M. C. 27; [1891] 2 Q. B. 436; 65 L. T. 450; 40 W. R. 86—C. A.

—— Series of Chambers or Blocks of Buildings.]—An association was owner of certain chambers, consisting of seven blocks of buildings, each with an entrance door and a staircase. They contained altogether 117 sets of rooms, structurally divided, each with an outer door on to the staircase, and having no other communication with each other. The street door to each block was kept locked at night, and a porter, who was hired by the association, resided in each block, and had a key of and access to all the sets of rooms in the building for the purpose of a general superintendence, and as the servant of the occupiers. The form of agreement between the association and occupiers contained the usual clauses in the lease of a separate house—such as power to the landlord to enter and paint, and to enter and see repairs carried out:—Held, that each set of rooms ought to be separately placed upon the valuation list of the parish, and each occupier separately rated to the relief of the poor. Reg. v. St. George's Assessment Committee, 41 L. J., M. C. 30; L. R. 7 Q. B. 90; 25 L. T. 696; 20 W. R. 179.

Small Tenements—Owner rated instead of Occupier—"Sturges Bourne's Act."]—The owner of a house let "on any agreement by which the rent is reserved or made payable at any shorter period than three months," cannot be assessed to the poor-rates instead of the actual occupier under Sturges Bourne's Act (59 Geo. 3, c. 12), s. 19, if the rent is at a rate which amounts to more than 20*l.* by the year. West Ham Overseers v. Iles, 52 L. J., Q. B. 650; 8 App. Cas. 386; 49 L. T. 205; 31 W. R. 928; 47 J. P. 708—H. L. (E.)

—— Implied Repeal.]—The 19th section of 59 Geo. 3, c. 12 (Sturges Bourne's Act), by which, where houses were let at a rent not exceeding 20*l.* nor less than 6*l.* by the year, the inhabitants in any parish in vestry assembled might resolve that the owners, instead of the actual occupiers, should be assessed to the poor-rate, in which case the churchwardens and overseers of the parish were to assess such owners according to the actual rent of such houses, after making a reasonable deduction from the rent not exceeding one-half of the same, is repealed by implication by the Parochial Assessments Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96), the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 103), the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), and the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 31). West Ham v. Fourth City Mutual Building Society, 61 L. J., M. C. 128; [1892] 1 Q. B. 654; 66 L. T. 350; 40 W. R. 446; 56 J. P. 438.

—— Small Tenements Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99.]—Six persons each occupied a room in a six-roomed dwelling-house in a parish within a parliamentary borough, and had the use in common of the street-door, passage, staircase, and domestic conveniences: the owner did not occupy any part of the premises, nor retain any control over the tenants, each of whom had the exclusive possession of his own room. At the time of the passing of the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), the owner was rated in respect of the whole house, instead of the occupiers, by virtue of the Small Tenements Act. After the passing of the Representation of the People Act, the overseers made a rate, in which each of the six occupiers was separately rated:—Held, that the owner of the house was, and not the several occupiers were, rateable: for that the house came within the exception in s. 7. Stamper v. Sunderland-near-the-Sea Overseers, 37 L. J., M. C. 137; L. R. 3 C. P. 388; 18 L. T. 682; 16 W. R. 1063.

—— Adoption of the Act.]—The inhabitants of a parish met in vestry, and drew up the following document: "A meeting was held this day at W., for the purpose of carrying out the provisions in 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, for the better assessing and collecting the poor-rates upon small tenements situate within the parish, and it was agreed that the same should be carried out in the parish":—Held, a valid order for the adoption of the act. Barin v. Hutchinson, 31 L. J., M. C. 229; 6 L. T. 504; 10 W. R. 807—Ex. Ch.

—— Under Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act.]—By the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 19, the overseers in making out the poor-rate shall in every case, whether the rate is collected from the owner or occupier, or the owner is liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier, enter in the occupiers' column of the rate-book the name of the occupier of every rateable hereditament, and such occupier shall be deemed to be duly rated for any qualification or franchise as aforesaid:—Held, that this applies only where the owner has entered into "an agreement in writing with the overseers to become liable to them for the poor-rate," according to s. 3, or where there has been an order by the vestry under s. 4, for rating the owner instead of the occupier, and therefore where there has been neither such agreement nor order, an occupier of part of a house, who is jointly rated with the occupiers of the rest of the house for the rateable value of the whole house instead of being only separately rated for the value of the part occupied by him, is not to be deemed duly rated for a borough qualification so as to satisfy the Representation of the People Act, 1867, s. 61, which requires part of a house to be separately rated to the relief of the poor in order to be a dwelling-house within the meaning of that act. Cross v. Alsop, 40 L. J., C. P. 53; L. R. 6 C. P. 315; 23 L. T. 589; 19 W. R. 131; 1 Hopw. & C. 444.

The vestry of a parish are only entitled, under s. 4 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, to order the owner of a hereditament to be rated to the poor-rate instead of the occupier so long as the rateable value of such hereditament does not exceed the limits specified by s. 3 of that act. Norwood Churchwardens v. Salter, 61 L. J., M. C. 193; [1892] 2 Q. B. 118; 67 L. T. 376; 56 J. P. 535.

"Tenements and Hereditaments."]—An act for lighting a hamlet enacted that rates should be laid upon all persons who should inhabit, use, occupy or be in possession of or enjoy any messuages, tenements, houses, warehouses, or other buildings, tenements or hereditaments situate or being in such of the streets, or other public passages and places within the hamlet, as should from time to time be lighted by virtue of the act:—Held, that the general words, "tenements and hereditaments," included only things ejusdem generis with those before mentioned, and which were capable of being inhabited and tenanted, and that a water company was not rateable in respect of its pipes laid in the ground under the streets of the hamlet. Reg. v. East London Waterworks Co., 17 Q. B. 512; 21 L. J., M. C. 49; 16 Jur. 121.

Exclusive Occupation — Occupation under Supervision of Owners.]—By an agreement between the royal commissioners for the exhibition of 1862 and M., the former agreed, in consideration of certain money, that M. should have the right of selling refreshments while the exhibition was open, on a space of 40,000 square feet at the least of the portion of ground occupied by the exhibition. He was to fit up the space allotted to him with counters and fittings, to provide cellars, and to lay on gas and water. He was to be subject to the by-laws and regulations made by the commissioners for the orderly conduct of the exhibition, and the persons employed therein. Provisions were only to be brought in at specified times; he was to keep the space clean, and to remove the rubbish, &c., every night. All fittings and erections made by him were to become the property of the commissioners on the erection thereof. M. went into occupation under this agreement, and erected fixtures, counters, pipes, &c., and made cellars and drains. He continued to sell refreshments through the whole time the exhibition was open. The keys of the doors opening from the refreshment-rooms into the exhibition buildings were always kept by the police, employed by the commissioners, and the said police usually locked M. and his servants out every evening, and admitted them again in the morning; but during part of the time, he had an entrance from the outside:—Held, that he was not liable to be rated, inasmuch as he had no exclusive occupation of the space so allotted to him. Reg. v. Morrish, 32 L. J., M. C. 245; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 8 L. T. 697; 11 W. R. 960.

An occupation of land which is at all times subject to the control of the owner is not such an occupation as to render the occupier rateable to the poor. Reg. v. St. Mary Abbot's, Kensington (12 A. & E. 824), Allan v. Liverpool (L. R. 9 Q. B. 180), Inman v. Kirkdale (L. R. 9 Q. B. 180), and L. & N. W. Ry. v. Buckmaster (L. R. 10 Q. B. 70) followed. Rochdale Canal Co. v. Brewster, 64 L. J., Q. B. 37; [1894] 2 Q. A railway company granted to coal-owners the use of stables (situate within the premises of the railway station, and approachable only through the gates between the station and the public roads) under agreements containing the following terms: "In consideration of the London and North-Western Railway Company permitting us to occupy and use a stable for the accommodation of four horses at or near the C. station of the company, we undertake and agree that we will pay the railway company the clear monthly rent or sum of 1*l.* 5*s.*, without any deduction. And we undertake and agree, so long as we shall occupy or use the stable, to observe, perform, and be bound by the by-laws, rules, and regulations which shall, for the time being, be issued or prescribed by the railway company for the government and use of their railway station, premises, and conveniences. And we further undertake and agree to give and deliver up possession of the stable at the expiration of one month after a notice in writing for that purpose." The railway company did not, in fact, exercise any control over or use any of the stables during the currency of these agreements; and none of the by-laws, rules, or regulations of the company had reference to them:—Held, that under the circumstances, the railway company was properly rated for these stables as occupiers: for that on the true construction of the agreement, looking at the situation of the stables, it was the intention of the railway company to retain control over the stables, and not to part with the exclusive occupation to the coal-owners. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Buckmaster, 44 L. J., M. C. 180; L. R. 10 Q. B. 444; 33 L. T. 329; 24 W. R. 16—Ex. Ch.

—— "Exclusive Rights of using" subject to Revocations—Tunnel and Watercourse.]—A drainage company was empowered by the act by which it was incorporated to acquire by purchase or otherwise a tunnel and watercourse or an easement through them for the purpose of draining certain mines. In furtherance of the objects of the act, the owner of the tunnel and watercourse by deed granted unto and to the use of the company, its successors and assigns, "all such easements in and through and other and exclusive rights of using (but subject and except and reserving as hereinafter mentioned)" the tunnel and watercourse as might be necessary and convenient for the purposes of the undertaking, the company covenanting to keep the tunnel in repair, and the grantor reserving the right to lead found therein, and to enter the tunnel to work lead mines, &c.:—Held, that the company had the paramount, and the grantor merely a subordinate, interest, and the company were in occupation of the soil of the tunnel and watercourse so as to be rateable in respect of them. Rex v. Chelsea Waterworks Co. (5 B. & Ad. 156), Pimlico Tramway Co. v. Greenwich Union (L. R. 9 Q. B. 9), Lancashire Telephone Co. v. Manchester Overseers (14 Q. B. D. 267) followed. Holywell Union v. Halkyn District Mines Drainage Co., 64 L. J., M. C. 113; [1895] A. C. 117; 11 R. 98; 71 L. T. 818; 59 J. P. 566—H. L. (E.)

—— Right to Dig for Coprolites.]—It was agreed between A. and B. that A. should forthwith enter upon B.'s land, and there dig for coprolites in a specified manner, and should effectually fence the excavations and complete them by a given time, and should reinstate the land, and then yield and deliver up the land to B. There were no express words giving a right to the exclusive occupation of the land; but the excavations and works contemplated by the agreement required a constant occupation of the land until the coprolites were raised, and the land could not be used for any other purpose from the commencement of the excavations until it had been reinstated, which could not be done for a year or more after the coprolites were raised. B. reserved to himself the right of going upon the land where the excavations were for the purpose of inspecting the works, but he was not required by the agreement to do anything upon the land:—Held, that A. had the right of exclusive occupation of the land, and that he was therefore liable to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such occupation. Roads v. Trumpington, 40 L. J., M. C. 35; L. R. 6 Q. B. 56; 23 L. T. 821.

—— Where Occupation a shifting one.]—The owner of land under which there were coprolites granted to a company the exclusive right to dig, raise and carry them away. The company was to pay for this privilege 115*l.* per acre, and was to pay a minimum rent of 1,000*l.* per annum, payable quarterly, whether they worked out sufficient land to cover that rental or not. The land to be worked was taken by them bit by bit as they required it, but they were not entitled to have more than ten acres a year allotted to them, or to use the land for any purpose but that of digging and preparing the coprolites. After digging out the coprolites, more than a year was required to permit the land to dry, after which the subsoil was restored and levelled, the surface soil replaced, and the land again given over by the company to the agricultural tenant. Owing to the time required for this, the company was, at any period of time, in the occupation of ten acres, of which two and a half acres were in process of digging, one acre was occupied by mills, tramways, and other works, and the remainder had been worked out and was in process of drying, but the ten acres so occupied were continually shifting, as the company took land at one place to work, and restored it at another worked out. In this manner they actually worked out ten acres per annum. In an appeal against a poor-rate for the parish where the lands were situated, in which the rates were made quarterly:—Held, that the company was rateable, in each quarterly rate, upon ten acres of land, at the enhanced value, although the occupation was a shifting one, and although the company was never at one time in the profitable occupation of more than three and a half acres. Reg. v. Whaddon Overseers, 44 L. J., M. C. 73; L. R. 10 Q. B. 230; 32 L. T. 633; 23 W. R. 653.

—— Licence to Search for Clay.]—A leave and licence to search for clay in a parish is not a demise of a clay bed, and until a clay pit is made there is no beneficial occupation so as to render the licence rateable. Reg. v. Fayle, 4 W. R. 460.

—— Sale of Grass and Right of Grazing.]—The appellant was the owner of certain land, and such land being unlet, he sold the grass upon it by auction. The conditions of sale described the sale as a sale of grass for a certain time, and set forth certain conditions under which the purchasers were to be entitled to turn cattle in to eat the grass. The conditions also provided that the purchasers should dress the dung, cut the thistles, and leave the fences in good repair. It was a term of the sale that the vendor should pay the rates and taxes. The appellant was rated to the poor-rate in respect of the land in question for a period coincident with part of the period for which the grass was sold. An application having been made to the justices to enforce the rate against him :—Held, that there was evidence that the appellant was the occupier of the land ; that the effect of the sale of the grass was not to put the purchasers in occupation of the land, but merely to license them to graze their cattle thereon ; and that, consequently, the appellant was liable to be rated. Mogg v. Yatton Overseers, 50 L. J., M. C. 17 ; 6 Q. B. D. 10 ; 29 W. R. 74 ; 44 J. P. 748 ; 45 J. P. 324.

—— Barge attached to Posts in a River.]—The corporation of Oxford was the owner of the soil and bed of the river Isis. A boat club, composed of members of the University of Oxford, was possessed of a barge or house-boat floating on the river, and moored there at a distance of about thirty feet from the bank, by two iron rings fixed to the barge, and passing loosely and movably round two solid fixed posts driven into the bed of the river. These posts were of such a diameter as to allow the rings to pass freely up and down them and to allow the barge to rise and fall with the water of the river. Between the barge and the bank four other posts were driven into the bed of the river, and the club was possessed of a movable frame of boards laid down on the top of these four posts, but not fixed either to them or the bank, so as to form a gangway from the barge to the bank. The posts had remained driven in the bed of the river without the express licence of the corporation for more than twenty years, and no rent had ever been paid by the club in respect of any of the posts. The barge was used as a means of access to boats, and as a dressing-room :—Held, that the club was not rateable as an occupier of the posts and of the barge attached to them. Grant v. Oxford Local Board, 38 L. J., M. C. 39 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 9 ; 19 L. T. 378 ; 17 W. R. 76.

—— Right of Shooting — Occupier.] — The occupier of land is liable to be rated in respect of his occupation of land, and also of the privilege of sporting over the land so occupied by him whether such privilege be granted to him originally or be acquired by him after he has been in occupation of the land. Reg. v. Williams, 2 W. R. 410.

—— Shooting severed from Occupation.]—Under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 6, sub-s. 2, where the owner of land lets the right of sporting over part of the land, which he retains in his own occupation, the lessee may be rated in respect of the right of sporting. Kenrick v. Guilsfield Overseers, 49 L. J., M. C. 27 ; 5 C. P. D. 41 ; 41 L. T. 624 ; 28 W. R. 372 ; 44 J. P. 202.

—— Bookstall on Platform.] — By indenture the South Western Railway Company granted to S. and S. (therein called "the tenants") for seven years "the sole and exclusive licence and privilege to vend, sell, lend, and exhibit for sale and loan, newspapers, books, periodicals, stationery, &c., and such other like articles required for the convenience of passengers by railway, as should be approved by the secretary of the company, at all their stations," &c. ; and also full liberty for the "tenants," subject to the approval of the engineer of the company, to erect and place bookstands, &c., on the platforms for exhibiting and keeping their books, &c., and to post and exhibit advertisements and placards on the station walls ; and also full and free ingress and egress at all reasonable times for the "tenants," their servants and agents, to and from the several stations for the purposes of the grant. The persons employed by S. and S. were to be under the control of the station-master, and liable to immediate removal from the station in case of insobriety or misconduct. S. and S. were to pay the company certain fixed monthly rents, and also a percentage (quarterly) on the gross amounts received by S. and S. for the posting of the advertisements, &c., with a proviso that in case the rent or the quarterly payments should be in arrear for fourteen days after notice, the same should be recoverable by the company in addition to any other remedies, "by distress, as in the case of rent in arrear." And it was provided that the "tenants" should not vend or offer for sale, or exhibit or publish, any books or advertisements or placards of an indecent, immoral, or seditious character, or which should be forbidden by the company ; and should abide by and observe the regulations from time to time made by the company touching the placing on the platforms any of the necessary bookstands ; and the company warranted to the "tenants" "the quiet and peaceable enjoyment and benefit thereby granted for the period and upon the terms and stipulations and in manner aforesaid." S. and S. erected bookstands upon the platforms at W. station, and had the exclusive use of them ; and these bookstands were closed at night with shutters, and were locked up, the keys being kept by their servants. No rights of ingress and egress to and from the station, or of access to the bookstands, were exercised by S. and S., or their agents or servants, except under the provisions and for the purposes of the indenture. The company were assessed to the poor-rate for the station generally : —Held, that S. and S. had no "exclusive occupation" of any portion of the platforms, so as to render them liable to be rated in respect of these bookstands. Smith v. Lambeth Assessment Committee, 52 L. J., M. C. 1 ; 10 Q. B. D. 327 ; 48 L. T. 57 ; 47 J. P. 244—C. A. Affirming 31 W. R. 31.

—— Advertisement Hoardings.] — When a person, in consideration of a yearly payment, had permission from the owner of land to affix to such land hoardings for advertising purposes, and such hoardings were accordingly affixed, but not in such a way as to necessitate any disturbance of the soil if they were removed, or as to indicate any intention on the part of the owner that there should be a permanent occupation of any part of the land by the person erecting the hoarding : — Held, that such person was not rateable as an occupier of an advertising station, and that his name was therefore wrongly inserted in the supplemental valuation list of a metropolitan parish. Reg. v. St. Pancras Assessment Committee, 46 L. J., M. C. 243 ; 2 Q. B. D. 581 ; 37 L. T. 126 ; 25 W. R. 827.

—— Agreement creating Tenancy.]—By an agreement between an owner of land and an advertising agent the owner agreed to let and the agent to take an advertising station at a yearly rent, the tenancy to commence from completion of erection and continue seven years, and the agent agreed to pay rates and taxes. By another agreement an owner agreed to allow the advertising agent the privilege of erecting an advertising hoarding, the agent to pay a yearly rent, and the owner agreed to allow the agent the further privilege of removing a wall, the agreement to remain in force for three years and be afterwards terminable by twelve months' notice, but if the owner should be obliged to give less than twelve months' notice he agreed to refund 20*l.* In both agreements the dimensions of the hoardings to be erected were specified. Advertising hoardings supported on posts fixed into the ground were erected. In the first case the structure was used partly by the owner as a shed, and partly by the advertising agent as a hoarding; in the second case exclusively by the agent as a hoarding:—Held, that each of the agreements created a tenancy, and conferred an exclusive occupation, and not merely a licence, and therefore the advertising agent was liable to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of both hoardings as occupier of advertising stations. Taylor v. Pendleton Overseers, 56 L. J., M. C. 146; 19 Q. B. D. 288; 57 L. T. 530; 35 W. R. 762; 51 J. P. 613.

—— Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889.]—By s. 3 of the Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889: "Where any land is used temporarily or permanently for the exhibition of advertisements, or for the erection of any hoarding, frame, post, wall, or structure used for the exhibition of advertisements but not otherwise occupied, the person who shall permit the same to be so used, or (if he cannot be ascertained) the owner thereof, shall be deemed to be in beneficial occupation of such land or part thereof, and shall be rateable in respect thereof to the relief of the poor and to all local rates, according to the value of such use as aforesaid." The appellant, a contractor for the erection of buildings upon land vested in the postmaster-general, erected a hoarding round the land, and in pursuance of a clause in the contract permitting the use of the hoarding for advertising purposes, let the hoarding to a firm of advertisement contractors. The hoarding was erected upon the public street under a licence granted by the commissioners of sewers. The appellant's name having been inserted in the poor-rate as the person liable under s. 3 to be rated in respect of the hoarding:—Held, that the hoarding had been erected upon land "not otherwise occupied" within the meaning of s. 3; that the appellant was the person who had permitted the land to be used for the exhibition of advertisements within the meaning of that section; that he must, therefore, be deemed to be in beneficial occupation of the land, and that his name had been properly inserted in the rate. Chappell v. St. Botolph Overseers, [1892] 1 Q. B. 561; 65 L. T. 581; 40 W. R. 192; 56 J. P. 310.

—— Rifle Range and Sheds.] — Under the provisions of a special act of parliament the conservators of Wimbledon Common were to permit the National Rifle Association to occupy from year to year as a rifle shooting ground and place for an encampment for the purposes of the annual rifle meeting any part of a specified area of the common, together with the butts, targets and other conveniences for rifle shooting for the time being thereon. The occupation was not to be for more than seventy-seven consecutive days in each year, which days were not to commence earlier than the 1st of May, and were to terminate not later than the 31st of August. The association was empowered to put up a paling round the part occupied by them, and to erect temporary buildings. Prior to the passing of the special act, the association erected butts for shooting and also a store shed, used for the storage of materials, except during the annual meetings, when it was intended to be used as a workshop for the repairs of targets, &c. By the terms of the act, the association was not to acquire any right in or easement over any part of the common, and was to be deemed to be merely in the enjoyment of a statutory privilege over the common. On the 27th of March, 1872, before the period of occupation in that year commenced, a poor-rate was made for the parish of Wimbledon, in which the association was rated in respect of the area, the butts, and the store shed:—Held, that with respect to the area and the butts there was no such exclusive occupation as to render them liable to a poor-rate, but that with respect to the store shed which was occupied by them for their own purposes throughout the year they were liable. Mildmay v. Wimbledon Overseers, Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 41 L. J., M. C. 133; 27 L. T. 265; 20 W. R. 986.

—— Market—Payment for Stalls.]—A poor-rate assessed upon payments made for sittings, for putting up stalls and tables, for the standing of carts in a market place, and for placing baskets on the ground thereof is a rate in respect of the profits of the soil; and is therefore sustainable under the statute of Elizabeth or under a local act which empowers the rating of "all and every the occupiers of lands, houses, and tenements." Rex v. St. Peter of Mancroft, Norwich, Overseers, 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 69.

—— Stall in Market—No Right to Definite Portion of Ground.]—The appellant rented two stalls in Bodmin market year by year at a rent payable weekly. The stalls in question had been put up to auction and were bought by the appellant and used by him on market-days. The stalls thus rented were capable of being removed, and there was no agreement that they should always stand on the same identical spot, though the appellant had a right to retain the same relative position in the row:—Held, that there was no such occupation of the stall as rendered the appellant liable to be rated under 43 Eliz. c. 2, he having acquired only the right to a given stall in a given row, and not the right to place one on any definite portion of ground. Spear v. Bodmin Union, 49 L. J., M. C. 69; 43 L. T. 127; 44 J. P. 764.

—— Theatre — Proprietor.] — A local act enacted that the yearly sum of 250*l.* should be charged upon the houses of the inhabitants of St. Paul's, Covent-garden, except Bedford-house, for the support of the rector, curate, clerk, and sextons. Another local act, repealing the former, enacted, that, in lieu of the sum of 250*l.*, the yearly sum of 520*l.* should be charged upon all houses within the parish of St. Paul; and that such rates and assessments should be paid by the respective occupiers of such houses:—Held, that the word "houses" in these acts, primâ facie meant dwelling-houses; and that the proprietors in possession of Covent-garden Theatre, in which no person slept or resided, and who did not themselves reside within the parish, were not liable to be rated for the same. Surnam v. Darley, 14 M. & W. 181; 14 L. J., M. C. 145.

—— Private Box—Lessee.]—By a local act, poor-rates might be assessed for a parish "upon all and every person or persons who do or shall inhabit, hold, occupy, possess or enjoy any land, house, shop, wharf, warehouse or any other buildings, tenements, or hereditaments, or any person or persons who by law is or are chargeable to the relief of the poor" :—Held, that a lessee for a term of years of a private box in Drury Lane theatre was rateable. Reg. v. St. Martin's-le-Grand or in-the-Fields, 2 G. & D. 426; 3 Q. B. 205; 11 L. J., M. C. 112; 6 Jur. 850.

Beneficial Occupation.]—A tenant is rateable for the beneficial occupation of land, although such occupation be not profitable. Therefore, when the maintenance of a sea-wall, fixed on certain lands by act of parliament, amounted to their full rent, the tenant who owned and occupied them (having given no purchase-money on account of this liability) was not exempted from rateability in respect of them. Reg. v. Vange Overseers, 2 G. & D. 476; 3 Q. B. 242; 11 L. J., M. C. 117; 6 Jur. 893.

—— Public Park.]—When a public body, acting under statutory powers, purchases land which it is directed to maintain as a park for the perpetual use thereof by the public for exercise and recreation, and the necessary cost of maintaining the park as a whole for the purposes of the act exceeds any income which can be derived from it in respect of licences for the supply of refreshments or for grazing rights or otherwise, there is no rateable occupation. Lambeth Overseers v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 806; [1897] A. C. 625; 76 L. T. 795; 46 W. R. 79; 61 J. P. 580—H. L. (E.)

—— Lands held for Public Purposes.]—To constitute beneficial occupation it is not necessary that it should be such as to yield a pecuniary profit, but the true test is whether it is of value to the occupier. Reg. v. London School Board (17 Q. B. D. 738) and Burton-on-Trent Corporation v. Eggington Overseers (24 Q. B. D. 197) approved; and Owens College v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers (18 Q. B. D. 403) disapproved. London County Council v. Erith Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 9; [1893] A. C. 562; 6 R. 22; 69 L. T. 725; 42 W. R. 330; 57 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

—— Trustees.]—An act having vested the aftermath of a meadow in trustees for the burgesses and principal householders of a town, freed from all other interests in the same, with power to let the same or any part or parts annually to any person or persons for the best rent, and also to let in pastures for horses, cattle, and sheep to different persons, at such rates and subject to such regulations as the trustees should appoint; or, by writing under their hands and seals to demise the same for a term of years, and that the rents and profits should, after payment of all charges, be divided by the trustees amongst the objects of the trust:—Held, that the trustees not having let the aftermath to any persons for any certain term, or in any certain proportions, but having let it out, as it was called, in pastures at so much a head for horses, cattle, and sheep, to various persons, must themselves be taken to be the occupiers of the land, and were consequently rateable for the same. Rex v. Tewkesbury Corporation, 13 East, 155.

Where A. demised a messuage to trustees, for the maintenance of a schoolmaster for teaching children residing in a parish, who was to teach without a fee, and expressed his desire "that the parish would exempt the messuage from the payment of all rates," and the parish had had the use of the school for 125 years, and had, up to that date, exempted the property from rates, the messuage being beneficially occupied, and the rent paid to trustees for the use of the schoolmaster:—Held, that the property was rateable; and that, supposing that the devise had been entirely for the benefit of the poor, which it was not, and that the desire expressed by the testator amounted to a condition, it was a condition which the law would not allow. Reg. v. Ellis, 2 D. (N.S.) 361; 12 L. J., M. C. 20; 7 Jur. 108.

Held, also, that the previous inhabitants of the parish had no power to bind their successors to exempt the property from rates; and that the time during which no rate had been paid did not affect the question. Ib.

Trustees cannot rely upon the mere circumstance of their being trustees, and so not entitled to any personal advantage from the property vested in them, for the purpose of shewing that they are not occupiers of lands and houses within a parish, and therefore that they are exempted from being rated to the poor-rate. Reg. v. Birkenhead Docks (Trustees), 2 El. & Bl. 148; 21 L. J., M. C. 209; 17 Jur. 162.

b. Mode of Assessment.

Rateable Value, what is.]—The occupiers of property capable of a beneficial occupation are liable to be rated in respect of its full rateable value, without regard to the amount of benefit which they themselves derive from that occupation. Reg. v. Rhymney Ry., 10 B. & S. 198; 38 L. J., M. C. 75; L. R. 4 Q. B. 276; 17 W. R. 530.

In assessing premises the overseers should proceed on the estimate, not of the rent actually paid for the premises by the occupier, but of the rent at which they might reasonably be expected to let from year to year. Hayward v. Brinkworth Overseers, 10 L. T. 608.

Three farms were let at a certain sum annually. They might, however, reasonably have been expected to let, and might have let, at a larger sum. The overseers assessed their occupiers at the rent actually paid by them:—Held, that they were wrong; that they should have adopted the larger sum, viz. the rent at which the farms might have been reasonably expected to let, as the estimate of the net annual value. Ib.

—— Land held for Public Purposes.]—In determining the rateable value of land and buildings owned by a public body for the discharge of duties imposed on them by law, the public body must themselves be taken into account as possible tenants, notwithstanding that such body could not under the statutes giving them their powers become tenants of the premises of which they are the owners. London County Council v. Erith Churchwardens, 63 L. J., M. C. 9; [1893] A. C. 562; 6 R. 22; 69 L. T. 725; 42 W. R. 330; 57 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

Land held under Statutory Authority for Perpetual Use by the Public for Exercise and Recreation.]—By the London Council (General Powers) Act, 1890, the London County Council were empowered to acquire certain lands, and were directed, when they had acquired them, to lay them out and maintain them, and every part thereof, as a park, for the perpetual use thereof by the public for exercise and recreation. The council acquired the lands and laid them out and maintained them as a park under the act. The necessary expenses of maintaining the park as a whole for the purposes of the act exceeded any income which could be derived from it so long as it remained devoted to the public use as a park. The council having been assessed to the poor rate, as occupiers of the park, at the rateable value of the lands prior to their having become a public park:—Held, that as there was no duty upon the council to provide a park for the public use, and as there was no finding in the case that the council would have been willing to give anything in excess of a nominal rent for the occupation of the park, and as its maintenance in accordance with the conditions of the statute was only possible at an annual pecuniary loss, the rateable value of the occupation of the park by the council was not greater than a nominal amount. London County Council v. Lambeth Overseers, 65 L. J., M. C. 148; [1896] 2 Q. B. 25; 74 L. T. 605; 44 W. R. 621; 60 J. P. 470—C. A.

But see Lambeth Overseers v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 806; [1897] A. C. 625; 76 L. T. 795; 46 W. R. 79; 61 J. P. 580—H. L. (E.)

—— Small Tenements.]—The amount to be inserted in the column headed "Rateable value" of the valuation (in a parish which has adopted the Small Tenements Rating Act), under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, is the true rateable value of the property, independently of whether such property is subject to the provisions of the Small Tenements Act or not. Sunderland-near-the-Sea Overseers v. Sunderland Union, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 531; 34 L. J., M. C. 121; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 688; 13 L. T. 239; 13 W. R. 943.

Enhanced Value—Brewery and "Tied Houses."]—A. being owner of a brewery, and also of thirty-three public-houses, not all situated in the same township as the brewery, demised to B. the brewery, together with the goodwill and trade of the public-houses, for seventeen years; B. yielding and paying for and in respect of the brewery, 300*l.*, and for and in respect of the goodwill and trade of the public-houses, 150*l.* B. occupied the brewery, and, under the contract contained in this lease, was enabled to compel the lessees of the several public-houses to purchase their beer at the brewery; and it would have been a breach of the contract between B. and A. if their custom had been diverted elsewhere. The public-houses, in consequence of this agreement, fetched less rent than they would have done if the occupiers had been free to get their supplies where they would; and the advantage of their compelled custom to the occupier of the brewery was worth 150*l.* a year:—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., and Crompton, J., that he was properly rated of the enhanced value, it being an advantage connected with the occupation, which would be taken into calculation by a tenant in estimating the annual rent; and that it was not material that the origin of this advantage was in a personal contract: Erle, J., dissentiente, and holding that this advantage was not an incident to the occupation, properly to be taken into account in estimating the rent, but a personal contract, transitory with the persons of the contractors, and only accidentally connected with the hereditaments so occupied. Allison v. Monkwearmouth Shore Overseers, 4 El. & Bl. 13; 23 L. J., M. C. 177; 18 Jur. 1075. S. C., Reg. v. Allison, 2 C. L. R. 1544; 2 W. R. 592.

In a parish were certain breweries, the occupiers of which were possessed, as owners or lessees, of a number of public-houses known as "tied houses," some of which were in the parish and some in other parishes. These public-houses were let to tenants at a smaller rent than they would have been let at if they had been free public-houses, the tenants being bound by contracts with the landlords to purchase from them all the malt and other liquors consumed in their houses, and so, probably, paying a higher price for their liquors than they would have paid had they been free. In valuing these breweries and public-houses for the purpose of making the valuation list, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 14, the overseers applied to them the same principles of valuation as to the other rateable hereditaments in the parish, pursuant to 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1. The union assessment committee having ascertained that the overseers, in arriving at the gross estimated rental and rateable value of the breweries, had not taken into their consideration the advantages which the occupiers of such breweries derived from the before-mentioned contracts with their tenants, the publicans, and having obtained the numbers of such tied public-houses attached to each brewery, increased the gross estimated rental and the rateable value of such breweries by such an increased sum as the committee in their opinion considered the breweries might reasonably be expected to let for, with the advantages attending the contracts with the tied public-houses. They, however, made no reduction in the valuation list in respect of the several tied public-houses:—Held, that the union assessment committee had done wrong in so increasing the rateable value of the breweries, such rateable value not being affected by these personal contracts with the tenants of the tied public-houses. Sunderland-near-the-Sea Overseers v. Sunderland Union, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 531; 34 L. J., M. C. 121; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 688; 13 L. T. 239; 13 W. R. 943.

Held, also, that the rateable value of the public-houses was not to be decreased by reason of the burthen cast upon the tenants by their contracts with the brewer landlords. Ib.

——Under the Small Tenements Rating Act.]—In making out the valuation list in a parish which has adopted the Small Tenements Rating Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 99), the reduction to be made under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 39, ss. 3 and 4, to the owners of small tenements who are rated instead of the occupiers, should be made, not from the rateable value of the hereditaments assessed, but from the rate in the pound to be levied and collected. Ib.

Estimate of Rent—How made—Brickfield.]—On appeal against a poor-rate by an occupier of a brickfield, a case was stated, shewing that he held the land (ten acres) for the purpose of getting from it clay to make bricks, under a lease for seven or fourteen years, or till the earth should be all dug out; that he paid 2*l.* per acre, without reference made to the use of the land, and the royalty of 1*s.* 6*d.* for every 1,000 bricks moulded in any one year; that the value of land in the parish let for agricultural purposes was 2*l.* 6*s.* a year; that he had on the field four brickmaking stools, each stool capable of producing 750,000 bricks; that the field originally contained sufficient clay for 31,000,000 of bricks; that in the year before the rate was laid, he had nearly 3,000,000, and that there remained clay enough for 12,000,000. The sessions also found that the rent which a tenant would have been willing to pay, on taking a lease of the premises, with liberty to consume the brick-earth, and without being liable to royalty, was 10*l.* per acre; and they confirmed the rate by which he was assessed at 2*l.* 6*s.* per acre, and for royalty 1*s.* 6*d.* per 1,000, on as many bricks as the stools were capable of producing in a year:—Held, that the rent, estimated according to 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, was the proper criterion of the rate on this property. Reg. v. Westbrook, 10 Q. B. 178; 2 New Sess. Cas. 599; 16 L. J., M. C. 87; 11 Jur. 515.

And assuming the above facts to have appeared without any specific finding as to the rent which a tenant would be willing to pay:—Held, that the royalty, together with a fixed annual charge, was properly considered as the rent; that the payment in reepect of the brick-earth was not the less a rent because the subject-matter of the renting was in a course of being wholly consumed; that, in absence of proof to the contrary, the sessions were right in assuming the number of bricks, which the stools could make, to have been actually made within the year of rating; that the rate was properly assessed on the number supposed to remain in the particular year; and that no deduction was to be made for the breeze, ashes, and other materials used in making the bricks, it being presumable that these were allowed for in fixing the royalty. Ib.

Held, also, that the sessions having found specifically the sum which a tenant would give on taking a lease with liberty to consume the earth, and without a royalty, namely, 10*l.* a year per acre, that sum (from which tenants' rates and taxes were to be deducted) must be considered as the rent, within 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, and no inference from other facts was admissible. Ib.

In another case not materially differing, but in which the sessions neither expressly stated the rent which, in their opinion a tenant might reasonably be expected to pay, nor gave data for estimating it, except by stating the number of stools at work, and the amount of royalty actually paid (under an agreement still subsisting) in the five years immediately before that for which the rate was made; and the question propounded was, What is the net annual value of the land?—Held, that the fixed sum paid for occupation and the royalty constituted the rent; but that the court could not determine the amount which, at the time of making the rate, a tenant about to take a lease might reasonably be expected to pay; nor, in the absence of materials for such estimate, could the assessment be grounded on the ordinary amount of rent paid for land in the parish used for agricultural purposes, or the amount paid for the best garden ground in the parish. Reg. v. Everist or Westbrook, 10 Q. B. 178; 2 New Sess. Cas. 599; 16 L. J., M. C. 87; 11 Jur. 515.

—— Interest paid by Lessees on Borrowed Money.]—Commissioners of a navigation having borrowed 28,000*l.* on mortgage, and being still in want of funds, agreed to let the navigation and tolls for ninety-nine years, the lessee undertaking to pay the interest of the 28,000*l.* An act was afterwards passed confirming the agreement, and empowering the commissioners to lease the navigation and tolls for the remainder of the term to the persons entitled under the former agreement; and enacting, that they should pay the interest of the 28,000*l.* yearly to the mortgagees, in default of which the commissioners might require the toll collector to pay such interest to the mortgagees out of the moneys in his hands:—Held, that the interest paid by the lessees was in substance a rent, and that the rate ought to be calculated upon it; and that the lessees were not occupiers under a beneficial lease, though the interest was only about 1,400*l.* a year, and the annual earnings at the time of making the rate were 3,418*l.* (from which, however, about 1,000*l.* was to be deducted for repairs, &c.), one year's value being no criterion, and there being no proof that the rent was unduly small. Rex v. Chaplin, 1 B. & Ad. 926; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 121.

—— Actual Profits.]—The occupiers of cement works, and also of a chalk pit situated close by, were assessed separately as to their works and their pit. There were other equally good chalk pits in the neighbourhood, the chalk from which was used only for ballast and other purposes not so profitable as that of manufacturing cement, for which the occupiers used theirs. They appealed to quarter sessions against the assessment of the chalk pit; and the counsel who supported the rate, proposed to ask their manager for information as to the profits they obtained from the chalk, but the quarter sessions refused to admit evidence upon that subject:—Held, that the quarter sessions were right, and that although the convenience and situation of the chalk pit were to be considered in estimating what rent a tenant would reasonably pay, the actual profits derived by the occupiers were not material in forming that estimate. Reg. v. Aylesford Union, 26 L. T. 618.

Cotton Mill—Working Stopped.]—A cotton mill, owing to depression in the cotton trade, was no longer worked, but was maintained at some expense as a factory, with its machinery in a fit state for working when the trade should revive:—Held, that the rate should be made upon its annual value as a storehouse for the machinery in it, and not upon an estimate of the rent which might fairly be expected for it, if let for a reasonable term of years, with the prospect of improvement in value. Staley v. Castleton Overseers, 5 B. & S. 505; 33 L. J., M. C. 178; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1147; 10 L. T. 606; 12 W. R. 911.

In March, 1863, the owner of a silk mill gave up his business with the intention of never resuming it, and the mill had not since been worked, but, with the machinery and other articles and things in it, had been advertised for sale. All the contents of the mill were essential articles and things for a tenant to have in working for the manufacture of silk. The machinery, some of which was affixed to the floors and ceilings was in the nature of tenants' fixtures. A man occasionally went to the mill in order to protect the property against trespass or depredation:—Held, that the owner of the mill was rateable for the mill only upon its annual value as a warehouse for the machinery, articles, and things in it. Harter v. Salford Overseers, 6

B. & S. 591; 34 L. J., M. C. 206; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1036; 13 W. R. 861.

Stoppage owing to Strike.]—When mills and factories have been assessed to the poor-rate, occupiers are not entitled to any reduction in assessment because of a stoppage of work consequent on a strike or to an allowance from the said rate on the basis that the said mill and factories were assessable during the continuance of a strike as warehouses for machinery only and not as going or working concerns. Hoyle v. Oldham Union, 63 L. J., M. C. 178; [1894] 2 Q. B. 372; 9 R. 287; 70 L. T. 741; 58 J. P. 669—C. A.

Machinery increasing Value of Premises.]—In a rate laid upon buildings, to which machinery is attached for the purpose of manufacture, the real property ought to be assessed according to its actual value as combined with the machinery, without considering whether the machinery is real or personal property, and liable, or not, to distress or seizure under a fi. fa., or whether it would go to the heir or executor, or, at the expiration of a lease, to the landlord or tenant. Reg. v. Guest, 7 A. & E. 951; 2 N. & P. 663; W. W. & D. 651; 7 L. J., M. C. 38.

A gaslight company laid down pipes in a parish, the soil not belonging to the company, and manufactured the gas out of the parish. In the valuation of their property they were entered for their mains, pipes, &c., for the value at which they would let, and for the land at the value of the land for a pipe-way. In certain houses of the parish there were steam-engines and other machinery affixed to the houses. These houses were valued at what they were worth to let, without reference to the value which they derived from the engines, &c.:—Held, that the valuation was bad. Rex v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gas Light Co., 6 Ad. & E. 634; 6 L. J., M. C. 92.

Machines used in connection with Hereditament, but remaining Personal Property capable of being Removed without Injury.]—In estimating the rateable value of premises used as a manufactory, machinery and plant placed thereon, for the purpose of making them fit as premises for such a manufactory, are to be taken into account as enhancing the value of the hereditament, although such machinery and plant remain personal property, and are not physically attached to the premises. Tyne Boiler Works Co. v. Longbenton Overseers or Tynemouth Union, 56 L. J., M. C. 8; 18 Q. B. D. 81; 55 L. T. 825; 35 W. R. 110; 51 J. P. 420—C. A.

Premises were used as a manufactory for the purpose of lace-making upon which certain boilers, engines, bobbin-net, and other machines were placed for carrying on the said manufactory; such machines were essential to the use of the said premises as a bobbin-net lace factory. The machines were each of them, as machines, separate and distinct from each other, and could be easily removed for sale or repairs. Some were fastened to the floors by screws through the feet of the machines; others were not fastened, their own weight being sufficient to keep them steady, but further than this, the machines were no part of the soil or hereditaments:—Held, upon a case stated, that, although some of the machinery and plant was capable of being removed, without injury to itself or to the freehold, and although it remained personal property, yet, being essentially necessary and permanently attached to the appellants' business, it was all rightly taken into account in estimating the rateable value of the premises as enhancing the value of the hereditament. Gifford v. Chard Union, 63 L. T. 249.

Fixtures.]—The occupiers (not being owners) were rated to the poor as for "chemical works, lands, and buildings." Parts of the works consisted of chambers used for the manufacture of sulphuric acid. The chambers were vessels of sheet lead, weighing each several tons, 13 feet high, 13 feet wide, and from 40 to 60 feet long, the lower part forming a dish 12 inches deep, in which the acid was deposited, the upper shutting down upon the lower, and receiving vapour. They stood in the open air, each was surrounded by walls of strong masonry, forming an oblong, which was filled up with sand, and the chamber rested on the sand, being also supported by and riveted to a frame of wood, which ran round the tops of the walls. In some instances the wooden frame was laid in mortar on the tops of the walls, in others it merely rested upon them. At each end of the chamber was a pipe to convey gases and vapours in and out. Each pipe was fixed at its extremity into buildings which were part of the freehold. Where the pipes entered and passed out of the chamber, the lead of the chamber was beaten round the pipe, and the insertion was made vapour-tight by luting. Steam (necessary to the manufacture) was conveyed into the chamber also by a pipe which passed from the boiler, and was riveted to the wooden framework. The boiler was affixed to the freehold, and the pipe to the boiler. Every pipe might be removed by taking it to pieces, or by unfastening the rivets, without injury to the freehold, and then the chamber would rest on the ground by its mere weight, and might, with sufficient force, be lifted from the soil without displacing any part of the freehold. The sessions found that the chambers were attached to the freehold in manner before mentioned, but not affixed thereto:—Held, that assuming the chambers not to be so annexed as to form part of the freehold, yet being fixed machinery attached to buildings, and necessarily so attached for the purpose of being used, they were properly considered in a rate as increasing the rateable value of the buildings, and a rate calculated on such increased value was confirmed. Reg. v. Haslam, 17 Q. B. 220; 15 Jur. 972.

The premises of a distillery contained tanks which formed the roofs of rooms and houses, boiling backs and mash tuns, lying on brick piers against the walls, which formed the floors of some of the rooms and were connected by pipes to other houses, reservoirs and other articles necessary for the process of distilling. They were all heavy, and either unattached, except by the communicating pipes, to the walls or piers upon which they stood, or fastened only by screws for the purpose of being steadied. Each was to be bought and sold as a separate article, and if all were removed, the premises might be used for other manufacturing purposes:—Held, that these articles were not fixtures, and could not be properly rated in the assessment of the premises to the poor-rate. Chidley v. West Ham Overseers, 32 L. T. 486.

Refreshment Rooms at Railway Station—Evidence of actual Profits.]—The refreshment-rooms upon a railway station having been let to a contractor for a term of years at a fixed annual rent, he appealed against a poor-rate made upon him as occupier of the premises, and at the hearing of the appeal sought to prove by his own testimony, and by his account-books, shewing the receipts and expenditure during the past year in respect of the refreshment-rooms, that the business was carried on at a loss, and that the rent reserved did not represent the true annual value of the premises:—Held, that such evidence ought to have been received as an element in ascertaining the rateable value. Clarke v. Fisherton-Angar Overseers, or Alderbury Union, 50 L. J., M. C. 33; 6 Q. B. D. 139; 29 W. R. 334; 45 J. P. 358.

Canteen—Money paid for Privileges.]—Where a canteen in barracks was demised to B. by the barrack board for a year, at a rent of 15*l.* for the canteen and buildings, and also the further sum of 510*l.* for the privilege of using the same as a canteen, and selling therein provisions and liquors, usually sold by sutlers, with power of distress for the aggregate sum:—Held, to be one entire rent for the canteen; and therefore that B. was rateable, as occupier of the canteen, in respect of the 525*l.* aggregate rent, and not merely in respect of the 15*l.* Rex v. Bradford, 4 M. & S. 317.

Right of Shooting.]—The appellant was the owner and occupier of certain woodlands which were included in the rate. He used the lands as woods or plantations, and also enjoyed the right of sporting over them. The overseers, in assessing the property, added a fixed sum of 2*s.* per acre to the natural and unimproved value of the woodland, in respect of the right of sporting:—Held, that by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, sub-s. a, this mode of rating was right, as the sporting enhanced the value of the occupation. Eyton v. Mold Overseers, 6 Q. B. D. 13; 43 L. T. 472; 29 W. R. 122; 45 J. P. 54.

Rent of Cows and Right of Grazing.]—Where the farmer is rated for the whole farm, it is no ground of objection to the rate by a third person, that a dairyman who rented under him his stock of cows to be depastured on the same land, was not rated for such dairy. Rex v. Brown, 8 East, 528.

Racecourse—Discovery of Profits.]—In ascertaining the rateable value of land used as a racecourse, the assessment committee may call for the books of the racecourse proprietors, or give affirmative evidence of the amounts of the profits made, the profits being a material element, though not a test, in determining the rateable value. Reg. v. Verrall, 45 L. J., M. C. 29; 1 Q. B. D. 9; 33 L. T. 379; 24 W. R. 139.

According to present Value.]—Every person is to be rated according to the present value of his estate, whether that value has or has not been increased by his own improvements. Rex v. Mast, 6 Term Rep. 154.

A lessee of lands should be rated according to the present value of the lands. Rex v. Shingle, 7 Term Rep. 549.

Houses and Lands.]—Whether houses are to be rated in a different proportion from lands must depend on local circumstances. Rex v. Sandwich, 2 Dougl. 582.

Proportion to other Lands.]—A poor-rate imposed in respect of two-thirds of the nett rent of farms, lands and tithes, and of one-half of the nett rent of the houses and other buildings, collieries and coal mines, is not necessarily unequal. Rex v. Tomlinson, 4 M. & Ry. 169; 9 B. & C. 163; 7 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 64.

Allowable Deductions—Necessary Expenses.]—When houses or other buildings, either with or without land, are let to a tenant, and the tenant agrees to take upon himself, either wholly or in part, the repairs to which the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, refers, and which would ordinarily fall upon the landlord, no allowance is to be made in respect of those repairs, and the rent actually paid is the rateable value of the premises. Reg. v. Wells, 8 B. & S. 607; 36 L. J., M. C. 109; L. R. 2 Q. B. 542; 16 L. T. 790; 15 W. R. 1059.

No allowance in respect of contingent or future renewal of buildings or machinery ought to be made from the rent before the latter is adopted as the test of value. Ib.

The annual profit is the rent which a tenant would give, he paying the poor-rates and the expenses of repairs, and the other annual expenses necessary for making the subject of occupation productive, and allowing him a deduction from the rent, where the subject is of a perishable nature, towards the expense of renewing or reproducing it. Rex v. Lower Mitton, 4 M. & Ry. 711; 9 B. & C. 810; 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 57.

By the Everton Drainage Act, 1860, the owners and proprietors of land in Nottinghamshire were charged with embankment and drainage works, without which the annual value of the neighbouring lands would be considerably diminished. The rates so charged were made payable by the occupiers, who were authorised to deduct the amount from their rent:—Held, that the average annual cost of the works ought to be deducted from the occupier's rent, in order to estimate the nett annual value under the Parochial Assessment Act, 1836. Reg. v. Gainsborough Union, 41 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 7 Q. B. 64; 25 L. T. 589; 20 W. R. 250.

Proprietors of lands situate in parish V. and other parishes of the Isle of Canvey, granted one-third of all the lands in fee to J., in consideration of his embanking all the lands in the island. By a local act afterwards passed, commissioners were appointed to keep up the embankment, and for that purpose they were to tax the owners and occupiers of the lands by an annual rate, to the full annual rent or value of such lands, and, if the moneys so levied should be insufficient (but not otherwise), to tax the lands in the island. H. being the owner and occupier of all the granted lands in V., was rated by the commissioners for that property, described in the rate as house, premises and lands. H. had taken the lands subject to the above liability, paying no purchase-money. The assessment on these and the rest of the granted lands equalled the rack-rent or full annual value. The annual expenditure on the embankment was necessary to maintain the lands within the island in a state to command any rent from a tenant, or to be capable of occupation by the owner:—Held, that H. was rateable for the full annual value of his lands, without deduction on account of the embankment tax. Rex v. Vange, 3 Q. B. 242; 2 G. & D. 476; 11 L. J., M. C. 117; 6 Jur. 893.

—— Small Tenements let by the Week—"Voids" and Losses of Rent—Cost of Collection.]—The appellant was assessed to the poor-rate as owner of a small house let by the week at a rent of five shillings, the landlord paying all outgoings. On appeal against the rate to quarter sessions the appellant claimed that, in arriving at the gross estimated rental, deductions should be made in respect of losses by reason of such houses often remaining unlet and void for some time, and by reason of losses of rent through inability of the tenants to pay, and in respect of the necessary cost of collection of the rent actually received. The recorder, however, refused to allow such deductions, and confirmed the rate. The recorder found, in a case stated on appeal from sessions, that it was practically impossible to let the house on any other terms than those on which the appellant let it; but, assuming for rating purposes that a tenant from year to year could be obtained, the house could be reasonably expected to let from year to year at a rent of 13*l.* (which sum amounted to fifty-two times the amount of the weekly rent), the landlord paying all usual tenants' rates and taxes and water-rates. But he found that with respect to house property of that description, whether let by the week or year, the landlord would be unable, by reason of "voids" and of losses by reason of non-payment of rent, to collect more than 95 per cent. of the rent, and that he would have to pay 5 per cent. as the cost of collecting the rent actually received:—Held, that the recorder must be taken to have found as a fact that 13*l.* was the rent which a tenant from year to year as above mentioned could reasonably be expected to give for the house; that there was nothing in the further facts found by him to shew that such finding was unreasonable or not justifiable in point of law, and therefore such finding was conclusive of the fact: and, that being so, that the appellant was not entitled to any of the deductions claimed, inasmuch as the test of gross estimated rental is the rent which a tenant from year to year would agree to give, and not the sum which the landlord ultimately receives. Smith v. Birmingham Overseers, 58 L. J., M. C. 161; 22 Q. B. D. 703; 53 J. P. 787—C. A. Affirming 60 L. T. 181.

—— Cemetery Company—Salary of Directors and Auditors.]—By an act incorporating a cemetery company, the company was required periodically to appoint directors, who should manage the business and concerns of the company subject to their control, keep and use the common seal, have the custody of books, deeds, &c., call meetings, purchase and sell lands, appoint and displace chaplains and other officers, allow them stipends, take of them securities, make contracts touching the company's undertaking, regulate the mode of interment and the disposition of vaults, catacombs, and graves, and the sums to be paid for exclusive right of burial therein, and for placing monuments, direct the issuing, receiving and disposal of the company's moneys, and all their other dealings, superintend their correspondence and the keeping of their accounts, and all other things necessary for carrying on their business, and maintaining actions or suits in their name in respect of debts or contracts, and making, enforcing and rescinding contracts, also auditors who should examine the report to be made by the directors of disbursements and receipts, audit the accounts from which the report was drawn, and inspect the vouchers. The company had two cemeteries in Middlesex and Surrey. The duties and authority of the directors extended to both:—Held, that they were not entitled to deduct from the rateable value the salaries of the directors and auditors, and the expenses of an office in London, at which the directors transacted the business of the company. Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 14 Q. B. 571; 19 L. J., M. C. 122; 14 Jur. 519.

—— Dock Company—Use of Steam Tug.]—On appeal by the Southampton Dock Company against a poor-rate, they claimed deductions from the amount at which the rateable value of their property was assessed, as follows. For the expenses of a steam-tug alleged by them to be part of the movable plant, but by the respondents to be independent of the dock establishment. The company was authorised by their act to build, purchase, or hire steam-tugs for the purpose of towing vessels into or out of the docks from or to Southampton Water, or any part of the British Channel, and to pay the expense out of the rents, rates and sums receivable under the act. The steam-tug was used for the above purpose, and was a useful appendage to the docks, and advantageous to those who frequented them, and conducive to the general profit of the concern, though not indispensably necessary, as other steam-vessels might have been hired and employed, but with less convenience and advantage:—Held, that the deduction was allowable, the steam-tug being ancillary to the dock undertaking. Reg. v. Southampton Dock Co., 14 Q. B. 587; 6 Railw. Cas. 428; 20 L. J., M. C. 155; 15 Jur. 268.

—— Machinery not fixed to the Soil.]—Cranes, steam-engines, shears and other heavy machinery attached to the freehold, and essential to the business, but capable of being detached as easily and with as little injury to the freehold as other fixtures put up for the purpose of the tenant's trade, and usually valued as between incoming and outgoing tenant, are not an allowable deduction. Ib.

—— Works in different Districts.]—Where works producing rateable value are situate in several districts, and can be divided into two parts, the first directly producing the value, and the second indirectly conducing to such production, such division shall be made. Then all the expenses incidental to the second part, including the rates to which it may be liable, being deducted from the gross proceeds, and the nett rateable value being ascertained, such value is to be apportioned among the districts in which the first part is situate, in the ratio of the portion of that value. Reg. v. Hammersmith Bridge Co., 3 New Sess. Cas. 424; 15 Q. B. 369; 18 L. J., M. C. 85; 13 Jur. 190.

—— In respect of Rates and Taxes.]—In ascertaining the nett rateable value of property assessable to the poor-rate, an allowance is made for rates and taxes. And such allowance ought to be made upon the nett rateable value after the rates and taxes themselves, in addition to all other proper allowances, have been deducted. Tyne Improvement Commissioners v. Chirton Overseers, 32 L. J., M. C. 192; 6 L. T. 489.

The payment by the landlord of water rent for water supplied to a house (such supply and payment being optional) does not entitle the occupier to a deduction in respect thereof as being an expense necessary to maintain the premises in a state to command the rent. Reg. v. Bilston Overseers, 6 B. & S. 908; 35 L. J.,

M. C. 73; L. R. 1 Q. B. 18; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 139; 13 L. T. 327; 14 W. R. 83.

By a local act it is provided that the owner of every tenement assessed to the poor-rate at any annual sum under 6*l.* 10*s.*, the said sum to be ascertained according to the provisions of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, shall be rated to and pay the poor-rates; but that in all cases where the owner is so liable to be rated, he may compound for the same by the payment of a reduced rate, whether such tenement be occupied or not; in which case he shall pay one-half of the rates only:—Held, that an owner so compounding is entitled to the same deductions as might be claimed by the tenant in whose place, for rating purposes, he stands, and that the amount is not to be regulated by the sum actually paid by him. Reg. v. Dodd, 6 B. & S. 903; L. R. 1 Q. B. 16; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 159. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Bilston Overseers, 35 L. J., M. C. 97; 13 L. T. 327; 14 W. R. 83.

The owner and occupier of lands situate in a level within the jurisdiction of a commission of sewers, being rated, claimed deductions: first, in respect of the general sewers tax; secondly, in respect of the amount at which he was taxed for the maintenance and cleansing of the sewers in the level; and, thirdly, in respect of the sum annually expended by him in the maintenance and repair of a floodgate, sluice, and gate upon his own lands; and, fourthly in respect of the expenses of keeping in repair a sea-wall:—Held, that he was entitled to the deductions claimed. Reg. v. Hall Dare, 5 B. & S. 785; 34 L. J., M. C. 17; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 59; 11 L. T. 301; 13 W. R. 70.

In rating land liable to sewers-rate, the amount of such rate must be deducted from the valuation. Rex v. Adames, 1 N. & M. 662; 4 B. & Ad. 61; 2 L. J., M. C. 90.

Under an act for the embanking and draining a district consisting of several parishes, an annual rate was imposed on the district, and lands occupied by A. were rated at a certain proportion yearly. The rate by the act was expressly made a landlord's tax, and A.'s landlord had accordingly always paid the amount. The whole rate under the act was necessary for and was spent in each year in maintaining the drainage works. Without such drainage works the land occupied by him would have been under water at certain seasons, and the annual value would have been considerably diminished:—Held, that in assessing him to the poor-rate, a deduction was to be allowed under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, in respect of the drainage rate, as an expense necessary to maintain the land in a state to command the rent. Reg. v. Gainsborough Union, 41 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 7 Q. B. 64; 20 W. R. 250.

A rate upon the Hull Dock Company to the full amount of their profits, without regard to the amount of poor-rates with which they are chargeable, is bad. Rex v. Hull Dock Co., 5 D. & R. 359; 3 B. & C. 516.

The income-tax which a tenant would have to pay on his net profits after payment of his rent is not an allowable deduction. Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 14 Q. B. 571; 19 L. J., M. C. 122; 14 Jur. 519.

c. Right of Tenant to Deduct from Rent.

Assessment of Landlord—Necessity of.]—A local act for the parish of Marylebone makes the occupiers of houses liable to be assessed to parochial rates. The lessor, landlord, owner, or proprietor of houses let out in parts shall be deemed the occupier, and be liable to the payment of rates; and every person renting or occupying any such part shall be liable and compellable to pay such rates, and may deduct the same out of the next or any other rent due to such lessor, &c.:—Held, that to render the occupier of part liable to pay, and to enable him to deduct the rates for the whole of the house, the landlord must be assessed to the rates. Lobban v. Cook, 3 H. & N. 238; 27 L. J., M. C. 254; 6 W. R. 498.

Arrears Leviable on present Occupiers.]—Rates charged by act of parliament upon land, but which the occupiers are to pay, retaining the same out of their rent, and not paying more than the rent which shall from time to time become due from them, and leviable by distress on the occupier neglecting to pay them, are, if left unpaid by outgoing tenants (in the absence of any remedy either against the owners or against occupiers who may have left the rates unpaid, or of any provision for a different course), leviable on the present occupier to the amount of any rent becoming due on any current reservation. Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 357; 2 C. L. R. 814; 23 L. J., C. P. 108; 18 Jur. 380; 2 W. R. 327.

An act directed that landlords should allow their tenants half the gaol-rate:—Held, that a rate was bad which the commissioners made on the parishioners long subsequently to the parish being rated by the county, and by which they collected more than was required, though they carried the overplus to the poor-rate, because it tended to charge the landlords beyond what they were obliged to pay, and occupiers of land who were not so at the time the parish was rated. Curtis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 106.

In the Case of Mines.]—A lease of an iron mine made before the passing of the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), contained a covenant by the lessee to "pay or cause to be paid all manner of taxes, rates, assessments, charges, and impositions whatsoever, parliamentary or parochial, which now are or which shall at any time or times hereafter during the continuance of this demise be taxed, rated, charged, assessed, or imposed upon the said demised mines and premises, the landlord's property-tax only excepted;"—Held, that the lessee had not "specifically contracted" to pay the whole of the poor-rate on the mine, in the event of the abolition of its exemption from the poor-rate, within 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 8. Chalmer v. Bolckow, 47 L. J., Q. B. 562; 3 App. Cas. 933; 39 L. T. 134; 26 W. R. 541—H. L. (E.)

The exception in s. 8 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, to the right of a tenant of a mine to deduct one-half of the rate newly imposed by that act, and paid by him, from the rent payable to his lessor, namely, "unless he has specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of the abolition of the exemption," does not take effect in favour of the lessor, unless the lease has in terms anticipated the imposition of this new liability and thrown it upon the tenant; and a covenant to pay the rent, "free of and from all rates, taxes, tithe rent-charges, expenses and deductions whatsoever, parliamentary, parochial, or of any other nature," will not deprive the tenant of his right to make the deduction given by the above section. Devonshire (Duke) v. Barrow Hæmatite Steel Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 435; 2 Q. B. D. 286; 36 L. T. 355; 25 W. R. 469—C. A.

Costs within "all Rates, Taxes," &c.]—By a local act, the commissioners appointed thereby were authorised to pave and flag footways, and the costs thereof were to be paid by the tenants or occupiers of the houses next adjoining, in default whereof they were to be recovered by distress. Another clause empowered the tenant to deduct the costs so paid by him out of the rent:—Held, that this charge was within the terms of a covenant in a lease subsequently made, whereby the tenant covenanted to pay all taxes, rates, duties, levies, assessments, and payments whatever, which were, or during the term might be, rated, levied, assessed, or imposed on the premises. Payne v. Burridge, 12 M. & W. 727; 13 L. J., Ex. 190.

2. Promoters of Undertakings.

The Metropolitan Board of Works are promoters within the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 133, and may be liable for an action in respect of any deficiency in the poor-rate caused during the construction of their works by their acquisition of rateable land in a parish. Wheeler v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 38 L. J., Ex. 165; L. R. 4 Ex. 703; 20 L. T. 984.

Sect. 133 applies, if it appears that the works, when constructed, may, in part or in whole, be the subject of beneficial occupation. Ib.

Under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 133, the promoters of the undertaking are not liable to be assessed. London Corporation v. St. Andrew's, Holborn, 36 L. J., M. C. 95; L. R. 2 C. P. 574; 16 L. T. 665; 15 W. R. 928.

When land assessed to the poor-rate is taken for public purposes, the promoters, under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, are liable, until completion of the works, to make good all deficiencies in the poor-rate, even in respect of works such as public highways, which can never become assessable. Stratton v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 44 L. J., M. C. 33; L. R. 10 C. P. 76; 31 L. T. 673; 23 W. R. 447.

By the Thames Embankment Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 75), the Metropolitan Board of Works was authorised to construct an embankment on the right bank of the Thames, new streets and other works in a parish. By s. 14, when the roadway and new streets respectively were completed, of which completion a certificate signed by the chairman of the board was to be conclusive evidence, the same with the power of rating the hereditaments within the same respectively, were to be under the jurisdiction of the same persons as the other streets in the parishes in which the same were situate. The Thames Embankment Act, 1863, also incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 133. The board in 1865 proceeded with the execution of the works, and took various lands in a parish. On the 11th of May, 1870, the chairman certified that the roadway and new streets were completed:—Held, that the board was liable to pay the deficiency in poor-rates on lands taken by them under the powers and for the purposes of the Thames Embankment Act up to the 11th of May, 1870, and that the churchwardens and overseers of the parish could enforce payment in a lump sum of the arrears of the deficiency in the poor-rate up to that date. Ib.

The borough-rate (under 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 145) and the county-rate (under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 26) being respectively made chargeable on the poor-rate, the deficiency in the assessment for the poor-rate, which the promoters of the undertaking are liable to make good, includes any deficiency in respect of amounts raised for borough-rate and county-rate, as well as any deficiency in the assessment for poor law purposes properly so called. Farmer v. L. & N. W. Ry., 20 Q. B. D. 788; 59 L. T. 542; 36 W. R. 590.

—— Completion of Works.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under statutory authority, took for the purposes of improvements lands situate in a number of parishes and liable to be assessed to the poor-rate. In some cases all the land so taken was used in the construction of the roadways of new streets; but in some cases more land was taken than was required for that purpose, so that the sanitary authority became possessed of surplus land which was vacant, unoccupied, and unassessed. Such land was to be disposed of either by sale in fee-simple or by the creation of rent-charges which were to be sold within a specified time which had not expired when the rating authority brought an action to recover from the sanitary authority the amount of the deficiency in the assessment to the poor-rate caused by the lands having been taken:—Held, that the works were completed within the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 133, so as to relieve the undertakers from the liability to make good the deficiency so caused, when the streets were fully made, and such of the lands taken as might be liable to assessment had become assessable; and that the deficiency was to be computed from time to time by comparing the assessed value at the time of the special act of the lands taken with the assessed value at the time of computation of such of the lands taken as might have again become assessable. Bristol Governors v. Bristol Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 320; 18 Q. B. D. 549; 56 L. T. 641; 35 W. R. 619; 51 J. P. 676—C. A.

—— Various Improvement Schemes—Separate Undertakings.]—The authority to put in force the compulsory powers of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts was conferred by a provisional order confirmed by a statute which described in one schedule, but under headings separately numbered, the several improvement schemes promoted by the sanitary authority:—Held, that each scheme described in the schedule constituted a separate undertaking, and that the deficiency in the assessment ought to be calculated on each separate undertaking within the rating area affected by it. Ib.

Owners Compounding — Liability of Promoters.]—The owners of houses on land taken by the promoters of an undertaking for the purposes of their works had made agreements under s. 3 of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, with the rating authority of the district to pay the rates instead of the occupiers, subject to being allowed a deduction of 25 per cent. from the amount of such rates, and those agreements were in force when the promoters took the land:—Held, that, on the true construction of s. 133, the deficiency which the promoters were liable to make good must be computed having regard to the rateable value at the time the special act was passed, and that they were not entitled to claim the deduction of 25 per cent. from the amount of the rates levied according to that value. St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry v. London County Council, 64 L. J., Q. B. 615; [1895] 2 Q. B. 104; 15 R. 516; 72 L. T. 802; 43 W. R. 598; 59 J. P. 423.

Lands Occupied but not Used.]—The promoters of a line of railway purchased lands beyond the limits of deviation, afterwards authorised by the company's special act, in order to get rid of the opposition of the owners to the passing of the act:—Held, that they could not escape from liability for the deficiency in the poor-rate by setting up their illegal act, in purchasing the lands without statutory powers. Putney Overseers v. L. & S. W. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 438; [1891] 1 Q. B. 440; 64 L. T. 280; 39 W. R. 291; 55 J. P. 422—C. A.

The deficiency is to be ascertained according to the rental at which the lands were valued or rated at the time of the passing of the special act; the fact that some of the lands were unoccupied at the time when they were purchased did not relieve the promoters of liability. Ib.

3. Crown, Government and Public Property.

Exemption of Crown Property.]—The possessions of the crown are not rateable. Amherst (Lord) v. Somers (Lord), 2 Term Rep. 372; 1 R. R. 497.

The royal palaces are not rateable; but where the site of a palace is demised to a subject for a permanent interest, the grantee who occupies is rateable. Portland (Duke) v. St. Margaret's, Westminster, Cald. 3, n.; Bott's P. L. 131.

—— House of Lords.]—The statutes which authorise assessments for relief of the poor are silent as to the crown. Hence the crown is subject to no poor-rate. To this immunity a wide signification is ascribed; for not only are the palaces of which her majesty is in actual occupation deemed free from assessment, but even the House of Lords is exempt on the ground that it is regal. Leith Harbour Commissioners v. Poor Inspectors, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 17.

—— Government Offices.]—So likewise government offices, as the Post Office, the Horse Guards and the Admiralty, simply because they are in the service of the crown. Ib.

Institution in Occupation of the Crown.]—The National Gallery in Trafalgar square is not rateable. Reg. v. Shee, 3 G. & D. 80; 4 Q. B. 2; 12 L. J., M. C. 53; 7 Jur. 810.

Nor the Museum of Practical Geology. De la Beche v. St. James, Westminster, Vestry, 4 El. & Bl. 385; 3 C. L. R. 448; 24 L. J., M. C. 74; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 375; 3 W. R. 161.

The Museum of Practical Geology is built on part of the hereditary property of the crown. It is used as a museum and a place of education, the institution being under the control of the lords of the treasury. Professors lecture there, being partly paid by fees received from pupils, besides salaries from the public money; but they have no occupation beyond what is necessary for the purpose of giving lectures. A housekeeper resides there, appointed and paid by the board of trade, to take care of the premises, but having no further occupation than is necessary for that purpose:—Held, that the premises were in the occupation of the sovereign for public purposes, the commissioners of woods and forests being in the nature of her managers, and the other persons being in the occupation as her servants, and consequently no one was rateable in respect of the premises. Ib.

Property devoted to Public Purposes.]—To exempt property from poor-rates as being devoted to public purposes, it is not sufficient that it produces no benefit to the occupiers individually and that the occupation is in some degree beneficial to the whole public, yielding additional benefit also to a limited district or community; the benefit must be exclusively public. Reg. v. Harrowgate Commissioners, 15 Q. B. 1012; 4 New Sess. Cas. 319; 20 L. J., M. C. 25; 15 Jur. 422.

The 43 Eliz. c. 2, is, in its provisions, general and inclusive, and no other principle applying to create an exemption from those provisions all property capable of beneficial occupation, and which if let to a tenant would be capable of producing rent, is liable to be rated, though in the hands of trustees who occupy it under acts of parliament for the maintenance of works declared to be beneficial to the public, though such trustees derive no benefit from the occupation, and though the revenues arising from such occupations are exclusively applied to the maintenance of the works. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board Trustees v. Cameron, 11 H. L. Cas. 443; 20 C. B. (N.S.) 56; 35 L. J., M. C. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 746; 12 L. T. 643; 13 W. R. 1069.

A statute which vests property in trustees for purposes of public advantage, and authorises the trustees, for the maintenance of the property and such purposes, to levy tolls upon such portions of the public as may use the property, does not thereby exempt the trustees from the liability to be rated; such exemption can only arise from the use of express negative words, or by necessary implication from other words in the statute, amounting to a prohibition to apply the tolls to the payment of poor-rates. Reg. v. Birkenhead Docks (Trustees), 2 El. & Bl. 148; 21 L. J., M. C. 209; 17 Jur. 162.

The commissioners of works and buildings were empowered to construct a bridge at Chelsea, and to borrow money from the treasury on an assignment of the tolls. The commissioners were authorised to take tolls, which were to be applied in payment of the expenses of the bridge, then in repayment of the sum borrowed, and when that had been repaid there was to be no toll charged for foot passengers. There was no ultimate appropriation of any surplus:—Held, that the commissioners were not liable to be rated, as they were in occupation of the bridge as servants of the crown, deriving themselves no benefit from the receipt of the tolls. Reg. v. McCann, 9 B. & S. 33; 37 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 3 Q. B. 141; 17 L. T. 643; 16 W. R. 397. Affirmed 37 L. J., M. C. 123; L. R. 3 Q. B. 677; 19 L. T. 115; 16 W. R. 985—Ex. Ch.

Trustees of a market, under a local act were held rateable for a market site occupied by them and for which they received the tolls, although there was no surplus profit after paying the annual expenses and interest on the mortgages charged thereon. Reg. v. Badcock or Taunton Market (Trustees), 6 Q. B. 787; 1 New Sess. Cas. 543; 14 L. J., M. C. 58; 9 Jur. 250.

The doctrine that lands held for public purposes are on that account not rateable is now exploded. London County Council v. Erith Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 9; [1893] A. C. 562; 6 R. 22; 69 L. T. 725; 42 W. R. 330; 57 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

—— Public Park.]—When a public body acting under statutory powers purchases land, which it is directed to maintain as a public park, and the cost of maintenance exceeds any income which can be derived in respect of grazing rights, supply of refreshments, &c., there is no rateable occupation. Lambeth Overseers v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 806; [1897] A. C. 625; 76 L. T. 795; 46 W. R. 79; 61 J. P. 580—H. L. (E.)

Property owned by Local Boards.] — A corporation was by their town council constituted a local board of health of a district co-extensive with the borough. The local board occupied a yard within the borough in a parish, solely for the purposes of repairing the highways in the district of which they, as local board, were surveyors. The parish was partly not within the borough:—Held, that the local board of health was rateable in the parish, as occupiers of the yard; their occupation not being for such public purposes as to exempt them from rateability. Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Hull JJ., 4 El. & Bl. 29; 23 L. J., M. C. 183; 18 Jur. 899; 2 W. R. 620.

Prisons—Use of Corn-mill and Tread-mill.]—The justices of the West Riding of Yorkshire were assessed as occupiers of a corn-mill, tread-mill, rooms, work-rooms, and warehouse, which were within, and formed part of the house of correction. The tread-mill, and the corn-mill to which it was annexed, were maintained for the employment of the prisoners, and corn was ground partly for hire, but chiefly for consumption in the gaol. The work-rooms and warehouses were used exclusively for the prisoners to work in, principally for the use and repair of the gaol, and in a small proportion for hire:—Held, that the justices were not rateable. Reg. v. Shepherd, 1 Q. B. 170; 4 P. & D. 534; 10 L. J., M. C. 44; 5 Jur. 432.

—— Governor's House and other Parts of Building.]—The governor was rated for a house and garden in the gaol. He occupied nine apartments; he was obliged, by the rules, to reside within the walls, and the accommodation provided for him was not more than was necessary and convenient. His family used the garden as a pleasure-garden, by permission of the justices, but it was not specially appropriated to their use, the area being essential to the health of the prisoners:—Held, that he was not rateable. Ib.

The officers and matrons of a gaol are not rateable, though they occupy distinct dwellings within the wall, if it is their duty to reside in the gaol, and the accommodation provided for them is not more than is necessary for the discharge of their respective offices. Ib.

Land and buildings were rented by the directors of convict prisons from the duchy of Cornwall, to be used as an establishment for convicts. The land was cultivated, and the produce of it was consumed in the establishment, or sold, and the profits applied to the service of the prison expenditure. The buildings consisted of a prison and a governor's house within the prison walls; also residences at some little distance from the prison, and not connected with it by any boundary wall or otherwise, occupied by the medical officer, the chaplain, and other persons employed in the prison. These houses were allotted to the officers as their official residences; in some cases rent was paid; in others the value of the occupation was taken into account in the amount of wages paid. Part of the building within the walls was occupied as a canteen for the sale of beer to the officers of the prison, and part of the buildings outside the walls was occupied by a grocer, who supplied the residents within the walls, and other customers. The governor had a coach-house and more stabling than was necessary for the discharge of his duties:—Held, that the prison and the governor's house were exempt, with the exception of so much in the governor's occupation as was found to be beyond what was necessary for the discharge of his duties. Gambier v. Lydford Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 346; 2 C. L. R. 951; 23 L. J., M. C. 69; 18 Jur. 352; 2 W. R. 226.

Held, also, that the land used for the employment of the convicts was rateable. Ib.

Held, also, that the official residences without the walls were rateable. Ib.

Held, also, that the canteen and the grocer's shop were rateable. Ib.

Three houses situate beyond the actual wall of a county gaol, but within its precincts, were appropriated to the occupation of the governor and of two of the warders of the gaol respectively, and they inhabited these houses solely as officers of the gaol. The house of the governor had an internal communication with the gaol, but the other houses had no communication with it, except by means of the principal entrance of the gaol:—Held, that the occupier of each of these houses was exempt from liability to be assessed to the poor-rate, on the ground that the houses were virtually part and parcel of the gaol. Beds JJ. v. St. Paul, Bedford, 7 Ex. 650; 21 L. J., M. C. 224.

Assize Courts and Police Buildings.]—So buildings occupied for the county police and the county assize courts, being in the occupation of the crown for public purposes, are exempt. Reg. v. St. Martin's, Leicester, 8 B. & S. 536; 36 L. J., M. C. 99; L. R. 2 Q. B. 493; 16 L. T. 625; 15 W. R. 1096.

By a local act the magistrates of a county were empowered to build assize courts, and to let them for other purposes; they accordingly let them to the borough magistrates to be used as courts of quarter sessions, and made a net profit on such letting, after deducting the expenses incurred thereby:—Held, that they were rateable in respect of the profit so made. Lancashire JJ. v. Cheetham Overseers, 8 B. & S. 548; 37 L. J., M. C. 12; L. R. 3 Q. B. 14; 16 W. R. 124.

—— Judges' Lodgings.]—By a local act certain buildings were vested in the justices of a county, to permit and suffer all the courts of assize, sessions, and others, to be holden there, and also to permit the courts, and the lodgings provided for the judges of assize, to be used and enjoyed for the purposes for which the same might be designed. The buildings were supported by the county at large, and the justices were authorised to let the buildings when not used for county purposes. A quantity of plate and wine, the former paid for by the county, the latter by subscriptions amongst the magistrates, was kept in that part of the buildings used as the judges' lodgings during the assizes, and the plate was used by the judges, and by the magistrates at sessions; the wine was used by the latter exclusively. There were also sleeping-rooms at this building, which were used by the magistrates during the sessions:—Held, that as the buildings were vested in the justices at large for public purposes only, a beneficial occupation of them by certain of the number did not make the whole body rateable. Reg. v. Worcestershire JJ., 3 P. & D. 8; 11 A. & E. 257; 1 Arn. & H. 80; 9 L. J., M. C. 17; 3 Jur. 1050.

County Court—Occupation by Treasurer.]—A treasurer of a county court was lessee under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 48, of a building used for the court-houses, and for other purposes of the act exclusively:—Held, that neither the treasurer nor any one else had such an occupation of the building as to be liable to poor-rates. Reg. v. Manchester Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 336; 2 C. L. R. 974; 23 L. J., M. C. 48; 18 Jur. 267.

Middlesex Sessions-house.]—By an act passed in 1777 justices were empowered to buy land and build a sessions-house, which was not to be rated at a higher figure than the assessment of the site at the date of the act. In 1879 the justices, acting under further statutory powers, bought additional land, and built additions and enlargements to the sessions-house. The sessions-house with the additions was used solely for the administration of justice, the performance of the queen's service, and the discharge of the public business of the county. An officer employed in the business of the sessions resided on the premises with his family. From 1777 to 1879 the sessions-house was rated at the assessment of 1777. Afterwards the assessment was raised and the justices appealed:—Held, that the buildings being used for public purposes connected with the government of the country were not liable to be rated to the poor-rate, for the case came within the principle of Coomber v. Berkshire JJ. (9 App. Cas. 61), and neither the provisions of the act of 1777, nor the fact that a rate at the valuation named in that act had been acquiesced in and paid, deprived the justices of their right to contest the rateability of the premises. Nicholson v. Holborn Union, 56 L. J., M. C. 54; 18 Q. B. D. 161; 55 L. T. 775; 35 W. R. 230; 51 J. P. 341.

Sessions-house—Occupation by County Council—Joint User with Justices.]—County councils are rateable in respect of the occupation of property for administrative purposes, as such purposes are not crown purposes. Where part of a building is used by a county council and by justices jointly for the performance of their administrative duties respectively, the county council, to the extent to which they occupy this part, are rateable. Middlesex County Council v. St George's, Hanover Square, 66 L. J., Q. B. 101; [1897] 1 Q. B. 64; 75 L. T. 464; 45 W. R. 215; 61 J. P. 38—C. A.

Shirehall—Occupation by County Council—User by Justices for Crown Purposes.]—A county council is liable to be rated to the poor-rate in respect of premises vested in and occupied by them for the purposes of the administrative business of the county, although the same premises are also used by other persons for crown purposes. Worcestershire County Council v. Worcester Union, 66 L. J., Q. B. 323; [1897] 1 Q. B. 480; 76 L. T. 138; 45 W. R. 309; 61 J. P. 244—C. A.

Occupation by Servants, Officers or Lessees of the Crown.]—A storekeeper or a porter employed by the crown in the public service, occupying premises belonging to the crown for the purpose of performing such service, is not rateable in respect of such occupation, although it constitutes part of the emoluments of his office. But if he has an occupation of more than is reasonably necessary for the performance of such service, he is rateable in respect of the excess and of no more. Reg. v. Stewart, 8 El. & Bl. 360; 27 L. J., M. C. 81; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 187; 6 W. R. 35.

—— When Excessive.]—In estimating the question of excess, the station of the party employed should be taken into consideration, and reasonable accommodation for his family will not constitute an excess. An excess which is merely trifling ought to be disregarded. Ib.

The same rule applies to the governor of a garrison town, occupying crown property within the town, though he is also commanding officer of a military district much more extensive than the town. Ib.

The rule is applicable though none of the duties are executed on the premises occupied. Ib.

—— By Permission of the Crown.]—By permission of the crown certain persons occupy apartments in Hampton Court Palace, which was formerly a royal residence, but in which the sovereign has ceased to reside. A housekeeper employed by the crown has superintendence of other apartments, containing pictures (which the public are allowed to see) and lumber. The housekeeper resides with her family in the palace for this purpose, and has also the power to enter the apartments first mentioned. In other respects the occupiers of these have exclusive possession of them. Before the entry of each occupier, his apartments are put into ordinary repair by the crown, but afterwards the occupiers themselves do such repairs as are considered necessary by the crown surveyor. They reside there with their families and servants, providing their own furniture, and in some instances (but without the sanction or the privity of the crown) have allowed others, on payment of a sum of money, to use the apartments:—Held, that the occupiers by permission of the crown were rateable in respect of the apartments so held by them. Reg. v. Ponsonby, 3 Q. B. 14; 1 G. & D. 713; 11 L. J., M. C. 65; 6 Jur. 642.

—— According to Profits.]—The ranger of a royal park is rateable for inclosed and cultivated lands in the park, if he is in the enjoyment of the profits of those lands. Bute (Earl) v. Grindall, 2 H. Bl. 265; 1 Term Rep. 338; 1 R. R. 220.

But not for the herbage and pannage, which yield no profits. Ib.

—— Officers' Quarters.]—Where the commanding officer in barracks had distinct apartments allotted to him, one in particular for transacting the business of the regiment, and the others fitted up for the accommodation of himself and his family, who resided there with him, containing a kitchen, wash-house and coach-house, together with a stable, yard and garden:—Held, that he was rateable for the same, having a beneficial enjoyment of them beyond his necessary accommodation as an officer for the purpose of the public service. Rex v. Terrott, 3 East, 506; 7 R. R. 502.

An adjutant having charge of militia stores, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 109, s. 4, and occupying, for that purpose, premises provided for such stores, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 105, s. 2, is rateable to the poor in respect of such occupation so far only as he has a use of them exceeding what is necessary for himself and family, taking into account his station in life. Reg. v. Fuller, 8 El. & Bl. 365, n.

—— Stables rented for a Regiment.]—Stables rented by the colonel of a regiment, by order of the crown, for the use of the regiment, are not rateable to the poor. Amherst (Lord) v. Somers (Lord), 2 Term Rep. 872; 1 R. R. 497.

—— Storehouse occupied by Volunteer Corps.]—The rule that premises occupied by servants of the crown for the purposes of the crown are not rateable applies to premises occupied by a volunteer corps, as servants of the crown. Pearson v. Holborn Union, 62 L. J., M. C. 77; [1893] 1 Q. B. 389; 5 R. 290; 68 L. T. 351; 57 J. P. 169.

—— Houses occupied by Postmaster-General.]—No one is rateable in respect of the occupation of houses, the property of a subject, taken by the postmaster-general, and occupied as a post-office for the purposes of the post-office revenue. Smith v. Birmingham Union, 7 El. & Bl. 483; 26 L. J., M. C. 105; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 769; 5 W. R. 496.

—— Where Employé leases Premises to the Crown.]—A. let to the inland revenue department, for their offices, five rooms of a house in his occupation, it being stipulated that the rent was to be 90*l.* per annum, this sum to include all expenses, namely, rent, rates, taxes, gas, wood, coals; also providing a trustworthy person to reside on the premises, to keep clean, light fires, and attend to the same. A. himself occupied the shop as distributor of stamps for the district:—Held, that the premises so let and occupied were not exempt. Reg. v. Smith, 30 L. J., M. C. 74; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 24; 3 L. T. 687.

—— Lessees of Crown Property—Actual Occupiers.]—Gasworks were erected by the crown at Aldershot for the use of the camp there, and by an arrangement with A. and B., who agreed to make and supply gas to the camp upon certain terms, a licence was granted by the crown to them to use the premises for seven years, for the purpose of enabling them to perform their contract, the crown reserving a right to enter by its servants for certain purposes at all times, the licence also containing a stipulation that it should be revocable any time by writing, and that full possession might thereupon be had without any proceeding at law or equity. A. and B. were rated in respect of occupation of the premises:—Held, that as actual occupiers, they were liable to be so rated. Reg. v. Stevens, 12 L. T. 491.

Police Quarters—Occupation by Officer.]—Officers of the county constabulary under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, are not rateable in respect of their occupation of rooms in the police-office, in which, by the terms of their appointment, they are required to live. Reg. v. St. Martin's, Leicester, 8 B. & S. 536; 36 L. J., M. C. 99; L. R. 2 Q. B. 403; 16 L. T. 625; 15 W. R. 1096.

Under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 88, a house was provided as a police-station for a district of the county; the police constables required to be stationed there resided in it, having no more accommodation than was necessary for the discharge of their duties, and suitable for their degree in life; a deduction was made from their wages as a charge for rent:—Held, that the station being occupied for a public purpose, no one was rateable in respect of it. Lancashire JJ. v. Stretford Overseers, El. Bl. & El. 225; 27 L. J., M. C. 209; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1274.

A cottage was let by the owner to the chief constable of a county, as yearly tenant, at 6*l.* 4*s.* per annum. This cottage the chief constable underlet to one of the county constabulary, whom he appointed, and had power to dismiss, as a weekly tenant at 2*s.* per week (deducted from his wages) so long as he continued such constable, or until he should be removed to another district, determinable upon a week's notice. The constable being assessed to the poor-rate as occupier of the cottage:—Held, that he was properly rated, there being nothing in the nature of the occupation to create exemption. Reg. v. Bridgehouse, 20 L. T. 658.

A superintendent of the police for a county police division had as his quarters a house, which was rented for him by the county authorities, and which he furnished; his rent was paid out of the police rates, and the amount deducted from his salary as superintendent. The house was liable to be examined and its fitness reported by one of her majesty's inspectors, and to be used for purposes connected with the police force as the chief constable might direct, but no room in it was specially set apart for any other purpose than for the use of the superintendent and his family. The house was a quarter of a mile from the police station, within a convenient distance of which it was necessary that the superintendent should reside for the performance of his duties; and he was compelled to live in it as long as it was rented for him by the county authorities, but he was liable to be removed from it at any time, and from one police division to another:—Held, that such superintendent was rateable to the poor-rate in respect of such house, as his occupation was a beneficial one, and the house, being no part of the police-station, did not come within the recognised heads of property which is treated as crown property. The case of Gambier v. Lydford Overseers (3 El. & Bl. 346) approved. Martin v. West Derby Union, 52 L. J., M. C. 66; 11 Q. B. D. 145; 31 W. R. 489; 47 J. P. 500—C. A.

M., a sergeant of county police, with his wife, was obliged to occupy a cottage distant two miles from the nearest county police-station, and another constable also occupied part of the same house, the chief constable paying the rent out of the county-rate. There were no cells attached, nor was any room set apart for county police business to be done there, but sometimes complaints were made there, and summonses signed by magistrates. M. was assessed to the poor-rate :—Held, that M. was not exempt, on the ground that the house was occupied by him in the discharge of his duties as constable or otherwise. Macharg v. Stoke-upon-Trent Assessment Committee, 48 J. P. 775.

The chief constable and certain other officers of the Essex constabulary, with their families, occupied for residence certain premises belonging to the county, in the parish of Springfield, about a mile from Chelmsford. The buildings were all under one roof, and surrounded by a wall. They were used exclusively for police residences, and for no other purpose. There were no cells for prisoners, nor offices, but there were store rooms for police clothing, stables, and a parade room. The police paid rent for the premises according to their rank, which was deducted from their pay. The overseers of the parish rated the appellants for the relief of the poor in respect of their occupation of the premises :—Held, upon the facts, that the premises, not being either one building occupied solely for public purposes, or a police-station in the ordinary sense of the term, were not exempt from rateability, and that the police officers had been properly rated. Showers v. Chelmsford Union, 60 L. J., M. C. 55 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 339 ; 64 L. T. 755 ; 39 W. R. 231 ; —C. A. Affirming 55 J. P. 8.

Assessment, how Made.]—The gross estimated rental and rateable value of buildings occupied by municipal corporations and other public bodies are to be ascertained for the purpose of parochial assessment by reference to the amount of rent which a tenant, unfettered as to user and unrestricted as to charges, would give if the premises were in the market, and not by reference to the annual profit, if any, made or capable of being made by those using the premises for public purposes. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers v. Chorlton Union, 51 L. J., Q. B. 458 ; 47 L. T. 96 ; 46 J. P. 535.

When land is used for a public purpose, and the occupiers are prevented by statute from deriving the full pecuniary benefit which it is capable of producing, the land is to be rated to the poor with reference to the amount of profit actually made, and not with reference to the amount which might be earned by the occupiers if they were not subject to restrictions. Worcester Corporation v. Droitwich Assessment Committee, 46 L. J., M. C. 241 ; 2 Ex. D. 49 ; 36 L. T. 186 ; 25 W. R. 336—C. A.

A local board of health erected and occupied works for the purpose of supplying the inhabitants with water. The works were situate within a parish. In order to benefit the inhabitants, the local board made the scale of charges so low, as to leave a profit far less than would have accrued to a company carrying on the works as a commercial undertaking. In adopting the scale of charges above mentioned, the local board intended to carry out those provisions of the Public Health Act, 1848, the object of which was to insure a supply of water at a low price for sanitary purposes. The assessment committee of the union, within which the parish was situate, by a valuation list assessed the local board at a rateable value of 1,400*l.*, based upon the amount which might have been earned by a trading company carrying on the waterworks for its own benefit ; the local board claimed to be assessed at a rateable value of 540*l.*, based upon the profit actually earned by them :—Held, that the assessment at 1,400*l.* was wrong, and that the local board was liable to be assessed at 540*l.* only ; for under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1848, they could not make rates of an amount more than sufficient to enable them to maintain the waterworks, and they could be lawfully assessed only with reference to the profit actually earned. Ib.

In determining the rateable value of land and buildings owned by a public body for the discharge of duties imposed on them by law, the public body must themselves be taken into account as possible tenants, notwithstanding that such body could not, under the statutes giving them their powers, become tenants of the premises of which they are the owners. London County Council v. Erith Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 9 ; [1893] A. C. 562 ; 6 R. 22 ; 69 L. T. 725 ; 42 W. R. 330 ; 57 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

4. Sewers and Sewage Works.

Rateability.] — The Metropolitan Board of Works was empowered to make the necessary sewers and works for the improvement of the main drainage of the metropolis. The sewers, except at the pumping stations, passed under the highways of the metropolis, or under land on which the board had no property. The pumping stations were erected upon land the property of the board, but were used solely as part of the main drainage scheme. The board was also in occupation of a wharf, lay-by for barges, tramways, engine-houses, coal sheds and dwelling-house, all of which were occupied for the purposes of the main drainage scheme. The board derived no pecuniary advantages from the sewers and other drainage works, but the whole was maintained out of funds raised by a rate made in pursuance of the statutes :—Held, that the sewers were not rateable, on the ground that they were not the subject of a beneficial occupation ; but that the rest of the property had an occupation value, and the board was rateable in respect of them, as there was nothing in the statutes exempting them from rateability. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 38 L. J., M. C. 24 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 15 ; 19 L. T. 384 ; 17 W. R. 527.

The Metropolitan Board of Works constructed sewers on an embankment in a parish, and erected a pumping station and other works, forming part of the main drainage scheme. The board derived no pecuniary advantage from the sewers and other drainage works, and the whole were maintained out of funds raised by a rate made in pursuance of the statutes :—Held, that the sewers were not rateable to the poor-rate, on the ground that they were not the subject of a beneficial occupation ; but the rest of the property was rateable at the value for which the same would let to a tenant from year to year, supposing they were not used for the purpose of the main drainage scheme, but were entirely disconnected from it ; and applied to any other purpose for which they might be available. Metropolitan Board of Works v. West Ham, 40 L. J., M. C. 30 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 193 ; 23 L. T. 490 ; 19 W. R. 246.

A corporation under the provisions of a private act, acquired land at a distance from the town for the disposal of sewage, and they also had land and a pumping station nearer the town to pump the sewage on to the farm. It was impossible to work the sewage farm except at a loss, and the land and pumping station, whilst used as part of the sewage system, were incapable of yielding a profit; but if either the sewage farm with its appliances, or the land and pumping station, had belonged to a private owner, he would have let, and the corporation would have hired the same respectively, at a yearly rent sufficient to support a rate which had been made:—Held, that as the corporation would have been willing to pay a rent for the sewage farm and pumping station if they had not been the owners, they must be taken into account as hypothetical tenants from year to year in order to ascertain the rateable value of the sewage farm and pumping station. Reg. v. London School Board (17 Q. B. D. 738) followed. Burton-on-Trent Corporation v. Egginton Overseers or Burton Union, 59 L. J., M. C. 1; 24 Q. B. D. 197; 62 L. T. 412; 38 W. R. 181; 54 J. P. 453—C. A.

The Metropolitan Board of Works, under powers given to them by statute, constructed certain sewers in the respondent parish for the purposes of the main drainage of the metropolis. The powers, liabilities, and property of the board were, by the Local Government Act, 1888, s. 40, sub-s. 8, transferred to the appellants. The above-mentioned sewers having been rated to the poor-rate of the parish, in a case stated by quarter sessions upon appeal against the rate, it was found that, whilst used as part of the metropolitan sewage system, the sewers were incapable of yielding a profit and could not be worked except at a loss; but it was also found that, if they were, not in the possession of the appellants, but in the hands of a private owner and connected with the metropolitan sewage system to be let to the appellants, they would be willing to pay a yearly rent for the same, for the purpose of being used as part of the metropolitan sewage system, sufficient to support the rate:—Held, that even supposing the appellants had no power legally to become tenants of such sewers they ought to be taken into account as possible tenants of them; that the sewers were capable of a beneficial occupation: and that they were rateable. London County Council v. West Ham, ([1892] 2 Q. B. 44), and London County Council v. St. George's Union, ([1893] 1 Q. B. 210) reversed. London County Council v. Erith Churchwardens, 63 L. J., M. C. 9; [1893] A. C. 562; 6 R. 22; 69 L. T. 725; 42 W. R. 330; 57 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

Outfall sewers belonging to the London County Council, and constructed on land purchased for the purpose, and formerly assessed to the poor-rate, held rateable. Ib.

In rating property in the occupation of the owner the question what the owner would have given if the premises had been to let and he had been free to take them, must be taken into consideration. In determining the rateable value of land and buildings owned by a public body for the discharge of duties imposed on them by law, the public body must themselves be taken into account as possible tenants, notwithstanding that such body could not, under the statutes giving them their powers, become tenants of the premises of which they are the owners. Ib.

To constitute beneficial occupation it is not necessary that it should be such as to yield a pecuniary profit, but the true test is whether it is of value to the occupier. Ib.

Reg. v. London School Board (17 Q. B. D. 738) and Burton-on-Trent Corporation v. Egginton Overseers (24 Q. B. D. 197) approved; and Owens College v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers (18 Q. B. D. 403) disapproved. Ib.

The sewage works on a sewage farm (e.g. a rising main, storage tanks and effluent culverts), which is the subject of beneficial occupation, are rateable. Leicester Corporation v. Beaumont Leys Churchwardens, 63 L. J., M. C. 176; 10 R. 401; 70 L. T. 659.

5. Hospitals and Charitable Institutions.

Profitable Land—Charitable Purpose.]—If land and houses produce profit which is not entirely applied to purely charitable purposes, the occupiers are rateable, although they apply it to purposes beneficial to the public, unless the benefit is enjoyed by all who contribute to the poor-rate, and by them exclusively. Reg. v. Temple, 2 El. & Bl. 160; 22 L. J., M. C. 129; 17 Jur. 572; 1 W. R. 349.

Occupants of Almshouses.]—The objects of a charitable foundation, in the actual occupation of the almshouse and lands for their own benefit, in the manner prescribed by the rules of the institution, and liable to be dismissed for any breach of such rules, are rateable in respect of such occupation. Rex v. Munday, 1 East, 583.

So, where paying no rent, they are removable at the pleasure of the patrons of the charity. Rex v. Green, 9 B. & C. 203; 4 M. & Ry. 164; 7 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 94.

Training School for Army Musicians.]—Premises were occupied and set apart as a training school for the musicians and bandmasters of the army. The men and boys who entered the establishment were duly attested as soldiers, but no money was received from them. The establishment was supported by private contributions from the officers of the Queen's regiments, and by contributions from private pupils for the benefit of the masters who occupied the premises:—Held, that the premises were rateable to the relief of the poor. Reg. v. Kneller Hall Trustees, 6 W. R. 605.

Railway Servants' Orphanage—Local Act.]—By a Local Improvement Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. cxxxii. s. 103, the commissioners of a town were authorised to make district rates for defraying the expenses of the act, provided that none of the rates or assessments which should be made by virtue of the act should be laid upon or in respect of any houses or buildings used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of public charity:—Held, that an orphanage founded and used for the purpose of boarding, lodging, clothing and educating the children of deceased railway servants, and supported partly by subscriptions from railway servants, but mainly by donations from the public, was open to such an extensive class of the community of the kingdom, that the premises were used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of "public charity," within the proviso of the act, and therefore exempt from rateability under it. Hall v. Derby Sanitary Authority, 55

L. J., M. C. 21 ; 16 Q. B. D. 163 ; 54 L. T. 175 : 50 J. P. 278.

Lunatic Asylum—Producing a Profit.]—Lands purchased by voluntary contribution were conveyed to trustees for the purpose of erecting thereon a lunatic asylum, and for such purposes relative thereto as should be determined by the subscribers. The asylum was originally designed for parish paupers or other indigent persons, but, the funds being insufficient, a limited number of affluent persons were afterwards admitted at certain rates of payment in proportion to their abilities. From this and other sources of revenue the trustees, after paying all the expenses of the establishment, had accumulated, in five years, profits to the amount of 2,000*l.*, part of which had been laid out in buildings and purchases for the institution, and part continued to accumulate. All benefactors of 20*l.* or upwards were governors, and they exercise the entire control over the asylum and its funds. The trustees derived no personal benefit from the institution : —Held, that, as the building produced a profit, it was rateable. York Lunatic Asylum v. St. Giles, York, 3 B. & Ad. 573 ; 1 L. J., M. C. 50.

Bethlehem Hospital—Effect of Residence.]—Bethlehem Hospital was erected on lands in the parish of St. George, Southwark, demised to trustees for the corporation of London, under a private act, which directed the building thereon of a new lunatic hospital, in lieu of the old one situate in the city of London, of which the corporation were governors, under letters-patent of Henry 8. In this hospital indigent lunatics were received for cure, and if not capable of cure, were admitted into the incurable class. Payments were made for some of the incurable by friends of the patients or by the officers of the parishes from which they were sent, but the payments were in no instance sufficient to afford a profit. Part of the hospital was used for the custody, care, &c., of criminal lunatics, for whom government made a payment as nearly as possible equal to the expense of their maintenance, but without charge of lodging. The whole funds were applied for the purposes of charity :—Held, that the corporation was not rateable for these premises, although by a local act, persons occupying any land, ground, house, building, tenement, hereditament or premises in the parish were rateable, it being enacted, after noticing by recital the existence of many charitable institutions in the parish which contributed nothing to its exigencies, that no settlement should be gained in the parish by any occupation, residence, &c., in any hospital or other charitable institution then or thereafter situated or established in the parish. Reg. v. St. George, Southwark, 10 Q. B. 852 ; 16 L. J., M. C. 129 ; 11 Jur. 968.

County Lunatic Asylum.]—A county lunatic asylum, built upon land acquired under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, consisted of buildings and of land, twenty acres of which were laid out as a garden, and thirty acres were under cultivation as a farm. The farm and garden were cultivated by gardeners, who were part of the establishment, assisted by the patients, and the result was a source of profit arising from the sale of produce not required for the establishment. The committee of visitors acting under the powers contained in 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, ss. 42, 43, admitted other pauper lunatics than those belonging to their county, and also private lunatics, thereby realising considerable profit :—Held, first, that this was an asylum within 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 35, and therefore rateable only at the value at which the land was assessed at the time of the purchase. Reg. v. Fulbourn Overseers, 6 B. & S. 451 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 106 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 620 ; 12 L. T. 344 ; 13 W. R. 713.

Held, secondly, that the building and land were used for the purposes of an asylum within s. 35, the primary object of the farm and garden being the sanitary occupation of the patients with a view to their cure. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the committee of visitors was not rateable in respect of the profits. Ib.

—— Chaplain—Medical Officer.]—The committee of a lunatic asylum appropriated for their chaplain a residence on ground purchased since the passing of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, but detached from the asylum buildings ; and appropriated for their medical superintendent a house, reasonably fit for a person in his station of life and his family, being on land purchased when the asylum was first erected, adjoining to it, but not being within the curtilage, and he discharged a portion of his official duties in that house :—Held, that the chaplain was rateable to the relief of the poor like any other occupant ; but, by force of s. 35, the medical superintendent was liable to be rated only according to the value or rent of the land at the time it was purchased. Congreve v. Upton Overseers, 4 B. & S. 857 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 83 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 538 ; 9 L. T. 684 ; 12 W. R. 403.

Infirmary.]—A local rate imposed a rate on "all halls, gaols, chapels, meeting-houses, schools, almshouses and other public buildings, churchyards, chapelyards, and meeting-house yards, for every yard running measure of the length in front of such halls, gaols, chapels," &c. An infirmary for sick persons, supported by voluntary contributions, stood within its own grounds, the principal entrance to which was on the south-east side, from a public highway ; and there was also an entrance on the north-west side, from a public road, by a private avenue through pasture land not occupied by the governors of the infirmary ; and on the north-east side it was bounded by a public footway, which extended beyond its grounds, along the pasture land, up to the public road, but there was no entrance from this footway to the infirmary :—Held, first, that the infirmary was a public building, within the act. Bedford Infirmary Governors v. Bedford Improvement Commissioners, 7 Ex. 768 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 224.

Held, secondly, that the rate ought to be assessed according to the running measure on the whole of the south-east side, and on so much of the north-east side as the footpath extended in front of the grounds of the infirmary, but not beyond or on the north-east side. Ib.

Hospitals from which Revenue may be derived.]—A hospital founded by royal charter as a house for the cure and healing of the diseased and infirm poor brought to or received in the house, is rateable to the poor under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, it being possible that a revenue might be derived from its occupation. London Corporation v. Stratton, St. Thomas's Hospital Governors v. Lambeth Overseers, 45 L. J., M. C. 23 ;

L. R. 7 H. L. 477; 23 W. R. 882. Affirming 30 L. T. 37—Ex. Ch.

Semble, that the hospital would also have been rateable had it, by charter or statute, been prohibited strictly and expressly, from being made a source of profit. Ib.

St. Thomas's Hospital was founded by royal charter for the relief and sustenance of poor sick and infirm people, and vested in the mayor, commonalty and citizens of London. The patients pay nothing for their maintenance or the medical services rendered to them. There is a medical school connected with the hospital, and its students pay fees which are wholly devoted to the expenses of the medical school, and are not paid to or in any way accounted for to the governors of the hospital:—Held, that the hospital was liable to be rated, and not at a merely nominal sum. Ib.

Missionary Society—Occupation by Honorary Treasurer.]—The London Missionary Society occupied, under an agreement for a lease, a building for conducting the affairs of that institution. The society was founded entirely for religious and charitable purposes, and was supported by charitable and voluntary contributions. No person slept on the premises. The officers of the establishment attended during a portion of the day only, and the honorary treasurer attended once a week to superintend the society's affairs. Neither he nor any other person connected with the society derived any pecuniary profit or emolument from the occupation of the premises. The treasurer was assessed:—Held, that the treasurer, not being a beneficial occupier, was not liable to be assessed. Reg. v. Wilson, 4 P. & D. 130; 12 A. & E. 94; 9 L. J., M. C. 100.

—— Sale of Works to defray Expenses.]—The objects of the Baptist Missionary Society are, the sending out and supporting missionaries for the conversion of the heathen; it is entirely supported by voluntary contributions, except a fund of 20,000*l.*, the interest of which it devotes to the widows and orphans of missionaries dying abroad, and two funds remitted from Calcutta, to be applied to preaching abroad. No member derives any private advantage from his connection with the society. The society occupies a building comprising various apartments; and employs a secretary, an accountant, three clerks and a porter, some of whom live in a small house in the rear of the main building. The society prints a report and other periodicals, and sells them, if applied for, occasionally, on the premises, the proceeds of which sale are carried to the credit of the society, but do not cover the original cost. Two other charitable societies connected with the Baptist denomination, no member of which has any private benefit from the occupation of any part of the premises, use some part of the building for the purpose of holding their meetings, for which they pay a sum for gas, fire, cleaning, and attendance, equal to the expense incurred by the society on behalf of each, but no more:—Held, that the society had such a beneficial occupation of the premises as made it rateable, Reg. v. Baptist Missionary Society, 3 New Sess. 555; 10 Q. B. 884; 18 L. J., M. C. 194; 13 Jur. 748.

Held, also, that persons occupying premises merely for the purpose of diffusing religious instruction are not, on that account, exempt from rateability. Ib.

College for Religious Purposes.]—A college was founded and endowed for the education of young men for the ministry of the Presbyterian church, and high-class education was therein provided for a comparatively trifling sum. Each professor was paid out of the college funds a fixed salary, and received in addition certain fees from the pupils:—Held, that this was not an exclusively charitable institution within the meaning of the Valuation Statutes, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 63, and 17 Vict. c. 8 (Ir.), and therefore not exempt from liability to be rated. Magee College Trustees v. Valuation Commissioners, 19 W. R. 328.

Church Funds — Schools.]—Premises solely used for the purposes of the management of churches, schools, and funds under the Irish Church Act, 1869, are not used for charitable purposes exclusively, and are not exempt from valuation for rating purposes. Representative Church Body v. Valuation Commissioner, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 561.

6. Schools.

National Schools.]—National schools are rateable although the sums received from the schools are insufficient for the support of the school. Laughlin v. Saffron Hill Overseers, 12 L. T. 542; 13 W. R. 678.

Sunday and Ragged Schools.]—Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, which enacts that every authority having power to impose rates, "may exempt" a building used as a Sunday or ragged school from any rate, the rating authority has a discretion whether they will or not exempt such a building. Bell v. Crane, 42 L. J., M. C. 122; L. R. 8 Q. B. 481; 29 L. T. 207; 21 W. R. 911.

Industrial Schools.]—Premises occupied as a school, the managers of which have received a certificate under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 118, s. 7, constituting it a certified industrial school, are liable to be rated to the poor-rate. Reg. v. West Derby Overseers, 44 L. J., M. C. 98; L. R. 10 Q. B. 283; 32 L. T. 400.

Premises occupied as an industrial school certified and carried on under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 118, are liable to be rated to the poor rate. Durham County Council v. Chester-le-Street Union, 60 L. J., M. C. 9; [1891] 1 Q. B. 330; 63 L. T. 461; 39 W. R. 188; 54 J. P. 759.

Reformatory.] — A reformatory established under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 87, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 109, and 20 & 21 Vict. c. 55, is not rateable, though a part of its support is derived from weekly payments contributed by the parents of the inmates, and part from the proceeds of work done by the inmates, washing, mangling, and needlework, for strangers. Sheppard v. Bradford Overseers, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 369; 33 L. J., M. C. 182; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 799; 10 L. T. 421; 12 W. R. 867.

A reformatory school, which has been certified under the Reformatory Schools Act, 1866, is rateable to the poor-rate. Sheppard v. Bradford (16 C. B. (N.S.) 369), overruled. Tunnicliffe v. Birkdale Overseers, 20 Q. B. D. 450; 59 L. T. 190; 36 W. R. 360; 52 J. P. 452—C. A.

School Board — Hypothetical Tenant.]—In assessing to the poor-rate schools occupied by a school board, which can make no profit in a commercial sense as tenants of the schools, the school board itself ought to be considered as a possible tenant, and the gross and rateable values calculated by the rent which the board might reasonably be expected to pay for the premises for use as schools. Reg. v. London School Board or London School Board v. St. Leonards, Shoreditch, 55 L. J., M. C. 169 ; 17 Q. B. D. 738 ; 55 L. T. 384 ; 34 W. R. 583 ; 50 J. P. 419—C. A.

—— Land Owned and Land Rented by.]—A school board formed under the Elementary Education Act, 1870, is liable to be assessed to the poor-rate, both in respect of schools built upon land belonging to the board, and in respect of schools rented by the board as tenants, even though the board make no profit out of such schools. Reg. v. West Bromwich School Board, or West Bromwich School Board v. West Bromwich Overseers, 53 L. J., M. C. 153 ; 13 Q. B. D. 929 ; 52 L. T. 164 ; 32 W. R. 866 ; 48 J. P. 808—C. A.

Master of Charity School.]—A master of a free school, appointed by the minister and inhabitants of a parish under a charitable trust, whereby a house, garden, &c., were assigned "for the habitation and use of the master and his family, freely, without payment of any rent, income, gift, sum of money or other allowances whatsoever," for the teaching of ten poor boys of the inhabitants, is rateable for his occupation of the same. Rex v. Catt, 6 Term Rep. 332 ; 3 R. R. 193.

Premises and land were conveyed to trustees, to use the same as a school and a dwelling for a certain number of poor boys, with power to appoint a schoolmaster and necessary servants, who should reside in the school-house, for the management and carrying on thereof. Part of the premises was appropriated to the master, as a dwelling-house, the remainder of the building being occupied by the servants and boys, the objects of the charity :—Held, that the master was rateable in respect of so much of the premises as was in his occupation, and that the trustees were rateable for the remainder; the occupation not being one for public purposes. Reg. v. Stapleton, 4 B. & S. 629; 33 L. J., M. C. 17 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 44 ; 9 L. T. 322 ; 12 W. R. 49.

Superintendent with no distinct Apartments.]—A person employed by the Philanthropic Society to superintend the children at annual wages, under an agreement that she should have a dwelling free from taxes, with certain other perquisites, and who might be dismissed at a minute's warning on receiving three months' wages, is not rateable as the occupier of the house provided by the society: she having no distinct apartments in the house but in a bedchamber, and her family not being allowed to live there. Rex v. Field, 5 Term Rep. 587.

Trustees—Beneficial Occupiers.]—The trustees of a Friends' school were assessed in respect of a house and a garden in their possession. The school was a charitable institution supported by donations and voluntary subscriptions, and managed by a committee, for the maintenance and education of poor children. No child was admitted whose parents could not contribute 12*l.* annually towards its maintenance and education, or could afford to educate it elsewhere. The average annual cost of each child was about 20*l.* The trustees and committee received no pecuniary benefit. The superintendent, matron, and servants, who alone (except the scholars) resided on the premises, received salaries and wages. The house contained a room for the meetings of the committee, and sufficient apartments, but no more, for the officers and servants of the establishment. The garden was cultivated for the use of the children :—Held, that the trustees were beneficial occupiers, and were liable to be rated. Reg. v. Sterrey, 4 P. & D. 122 ; 12 A. & E. 84 ; 9 L. J., M. C. 105.

—— Use of Hall for General Purposes.]—The society of licensed victuallers was established by charter, which directed that the members of the society should meet together for the purposes of the society four times in every year, and have power to make by-laws. A school was established for the clothing, educating, and putting out in the world of the children of distressed, decayed and deceased licensed victuallers, in which such children were maintained, clothed and educated free of charge. The school-house contained a hall, in which the quarterly and other meetings of the society upon the general business of the society were held. By a by-law the meetings of the society were to be held in the school or at such other place as the committee might appoint :—Held, that the society was liable to be assessed in respect of the school premises, by reason of their holding meetings in the hall. Licensed Victuallers' Society v. St. Mary, Lambeth, Overseers, 1 B. & S. 71 ; 30 L. J., M. C. 131 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 521 ; 4 L. T. 241 ; 9 W. R. 599.

—— Hypothetical Tenant.]—Trustees were incorporated under an act of parliament for the purpose of establishing and for ever maintaining a college for educational purposes. They were by the act empowered to acquire and hold land as a site, and to erect buildings thereon for the college ; and they had no power to sell or let the land so acquired. In pursuance of the act they purchased land in fee simple, and erected buildings upon it, which they used for the purposes of such college. Such an institution as the college could not be carried on at a profit in the locality, as the expenses would always exceed the amount to be derived from students' fees. The college premises having been rated to the poor-rate on a gross estimated rental of 3,833*l.*, it was found, in a case stated on appeal against the rate, that, if let for any purposes to which (without considerable structural alterations) they were capable of being applied, they would not let for more than 1,300*l.* per annum, which would make the rateable value 1,083*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* The trustees were willing to be rated on that rateable value, but contended that they were not liable to be rated on any larger amount. In arriving at this amount the trustees themselves were not taken into consideration as possible tenants of the premises :—Held, that (assuming the trustees to be rateable upon more than a nominal amount) in estimating the rental the trustees, being unable themselves to rent the premises by virtue of the statutory provisions, must be excluded from consideration as possible tenants, and therefore the rateable value must be reduced to 1,083*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Reg. v. London School Board (17 Q. B. D. 738) explained and distinguished. Owens College v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers, 56 L. J., M. C. 29; 18 Q. B. D. 403; 56 L. T. 373; 35 W. R. 236; 51 J. P. 356—C. A. But see London County Council v. Erith Overseers (63 L. J., M. C. 9; [1893] A. C. 562; 6 R. 22; 69 L. T. 725; 42 W. R. 330; 57 J. P. 821), in which Reg. v. School Board for London is approved, and Owens College v. Chorlton-upon-Medlock Overseers is disapproved.

7. Workhouses.

Workhouse for Employment of the Poor.]—The guardians of a union formed under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, comprehending a parish, and others, built a workhouse in the parish, for the employment of the poor, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 23:—Held, rateable in the parish as occupiers of the workhouse, though it was built on land which, from the nature of the former occupation, had not previously been rated. Reg. v. Wallingford Union, 10 A. & E. 259; 2 P. & D. 226; 8 L. J., M. C. 89.

—— Exemption "for Public Purposes."]—By 22 Geo. 3, c. 56, the workhouse of the parish of St. Luke shall not be liable to be rated to any greater amount than it was at that time assessed at, "during such time and so long as the same shall be used and occupied" for the purposes of the poor of St. Luke's parish. In 1869 the parish of St. Luke was added to the Holborn union, and since that time the workhouse has been, with others, for the common use of the union, and (under the powers conferred on the poor law commissioners by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 26) the poor of the union have been so classified that many of the poor of St. Luke's parish are maintained in its own workhouse whilst some of the poor of St. Luke's parish are maintained in the workhouses of other parishes of the union, and some of the poor of other parishes are maintained in the workhouse of St. Luke's parish. Notwithstanding this, and notwithstanding that the Union Chargeability Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 79), charges all the cost of the relief of the poor upon the common fund of the union:—Held, that the workhouse of St. Luke's parish still continues to be "used and occupied" for the purposes of the poor of St. Luke's parish, within the meaning of the original act, and that its exception from a higher rateability, conferred by that act, still continues. Holborn Union v. St. Leonard's Vestry, Shoreditch, 28 L. T. 106; 21 W. R. 541.

A local act enabled the directors of the poor of Bedford to erect a workhouse, and enacted that all buildings erected by virtue of the act should be free from "all parochial and parliamentary taxes":—Held, that a workhouse erected under the act was liable to be assessed under another local act, which imposed a rate on public buildings for the improvement of the town of Bedford. Bedford Union v. Bedford Improvement Commissioners, 7 Ex. 777; 21 L. J., M. C. 224.

—— House outside Special District.]—Governors of the poor hiring a house without their district for the purpose of setting their own paupers to work there, and using it for that purpose only, are rateable in the parish in which the house is, as occupiers, whether the employment of the paupers there is profitable or not. Bristol (Governors) v. Wait, 5 A. & E. 1; 6 N. & M. 383; 5 L. J., M. C. 113.

By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55, the district rate shall be made and levied upon the occupier of all such kinds of property as by the laws in force for the time being are, or may be, assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor. The guardians of the poor of an extra-parochial place maintaining its own poor, and situated partly within and partly without a borough, occupied a workhouse in the part without the borough, which part was a separate district for the purpose of levying district rates:—Held, that they were liable to a district rate for works in the part without the borough, as occupying a kind of property assessable to the poor-rate within s. 55. Toxteth Park Union v. Toxteth Park Local Board, 1 B. & S. 167; 30 L. J., M. C. 154; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 860; 4 L. T. 283; 9 W. R. 691.

What is a Workhouse within 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76.]—Eight cottages were erected by a parish (for the better lodging the impotent and other poor), partly by means of benefactions, and partly by a fund raised under an inclosure act, according to which such fund was to be applied to the relief of the poor, and accounted for as rates. The cottages were repaired out of the poor-rate. Four of these cottages were always let, at a rent under their value, to industrious labourers; these tenants paid no poor-rates, and occasionally received relief; but, at the time of their being admitted, were liable to pay the rent, which was always collected:—Held, that these four cottages were not workhouses for the purposes of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69. Cantrell v. Windsor Union, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 348; 5 Scott, 716; 7 L. J., C. P. 205.

8. Places of Divine Worship.

Receiving Rents for Pews.]—The trustees of a Methodist chapel, receiving money annually for the rents of the pews, were rateable for the profits made of the building, though in fact they expended the whole of what they received in making disbursements for repairs, and to attendants in the chapel, and in paying the salaries of the preachers; considering that these latter in effect were entitled to receive the surplus profit, after paying all necessary expenses of the chapel; and, therefore, that the rate was substantially upon them, through the medium of the trustees, who received the profits in the first instance. Rex v. Agar, 14 East, 256.

The trustees of a Quakers' meeting-house, of which no profit was made by the pews, were not rateable. Rex v. Woodward, 5 Term Rep. 79.

9. Cemeteries and Churchyards.

Company owning Graveyard.]—By an act a cemetery company was empowered to purchase land to be exclusively used and applied for the purpose of burial; and, in pursuance thereof, to sell and dispose of the exclusive right of burial, either in perpetuity or for a limited period, in the vaults made by them; and also the right of making any family or other vault, with the exclusive right of burial therein, either in perpetuity or for a limited period; and also the right of single interment in any of the vaults made by the company, or in the open ground of the cemetery; which rights were to be exercised subject to the regulations of the company. And the company was required to keep the cemetery and the buildings, and external walls, and all other parts of it, in repair. The company purchased the necessary land in pursuance of the act, and used a portion of it as a common burial-ground, and made vaults which they sold to some parties in perpetuity, to others for a limited period, and disposed of portions to be used as family graves:—Held, that the company was rateable as an occupier of the vaults and family graves, as well as of the common burial-ground. Reg. v. Kensington, 4 P. & D. 327; 12 A. & E. 824; 1 Arn. & H. 105; 10 L. J., M. C. 25; 5 Jur. 170.

A company purchased lands and laid them out as a cemetery. They received fees for interments and conveyed plots of ground to be used as graves. In one year the sum of 2,333*l.* was received by the company as purchase-money for such plots of ground. Each plot was conveyed by indenture purporting to grant it in fee-simple upon trust that the grantee might use it as a place of burial, subject to the regulations of the company, and, subject to such trusts, in trust for the company as part of their property. The company was rated as the occupiers of the lands, and upon the principle that the sum of 2,333*l.* was to be treated as part of the annual value of the occupation of the lands by the company in that year:—Held, that the company was in occupation of the plots of ground which had been sold; and that the principle upon which they were rated was correct. Reg. v. Abney Park Cemetery Co., 42 L. J., M. C. 124; L. R. 8 Q. B. 515; 29 L. T. 174; 21 W. R. 847.

Receiving Rents and Profits for Graves.]—Commissioners were authorised "to pave and cleanse streets, squares, &c., within a township, and to charge the expenses upon the owners of buildings, ground or land within or adjoining the streets, squares," &c.; provided that if the sewers required enlarging, "the owners of houses, buildings, lands, grounds and hereditaments," should pay only a proportion of the expense. B., a clergyman, desirous of building a church and setting out a churchyard, purchased a plot of ground, which was conveyed to trustees for the purpose; and the church and churchyard, having been built and set out accordingly—were consecrated. By the deed of consecration, the right of letting or otherwise disposing of the pews, vaults and graves in the churchyard was reserved to B. The church and churchyard adjoined a street which had been paved by the commissioners. B. conveyed to the defendant, in fee, by way of mortgage, the pews and vaults in and under the church remaining unsold, and so much of the churchyard as had not been sold, together with the rent, pensions, stipends, &c., thereunto belonging. The defendant received the rents and profits arising from the pews, vaults and graves in the church and churchyard and appropriated the same in part satisfaction of his debt:—Held, that he was not liable to be charged, as he was not "the owner of buildings, ground or land" within the meaning of the act. Chorlton-upon-Medlock (Constables) v. Walker, 10 M. & W. 742; 12 L. J., Ex. 88.

Mode of Assessment—Deductions.]—By an act incorporating a cemetery company the company was required periodically to appoint directors who should manage the business and concerns of the company subject to their control, keep and use the common seal, have the custody of books, deeds, &c., call meetings, purchase and sell lands, appoint and displace chaplains and other officers, allow them stipends, take of them securities, make contracts touching the company's undertaking, regulate the mode of interment, and the disposition of vaults, catacombs and graves, and the sums to be paid for exclusive right of burial therein, and for placing monuments, direct the issuing, receiving and disposal of the company's moneys, and all their other dealings, superintend their correspondence, and the keeping of their accounts, and all other things necessary for carrying on their business, and maintaining actions or suits in their name in respect of debts or contracts, and making, enforcing and rescinding contracts, also auditors, who should examine the report to be made by the directors of disbursements and receipts, audit the accounts from which the report was drawn, and inspect the vouchers. The company had two cemeteries in Middlesex and Surrey. The duties and authority of the directors extended to both:—Held, that they were not entitled to deduct from the rateable value the salaries of the directors and auditors and the expenses of an office in London at which the directors transacted the business of the company. Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 14 Q. B. 571; 19 L. J., M. C. 122; 14 Jur. 519.

10. Universities and Colleges.

Oxford.]—The University of Oxford is exempt from liability to be rated in respect of the occupation of the Bodleian Library, the Divinity and other schools, the Convocation House, the Old Convocation House, and Law School, the Clarendon Buildings, and the University Galleries, such occupation being necessary for the purposes for which the university was erected, namely, the advancement of national religion and learning, and appearing not to be used for any quasi private purpose inconsistent with the public purposes of the university. Oxford University, In re, 8 El. & Bl. 184; 27 L. J., M. C. 33; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1249; 5 W. R. 872.

—— Colleges.]—The colleges are liable to be rated in respect of the occupation of college chapels and college libraries. Ib.

Edinburgh.]—The property of the Edinburgh University is neither held by the Crown nor for the Crown. It is therefore rateable. Greig v. Edinburgh University, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 348.

11. Literary and Scientific Societies.

Absence of Money Profits.]—A society is not entitled to exemption from rates, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1, unless it has an express law prohibiting the making of "any dividend, gift, division, or bonus in money unto or between any of its members." Reg. v. Jones, 2 New Sess. Cas. 382; 8 Q. B. 719; 15 L. J., M. C. 129; 10 Jur. 613.

Society for the Advancement of Fine Arts—Society supported by "Voluntary" Contributions.]—The Art Union of London is incorporated by royal charter "for the general advancement of the fine arts." Any person may become a member for a year by subscribing a guinea. Every member is entitled in each year to an engraving of a picture, selected by the governing body and purchased out of the funds of the union, and to one chance in a lottery for pictures, to be selected by the successful members themselves from any of the art exhibitions of the year in London. The art union is specially exempted by act of parliament from any liability to the penalties for an illegal lottery :—Held, that the art union was not a society "supported wholly or in part by annual voluntary contributions," and is, therefore, not entitled to exemption from rating under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1. The word "voluntary" in that section means gratuitous, and does not apply to a case in which an advantage is obtained in return for the money paid. Savoy Overseers v. Art Union of London, 65 L. J., M. C. 161 ; [1896] A. C. 296 ; 74 L. T. 497 ; 45 W. R. 34 ; 60 J. P. 660—H. L. (E.)

Institution for the training of Teachers as well as Pupils.]—By the rules of a society, it was provided that this institution should be designated the Institution for promoting Education of the Labouring and Manufacturing Classes of Society of every Religious Persuasion ; and for the purpose of making manifest the extent of its object, the title of the society should be the British and Foreign School Society ; that a school should be maintained to educate children for the purpose of supporting and training up teachers ; and it was stated that the grand object of the institution was to promote education in general. In the normal school, for training teachers, lectures were to be given on specified branches of literature, science and the fine arts, also lectures on the art of teaching and bible lessons. Instruction was also given in needlework. There were model schools for boys and girls, for the purpose of elucidating the art of teaching ; and it was stated, that the number of children in them was large, in order to afford a sufficient scope and opportunity for the pupil-teachers to instruct and put in practice the science of teaching, the object of the institution being to train up teachers, who might promote education, according to the particular system of this institution, in the United Kingdom and in the colonies :—Held, that the society was not "instituted for the purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts exclusively," and, therefore, that the lands, &c., belonging to it were not exempted from rates. Reg. v. Pocock, 8 Q. B. 729 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 132 ; 10 Jur. 662.

Society for training Members for a particular Profession.]—A society known as "The Institution of Civil Engineers" was formed for the purpose of promoting the general advancement of mechanical science, and more particularly the acquisition of that species of knowledge which constitutes the profession of a civil engineer, being the art of directing the great sources of power in nature for the use and convenience of man, as the means of production and of traffic in states both for external and internal trade, as applied in the construction of roads, bridges, &c., and in the art of navigation by artificial power for the purpose of commerce, and in the construction and adaptation of machinery, and in the drainage of cities and towns. The by-laws and regulations of the society stated under the head of "Objects," that the institution was established for the general advancement of mechanical science, and more particularly for promoting the acquisition of that species of knowledge which constitutes the profession of a civil engineer. The institution consisted of three classes, namely, members, associates, and honorary members, with a class of students attached, and papers were read at the institution on various subjects :—Held, that the primary purpose of the institution was the edification and instruction of its members and students in sundry arts, with the view of enabling them the better to practise a particular profession, and consequently that such institution was not entitled to be exempted from rates under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, as a society established exclusively for the purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts. Reg. v. Institution of Civil Engineers, 49 L. J., M. C. 34 ; 5 Q. B. D. 48 ; 42 L. T. 145 ; 28 W. R. 253 ; 44 J. P. 265.

Institution confined to a particular Profession.]—The United Service Institution comprised a museum of natural history, curiosities and armour, a library, a lecture-room, and rooms for meetings of the members and council or committee of management. The trust deed and the laws of the institution declared it "to be instituted as a central repository for objects of professional art, science and natural history, and for the books and documents relating to those studies, or of general information and the delivery of lectures on appropriate subjects." By the laws the members consisted of officers of the navy, army, marines, regular and local militia, the East India Company's land and sea services, yeomanry, and civil functionaries attached to the naval and military departments. Gentlemen above the age of fifteen, whose names were on the list of the commander-in-chief for commissions in the army, were admissible to become provisional members ; and eminent individuals and benefactors to the institution, and ladies who contributed to the institution might be admitted honorary members :—Held, that the institution was not established exclusively for the purposes of science or the fine arts, and therefore was not exempted from liability to be rated. Reg. v. St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Overseers, 21 L. J., M. C. 53 ; 16 Jur. 335. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Cockburn, 16 Q. B. 480.

Society established by Royal Charter—Part Underlet to Stranger.]—The Linnean Society, incorporated by royal charter, and instituted for the purpose of science exclusively, was supported in part by annual contributions of the fellows, who, before admission, signed an obligation for the payment of such contributions ; which, in case of default in payment, might be sued upon. The society was lessee of contiguous premises, 32, Soho square, and 17, Dean street, which had formerly been one house, and underlet 17, Dean street, and five rooms in Soho square to B. The other part of the premises in Soho square was occupied for the purposes of the society, the librarian and housekeeper occupying as his dwelling, two rooms, and the porter also dwelling in the house, the use of the rooms being taken into account in fixing the amount of salary. On appeal against a poor-rate assessed on the society in respect of 32, Soho square :—Held, first, that it was "a society supported in part by annual voluntary contributions." Linnean Society v. St. Ann, Westminster, Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 793 ; 2 C. L. R. 761 ; 23 L. J., M. C. 148 ; 18 Jur. 859 ; 2 W. R. 516.

Held, secondly, that it was entitled to exemption from rating in respect of the rooms in 32, Soho square, in the occupation of the librarian and housekeeper and the porter. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that B. was liable to be rated for the rooms in 32, Soho square, underlet to him. Ib.

—— Special Privileges to Members.]—The Zoological Society, which was incorporated by charter for the advancement of zoology and animal physiology, occupied land and buildings for housing animals, a museum for stuffed animals, a porter's lodge and greenhouses, and residences for the keepers. Part of the land was cultivated as a flower-garden. Refreshments were sold in the gardens by a person who paid to the society an annual sum for that right, and a band usually played there every Saturday during the months of June, July and August. The fellows of the society paid an annual contribution, or composition. There were also annual subscribers and honorary foreign and corresponding members, who, as well as the fellows, were entitled to a copy of the scientific proceedings of the society. They might obtain, on the payment of one guinea annually, an ivory ticket, which would admit a named person of their immediate family to the gardens and museum, with one companion, daily, each fellow was entitled to personal admission, with two companions, daily:—Held, that it was not a society for the purpose of science exclusively, nor supported in part by annual voluntary contributions within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1. Reg. v. Zoological Society, 3 El. & Bl. 807; 2 C. L. R. 766; 23 L. J., M. C. 139; 18 Jur. 786; 2 W. R. 491.

Musical Society.]—A society by its rules declared to be instituted exclusively for the promotion of the science or art of music within a town, by the giving of concerts or other musical performances at the concert-hall, now belonging to the institution. The hall was occupied for the purpose of giving concerts, to which members of the society, and persons having tickets, which members had authority to give, were admitted. These concerts were much sought after; the music was of a high order, and the art of music was promoted in consequence in the town. The society was rated in respect of their occupation. On one occasion, before the time of the rate, the society had granted the use of the hall gratuitously for a concert, the proceeds of which were given to a charity:—Held, that the casual use of the concert-hall in one instance for a purpose of charity before the rate did not affect the claim to exemption; but that the society, though instituted for the purpose of promoting the fine arts, and producing that effect, was not exempt, since it appeared that the promotion of the fine arts was not the primary object of the society, but only incidental, the primary object being the gratification of the subscribers. Reg. v. Brandt, 16 Q. B. 462; 20 L. J., M. C. 119; 15 Jur. 223.

When Publications restricted for Religious Purposes.]—The Working Men's Educational Union was founded in 1852, having for its object the support of the efforts variously put forth for the elevation of the adult operative population, as it regarded their physical, intellectual, moral and religious condition. The means were, by encouraging popular literary and scientific lectures by preparing suitable diagrams and other aids to lectures, and by promoting the formation of popular lending libraries and mutual instruction classes. There was a provision that the publications issued or recognised by the society should be free from the party politics of the day, and should be scriptural and unsectarian in their character. The lectures and discussions embraced political subjects:—Held, that both by the laws and usages of the society, some of the purposes for which it was instituted were different from those of science, literature, or the fine arts, and therefore it was not exempted from rates by the statute. Scott v. St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Westminster, Overseers. 5 El. & Bl. 558; 25 L. J., M. C. 42; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1207; 4 W. R. 87.

Libraries and Reading Rooms.]—By a statute which incorporated a company the company was empowered to purchase land and erect buildings thereon in which the proprietors were to be beneficially interested in proportion to their subscriptions, and such interest was to be personalty; it was provided that two or more rooms should be set apart and used as public rooms for transacting business. One of the rooms so provided was supplied with newspapers, and non-subscribers were admitted upon an annual subscription:—Held, that the company was rateable for the revenue derived from such using the room. Rex v. Liverpool Exchange Proprietors, 1 A. & E. 465; 3 N. & M. 550; 3 L. J., M. C. 107.

A society had a newsroom, where many of the periodical publications and usual newspapers of the day were taken in; and the Parliamentary Votes, the Course of Exchange, Mark Lane Express, and shipping lists, also share-lists and advertisements of sales, were supplied for the perusal and information of the subscribers. A library was attached to it, in which were 300 volumes, comprising statistical and topographical works, the Mirror of Parliament, and the Statutes at Large. The commercial and general directories and other documents were preserved and filed for the use of commercial subscribers:—Held, that the society was not instituted for purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts exclusively. Reg. v. Phillips. 3 New Sess. Cas. 134; 8 Q. B. 745; 17 L. J., M. C. 83; 12 Jur. 431.

—— Periodical Papers taken in not for Objects of the Society.]—The Cambridge Philosophical Society was originally established for the promotion of philosophy and natural history, and, to carry out its objects, occupied a house consisting of first floor, ground floor and basement, divided into rooms, which were used as a museum, lecture-room, library, and reading-room. In the reading-room were reviews, magazines and periodicals, some of which only were of a purely scientific character; and also the daily newspapers. Part of the subscription of every fellow of the society was paid for the use of the reading-room, and it was generally used by all:—Held, that the society was not entitled to be exempted from rateability, as, whatever might be the objects of the society, as originally instituted, the premises rated were not occupied at the time when the rate was imposed for the purposes of science, literature or the fine arts exclusively. Purchas v. Holy Sepulchre, Cambridge, Overseers, 4 El. & Bl. 156; 3 C. L. R. 6; 24 L. J., M. C. 9; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 3 W. R. 15.

Held, also, that the society was liable to be rated in respect of the whole building, and not merely in respect of the reading-room. Ib.

—— Subscription Library—Interest of Members Transferable.]—By the rules of a society formed for the purpose of creating and maintaining a library, it was provided that a person admitted a member should pay two guineas, and 1*l.* annually, in advance, towards the expenses of the current year; that if the annual subscription was in arrear for three months he should be deprived of all privileges of a subscriber till the subscription was paid; and that he should have the power of transferring his property in the library by any of the methods by which personal property is usually transferred; but that no dividend, gift, or bonus in money should be made to or between any of the members:—Held, first, that the society was instituted for purposes of literature exclusively. Birmingham New Library, In re, 3 New Sess. Cas. 445; 18 L. J., M. C. 89; 13 Jur. 357. S. C., nom. Birmingham Overseers v. Shaw, 10 Q. B. 868.

Held, secondly, that it was supported by voluntary contributions. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the rule allowing subscribers to transfer their property in the library was not a contravention of the rule prohibiting any dividend, and therefore that the land belonging to the society was exempted from rates. Ib.

—— Subscriptions in Form of Shares—Fines Levied for Nonpayment.]—The property in a library was held in shares, the holders of which subscribed one guinea annually. Proprietors might assign their shares. If the annual subscriptions were unpaid for a certain period, fines became due; if unpaid for two years, the shares might be forfeited. The committee had power to dispose of the earlier copies of periodical works. It was not lawful to make any dividend, gift, division, or bonus, in money or otherwise, unto or between any of the members, and no such division was in fact made:—Held, that the premises occupied by the society were exempt; and, first, that the possible increase in the value of the shares did not deprive the society of the benefit of the enactment; and, secondly, that the annual payments were voluntary, because the society could not enforce the payment of them. Liverpool Library v. Liverpool Corporation, 5 H. & N. 526; 29 L. J., M. C. 221; 2 L. T. 325; 8 W. R. 498. S. P., Bradford Library and Literary Society v. Bradford Overseers, 1 El. & El. 88; 28 L. J., M. C. 73; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 513; 7 W. R. 36.

—— Society with Privilege confined to Members, but open to all.]—A society, called the London Library, was established for the purpose of lending books to its members, being supported in part by annual subscriptions, and in part by the voluntary contributions of its members, and precluded by its laws from making any dividend, gift, division, or bonus in money, to or between any of its members:—Held, that such society, being duly certified, was exempted from rates. Clarendon (Earl) v. St. James's (Rector), 10 C. B. 806; 20 L. J., M. C. 213; 15 Jur. 492.

But, where portions of the premises leased by such society were underlet to other scientific bodies:—Held, that this was not such an exclusive occupation of the premises for the purpose of the society as to entitle it to the exemption. Ib.

Privileges confined to Members.]—Premises called the Portico were held in trust for a society consisting of the subscribers for the time being, during such time as they should continue members, pay certain annual subscriptions, and conform to the rules. Their numbers were 400. Books and newspapers were provided out of the annual subscriptions. The Portico consisted of a library of 15,000 volumes on scientific and general subjects, for reference and for circulation among the subscribers; a reading-room, containing magazines, reviews, and other periodical works; and a newsroom, in which were the newspapers, gazettes, reports of the markets, notices of sales, &c.:—Held, that the society was not exempt in respect of the premises, for that the purposes to which they were appropriated were not exclusively purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts; and the promotion of these was not the primary object of the society, inasmuch as the use of the premises and their contents was confined to the members themselves. Reg. v. Gaskell, 16 Q. B. 472; 21 L. J., M. C. 29; 15 Jur. 1156.

Lectures Delivered—Money taken from the Public.]—An institution comprised a library, a theatre or lecture-room, and a newsroom, and was founded in 1808 for the following objects: "First, the formation of a library, consisting of the most useful works in ancient and modern literature; secondly, the establishment of a reading-room provided with the best foreign and English journals and other periodical publications; and thirdly, for lectures on literary and scientific subjects." The funds for purchasing the building and supporting the institution were raised by shares, which were transferable. Persons who were not shareholders might become annual subscribers, and by reason of their subscriptions were entitled to the privileges of proprietors. The members and the annual subscribers amounted to about 400, and the privilege of resorting to and using the establishment was confined to them, except as to the admission to lectures. The library consisted of about 18,000 volumes; the principal reviews, magazines and other periodicals were taken in, together with books of reference, directories, the mining and railway journals and railway time-tables. Of the twenty-four daily newspapers and the weekly newspapers so taken in, some were filed, and the rest were sold for the benefit of the institution. Lectures were delivered on subjects connected with science, literature and the arts, to which the public were admitted on paying for their admission. The whole income was applied in defraying the expenses of the institution; and no dividend, gift, division or bonus in money or otherwise could be made unto or between the members. On appeal against a poor-rate assessed on the premises of the institution:—Held, that it was not a society instituted for the purposes of science, literature or the fine arts exclusively within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1. Russell Institution v. St. Giles-in-the-Fields and St. George, Bloomsbury, 3 El. & Bl. 406; 2 C. L. R. 755; 23 L. J., M. C. 65; 18 Jur. 597; 2 W. R. 169.

Letting Premises for other Purposes.]—A society instituted for purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts, is not exempt from rates, unless their premises are occupied solely for those purposes. Purris v. Traill, 3 Ex. 344; 3 New Sess. Cas. 459; 18 L. J., M. C. 57.

Such a society letting their premises for other purposes are liable to be rated, although the funds are applied to the objects of the institution. Ib.

Rent for Part of Premises.]—A poor-rate was assessed on part of a building occupied by a society, the rules of which declared that its purposes were the promotion of literature, science and the arts. The society was partly supported by annual voluntary contributions. Objections to the claim of exemption were raised under the following circumstances:—The building was the property of the society. The part in question was occupied by it wholly for its own purposes; the rest was let to tenants; the tenants were rated in respect of their own occupations. The rents were received by the society, and formed part of, and were applied as, its general funds:—Held, that this fact did not affect the exemption from rates of the part occupied by the society. Reg. v. Manchester Overseers, 16 Q. B. 449; 20 L. J., M. C. 113; 15 Jur. 219.

Receipt of Money to defray Expenses.]—The society exhibited on the premises at intervals works of art, which it allowed to be sold there. The society paid the carriage of such works of art as were sent to its exhibition from a distance, and on the sale of such of these as were sold received 5 per cent. on the price to defray the expense of carriage, to which purpose, however, the receipt was not adequate. Strangers were admitted to the exhibition on payment at the door:—Held, that the exhibitions appearing to be made bonâ fide with a view of promoting the fine arts, the receipt of money as above in the course of such exhibitions did not affect the exemption. Ib.

In the trust deed of the society was a power to use the premises for the imparting and diffusion of education and knowledge, consistent with the general purposes of the institution:—Held, that these words did not authorise the use of the buildings for the diffusion of education or knowledge, except as connected with the general purposes of the institution, viz., the promotion of science, literature and the fine arts, and therefore did not prejudice the exemption. Ib.

Dividing Proceeds on Dissolution.]—The trust deed of the society contained a provision, that on its dissolution the property should be sold, and the proceeds divided among the then members:—Held, that this was no answer to the claim of exemption, the provision not appearing to be a pretext for accumulation. Ib.

Purpose at the Time of Rating.]—In order to entitle a society to exemption from rates, as being instituted for the purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts exclusively, the purposes to which the society is applied at the time when the rate is made must be such as described in the statute; it is not enough that its original purposes should have been such. Purchas v. Holy Sepulchre, Cambridge, Overseers, 4 El. & Bl. 156; 3 C. L. R. 6; 24 L. J., M. C. 9; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 3 W. R. 15.

Certificate of Exemption.]—The certificate of a barrister that a society is entitled to the benefit of the statute, although a condition precedent to the claim for exemption, is not conclusive proof of a right thereto. Reg. v. Phillips, 3 New Sess. Cas. 134; 8 Q. B. 745; 17 L. J., M. C. 83; 12 Jur. 431.

—— Appeal.]—After a society has obtained a certificate of exemption, and is afterwards rated to the poor-rate, the remedy is by appeal to the quarter sessions. Birmingham Union v. Shaw, Birmingham New Library, In re, 10 Q. B. 868; 18 L. J., M. C. 89.

Effect of Local Act.]—A local act empowered the council of a borough to makes rates on every person occupying any house or land within the borough, for certain purposes therein named. It provided that no person shall be rated in respect of any church, chapel, &c., "or in respect of any building used for the education of the poor exclusively":—Held, that this act did not repeal the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1, or affect the exemption from rates of a house occupied by a society, established for the purposes of literature within the borough. Liverpool Library v. Liverpool Corporation, 5 H. & N. 526; 29 L. J., M. C. 221; 2 L. T. 325; 8 W. R. 498.

12. CORPORATIONS.

Power to Rate.]—By a local act power was given to levy a rate upon all and every the person or persons who did inhabit, hold, &c., any land, house, &c.:—Held, that this authorised a rate being made on a corporation, although, by a clause giving an appeal, they were bound to enter into a recognizance. Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 106.

When Seised of Land for Profit.]—A corporation seised of land in fee for its own profit is within the words "inhabitants or occupiers" in 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, and liable in its corporate capacity to be rated in respect of such land. Rex v. Gardiner, Cowp. 79.

Where a corporation, consisting of a mayor, aldermen, and twenty-four capital burgesses, was seised in fee of pasture lands, and appointed a ranger to keep the keys of the gates, cleanse the ditches, preserve the fences, impound cattle, &c.; and by a court of orders and decrees regulations were annually made concerning the right of common to be exercised by the freemen as to the number of their cattle to be turned on, the time to be turned on, and the price to be paid for each head; which price was always paid by the freemen exercising the right to the treasurer of the corporation, and which money, after deducting the expense of management, was distributed among the poorer burgesses who had no cattle to depasture:—Held, that the corporation was liable to be rated as beneficial occupiers of the land in question. Rex v. Sudbury Corporation, 2 D. & R. 651; 1 B. & C. 389; 25 R. R. 423.

The freemen of York had certain rights of common over land, which being inclosed under an inclosure act, other lands were set out to the mayor and commonalty for the use of the freemen, who turned out cattle to the extent of 2*l.* a year value, but the mayor and commonalty, although they appointed the pasture masters, who regulated the apportionment of the right, derived no benefit:—Held, that the mayor and commonalty were rateable. Reg. v. York Corporation, 1 N. & P. 539; 6 A. & E. 419; 6 L. J., M. C. 121.

Within the precincts of a city was a commonable pasture, containing about thirty acres of land, over which the resident freemen of the city, in number about five hundred and fifty, had rights of pasturage, the soil being vested in the corporation as lords of the manor. The corporation always maintained and repaired out of their corporate funds the fences of the common, and, since 1835, had appointed and paid out of those funds an officer, called the commons warden, to check the illegal stocking of the common, with power to inflict fines, the average amount of which did not cover the expenses. The freemen enjoyed by prescription a right of depasturing on the common all the year round two head of cattle; if a freeman had no stock, his right was in abeyance. The exercise of these rights exhausted all the profits of the land:—Held, that the corporation was the occupier of the soil, subject to a right in gross, which exhausted the profits of the land, and therefore, either it had no beneficial occupation, or the rate must be reduced to nothing. Lincoln Corporation v. Holmes Common Overseers, 8 B. & S. 344; 36 L. J., M. C. 73; L. R. 2 Q. B. 482; 16 L. T. 739; 15 W. R. 786.

Before 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48, a corporation was not rateable in respect of lands of which the profits were payable to the borough fund, although the land was situated in a parish without the limits of the borough. Reg. v. Exminster, 4 P. & D. 69; 12 A. & E. 2.

Exemption under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48.]—A corporation created since 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, is, by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 79, s. 2, entitled to the exemption in 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48, s. 1, because, it being an affirmative enactment that property so situate should be exempt, the exemption continues, notwithstanding the decisions which originally created the exemption of corporate property have been overruled, and the Union Chargeability Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 79) does not affect this exemption of corporate property, in a parish in a union. Reg. v. Oldham Corporation, 9 B. & S. 202; 37 L. J., M. C. 169; L. R. 3 Q. B. 474; 18 L. T. 240; 16 W. R. 789.

Occupation of Yard for the Repair of Highways.]—A municipal corporation was by its town council constituted a local board of health of a district co-extensive with the borough. The local board occupied a yard within the borough in a parish, solely for the purposes of repairing the highways in the district of which they, as local board, were surveyors. The parish was partly not within the borough:—Held, that the local board of health was rateable in the parish as occupiers of the yard, their occupation not being for such public purposes as to exempt them from rateability. Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Hull JJ., 4 El. & Bl. 29; 23 L. J., M. C. 183; 18 Jur. 899; 2 W. R. 620.

13. BRIDGES.

Lease of Tolls—Liability of Owner.]—The lessee of the tolls of a public bridge is not rateable as such, whatever rent he may pay; it not appearing that he was the occupier of any local visible property within the parish, nor that he was an inhabitant resident there, deriving profit there from such tolls, beyond the rent paid by him for the same, which was applicable to the public purposes of the bridge. Rex v. Eyre, 12 East, 416.

Where tolls traverse of a bridge were let at yearly rent, but not by deed:—Held, that no interest passed, and that the owner of the bridge was rateable in respect of his beneficial occupation. Reg. v. Salisbury (Marquis), 3 N. & P. 476; 8 A. & E. 716; 7 L. J., M. C. 110.

Company occupying Bridge—Use of Tolls for temporary Purpose.]—A local act recited, that it would be of great utility to the public to build a bridge, and empower a company to raise a capital sum amongst themselves by shares, and to borrow a further sum by mortgage or annuity, for the building thereof, and authorised tolls to be taken; and enacted that the tolls should be applied, first, in discharging the expenses of the act and paying the mortgagees their interest, and that the surplus should be divided among the proprietors, not exceeding 7½ per cent. on their shares. The excess arising from the tolls beyond the dividends was to be applied in paying off the capital advanced by the proprietors, afterwards to pay off the mortgage debt, afterwards to form a fund for the repairs of the bridge, and then the tolls to cease altogether. The company raised the sums authorised under the act, and also incurred a further debt in completing the bridge. The tolls were applied in discharging this further debt and the interest of the money raised. This debt had not been wholly discharged, and no dividend to the proprietors had ever been made:—Held, that the company was beneficially interested in the tolls till their capital was paid off, and therefore rateable as occupiers of the bridge. Reg. v. Blackfriars Bridge Co., 1 P. & D. 603; 9 A. & E. 828.

Bridge in the Hands of Public Commissioners.]—The commissioners of works and buildings were empowered to construct a bridge at Chelsea, and to borrow money from the treasury on an assignment of the tolls. The commissioners were authorised to take tolls which were to be applied to the payment of the expenses of the bridge, then in repayment of the sum borrowed, and when that had been repaid there was to be no toll charged for foot-passengers. There was no ultimate appropriation of any surplus:—Held, that the commissioners were not liable to be rated, as they were in occupation of the bridge as servants of the Crown, deriving themselves no benefit from the receipt of tolls. Reg. v. M'Cann, 37 L. J., M. C. 123; L. R. 3 Q. B. 677; 19 L. T. 115; 16 W. R. 985—Ex. Ch. Affirming 9 B. & S. 33.

Bridge vested in Trustees for Benefit of Shareholders.]—The property in Putney bridge was vested in trustees to permit thirty shareholders to receive the tolls, and to have the entire management of the bridge. The shareholders were assessed jointly for the relief of the poor of Putney; and the amount not being paid, a summons was issued to all the shareholders to appear before a magistrate of the district. A., a shareholder, living at the toll-house on that side of the bridge which was not within the parish making the rate, appeared in pursuance of the summons served on him, but refused to pay the whole amount of the assessment, whereupon application was made to the magistrate to grant a distress warrant, which he refused to do:—Held, that the shareholders were properly assessed, and that the rule must be made absolute for a mandamus to the magistrate to issue a distress warrant to levy on the goods of A. for the assessment due from all the shareholders. Reg. v.

Paynter, 1 New Sess. Cas. 631 ; 7 Q. B. 255 ; 14 L. J., M. C. 179 ; 9 Jur. 877.

Land occupied in Two Parishes—Toll taken in One.]—A bridge was erected over a navigable river pursuant to an act of parliament. The proprietors purchased on each side of the river in parishes A. and B. land on which they erected a pier and an abutment. They were authorised to erect toll-gates, and to take certain tolls, before any foot-passenger should be permitted to pass or return over or through the bridge. The proprietors took tolls at one side of the bridge only, in parish A. :—Held, that they were rateable for the land occupied by them in parish B. Rex v. Barnes, 1 B. & Ad. 113 ; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 115.

The owner of a bridge resting on piles driven into the soil, one end of which was in the parish of A., and the other in the parish of B., in which parish was situate the toll-house, is rateable for an occupation of land in A., pro ratâ, although the road over the bridge was repaired by other persons. Reg. v. Salisbury (Marquis), 8 A. & E. 716 ; 3 N. & P. 476 ; 7 L. J., M. C. 110.

By two local acts, a company was authorised to erect a bridge across the Thames, from H. to B., and to make roads and approaches, and maintain them at their own expense ; and to erect toll-gates and to collect a portion of the tolls on the roads for the roads alone, and the remainder on the bridge ; or to take the whole toll for the bridge and roads in one sum, and at any part of the bridge or roads. Half of the bridge was to be deemed to be in H. and half in B. In pursuance of the acts the company erected a bridge and formed roads and approaches, and took the tolls at a toll-house at the entrance on the bridge in H. :—Held, that the net rateable value of the bridge, the expenses incidental to the roads and approaches, including the rates to which they were liable, being deducted, was to be divided between H. and B. in equal moieties. Reg. v. Hammersmith Bridge Co., 3 New Sess. Cas. 424 ; 15 Q. B. 369 ; 18 L. J., M. C. 85 ; 13 Jur. 190.

Liability for Bridges as "Buildings."]—By a paving act, commissioners were to rate all "houses, shops, warehouses, coach-houses, stables, cellars, vaults, buildings and tenements," and the rates "upon or in respect of any chapel, meeting-house, hospital, school or other public building, or any garden, wall, yard or void space of ground, should be ascertained according to the number of square yards of pavement paved, &c., belonging to such chapel, to the middle of the street on which the same should abut ; but so, nevertheless, as that no rate or assessment should be laid upon, or so collected, or received for or in respect of any wall, garden, yard, or void space of ground, unless the space should abut upon or front some street, &c., to be paved." A railway company was required to build and for ever after keep in repair a bridge over their railway, with a brick wall at each side thereof, at a spot where their railway intersected a public street or road, which was paved or repaired under the local act. The land upon which that part of the railway was constructed and the bridge erected was conveyed to the company in fee by a former owner, with a reservation of the use and enjoyment of the bridge. The surface of the bridge was paved by the local commissioners :—Held, that the company was liable to be assessed under 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix. ; for although the bridge was not a public building within the meaning of that act, the company was rateable in respect of the side walls, under the description of "dead walls." Arnell v. L. & N. W. Ry., 12 C. B. 697.

By a local act, commissioners are empowered to view any street, square or other public passage or place (within the limits of the act) which now is or hereafter may be built upon or in building ; and if of opinion that the foot and carriage ways are fit to be levelled and paved, to give notice to the owner, proprietor or lessee of any such land, ground, house, . . . tenement or hereditament, situate in any such street, square, or other passage or place, to meet and compound with them for the paving, &c., of such foot and carriage ways ; and in default of the owner compounding, the occupier of the premises may do so, and deduct the composition money from the rent. The defendants were owners of a canal within the limits of the act, over which they had built a bridge, as required by their private act ; the bridge was of brick, having brick walls four or five feet high on each side, and was a public highway, and connected two public streets, the houses of which were built up to either end of the bridge :—Held, that the defendants were not liable to compound for paving the bridge, as it was not within the meaning of the act, not being "a place or passage built upon or in building." Arnell v. Regent's Canal Co., 14 C. B. 564 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 155 ; 18 Jur. 632 ; 2 W. R. 457.

14. Canals.

Principle of Assessment.]—Unless there is some clause of exemption in the acts of parliament by which the canal is governed, land taken for the purpose of a canal will be rateable not according to the value of the land when taken, but according to the value acquired from its having been used as a canal. Rex v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 1 B. & Ald. 289 ; 19 R. R. 316. S. P., Rex v. St. Peter the Great, 5 B. & C. 473 ; 8 D. & R. 331.

Statutory Provisions — Same Proportion as Adjacent Property.]—By a private act of Geo. 3 it was provided that a canal company should from time to time be rated to all parliamentary and parochial taxes, in respect of the lands and grounds already purchased or taken, or to be purchased or taken, and all warehouses or other buildings to be erected by the company, in the same proportion as other lands, grounds and buildings lying near the same are or shall be rated, and as the same lands, grounds and buildings would be rateable in case they were the property of individuals in their natural capacity. Land was purchased by the company, and the canal was made with towing-paths and lock-houses and buildings attached thereto ; subsequently a railway was made on land lying near the canal, running parallel with, and in one place crossing, the canal. Buildings were erected on much of the land lying near the canal, and portions of such lands were converted into gardens for watercresses, and otherwise greatly improved in value. In 1848, the company adopted the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 42, and commenced business as carriers on their own account on the canal :—Held, first, that the land occupied by the canal was to be rated in the same proportion as the open land lying near, the value of which might be increased from time to time by circumstances ; and the buildings belonging to the company in the same proportion as the buildings lying near. Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Hemel Hempstead Overseers, 40 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 6 Q. B. 173; 24 L. T. 228; 19 W. R. 443.

Held, secondly, that the land occupied by the canal lying near the railway was not to be rated in proportion to the improved value of land with a railway upon it. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the rateable value of the canal under the private act was not affected by reason of the company carrying on the business of carriers. Ib.

By a local act of 1793, a canal company was to be rated in respect of their lands and grounds, and all warehouses and other buildings, in the same proportion as other lands, grounds, and buildings lying near the same were rated. Near the offices, machine-houses, wharf, canal, towing-path, and premises, for which the company was rated in a parish, were pieces of vacant land, a piece of garden ground, and sets of premises consisting of warehouses or gasometers, and also of yards and wharves used therewith:—Held, that the wharf, canal, and towing-path of the canal company ought not to be rated in the same proportion as the neighbouring piece of garden ground; nor as if it were land occupied by the canal company, supposing no canal to exist; but that the land upon which the neighbouring sets of premises stood ought to be calculated in the proportion. Warwick and Birmingham Canal Co. v. Birmingham Union, 27 L. T. 487.

A canal act directed that the company should be rated for their lands in the proportion as other lands lying near the same were rated:—Held, that they were to be rated for their lands at the same value as other adjacent lands used for agricultural or garden purposes, and not at the value of adjacent lands let or capable of being let on building leases. Reg. v. Grand Junction Canal, 7 W. R. 597.

By a canal company's special act, it was provided that the lands of the company, whether covered with water or not, and also all dwelling houses, wharves, warehouses, lock houses, and other houses of the company, should be rateable: the lands according to their quantity and quality, and the dwelling houses, &c., according to the nature and respective uses, dimensions and descriptions thereof; and should be charged and assessed in like manner as lands of a like quality, and dwelling houses, &c., of a like and similar size, nature, dimension or description in the respective parishes where the same should be situate, were, or should be assessed or charged. The lands adjoining the canal were all built upon, and the assessment committee sought to assess the canal and towing path on the following principle. They assumed the area occupied thereby to be covered by buildings similar in rateable value to the buildings adjoining the canal, allowing for necessary roads, access, &c., and then took a proportionate part of such rateable value as representing the rateable value of the lands so covered as distinguished from the buildings:—Held, that the canal ought to be rated in like manner as land of the like quality in the parish uncovered with buildings, the value of which might be increased from time to time by circumstances, and that the mode of assessment proposed by the assessment committee was therefore incorrect. Regent's Canal Co. v. St. Pancras Assessment Committee, 47 L. J., M. C. 37; 3 Q. B. D. 73; 37 L. T. 637; 26 W. R. 281.

An act incorporating a canal company provided that the company should from time to time be rated to all parliamentary and parochial rates and assessments for and in respect of the lands and grounds to be purchased or taken by the company, in the same proportion as other lands lying near the same are or shall be rated, and as the same lands and grounds so to be purchased or taken would be rateable in case the same were the property of individuals in their natural capacity. In pursuance of the act, the company purchased lands and made the canal. At that time the lands adjoining those so purchased were let for use as mere land; but they afterwards greatly increased in value, and, at the time that the rate appealed against was made, were extensively built over, and worth, if let for the purpose of being built on, 6*d.* per annum the square yard. The average rateable value, at the time of making the rate, of the nearest land to the canal, which was then still used as mere land, was about 3*l.* per acre per annum. Upon other lands adjoining the canal, wharves, yards and buildings had, before then, been erected, the average rateable value of which was then 5*d.* the square yard:—Held, that the company was not rateable in proportion only to the rateable value of the whole of the lands adjoining the canal, considered as mere land; but that the true principle of their rateability was that the adjoining land covered with buildings should be brought into hotchpot with adjoining lands of other descriptions, and that the company should be rated for the lands occupied by the canal, according to the aggregate value, at the time of making the rate, of the whole land brought into hotchpot; the value being the rent which a tenant from year to year would give for the whole: in estimating which, regard was to be had to that portion of the rent paid by the tenant of any buildings standing on the land, which he might be supposed to pay in respect of its site, as enhanced in value beyond the uncovered land, by being built upon. Reg. v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., 3 El. & El. 186; 29 L. J., M. C. 238; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1146; 2 L. T. 694; 8 W. R. 690.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90 (Lighting and Watching Act), s. 33, the owners and occupiers of houses, buildings and property (other than land) rateable to the relief of the poor in any parish, shall be rated at a rate in the pound three times greater than that which the owners and occupiers of land shall be rated at for the purposes of that act. A company was possessed of a canal and a towing-path, bridges, and a dry dock, lined with masonry, used for repairing the canal boats:—Held, that "property" meant things ejusdem generis with houses and buildings, and did not include a canal and a towing-path; that the bridges and dry dock were accessories to the canal, and must be considered part; and that the whole ought to be rated as land. Reg. v. Neath Canal Co., 40 L. J., M. C. 193; L. R. 6 Q. B. 707.

The possessors of canal property, consisting of the canal, towing-path and warehouses and offices adjacent, are to be assessed upon the same principle as the occupiers of land. Rex v. Bridgewater Trustees, 4 M. & Ry. 143; 9 B. & C. 68; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 81.

A canal company, being rateable as occupiers of land, can only be rated by the same estimate as the other land in the parish, namely, according to the value of their tolls, to be let by the year. Rex v. Oxford Navigation Co., 6 D. & R. 86 ; 4 B. & C. 76 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 168.

—— Improvement of Land by Use of Canal.]—An act directed that a canal company should be rated for all lands and buildings in the same proportion as other lands and buildings lying near the same, and as the same would be rateable if they were the property of individuals in their natural capacity ; and a subsequent act directed that all rates and assessments upon the personal estate of the company should be assessed in every parish in proportion to the length of the canal in such parish :—Held, that the company was liable to be rated for their lands and buildings only at the same value as other adjacent lands, and not according to the improved value derived from the land being used for the purposes of the canal. Rex v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 1 B. & Ald. 289 ; 19 R. R. 316.

An act of parliament (33 Geo. 3, c. 121) provided that the company of proprietors of the Dudley Canal Navigation should from time to time be rated in respect of the land and grounds taken and used by them, and warehouses and buildings erected, or to be erected, by them, as other lands, grounds and buildings lying near their canals and collateral cuts, were or should be rated :—Held, that this clause was not to be construed retrospectively, so as to be applicable to the works made previously to the passing of the statute ; the latter were rateable according to the improved value derived from tonnage dues. Rex v. Dudley Canal Co., 7 D. & R. 466.

By a clause in a canal act, tolls were not to be rated, and the company was to be rated from time to time for and in respect of the lands taken, and the warehouses and other buildings to be erected by the company, "in the same proportions as, but not at any higher value or improved rent than other lands, grounds and buildings lying near or adjacent thereto, are or shall for the time being be rated, and as the lands, warehouses and other buildings so taken and erected would have been rateable in case the same had been continued in their former state, and not been used for the purpose of the navigation" :—Held, first, that the proper mode of laying a poor-rate on the company was according to the fluctuating value of adjacent lands and buildings, and not according to their value at the time of the formation of the canal ; and, secondly, that the increased value was to be taken for the time being, from whatever source it might arise, and not that the increase arising from the canal itself was to be omitted. Rex v. Monmouthshire Canal Navigation Co., 5 N. & M. 68 ; 3 A. & E. 619 ; 1 H. & W. 464.

By an act for making a navigable communication between two places, a company was formed, and authorised to purchase lands. The act then directed that the company should be rated and charged to all parliamentary and parochial taxes, rates and assessments for any lands to be purchased or taken, or warehouses, or any other buildings to be erected by them in pursuance of that act, in the same proportion as other lands and buildings adjoining to or lying near the same :—Held, that the company was liable to be rated for their lands and buildings at the same value as other adjacent lands and buildings, and not according to the improved value derived from their being used for the purposes of the navigation. Rex v. Chelmer and Blackwater Navigation Co., 2 B. & Ad. 14 ; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 125.

—— Lease to Railway Company—Annual Rent.]—In pursuance of an act of parliament a canal company granted a lease in perpetuity of their undertaking to a railway company, under the provisions of which a canal, part of their undertaking, was worked and managed by a joint committee in the name of the canal company, and was worked by the railway company, and the railway company made up to the shareholders of the canal company the deficiency in the earnings of their undertaking in accordance with the guarantee in the lease of the payment of certain rents or sums of money in the nature of rent :—Held, that the annual rent or sum of money received by the canal company from the railway company under the lease was not to be taken into account in determining the rateable value of the canal. Reg. v. Lapley Overseers, 9 B. & S. 568.

—— Deduction of Expenses.]—In fixing the amount of a rate on a canal company, the sum paid by the proprietors for poor-rate, the expense of collecting the tolls, of repairing the banks of the canal, and of supplying it with water, ought to be deducted from the gross profits. Rex v. Oxford Canal Co., 5 M. & Ry. 100 ; 10 B. & C. 163 ; 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 62.

—— When Tolls on Part of Canal exempt from Rateability.]—Where goods are carried along two different lines of canal, one of which is by statute exempted from being rated in respect of the tolls, and the other not ; though the voyage happen to finish on the unexempted line, yet the canal company shall not be rated for more than such proportion of the tolls as accrued in respect of the carriage along the unexempted line. And the toll arising in respect of so much per ton per mile is to be rated only for so many miles as the goods were carried along the unexempted line. And where the act directs that the tolls should be exempt from any taxes, rates, &c., other than such as the land which should be used for the purpose of the navigation would have been subject to if the act had not been made, that goes to exempt the tolls, quâ tolls, altogether from being rated in respect of the line so exempted, leaving the land rateable as before. Rex v. Leeds and Liverpool Canal Co., 5 East, 325.

Assessment of different Parts of Canal Property.]—A company was the owner of a canal and premises, such as wharves, engine-house and reservoirs. The assessment to the poor-rate upon the wharves was made upon the whole area, each taken as a whole, on wharf, land and buildings, with fixtures and machinery attached, and deriving some additional value from the capacity of being applied to such purposes as those of a canal company. As regarded the engine-house, that was assessed at the rent which it was considered reasonable for the company to pay from year to year. As regarded the canal proper, it was assessed to the gross receipts along the whole line of the canal, allowing certain deductions for repairs, salaries, tenants' profits, &c. As regarded the reservoirs, these were assessed as land independently of their contributing to the earnings of the canal :—Held, that the principle of assessment was correct. Birmingham Canal Navigation Co. v. Birmingham Overseers, 19 L. T. 311.

A canal company is rateable in each and every parish through which its canal passes, as an occupier of land covered with water. Rex v. Trent and Mersey Canal Co., 2 D. & R. 752; 1 B. & C. 545.

The proprietors of a canal navigation are in general, and when there is an act of parliament directing otherwise, to be rated in proportion to the profits derived from the use of that part of the canal situate within the parish for which the rate is imposed. Rex v. Dudley Canal Navigation Proprietors, 1 M. & Ry. 20; 7 B. & C. 236; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 3; 31 R. R. 181.

The tolls payable for passing through locks belonging to a canal company are rateable wholly in the parish in which the locks are situate. Rex v. Lower Mitton, 4 M. & Ry. 711; 9 B. & C. 810; 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 57.

A navigation act empowered the proprietor to take so much per mile per ton for all goods carried along the canal:—Held, that they were rateable for the tolls in the different parishes where the tolls became due, that is, where the respective voyages finished, though for convenience they were authorised to collect the tolls where they pleased, and did collect them in other parishes. Rex v. Stafford and Worcester Canal Navigation, 8 Term Rep. 340.

Where a canal runs through several parishes, a rate in one should be in proportion to the earnings in that parish, not in proportion to the length of the part of the canal there. Rex v. Kingswinford, 1 M. & Ry. 20; 7 B. & C. 236; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 3; 31 R. R. 181. S. P., Rex v. Chaplin, 1 B. & Ad. 926; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 121.

—— Under a Local Act—Construction.]—By a local act a canal company was incorporated, and power was given to the company to hold lands, without restriction as to amount or locality, and to take lands, and to form a canal in enumerated parishes, amongst which H. was not. By s. 101, lands of the company were to be rated like other lands of a like quality in the same parishes. Subsequently, lands were purchased in the parish of H., in the name of a trustee, and occupied by the company as a reservoir:—Held, that the section was prospective, and applied to all lands acquired by the company, and that the lands in H., the fee of which was in another party, but which were substantially occupied by the company, were to be rated as other lands of a like quality in the parish of H. Regent's Canal Co. v. Hendon Overseers, 6 El. & Bl. 852; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 208; 4 W. R. 743.

A local act enacted that a canal company should be rated to all parliamentary and local taxes and assessments for its lands and buildings in the same proportion as other lands and buildings lying near and as the lands and buildings would be rateable if they were the property of individuals:—Held, that a parish in Buckinghamshire was to be assessed to the county rate on an estimate on which the company's lands and buildings were assessed as directed by the statute. Reg. v. Aylesbury with Walton, 9 Q. B. 261; 4 Railw. Cas. 315.

—— Deduction of Expenses.]—In assessing a canal passing through several townships, and having locks and other works in the particular township, the expenses of repairing and maintaining those locks and works are not to be deducted from the gross earnings of the canal of that township, but only such proportion of the whole expenses of repairing and maintaining the locks and works on the entire canal as, upon an apportionment on the mileage principle, would attach to that township. Reg. v. Coventry Canal Navigation Co., 1 El. & El. 572; 28 L. J., M. C. 102; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 862.

Exclusive Occupation—Ancient River formed into a Canal, with New Cuts, Channels, Locks, &c.—Towing-path.]—By virtue of a series of private acts the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company were empowered to dredge and cleanse the river Dun, and otherwise to maintain it with locks, new cuts, channels, canals, and towing-paths made in connection with it, navigable for large boats, and to exact toll in respect of all craft except pleasure boats conducted along the river and the artificial cuts. The railway company having been rated to the relief of the poor in respect of the river and artificial cuts, &c., in ten parishes of the respondent union, objected that they ought not to be rated in respect of the natural river course, or the towing-paths on the banks thereof, on the ground that they had there only an easement or right of way, and had not exclusive possession, either as owners or occupiers:—Held, that they were liable to be rated in respect of the natural river course, but that they were liable in respect of the towing-paths as exclusive occupiers, irrespective of the question whether or not they were owners of the soil. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Doncaster Union, 69 L. T. 350; 57 J. P. 792.

Exemption of Land from Rates.]—Where a statute empowered the proprietors of a canal to make rates in respect of vessels, and expressly exempted such rates from all taxes, rates, &c.:—Held, that the land occupied by the canal was also thereby exempted. Rex v. Calder and Hebble Navigation Co., 1 B. & Ald. 263. S. P., Erewash Canal v. Eastwood, 4 W. R. 494.

15. WATERWORKS.

Assessment—Profitable Occupation.]—The Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), was applied to the city of Worcester, and the corporation of Worcester became the local board of the city, and for the purposes of supplying the sanitary requirements of the city took land, and erected waterworks thereon, in a portion of the parish of Claines, which was within the municipal boundary of the city. The parish of Claines forms part of the Droitwich Poor Law Union, and its area is partly without and partly within the city of Worcester, but for poor-law purposes is distinct and separate from the city. The city was supplied with water from these works, and the corporation fixed a rate of fourpence in the pound per annum on the net annual value of the dwelling-houses supplied with water for domestic purposes, and made an additional charge for water used for trade and other special purposes, and a certain rate for water supplied by meter. These prices were fixed with a view to the sanitary improvement of the city and not as a commercial transaction, and, in fact, left but little profit above the actual cost of supply. In the case of small tenements, the charge was still further reduced. The sums charged for domestic purposes would, where the rent of the house was twenty pounds or less, be less than twopence per week, to which limit they were permitted to rate by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 76. In the other cases the statute did not limit the rate to any particular sum :—Held, that the rateable value of the waterworks was to be assessed on the profitable occupation, as it was in fact, and not on what it might be in the hands of a trading company without restrictions. Worcester Corporation v. Droitwich Union, 45 L. J., M. C. 81; 34 L. T. 288; 24 W. R. 490. Affirmed, 46 L. J., M. C. 241; 2 Ex. D. 49; 36 L. T. 186; 25 W. R. 336—C. A.

A waterworks company was empowered to lay pipes in the streets, and did lay pipes accordingly. The company was assessed to the land-tax as holders of land in a district in which they had pipes laid down, but in which they had no other property :—Held, that the company was not liable to be assessed to the land-tax for the land occupied by their pipes. Chelsea Waterworks Co. v. Bowley, 17 Q. B. 358; 20 L. J., Q. B. 520; 15 Jur. 1129.

Where land is occupied by a local authority for public purposes the land is to be assessed to the poor-rate at the rent which a tenant would pay if subject to the same restrictions as are imposed upon the local authority. Therefore, where a sanitary authority occupies land and works for the purpose of supplying its town with water, the authority being precluded by law from making a profit out of these works, the rateable value of the lands and works is nothing. Peterborough Corporation v. Stamford Union, 31 W. R. 949.

—— Land covered by Water and Land occupied by Pipes.]—By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, s. 17, the occupier of any land covered with water . . . shall pay to the sewer rate in respect of his property one-fourth part only of the rate in the pound payable in respect of houses and other property. A waterworks company was possessed of a canal, of filter beds supported on brick arches, and sometimes covered with water, at other times not, and of land used for keeping sand for the filter beds; and they also occupied land by iron pipes, mains, and service pipes :—Held, that the canal and the filter beds were land covered with water within the meaning of s. 17, and ought to be assessed at one-fourth of the amount to be imposed on houses; but that the land used for the purpose of keeping sand, and the land occupied by iron pipes, mains, and service pipes, did not come within that description, and ought to be assessed at the full value. East London Waterworks Co. v. Leyton Sewer Authority, 40 L. J., M. C. 190; L. R. 6 Q. B. 669; 20 W. R. 95.

An act for lighting a hamlet empowered trustees to raise money by rate upon all persons who should inhabit, occupy, or enjoy "any messuages, tenements, coach-houses, stables, cellars, vaults, houses, shops, warehouses, or other buildings, tenements or hereditaments, situate or being in any of the streets, squares, lanes, or other public passages and places within the said hamlet," so as all rates after the first be laid upon all persons who should inhabit, occupy, or enjoy "any messuages, tenements, coach-houses, stables, cellars, vaults, houses, shops, warehouses, or other buildings, tenements or hereditaments, situate and being in such of the streets, squares, lanes, and other public passages and places only within the hamlet as shall from time to time be lighted by virtue of this act" :—Held, that a waterworks company was not rateable for their mains and other pipes, plugs and apparatus, fixed in the ground and used for the conveyance of water in the streets, roads, and public places in the town, as tenements. East London Waterworks Co. v. Mile End Old Town Trustees, 17 Q. B. 512; 21 L. J., M. C. 49; 16 Jur. 121.

Paving commissioners appointed under a local act were empowered to make rates upon all persons who "shall inhabit, hold, occupy, possess, or enjoy any land, house, shop, warehouse, cellar, vault, or other tenements or hereditaments within any of the streets, &c., of a district; such rate not to exceed 1*s.* 2*d.* in the pound of the yearly rents or value of such of the lands, houses, &c., situate in the streets, &c., the greater part of which should be paved in a certain manner, and not to exceed 7*d.* or 6*d.* in the pound respectively for such of the lands, houses, &c., situate, &c., the greater part of which should be paved in a certain other manner, or only repaved under the act." Different assessments were provided for public buildings, dead walls, and vacant ground adjoining the streets, &c., and for unoccupied houses. No specific assessment was provided for water-pipes laid down in the district. The commissioners in whom the paving materials of the streets, &c., were expressly vested, were empowered to alter the position of the pipes belonging to any water or gas company underneath such streets, squares, &c. :—Held, that an incorporated water company, whose mains, pipes, and other apparatus were laid down within the district, was liable under the act to be rated as occupiers of land. Reg. v. East London Waterworks Co., 18 Q. B. 705; 21 L. J., M. C. 174; 16 Jur. 711.

Hypothetical Tenant — Gross Profits.] — The total receipts of a local board in respect of water rates, rents, and charges for a year were 5,700*l.*, and the total expenditure debited to the waterworks account 14,107*l.* To balance accounts 8,404*l.* was transferred from the general district rate to the water rent account. No part of the 8,404*l.* was a receipt in respect of water rates, rents, or charges, nor was any part applied towards working expenses; but 5,680*l.* of it was applied to payment of instalments on loans, and 2,724*l.* to other purposes. An assessment committee had assessed the waterworks at 8,424*l.*, made up of the 5,700*l.* for water rates, rents, and charges, and 2,724*l.*, the difference between the 8,404*l.* taken from the district rate and 5,680*l.* the instalment of loan. Upon a question whether 5,700*l.* only or that sum supplemented by 2,724*l.* (making 8,424*l.*) was the correct figure to adopt as a basis of calculation for ascertaining the rateable value of the works :—Held, that, having regard to the 63rd and 71st sections of the Local Act of 1858, the 2,724*l.* was not received by the local board as an unconditional aid, but by way of loan, and that it was not the less so received because the repayment was deferred and conditional upon a contingency; accordingly that, for the purpose of arriving at the rateable value of the waterworks, the 2,724*l.* should not be included as a receipt by a hypothetical tenant under conditions that made it potentially available to him as an item of gross profit. Merthyr Tydfil Local Board v. Merthyr Tydfil Union, 60 L. J., M. C. 42; [1891] 1 Q. B. 186; 63 L. T. 647; 39 W. R. 255; 55 J. P. 294.

—— Deduction for Interest on Money Borrowed.]—The appellants under an act of parliament constructed a reservoir in the respondent's parish for the supply of water to mills situated on certain streams. They were authorised by the act to apply to this purpose money subscribed for the relief of sufferers by the bursting of a former reservoir, and also to raise a further sum on the security of rates to be levied on the occupiers of such mills in proportion to the falls of water occupied by them. The rates so to be levied were limited by the act and were appropriated to current expenses, maintenance of the reservoir, payment of interest on sums borrowed, reserve, &c. The water flowed from the reservoir into the natural course of the streams supplying the mills, nothing further having to be done to it by the appellants after it left the reservoir. Some of the falls in respect of which the rates were payable were situated within and others without the respondent's parish :—Held, that the appellants had a beneficial occupation of the reservoir in respect of which they were liable to be rated ; in estimating the rateable value they were not entitled to deduct the sum paid for interest on money borrowed ; that the property was not exempted from rates by reason of the appropriation clause ; that in estimating the rateable value the sums recovered for rates payable in respect of falls situate without the parish should be taken into account as well as those within the parish. Reg. v. Holme Reservoirs Directors, 10 W. R. 734.

—— Deduction for Rates—Works in Excess of Existing Requirements.]—A waterworks company had works extending over many parishes. All the works were in use for the supply of their customers, but they were in excess of the existing requirements of the company, and were created for and adapted to an increased supply in future years. In the calculation by which the rateable value of the mains and service pipes in one of the parishes supplied was to be arrived at :—Held, that, the whole of the works being used for the purpose of distributing water as a source of profit, the whole of the capital expenditure must be taken into account, and not merely so much as would have sufficed to provide the existing supply :—Held, also, that the deduction to be made in respect of the rates which the hypothetical tenant would have to pay is the amount of the rates that would be payable on the sum at which the works ought to be assessed, and not necessarily the rates based on the existing valuation list. Reg. v. South Staffordshire Waterworks Co., 55 L. J., M. C. 88 ; 16 Q. B. D. 359 ; 54 L. T. 782 ; 34 W. R. 242 ; 50 J. P. 20—C. A.

—— Deduction for Repairs—Water-rates in aid of Water-rents — Remuneration to Contractor.]—By their special act, 39 & 40 Vict. c. clxxxv., the appellants, a local board, were empowered to make a public water-rate, but s. 106 provided that they should not levy any higher public water-rate than might be required to discharge so much of the expenses of maintaining the waterworks as the amount of water-rents and other payments for a supply of water should not be sufficient to discharge :—Held, that in assessing the appellants to the poor-rate in respect of their reservoirs, pipes, and works, the amount collected by means of a water-rate ought to be taken into account ; that a certain percentage on the total cost of the property might be allowed for wear and tear as the "probable average annual cost of repairs" within the Parochial Assessment Act (6 & 7 Wm. 4, c. 96), s. 1 ; and that the adequate remuneration to a contractor for erecting the works was not the true measure of the net rateable value of the premises. Dewsbury Waterworks Board v. Penistone Union, 55 L. J., M. C. 121 ; 17 Q. B. D. 384 ; 54 L. T. 592 ; 34 W. R. 622 ; 50 J. P. 644—C. A.

Occupiers of Reservoir—Use of Pipes.]—Geo. 1 granted to a company a canal or basin and an old pond in St. James's-park, to be converted into reservoirs, and to be used and enjoyed by them as such, for the purpose of supplying Westminster with water during the royal pleasure. Liberty was also granted to them to break up the ground through the park for laying pipes from the old pond and canal for the purpose aforesaid, making good the ground so broken as soon as possible. The company took the basin and pond in pursuance of the warrant, and used it accordingly, making a reservoir, but was never allowed to alter or repair it but under the inspection of the crown surveyor. They paid no rent. The ranger was rated for the herbage growing on the surface of the soil in the park, including that under which the pipes passed :—Held, first, that the company was rateable as occupiers of the reservoir ; and, secondly, that they were rateable for the occupation of land below the surface of the soil by their pipes, though the ranger was rated for the herbage. Rex v. Chelsea Waterworks Co., 2 N. & M. 767 ; 5 B. & Ad. 156 ; 2 L. J., M. C. 98.

Waterworks occupied under Special Enactments.]—By a local act commissioners were empowered to erect waterworks for the purpose of supplying water for watering the streets, used in case of fires, and other public purposes, in Liverpool, and to levy a rate on the borough for the expenses thereof. The act contained express prohibitions against using this water for domestic purposes. The commissioners erected waterworks in an adjoining township of West Derby. By subsequent acts the property and powers of these commissioners became vested in the corporation of Liverpool. Water was supplied in Liverpool for domestic purposes by trading companies from waterworks also situated in the township of West Derby. The corporation was, by a local act, empowered to purchase the undertakings of these companies, and for that purpose to borrow money. When purchased, the corporation was to supply water for domestic purposes to the inhabitants of Liverpool, which then comprised the parish of Liverpool, and part of the township of West Derby, and parts of other townships, with power to supply the inhabitants of an adjoining district, including the whole township of West Derby. It was enacted that the corporation was so to regulate the charges for the water so supplied as to raise no more money than the interest of the money borrowed, and the expenses of managing the waterworks. The purchase was completed, and those waterworks were vested in the corporation. By a subsequent act the corporation was empowered to use the water from the commissioners' waterworks and the company's waterworks indiscriminately, and the pipes were accordingly united, and the two sets of waterworks were occupied in common :—Held, that the corporation was rateable in the township of West Derby for the waterworks there occupied by them under these enactments. Liverpool Corporation v. West Derby Overseers, 6 El. & Bl. 704 ; 25 L. J., M. C. 112 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1002.

Licence to Lay down Pipes.—By a paving and lighting act, the tenants and occupiers of all messuages, houses, warehouses, shops, cellars, vaults, stables, coach-houses, brewhouses, and other buildings, gardens or garden ground, and other tenements within the same town, were liable to be rated for the purposes of the act:—Held, that, under such act, a waterworks company was not rateable as occupiers of a tenement in respect of their water-pipes carried under ground, for supplying those towns with water. Rex v. Manchester Waterworks Co., 3 D. & R. 20; 1 B. & C. 630.

A mere liberty granted under an act of parliament to a water company to break up the ground and lay down pipes is not liable to be rated. Ib.

"Property other than Land," what is.]—A water company were occupants of pipes under the surface of the soil in a parish in which the provisions of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, had been adopted. The parish was within the metropolitan district. In a lighting rate imposed under the Metropolitan Management Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), the company was rated as coming within the description in s. 165 of occupants of "houses, buildings, and property other than land," at a rate three times greater than that at which the occupiers of land were rated:—Held, that they were rateable at the lower rate, as occupiers of land. Reg. v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., 6 El. & Bl. 1008; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 411; 5 W. R. 71.

By an improvement act, a town council was empowered to make and levy a rate upon any person who occupied any house, shop, &c., except as hereinafter excepted, according to the full net annual value thereof respectively; and by a section it was provided that "the occupiers of any land covered with water" shall be rated in respect of the same at one-fourth part only of the net annual value:—Held, that a reservoir of a water company came within the proviso, but that water-pipes did not. Reg. v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., 1 B. & S. 84; 4 L. T. 242.

Held, secondly, that the pipes and mains of the company within the borough were rateable to the borough to the full extent, and not thereby to one-fourth part of their net annual value as land covered with water. Ib.

Reservoir—Property occupied solely for Public Purposes.]—Commissioners under a local act constructed a reservoir in a township across a stream, upon land purchased by them under the powers of the act, for the purpose of affording a more regular supply of water to the mills upon the stream, and by means thereof cleansing the stream, and thereby promoting the health of the persons residing upon its banks. The water flowed from the reservoir along the ancient bed of the river, and the result obtained was a more regular supply of water to the mills, and thereby an increased regularity in the motive power, whereby the mills were enabled to continue working at times when, without the reservoir, they would be compelled partially to cease working. None of the mills benefited by the reservoir were situate in the township, but in other townships lower down the stream. The commissioners, under the powers contained in the act, levied rates upon the mills, in order to pay the interest on the money borrowed for constructing the reservoir, and the necessary expenses of its maintenance. The commissioners were rated as occupiers of the land and reservoir, and it was admitted that the assessment would be a fair and proper assessment on the occupiers of the reservoir if the works constructed and carried on by the commissioners had been a private undertaking of any person or persons who had increased the available supply of water to the different millowners, as was done by the reservoir, and who at pleasure could allow or refuse the millowners the benefit of such increase of water, and could charge them for such supply:—Held, first, that the reservoir was not exempted as property occupied solely for public purposes. Reg. v. Kentmere, 17 Q. B. 551; 21 L. J., M. C. 13; 16 Jur. 265.

—— Increase of Water Supply to Millowners.]—Held, secondly, that the amount of the rate was correct, because, first, the commissioners, being all millowners, must be considered as representing the whole class to be benefited by the improved supply of water, and in the situation of a water company established for the same purpose; secondly, the purpose to which the land was then applied, and not the manner in which it was used at any former period, must be regarded; and, thirdly, the rateable value of the mills must be estimated at an amount minus the contribution to the assessment paid by each millowner, so that the millowners should not be doubly assessed. Ib.

Water-pipes extending into several Districts.]—A metropolitan parish contained seventeen large districts of building land, for each of which a special act of parliament was passed, and the rating clauses for paving, lighting, &c., differed in language. The N. water company had water-pipes under the streets in all the districts. In one local act, the rating clause specified only "houses, shops, warehouses, cellars, vaults, buildings, and tenements." Another specified only "grounds, houses, shops, gardens, vaults, and other buildings":—Held, that the words "tenements" and "grounds" must have the widest meaning, and included all land capable of being let at an annual value, and that the N. company was rateable in all these local districts as occupiers of land in respect of their water-pipes. New River Co. v. St. Pancras Vestry, 45 J. P. 75.

The 6 Geo. 3, c. 70, for better supplying the inhabitants of Bath with water, reciting that there were springs of water in the neighbourhood belonging to the corporation, enacts, that they shall have power and authority to cause the water to be conveyed from such springs to the city, and gives them authority to enter upon and break up the soil of any public highway or waste, and the soil of any private grounds within two miles of the city, and the soil or pavement of any street within the city, in order to drain and collect the water of the springs, and to make reservoirs, and to erect conduits, water-houses, and engines, necessary for keeping and for distributing the water, and to lay underground aqueducts and pipes for the same purpose; and it vests the right and property of all these in the corporation:—Held, that, in addition to the springs, the corporation was liable to be rated for the reservoirs made by them in the parish of Lyncomb and Widcombe under the act, as for land occupied by them, which reservoirs, by means of aqueducts and pipes laid underground partly in the same parish, and through the parish of St. James into the parish of St. Peter and St. Paul in Bath, for the supply of the city, produced to the corporation a clear annual profit of 600*l.*; but that the corporation was not rateable for the whole of the entire profit in the first-mentioned parish, in which the springs were first collected into the reservoirs; a proportion of such entire profit accruing to them from the underground aqueducts and pipes laid into the soil of the other parishes, in respect of which they were to be considered as the occupiers of land yielding annual profit in those parishes. Rex v. Bath Corporation, 14 East, 609; 13 R. R. 333.

Where a company was empowered by act of parliament to lay underground through the streets of a town main pipes for the conveyance of water, and the inhabitants, with the company's consent, to lay pipes communicating with such main pipes to their houses, paying to the company a rate for such privilege:—Held, that the company was rateable in the parish where the main pipes lay in respect of those pipes, and the rates paid thereon. Rex v. Rochdale Waterworks Co., 1 M. & S. 634. And see Rex v. Liverpool, 8 East, 455, n.

—— Apportionment of Rateable Value and Deductions.]—Works of a water company extended into several parishes, and consisted of two portions, one of which, being the several pipes which delivered the water to the consumer, was directly productive of profit; and the other consisting of reservoirs, buildings, &c., indirectly conduced to such production in some parishes. The company had no works, but service pipes. The rateable value, for the purposes of poor-rates, of the entire works was 30,800*l.*, the rateable value of the reservoirs, buildings, &c., valued as land and buildings deriving additional value for their capacity of being applied to the objects of a water company, 6,500*l.*:—Held, that the rateable value ought to be apportioned among the several parishes in the following manner: the rateable value of the reservoirs, buildings, &c., valued as above to be first deducted from the total rateable value, and distributed among the parishes in which this portion of the works was situate, according to the extent of such works in each parish; and the residue of the rateable value to be apportioned among the parishes containing the service pipes, in the ratio of the net profits produced in each of those parishes. Reg. v. Mile End Old Town Overseers, 10 Q. B. 208; 3 New Sess. Cas. 13; 16 L. J., M. C. 184; 11 Jur. 985.

The pipes and reservoirs of a waterworks company were so placed in the several parishes in which they were respectively situate, that the whole together formed one apparatus for the supply of water, in some only of such parishes, to the customers of the company; a part of such apparatus being rateable to the poor-rate in each parish:—Held, that it was not a correct principle, in order to ascertain the rateable value of the apparatus in any one particular parish, to calculate the total rateable value of the whole apparatus in all the parishes, and then divide that value among the several parishes, according to the quantity of land occupied by the apparatus in each of them. Chelsea Waterworks Co. v. Putney Overseers, 3 El. & El. 108; 29 L. J., M. C. 236; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 2 L. T. 663; 8 W. R. 607.

A waterworks company was empowered to construct works and lay mains and pipes through and under certain highways, roads, &c., and to supply certain parishes with water. The company erected in a parish, H., not being one of those parishes, engine-houses and other works, and laid down a main thence, part of which ran through H., conveying the whole of the water to reservoirs in another parish, from which reservoirs the water was distributed, through other mains and pipes, to the customers of the company in the several parishes named in their acts. The company derived no direct profit in H., and had no freehold or leasehold interest in the soil of the highway:—Held, that the company being in possession of the mains buried in the soil, and therefore, de facto, in beneficial occupation of the part of the soil occupied by the mains, was rateable in respect of them. Reg. v. West Middlesex Waterworks Co., 1 El. & El. 716; 28 L. J., M. C. 135; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1159.

—— Calculation of Profits.]—Held, also, that, as regarded the principle of assessment, the company was to be rated in H. in respect of the plant, engine-houses, buildings, wharves, mains, lands, and premises, as for mere land and buildings, with fixtures and machinery attached, and deriving some additional value from their capacity of being applied to such purposes as that of a water company, such additional value being derived from an increase of demand beyond supply, according to the principle regulating exchangeable value, and not by reference to receipts earned in another parish, beyond assuming that they were sufficient to pay for all outgoings, including profits on capital. Ib.

Direct and Indirect Sources of Profit.]—It may be doubted whether the distinction which has been taken between direct and indirect sources of profit, as applied to the mains and pipes of a water company running through different parishes, is well founded, and more especially in cases where the mains only belong to the company, and not the service-pipes. Sheffield United Gaslight Co. v. Sheffield Overseers, 4 B. & S. 135; 32 L. J., M. C. 169; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 623; 8 L. T. 692; 11 W. R. 1064.

The proper allowance to be made for tenants' profits and interest on capital is entirely a question of fact. Ib.

Supplemental Valuation List.]—During the first year after a quinquennial valuation list in the metropolis had come into operation, some new houses were connected by means of service pipes with a water company's main previously existing and assessed in the quinquennial list. Such connections caused an increase of the company's gross receipts arising from the additional rentals derived from the new houses; but no alteration was made in the mains themselves, the service pipes being the property of the owners or occupiers of the houses:—Held, that the increased rental so derived constituted an alteration of the matters stated in the valuation list, within s. 46 of the Valuation of Property (Metropolis) Act, 1869, and was properly taken into account in a supplemental list made under that section, whereby the rateable value of the company's mains was assessed at a greater amount than it had stood at in the quinquennial list. Reg. v. St. Mary, Islington, Assessment Committee, 48 L. J., M. C. 123; 4 Q. B. D. 309; 40 L. T. 322; 27 W. R. 785.

16. Navigable Rivers.

Easement for the Purpose of River Navigation—Bed of River.]—Certain persons were authorised under an act to make navigable, clear, cleanse, scour, open, enlarge and straighten a river, dig and cut banks, erect weirs, locks and dams, make new cuts and trenches through lands adjoining which they were to purchase, and make towing-paths over land partly purchased and partly rented by them:—Held, that they were not rateable as occupiers of the river or of the land taken for the purposes of the navigation, because they were not occupiers of it, but had a mere easement in it; but that they were rateable for the new cuts and trenches, and for the weirs, locks and dams erected on their own land. Rex v. Mersey and Irwell Navigation Co., 4 M. & Ry. 84; 9 B. & C. 95; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 70. And see Rex v. Chelsea Waterworks Co., 5 B. & Ad. 156; 2 N. & M. 765; 2 L. J., M. C. 98.

—— Bed of River and Towing-path.]—Where the predecessors in title of a railway company were empowered by statute to scour, enlarge and deepen, and otherwise to improve the navigation of a river, and to make a towing-path, the company are not in occupation of the bed of the river, but have merely an easement; nor is the ownership or exclusive occupation of the towing-path vested in them. They are not, therefore, rateable in respect either of the bed of the river or of the towing-path. Rex v. Mersey and Irwell Navigation Co. (9 B. & C. 95) and Badger v. South Yorkshire Ry. and River Don Navigation Co. (1 El. & El. 347) followed. Doncaster Union v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 6 R. 280; 71 L. T. 585—H. L. (E.)

—— Cuts and Towing-Paths.]—By a local act, a company was authorised to make the river Avon navigable from B. to H., and to make any new cuts through the lands adjoining the river; and commissioners and a compensation jury were authorised to settle and assess what satisfaction the landowners should have for their lands made use of by the company, and to adjust what share of such purchase-money every tenant having a particular estate should have; and the order, sentence or decree so made was directed to be made a record of quarter sessions. By a subsequent act, the company was authorised to make a horse towing-path, and further powers were given for the purchase of lands. The company made a new cut and a horse towing-path; and an inquisition of a jury assessed, as a recompense for the value of the land taken for the act, thirty years' purchase. No conveyance was ever made to the company of any lands for the cuts or towing-path; but previously to making the latter, the company gave a satisfaction to the respective landowners of a general sum or annual payment, as a recompense for the land taken. The remainder of the land taken by the company for a towing-path, and not used by them, was depastured or otherwise used by the adjoining landowners:—Held, that the company had such an exclusive occupation both of the cuts and towing-path as made them rateable. Bath River Navigation Co. v. Willis, 3 P. & D. 220; 11 A. & E. 463; 2 Railw. Cas. 7. S. C., nom. Bruce v. Willes, 9 L. J., M. C. 43.

Locks and Cuts in Land.]—An act authorised certain persons to make and maintain the river Avon navigable, to scour the river, to make new cuts through lands adjoining, and to build locks, first making satisfaction to the owners of lands. The act then appointed commissioners for settling and apportioning such satisfaction, and then empowered the undertakers to take certain tolls. The undertakers made the river navigable, and scoured and cleansed it from time to time, and made a cut and lock for the purposes of the navigation on land purchased by them:—Held, that they were not the occupiers of the river Avon, and rateable in respect of it, as land covered with water, but that they were rateable in respect of the cut and the lock made on their own land. Rex v. Avon Co., 4 M. & Ry. 23. S. C., nom. Rex v. Thomas, 9 B. & C. 114; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 66.

Occupation of House by Surveyor.]—A person occupying a house as surveyor under the trustees of a navigable river is liable for poor-rates, although by the act regulating the tolls to be taken on the river, such tolls are exempted from being rated, and although the trustees have no beneficial interest in the navigation of the river or the tolls. —— v. Armstrong, 2 Stark. 543. And see Malkin v. Vickerstaff, 3 B. & Ald. 89.

Right of Navigation—Liability of Grantee.]—The grantee of the right of navigation of a river is rateable in respect of tolls arising from a sluice erected in the parish, though he himself resides elsewhere, and the tolls are collected in another parish. Rex v. Cardington, Cowp. 581.

Navigation through several Parishes.]—Where a navigation runs from A. to B. through several intervening parishes, and the tolls for the whole navigation are collected in those two parishes, they may be assessed in those two parishes for the whole amount, according to the proportion collected in each. Rex v. Aire and Calder Navigation, 2 Term Rep. 660; 1 R. R. 579.

Where by a navigation act the proprietor was entitled to a toll of 4*s.* per ton for goods carried from A. to B., or from B. to A., and to a proportionable sum for any less distance; and was also enabled to appoint any place of collection:—Held, that the tolls for goods carried the whole voyage from A. to B. were rateable in B., though in fact they were collected in a parish between A. and B., because the tolls become due where the voyage is completed. Rex v. Page, 4 Term Rep. 543; 2 R. R. 454.

Where the proprietors of an inland navigation, running through fourteen different parishes, were rated to the poor of the fourteenth parish (in which the profits arising from the whole navigation were received) in respect of the whole amount of the profits:—Held, that the rate was too high, and ought to have been apportioned among all the parishes though which the navigation passed. Rex v. Palmer, 2 D. & R. 793; 1 B. & C. 546; 25 R. R. 502.

Where a navigable river passed through several parishes, and dues on tonnage became payable for goods carried along the line of navigation, and landed at a wharf locally situate within a particular parish:—Held, that a rate on the proprietors of those dues, for their whole amount in that parish for the river tonnage, could not be considered as a rate on that part of the river locally situate within such parish, but as a rate on the parts of the river situate as well within that parish as without it; and consequently that it could not be supported. Rex v. Milton, 3 B. & Ald. 112; 22 R. R. 317.

The owners of mills in a township, in compensation for the loss of water occasioned to them by an adjoining navigation, were allowed, by act of parliament, to take certain tolls at a lock situate on the line of navigation, but in a different township :—Held, that they were not rateable at their mills, in respect of the tolls so taken. Rex v. Aire and Calder Navigation Co., 3 B. & Ad. 533 ; 1 L. J., M. C. 90.

—— Proportion to Profits.]—The proprietors of a river navigation are rateable in a parish through which the navigation passes (though no riverage dues are received in such parish), in proportion to their profits upon the whole line of navigation. Rex v. Portmore (Earl), 2 D. & R. 798 ; 1 B. & C. 551 ; 25 R. R. 505.

—— Deductions for Expenses and Tenant's Profits.]—The proprietors of a river navigation, formed under an act of parliament, are rateable in every parish through which it passes, in proportion to the profit derived from the navigation in such parish. Rex v. Woking, 5 N. & M. 395 ; 4 A. & E. 40 ; 1 H. & W. 539 ; 5 L. J., M. C. 17.

The proprietors of a river navigation running through several parishes were entitled to claim a toll of 4*s*. The trustees fixed the tolls at 4*s*. for the whole distance, and at different decreased rates for fixed portions only of the whole distance :—Held, that in calculating the sum at which the proprietors were to be rated in any one parish, the proportion was to be ascertained on a mileage calculation with respect to the whole distance as regards the thorough trade ; and on a mileage calculation with respect to the distance gone over as regards the short trade, excluding in the latter case all trade in parts in which the particular parish was not situated. Ib.

In calculating the amount of profit, a deduction for the necessary repairs and expenses must be made, the proportion of the particular parish being ascertained where the repairs are equal throughout the whole distance, by a mileage calculation. Ib.

So a reasonable sum must be deducted for tenants' profits. Ib.

No deduction is to be made in respect of sums payable by the act of parliament, as compensation to persons injured by the navigation, out of the profits of the undertaking ; such sums being only in the nature of rent-charges, and not affecting the value of the occupation. Ib.

Commissioners of a navigation having borrowed 28,000*l*. on mortgage, and being still in want of funds, agreed to let the navigation and tolls for ninety-nine years, the lessee undertaking to pay the interest of the 28,000*l*. An act was afterwards passed confirming the agreement and empowering the commissioners to lease the navigation and tolls for the remainder of the term to the persons entitled under the former agreement, and enacting that they should pay the interest of the 28,000*l*. yearly to the mortgagees, in default of which the commissioners might require the toll-collector to pay such interest to the mortgagees out of the moneys in his hands :—Held, that the interest paid by the lessees was in substance a rent, and that the rate ought to be calculated upon it, and that the lessees were not occupiers under a beneficial lease, though the interest was only about 1,400*l*. a year, and the annual earnings at the time of making the rate were 3,418*l*. (from which, however, about 1,000*l*. was to be deducted for repairs, &c.), one year's value being no criterion, and there being no proof that the rent was unduly small. Rex v. Chaplin, 1 B. & Ad. 926 ; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 121.

17. MOORINGS.

Barge Moored to Bed of River and made into a Pier.]—A. moored a barge in the Thames between high and low water mark ; the moorings, by which it was moored, were stationary in the bed of the Thames, and were in the parish of Greenwich. The barge was connected by a chain with stairs on the land, the soil of which was not the property or in the occupation of A., and which was at that point a common highway to the Thames. Movable planks were laid from the shore on to the barge, and thence to another barge moored farther out in the Thames, and which always floated. By this means a pier was constructed, which was permanently kept there and used for embarking in steamboats and landing from them ; and A. was remunerated by the parties so using, and he had the sole control of the pier :—Held, that he was rateable to the poor-rate for Greenwich, as an occupier of land in the bed of the river. Forrest v. Greenwich Overseers, 8 El. & Bl. 890 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 96 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 480 ; 6 W. R. 279.

Floating Pontoon.]—A railway company owned a pontoon which they used for a landing stage for a steam ferry across a tidal river. The pontoon floated, except at low tide, when it rested upon the mud of the foreshore. It was moored to a pier, by the licence of the pier owners, by means of mooring chains. To protect the piles of the pier from being chafed by the mooring chains, the company had driven a pile into the bed of the river, and with the permission of the pier owners had bolted it and a cross-piece of timber to the piles of the pier :—Held, that the company were not in occupation of land so as to make them rateable to poor-rate. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Kingston-upon-Hull Union, 75 L. T. 127 ; 60 J. P. 789—C. A.

Barge attached to Posts—Movable Chattel.]—On a navigable river, the bed of which was vested in a corporation, a barge, the property of an individual, was moored by means of two iron rings fixed to the barge and passed loosely and movably round two posts which had been placed in the bed of the river twenty years before for the purpose of being so used, but without the leave and licence of the owners of the soil. The barge could be, but had never actually been, moved :—Held, that he was not rateable in respect of the posts, inasmuch as he was not shewn to have been in exclusive possession of them, nor of the barge, it being a movable chattel. Grant v. Oxford Local Board, 38 L. J., M. C. 39 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 9 ; 19 L. T. 378 ; 17 W. R. 76.

Licence to use Moorings—Exclusive Occupation.]—The conservators of the Thames were owners of the soil and bed of the river and of moorings fixed to the soil of the river. W. used the moorings to moor his hulk, as a coal depôt, under the following document : "We, the conservators of the Thames, grant to W. liberty and licence to fasten, and thenceforth keep fastened, his coal hulk to the moorings placed by the conservators in the river, until either party shall have given to the other one calendar month's notice in writing, in consideration whereof W. agrees to pay towards the expenses of placing and maintaining and repairing the moorings the annual sum of 30*l*." W. was assessed as occupier of part of the bed of the river:—Held, that the document was not a demise, but only granted a licence to use the moorings, and that W. was therefore not the occupier, nor liable to be rated. Watkins v. Gravesend and Milton Overseers, 37 L. J., M. C. 73; L. R. 3 Q. B. 350; 18 L. T. 601; 16 W. R. 1059.

Derrick always Afloat, and subject to be Moved.]—Persons were possessed of a derrick for loading and unloading (but not storing) coals in the Thames, which was moored within a parish under a licence from the conservators, in the following manner, viz. by two single-fluked anchors on the side nearest the shore, and by two stones on the channel side, and by two stream anchors one at the head and the other at the stern. The anchors and stones (which could be hauled on board by the machinery on the derrick) were merely dropped into the river, no force being used for the purpose of fastening them, but only a small quantity of ballast being removed in the bed of the river to enable the stones to lie flat. The derrick was always afloat, and was subject to be moved to any other part of the river, at the pleasure of the conservators:—Held, that the owners of the derrick were not liable to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of these moorings. Cory v. Greenwich Overseers, 41 L. J., M. C. 142; L. R. 7 C. P. 499; 27 L. T. 150.

A local act authorised commissioners to make a rate upon all persons occupying or enjoying "any messuage or tenement, land, shop, warehouse or other building, wharf, yard, storehouse, ground, cellar, hereditaments or premises." A steamboat company occupied the ground floor of premises called the Mill, abutting on the Thames, and constructed a pier or landing-place in connection therewith. The pier consisted of floating barges, boarded over, and kept in their places by cables fastened to anchors sunk in the bed of the river. The barges were connected by wooden bridges, with a platform resting upon an abutment, and made fast to the wall of the premises occupied by the company. Passengers embarking by the boats passed through the ground floor of the building, where a fare was paid, and proceeded over the platform, bridge and barges to the boats. The upper part of the mill was occupied by S. The steamboat company was rated in respect of "tenement, land, landing-place and premises, and the brow or brows, barge or barges, lying upon, fixed to, or connected with the same tenement, land, landing-place or premises, and the easement or easements, anchorage or anchorages, held, used or enjoyed therewith"; and S. was rated for "mill and premises, exclusive of the steamboat pier":—Held, that the rate was valid, being laid, not on the floating pier, as distinguished from the land, but upon the landing-place and premises, together with the floating pier, by which the occupation of the land was rendered more valuable. Reg. v. Leith, 1 El. & Bl. 121; 21 L. J., M. C. 119; 16 Jur. 522.

Held, also, that the rate on S. excluded the ground floor and landing-place occupied by the company, and therefore the same subject was not rated twice. Ib.

Derrick fixed in Permanent Way.]—The 20 & 21 Vict. c. cxlvii. (the Thames Conservancy Act), vests in the conservators of the river Thames all the interest of the crown and of the lord mayor and corporation of the city of London in the bed and soil of the river. It does so for the purposes stated in that act, for the execution of which various powers are conferred upon the conservators. The conservators passed a resolution giving permission to C. to lay down moorings, attached to which they might place a derrick hulk, 510 feet from the river wall; the work of laying down these moorings was to be done to the satisfaction of the conservators, and was to remain "on condition that the accommodation be assessed, and the rent paid thereon; and that the hulk be not used for storing coals." The purpose of so mooring the hulk was that of fastening and holding coal vessels, while they were unloading and transferring their cargoes to barges and lighters. The derrick hulk was held in its position by chains and anchors set in large stones, and ballast placed in holes dug in the bed of the river, and the work of so placing the stones and ballast was performed by the conservators, the payment for the work being furnished by C. The conservators reserved to themselves power to remove the hulk at a week's notice. The derrick hulk could only be removed by being itself loosened from the chains attached to the stones and ballast; these holdings in the river continuing fixed as before:—Held, that C. was liable to be rated to the relief of the poor of the parish (within which lay that part of the river where the derrick hulk was moored) in respect of the profit derived by him from its employment, as he must be treated as a person in occupation of a part of the soil and bed of the river. Cory v. Bristow, 46 L. J., M. C. 273; 2 App. Cas. 262; 36 L. T. 595; 25 W. R. 383—H. L. (E.)

18. Piers and Harbours.

Occupation by Harbour Commissioners.]—By a local act, commissioners were appointed for improving the harbour of New Shoreham. By s. 26, the property of all the wharves, quays, buildings, . . . and of all works erected in and about the harbour, in pursuance of the act, was vested in the commissioners. By s. 27, the commissioners were required to deepen, cleanse and enlarge the channel of the harbour and to make new piers, with the necessary wharfing, to confine the channel opposite to and near the intended entrance into the harbour. By s. 83, after the piers had been made, there was to be paid by every person who should import or export any merchandise within the limits of the harbour, certain duties. The commissioners enlarged the channel so as to make a new entrance in the harbour, and built new piers, as authorised, and received duties on all merchandise brought into the harbour:—Held, that the soil in the channel was not vested by the statute in the commissioners, and they were not the occupiers so as to be rateable to the poor; that the soil on which the piers were built was vested in them, and that they were the occupiers of the piers, but their occupation was not so connected with earning the duties as to make them rateable in respect of the piers. New Shoreham Harbour Commissioners v. Lancing Overseers, 39 L. J., M. C. 121; L. R. 5 Q. B. 489; 22 L. T. 434.

Where harbour commissioners in whom the soil of the harbour is not vested, but who occupy the adjoining quays, are authorised to levy dues upon all ships entering the harbour, and the same dues are payable whether the quays are used or not, the fact that many of the ships use and are attracted to the harbour by the existence of the quays does not so connect the dues paid by such ships on entering the harbour with the occupation of the quays as to entitle the rating authority to take such dues into account as enhancing the rateable value of that occupation. Blyth Harbour Commissioners v. Newsham and South Blyth Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 274; [1894] 2 Q. B. 675; 9 R. 618; 71 L. T. 34; 59 J. P. 4—C. A.

Part of Pier beyond Low-water Mark.]—A company received tolls for the use of a pier, which extended from the shore into the sea for several feet beyond low-water mark. The pier was constructed of a wooden deck resting on iron piles driven into the sands, so that the water flowed under it, and no alteration was made in the line of low-water mark:—Held, that the part of the pier beyond low-water mark, being beyond the realm, was not extra-parochial within 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122 (the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868), s. 27, and as such annexed to any other parish, nor was it an accretion from the sea, and that, therefore, that section did not enable it to be rated. Blackpool Pier Co. v. Fylde Union, 46 L. J., M. C. 189; 36 L. T. 251.

Where a parish comes down to the bank of a river there is primâ facie evidence that it extends to the middle of the river. A pier leading from the bank into the river beyond the low-water mark, and consisting of a fixed platform supported on piles within two or three inches from the bank, and a floating barge moored close to but not attached to the platform, is to be held as being within the parish, and therefore rateable. M'Cannon v. Sinclair, 2 El. & El. 53; 28 L. J., M. C. 247; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1302; 7 W. R. 567.

19. Docks and Wharves.

Occupation exclusively for Public Purposes—Benefit to particular Section of the Public.]—By local acts, commissioners were empowered to make and maintain docks in the river Tyne, and for that purpose to borrow money upon mortgage of the rates and dues to be levied under the acts; such rates and dues to be applied, first, in making and maintaining the docks; secondly, in paying the interest of the loan; and, lastly, in appropriating yearly a certain amount as a sinking fund for repayment of the principal. It was provided that if, after such appropriations, and before complete payment of the principal, there should remain any surplus, the commissioners should from time to time lower the rates and dues to the amount of such surplus. The commissioners were also empowered, after payment in manner aforesaid, to appropriate yearly a certain amount, the whole not to exceed 10,000*l.*, to be invested as a fund for extraordinary repairs and expenses; and if, after such accumulation, there should be any surplus, the commissioners were empowered to reduce the rates to the annual amount necessary for the maintenance and working of the docks. The docks were completed and used by ships frequenting the river Tyne, and the commissioners received an income of 10,000*l.* per annum from the rates and dues:—Held, that the commissioners were rateable in respect of their occupation of the docks; such occupation not being exclusively for public purposes, but producing a benefit only to a particular section of the public, and there being nothing in the acts expressly excluding, in the event of a surplus, the payment of poor-rates out of the funds in the hands of the commissioners before the rates were reduced. Tyne Improvement Commissioners v. Chirton Overseers, 1 El. & El. 516; 28 L. J., M. C. 131; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 865; 7 W. R. 242.

Docks were vested in trustees to be kept up by rates levied on vessels using the same; the moneys derived from the rates were to be applied, first, in paying interest on a debt which had been incurred; secondly, in maintaining the docks; and lastly, in reduction of the rates:—Held, that such trustees were beneficial occupiers of such docks within 43 Eliz. c. 2, and were consequently liable to the poor-rate in respect thereof. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Cameron, 20 C. B. (N.S.) 56; 11 H. L. Cas. 443; 35 L. J., M. C. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 746; 12 L. T. 643; 13 W. R. 1069.

—— Shares made Personal Property—Annual Profit.]—Lands purchased by a company, and converted into a dock, according to an act which declares that the shares of the proprietors shall be considered as personal property, are rateable in proportion to the annual profits. Rex v. Hull Dock Co., 1 Term Rep. 219.

In different Parishes—Mode of Assessment.]—A dock company were proprietors of several docks, made at different times and under successive acts of parliament. The docks communicated with each other and with the river Humber, and extended into several parishes. Every vessel paid a single toll which became due on entry into the docks, and was paid then, or on clearance outwards, and the vessel was entitled by such payment to go into any one or more of the docks at the will of her own master, or under the direction of the company's harbour-master, who had powers for regulating the position of vessels. All the payments, at whatever dock received, were carried to one general account:—Held, that the poor-rate upon so much of the docks as lay in any parish must be assessed, not according to the actual receipt in the parish, but to the proportion which the area of dock within the parish bore to the entire of the docks; for that in such a case an assessment on the acreage principle was unavoidable, though an assessment on the basis of earnings within the parish is preferable where the nature of the case permits it. Reg. v. Hull Dock Co., 18 Q. B. 325; 7 Railw. Cas. 836; 21 L. J., M. C. 153; 16 Jur. 543.

Under acts of parliament the docks in different parishes on both sides of the river Mersey were to constitute one estate under one management. Rates were charged to the vessels entering any one of the docks; and a vessel having paid for entering one of the docks, could use any of the docks of the same class on either side of the river, or of a higher class by paying the difference. The docks on the Liverpool side were much more frequented than the docks on the Birkenhead side:—Held, that in rating to the poor-rate the docks on the Liverpool side, they were not to be treated as one system of docks with those on the Birkenhead side; but the earnings and outgoings of each set of docks must be kept distinct, and the Liverpool docks rated according to the net earnings on that side. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Liverpool Overseers, 41 L. J., M. C. 161; L. R. 7 Q. B. 643; 26 L. T. 868; 20 W. R. 827.

A dock company owning a series of docks, extending through several parishes, ought to be rated in each particular parish according to the profit which it derives from the portion of its docks situated in that parish and not according to the water area therein, unless it is impossible to estimate what proportion of the whole profit has been earned in each parish. Mersey Docks v. Liverpool and Mersey Docks v. Birkenhead (L. R. 8 Q. B. 447) followed, Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co. (18 Q. B. 325) commented on. A dock company which is prohibited from charging tolls for running powers over railway lines and tramways belonging to it, is not rateable in respect of the rent which a hypothetical tenant would give in respect of the lines if there were no such statutory restriction. London County Council v. Erith Overseers ([1893] A. C. 562) explained. Sculcoates Union v. Hull Docks Co., 64 L. J., M. C. 49; [1895] A. C. 136; 11 R. 74; 71 L. T. 642; 43 W. R. 623; 59 J. P. 612—H. L. (E.)

Rateability — Land Covered with Water.]—A dock company were owners and occupiers of a dock for the reception of ships, with quays, warehouses, cranes, weighing machines, and other works, and also of railways or tramroads for transporting traffic to and from the docks, and communicating with their warehouses and with other railways. The railways or tramroads were made under the powers of their act, and were free to the public on payment of certain tolls. By the Local Government Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 55, the general district rates shall be made and levied upon the occupier of all such kinds of property as are assessable to the poor-rate, subject to this, among other exceptions, that "the occupier of any land covered with water, or used only as a canal or towing-path for the same, or as a railway constructed under the powers of any act of parliament for public conveyance," is to be assessed at one-fourth only of the net annual value:—Held, first, that the dock was land covered with water, within the exception, and therefore rateable at one-fourth only of the net annual value. Newport Dock Co. v. Newport Local Board, 2 B. & S. 708; 31 L. J., M. C. 266; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 6 L. T. 456.

—— Property other than Land.] — Held, secondly, that the warehouses and other adjuncts to a dock are rateable at the net annual value. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the railways or tramways were constructed for public conveyance, within the exception in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55, and therefore rateable at one-fourth only of the net annual value. Ib.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, s. 33, owners and occupiers of houses, buildings, and property (other than land) rateable to the poor in any parish, are to be rated at "a rate in the pound three times greater than that at which the owners and occupiers of land shall be rated." By s. 34, every court-yard, yard or garden (such garden not being a market garden or nursery ground) shall be included in, and make part of, the assessment to be made on the house, buildings or other property to which they may be respectively attached. The Victoria London Docks cover an area of 165 acres, ninety-five of which form a wet dock, tidal basin and canal, all covered with water; the remaining area consists of jetties which intersect the wet dock and basin, and of warehouses and buildings on the jetties. The whole forms one inclosure, occupied by the dock company, who make different charges for the use of the wet dock and basin, and for the use of the warehouses and buildings. The whole area is lighted and watched at their sole expense. In a watching and lighting rate, imposed under the above act, the company was rated, in respect of the whole area, at a rate in the pound thrice greater than that at which the occupiers of land were rated. On an appeal in respect of the ninety-five acres, from a decision of sessions confirming the rate:—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., Wightman and Crompton, JJ., that the company was rateable at a higher rate in respect of the ninety-five acres, for that such acres were "property other than land," and ejusdem generis with houses and buildings; but by Erle, J., that the company was rateable at the lower rate, for that the ninety-five acres were land. Peto v. West Ham Overseers, 2 El. & El. 144; 28 L. J., M. C. 240; 7 W. R. 586.

—— Manufactory and Workshops.]—By a statute for regulating the poor of Southampton, every person who shall let out his house in separate apartments or ready furnished lodgings, or shall let tenements built on the ground appurtenant to his principal dwelling, shall, for the purposes of the act, be deemed to be the occupier thereof. The Southampton Dock Company were the owners, but not occupiers, of the custom-house, a manufactory, and several workshops. The manufactory and workshops were within the inclosure of the company, the custom-house was built on land of the company at a distance:—Held, that these words did not apply to any of the premises in question. Reg. v. Southampton Dock Co., 6 Railw. Cas. 428; 14 Q. B. 587; 20 L. J., M. C. 155; 15 Jur. 268.

—— Floating Dock attached to Building Yard.]—M. occupied a shipbuilding yard adjoining a public tidal and navigable river, and opposite to it he had a floating dock for the purpose of repairing ships, which floated at high water and grounded on the bed of the river as the tide fell. To enable the workmen to get to their work, a plank went from the yard to the dock, to which it was fastened by a rope, to prevent it falling if it should happen to be accidentally pushed off the dock. The dock was moored by four chains to the bed of the river and to the yard; the chains could be easily slackened or cast off by the hand, and this was done every time a vessel was docked or undocked. The harbour-master had power to remove the dock when the convenience of the harbour so required. The dock, when moored, was alternately in the same parish as the yard, and in the respondent parish, the water being the boundary. M. was rated for the building yard, "with floating dock attached," at an amount which was the aggregate of the separate rateable values of the yard and of the dock. The sessions having affirmed the rate, on the ground that, though the floating dock was not rateable per se, it was so connected with the building-yard as to enhance the value thereof:—Held, that the rateable value of the yard could not be considered as enhanced by reason of the floating dock, which had no necessary connection with it. Reg. v. Morrison, 1 El. & Bl. 150; 22 L. J., M. C. 14; 17 Jur. 485.

—— Floating Pontoons.]—The T. P. company are occupiers and owners of about nine acres of land on the Tyne, which is here a tidal river. A creek was excavated on the land, and in it were placed two pontoons, into which ships could be received for repairing purposes. They were attached to piles and "dolphins" by means of shackles which could be easily detached and joined to the land by a movable gangway. They could be towed out, but, as a matter of fact, had not been moved except for repairing purposes for ten and four years respectively. They were rated as being in occupation of land over which they floated, and to which they were attached, and also that the occupation of the land was enhanced by reason of their being attached and used in connection therewith:—Held, that they were rightly rated on the latter ground, and were within the principle of Reg. v. Morrison (1 El. & Bl. 150). Tyne Pontoons Co. v. Tynemouth Union, 76 L. T. 782.

—— Use of Sheds not amounting to Exclusive Occupation.]—A. & Co. used certain quay space and sheds appropriated to them by a board of management for ten years, paying the stipulated charges. The sheds, which were constructed on the quay, consisted of a range of quays covered by one roof, and subdivided by partitions reaching to the roof into a store or shed, a transit shed and two open sheds. The store shed was provided with doors and locks, and was used by A. & Co. for holding stores for their ships when in port. The transit shed was situate about the centre of the range of sheds, having open sheds at each end of it. There were sliding doors communicating at each end with the open sheds, and one on each side communicating with the roadway and the dock respectively. This shed was used for the reception of goods liable to duty, but upon which no duty had at the time been paid. Each door of the transit shed had two locks; the key of one lock was kept at the custom-house, and the key of the other by A. & Co.: whenever a vessel was discharging, and at all times during the day, the transit shed was open, and the servants of the board went in at their pleasure, for the purpose of examining the goods therein, or for any other purpose connected with their duties. When the shed contained goods or ship stores belonging to A. & Co., they were watched at night by watchmen employed by them:—Held, that the board had not parted with the occupation of any part of such sheds so as to render A. & Co. rateable in respect of such occupation. Allan v. Liverpool Overseers, 43 L. J., M. C. 69; L. R. 9 Q. B. 180; 30 L. T. 93; 22 W. R. 330.

—— Warehouses — Separate Rateability.]—The appellants were owners and occupiers of docks, and of warehouses, workshops, &c., connected with their docks, and were rated to the poor-rate separately for each, Nos. 1—8 being the warehouses, &c., No. 9 the docks. They were compelled by statute to keep up the docks; and the working expenses, &c., taken as a whole, exceeded the income, the chief expense being the keeping up the docks and basin No. 9. The premises in the other eight items were each capable of separate beneficial occupation apart from their connection with the docks; but each was enhanced in value by reason of its proximity to and connection with the docks:—Held, that the separate rating of items 1—8 was right; for that, as each subject was capable of beneficial occupation, it was therefore rateable, notwithstanding its connection with the docks, which, as a whole, produced no profit; and that they ought to be rated at the enhanced value, which was what a tenant from year to year would be expected to give for them. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Birkenhead Overseers, 42 L. J., M. C. 141; L. R. 8 Q. B. 445; 29 L. T. 454; 21 W. R. 913.

—— Duty on Ships Entering Docks.]—By 14 Geo. 3, c. 56, the Hull Dock Co. were empowered to make a basin or dock on certain crown lands granted to them for that purpose in the parish of T.; certain duties were to be payable to the company for every ship "coming into or going out of the said harbour, basin, or docks within the port of Kingston-upon-Hull":—Held, on appeal against a poor-rate for the parish of T., (1) even assuming that the word harbour was synonymous with port, so that the duties attached on all ships entering the port, whether they came into the dock or not, still the company were rateable in respect of the duties on ships which actually did enter the dock, those duties being profits of the company's land in T. accruing there; (2) that they were not rateable in T. for the dock in respect of duties which were paid by ships not entering or using it. Reg. v. Hull Dock Co., 7 Q. B. 2; 14 L. J., M. C. 114.

Wharves—What are.]—One side of a canal basin consisted of the natural ground where particular persons were allowed to land their timber, for which no acknowledgment was paid, but which considerably increased the tonnage dues:—Held, not to be a wharf within the meaning of the Regent's Canal Act, and therefore not liable as such to be rated. Rex v. Regent's Canal Co., 9 D. & R. 763; 7 B. & C. 720; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 151.

—— Rateability of Tenants.]—The appellants were in the occupation of two wharves, at a yearly rent, as tenants, under the trustees of the Bute Docks. In respect of goods shipped from or upon the wharves, the appellants paid to the trustees a fixed sum, which by the Dock Act was authorised to be received in respect of all goods landed or loaded upon or from the wharf, in addition to the tonnage rates paid by the ship passing into or out of the dock. No dues were charged on goods brought upon the wharves, and not shipped into the dock:—Held, that the dues were paid in respect of the use of the wharves, that in assessing the wharves to the poor-rate they were to be taken into account in ascertaining the rateable value, and that the appellants were liable to be rated in respect of them. Reg. v. Dowlais Iron Co., 10 B. & S. 208.

—— Right to Distrain Warehoused Goods for Rates or Tolls.]—See Green v. St. Katharine Dock Co., 19 L. J., Q. B. 53; 13 Jur. 1116.

Deductions — Cost of Collection — Tenant's Profits.]—The Mersey Docks and Harbour Board are incorporated by certain acts, under which they hold docks and other property connected with the docks, and they are authorised to levy dock rates and duties from the owners of vessels and goods for the privilege of using the docks, and they are bound to apply the dock rates and all money received by them from the dock property according to the directions of the acts. There are no shareholders, and no person derives any personal advantage or emolument whatsoever from the money received by the corporation, and all the rates are appropriated in payment of all expenses and charges of collecting the rates and the several other purposes specified in the acts, and the residue in repaying money borrowed. The corporation having been rated to the poor-rate:—Held, that the corporation was not entitled, in addition to the cost of collecting the rates, to a deduction for tenants' profits. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Liverpool Overseers, 43 L. J., M. C. 33; L. R. 9 Q. B. 84; 29 L. T. 454; 22 W. R. 184.

—— Tenant's Fixtures.]—Cranes, steam engines, shears, and other heavy machinery attached to the freehold and essential to the business, but capable of being detached as easily and with as little injury to the freehold as other fixtures put up for the purpose of the tenant's trade, and usually valued as between incoming and outgoing tenants, are not an allowable deduction. Allan v. Liverpool Overseers, supra. S.P., Reg. v. Southampton Dock Co., ante, col. 1588.

—— Allowance for Direction.]—A dock was constructed by public commissioners under an act of parliament which gave them no power to remunerate themselves out of the dock funds for their services:—Held, that a deduction (under the head of disbursements) of 500*l.* as "allowance for direction" ought not to be allowed. Reg. v. Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. 489.

—— Watching.]—A deduction of 150*l.* for watching which was done by a police boat provided and paid for out of other than dock funds ought not to be allowed. Ib.

—— Movable Plant—Towage.]—A deduction (under the head of movable plant) of 1,200*l.* for a steamboat used for towing barges when filled with mud out to sea and back was not allowable while the boat was used only for the work of constructing the dock; if it became necessary for permanent use in removing silt it would be a deduction in future rates. Ib.

—— Capital—Cash Balance.]—A deduction (under the head of capital for carrying on the dock) of 500*l.* for cash balance ought not to be allowed, but a deduction in respect of stores in hand ought to be allowed. Ib.

—— Rates and Taxes.]—The allowance in respect of rates and taxes should be upon the net rateable value of the property after the rates and taxes themselves have been deducted. Ib.

20. Ferries and Way-Leaves.

Ferry Boats—Tolls and Landing-places.]—A company was incorporated, and empowered to establish and maintain a ferry over the public tidal and navigable river Tyne; to take lands and erect ferry-houses and landing-places on either side of the river, and to receive certain tolls for the passage of the ferry. The landing-places on either side were in the parishes of North and South Shields respectively; but the ferry boats, when working, were always afloat and in the parish of N.; and they varied their course in crossing according to the state of the tide. The tolls (which were the only profit derived by the company from the ferry and landing-places) were collected at the South Shields landing-place. The company having been assessed in the parish of South Shields, as occupiers of a ferry, landing and tolls, at one-half the entire net profit of the tolls; on appeal from that rate:—Held, first, that the tolls could not be directly rated as landed property from their connection with the landing-places, nor indirectly by laying the rate on the landing-places, and treating the half of the entire net proceeds of the tolls as the direct profit of each landing-place; and that, therefore, the rate could not be supported. Reg. v. North and South Shields Ferry Co., 7 Railw. Cas. 849; 1 El. & Bl. 440; 22 L. J., M. C. 9; 17 Jur. 181.

Held, secondly, that in rating the landing-places, the tolls should not be entirely excluded from consideration; but that the landing-places should be rated as land rendered more valuable by being available for the purpose of earning the tolls. Ib.

Held, also, that the mileage principle was not applicable, so as to assess a portion of the profits on the two landing-places according to the proportion which their dimensions bore to the length of the transit over the river. Ib.

Owner in another Parish—Landing-place a Public Highway.]—The owner of a ferry residing in a different parish, but taking the profits of the ferry on the spot by his servants and agents, is not rateable for such tolls in the parish where they are so collected, and where one of the termini of the ferry is situated, and on which shore the ferry-boats are secured by means of a post in the ground; the soil itself at the landing-places being the king's common highway; and the owner of the ferry having no property in or exclusive possession of it. Williams v. Jones, 12 East, 346; 11 R. R. 411.

Ferry not Real Property within 43 Eliz. c. 2.]—The lessee and occupier of an ancient and exclusive ferry, not being an inhabitant resiant within the township in which one of the termini of the ferry is situated, is not liable to be rated there for any share of the tolls of such ferry; for supposing a ferry to be real property, it is not such real property as is mentioned in 43 Eliz. c. 2, the occupancy of which subjects the party to the relief of the poor of the place. And all the cases where parties have been held rateable in respect of the occupancy or receipt of tolls (apart from the question of inhabitancy), have been where they at the same time occupied real visible property connected with such tolls in the place where they were rated. Rex v. Nicholson, 12 East, 330; 11 R. R. 398.

Way-Leaves—Liability of Lessee.]—If A. has an exclusive right of using a way-leave over land which he holds in common with B., paying B. a certain sum yearly, and has the privilege of using a way-leave occupied by C., paying him so much per ton for the goods carried over it, A. is not rateable in respect of either of such way-leaves. Rex v. Jolliffe, 2 Term Rep. 90; 1 R. R. 437.

A. having granted to B. a lease for years of way-leaves (for the purpose of carrying coals), and the liberty of erecting bridges, and levelling hills over certain lands; B. made the waggon-ways, inclosed them, thereby excluding all other persons, erected bridges, and built two houses on the land for his servants:—Held, that B. was liable to be rated for "the ground called the waggon-way." Rex v. Bell, 7 Term Rep. 598.

21. Lighthouses.

Erected on Shore.]—A lighthouse erected on the shore for conveying light to ships at sea is not rateable in respect of the value of the tolls paid by the shipowners for the benefit so communicated, but simply as a building. Rex v. Fowke, 9 D. & R. 120; 5 B. & C. 814; 29 R. R. 417.

—— Lease of Land belonging to.]—The commissioners of Irish lights having let a portion of the lands held by them as such to a tenant from year to year at a yearly rent:—Held, that the land so in the occupation of the tenant was not exempt as being land held for public purposes. Boal v. Buckle, 16 W. R. 435.

Occupation of Public Trustees — Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 430.]—The appellants appealed against a poor-rate made by the respondents in respect of a lighthouse, telegraph station, houses, buildings and land in the parish of Llanelian. The appellants were incorporated as a body of public trustees by the Mersey Docks and Harbour Act, 1857, and the property, powers, rights and privileges of the Liverpool Dock Trustees, including the right to levy certain harbour and light dues on vessels entering the port of Liverpool, were vested in the appellants. The tolls were so fixed that, with the other receipts of the appellants applicable to conservancy purposes, they should not be higher than necessary for conservancy expenditure, and therefore no profits were receivable by the appellants from the occupation of any of the property. The lighthouse consisted of a tower and a dwelling-house adjoining. In the tower there was the light-room, and also a room used for working a telegraph wire from Birkenhead to Holyhead, maintained by the postmaster-general for the exclusive use of the appellants under an agreement. The dwelling-house and other premises were occupied by servants of the appellants. The tower of the lighthouse had no occupation value except as a lighthouse and a telegraph station:—Held, that the tower was incapable of profitable occupation as a lighthouse, and was not rateable to the relief of the poor, but that, with respect to the adjoining houses, it having been found as a fact that their value was enhanced from being used in connection with the tower, the assessment on that footing was correct. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Llanelian Overseers, 54 L. J., Q. B. 49; 14 Q. B. D. 770; 52 L. T. 118; 33 W. R. 97; 5 Asp. M. C. 358; 49 J. P. 164—C. A.

The 430th section of the Merchant Shipping Act is only applicable to lighthouses under the control of the general lighthouse authorities. Ib., 51 L. T. 62; 5 Asp. M. C. 248; 48 J. P. 391.

Tolls in different Parishes.]—The tolls of a lighthouse situated in a township, which tolls were collected out of the township, in the several ports at which the vessels passing by the coast afterwards arrived, are not rateable quâ tolls in the township. Rex v. Tynemouth, 12 East, 46; 11 R. R. 328.

Duties.]—Where a poor-rate was imposed upon a lighthouse, together with the duties payable for the same, and the duties were collected out of the parish:—Held, that these duties did not constitute part of the annual profits of the house or land where the light was placed, and were not rateable. Rex v. Coke, 5 B. & C. 797; 8 D. & R. 666; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 8; 29 R. R. 408.

—— Principle of Assessment — Structural Value.]—Dues earned under statutory authority by the commissioners of a port in respect of a lighthouse erected within the limits of a particular parish are not to be taken into consideration in the assessment of the lighthouse to the poor-rate of that parish, and its structural value appears to be the only basis on which to found any assessment of its rateable value. Lancaster Port Commissioners v. Barrow-in-Furness Overseers, 66 L. J., Q. B. 90; [1897] 1 Q. B. 166; 75 L. T. 358; 61 J. P. 21.

22. RAILWAYS.

Mode of Rating—General Principles.]—The amount on which a railway, when the railway company are themselves the carriers, is to be assessed to the poor-rate, is the rent which a lessee would pay, he being supposed capable of deriving from the use of the railway all the profits which accrue to the company from the conveyance of passengers, cattle and goods, under the powers of their acts, such lessee finding locomotive power, carriages, &c., and paying all expenses incidental to working the railway, free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rent-charge, and making allowance and deductions for the average annual cost of repairs, insurance, and other expenses necessary to maintain the way, its fixtures and appurtenances, in a state to command such rent. Reg. v. L. & S. W. Ry., 2 G. & D. 49; 1 Q. B. 558; 2 Railw. Cas. 629; 11 L. J., M. C. 93; 6 Jur. 686.

—— Leased Line when not to be treated as integral Part of leasing Company's System, but as independent Line.]—A railway company constructed under the powers of their act a line which formed a connecting link between the lines of three other companies, and for some time retained possession of such line, taking tolls for the use of it by such other companies. Subsequently, by an agreement between the first-mentioned company, therein called "the lessors," and the three other companies, therein called "the lessees," which agreement was confirmed by and was to have the same effect as if its provisions had been enacted in an act of parliament, the line was leased to the lessees in perpetuity at an annual rent, and the lessees were by such act empowered to use, and they did use, such line in connection with their respective systems without payment of tolls. The existence of the said first-mentioned company was continued by the confirming act for certain purposes, such as the receipt of the yearly rent and its distribution among the shareholders, and there was a provision in the agreement which by necessary implication gave power to the lessees to let the line with the consent of the lessors under seal:—Held, that, having regard to the provisions of the agreement and of the act confirming it, the rateable value of the line for the purposes of the poor-rate was not to be ascertained as if it were an integral portion of the lines of the three companies using it, but was to be based upon the rent which a tenant from year to year might reasonably be expected to give for it as an independent line. North and South-Western Junction Ry. v. Brentford Union, 56 L. J., M. C. 101; 18 Q. B. D. 740; 57 L. T. 429; 35 W. R. 640; 51 J. P. 772—C. A.

—— Railway not Constructed under Act of Parliament.]—A railway constructed without any parliamentary powers, eventually sold, enlarged and used, by act of parliament, for public conveyance, does not come within s. 55 of the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), as a railway constructed under the powers of any act of parliament; and is therefore rateable in the full nett annual value. N. E. Ry. v. Leadgate Local Board, 39 L. J., M. C. 65; L. R. 5 Q. B. 157; 22 L. T. 62; 18 W. R. 691.

—— At Lower Rate — Within the term "Land."]—By 3 & 4 Will. c. 90, s. 33, the owners and occupiers of houses, buildings and property (other than land) rateable to the relief of the poor in any parish shall be rated at and pay a rate in the pound three times greater than that which the owners and occupiers of land shall be rated at for the purposes of this act (watching and lighting):—Held, that a line of railway was land within the meaning of the section; and was therefore only rateable at the lower rate. Reg. v. Midland Ry., 44 L. J., M. C. 137; L. R. 10 Q. B. 389; 32 L. T. 753; 23 W. R. 921.

A local lighting act made "all houses, buildings, erections, works, tenements and hereditaments" liable to be rated, and excepted "land": —Held, that this exception extended only to land used for the purposes of agriculture or gardening, or any kind of mere vegetation, together with the roads and other matters which are ancillary to those purposes; and that hereditaments in which capital had been invested for habitation, or for purposes of profit from manufacturing or mechanical industry, were liable to be rated; and therefore that a line of railway was liable. Midland Ry. v. Chesterfield Lighting Commissioners, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 797. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Midland Ry., 4 El. & Bl. 958; 3 C. L. R. 682; 3 W. R. 415.

—— Under Local Acts — No express Revocation.] — Certain local government acts appointed improvement commissioners for sanitary purposes over a district which lay partly within and partly without the borough of Walsall. The commissioners had power to levy rates to defray the expenses they were bound to incur. The rate on any railway within the commissioners' district was, by a local act of 1848, to be limited to one-fourth of the rateable value of the railway. A part of a line of railway did run through the commissioners' district, and was so rated under the local act up to 1872. By the Public Health Act, 1872, urban authorities were constituted, and the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of the borough, in town council, became an urban authority for, among others, sanitary purposes in the borough. Both bodies—the commissioners and the town council—were given powers to make rates to defray the expenses incurred by them in the discharge of their respective duties. In the grant to the town council of rating powers nothing was said with regard to any limit of rating upon any particular kind of property. By the Public Health Act, 1875, the town council was invested with powers to assess a rate to defray the expenses incurred for sanitary purposes, and the powers of a local board were transferred to it as the urban authority; and it was provided that expenses incurred by the urban authority, if the council of a borough, were to be defrayed out of the borough fund, but if by the improvement commissioners, were to be defrayed out of the district rate. One section continued the limit of the act of 1848 as to rating railway property. By a local act of 1876 the limits of the borough were greatly extended, and the mayor, &c., of the borough became the sanitary authority for the extended borough. The act of 1848 was repealed with the exception of certain sections. Among the excepted sections that one which limited the amount of rateability of railways was not mentioned, but nothing was said specifically to put an end to that limited liability:—Held, upon the true construction of the various acts, public and local, that there having been no express revocation of the privilege granted in respect of rating the railway at only one-fourth of its rateable value, a borough rate calculated on its full rateable value could not be maintained. Walsall Overseers v. L. & N. W. Ry., 48 L. J., M. C. 57, 65, 166: 4 App. Cas. 467; 41 L. T. 160; 28 W. R. 52—H. L. (E.)

—— Sheds to Protect Engines.]—A watching and lighting act authorised the commissioners to make a rate upon all persons inhabiting, using or occupying any houses, shops, mills, sheds or other buildings or tenements within the township: — Held, that sheds erected to protect engines for the more convenient working of a coal mine were rateable, although it was contended that they were exempt as being merely accessorial to the engines. Brown v. Granville (Lord), 3 M. & Scott, 453; 10 Bing. 69.

—— Sidings and Turntables.]—By a borough improvement act, authorising a rate to be levied, it was enacted that the occupiers of any land used only as a canal or towing-path for the same, or as a railway constructed under the powers of any act of parliament, should be rated at one-fourth part only of the nett annual value. Sidings and turntables, occupying about ten acres of land, were used for loading trucks and carriages with goods, and also as a standing place for laden and unladen carriages, and were necessary for conducting the traffic of the railway:—Held, rateable at one-fourth only of their nett annual value. Midland Ry. v. Birmingham Council, 13 L. T. 404.

—— Lines passing through Station — Contributing Directly to Company's Earnings.]—Lines of railway constructed within the area of a railway station for the convenience of traffic, as supplementary to the original lines passing through the station, but diverging from and rejoining them, are for rating purposes to be treated, like the original lines, as part of the railway directly contributing to the company's earnings, and are assessable on the "parochial" system, notwithstanding that such supplementary lines be used for traffic destined to or coming from goods or coal yards, or for standing and unloading goods waggons, or for running goods trains, or for the standing of engines and passenger carriages, or, at times, for shunting, or as bay lines into which local trains when emptied are shunted preparatory to recommencing a journey. Stockport Union v. L. & N. W. Ry., 66 L. J., Q. B. 781; 77 L. T. 244. Affirmed, 67 L. J., Q. B. 335; 78 L. T. 180; 62 J. P. 244—C. A.

Calculation of Profits—Rent.]—A rent, or a sum in the nature of a rent, paid for the occupation of a railway is not necessarily a criterion of its rateable value. The profits and advantages derived on a main line by the occupation of a branch line may be taken into account in estimating the rateable value of the branch, and not the local profits. S. E. Ry. v. Dorking Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 491; 2 C. L. R. 633; 7 Railw. Cas. 877; 23 L. J., M. C. 84; 18 Jur. 672.

The Eastern Counties Railway Company were tenants of the Royston and Hitchin line at a rent of 16,800*l*. Taken by itself, the line was worked at a loss, but it was valuable as contributing to the gross earnings of the Eastern Counties Railway, by bringing the traffic of the district on that railway:—Held, that the sessions were wrong in point of law in adopting the 16,800*l*. as the basis of the calculation and absolute criterion without regarding the evidence of real value, or the fact of there being profit. Reg. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 900, n.; 18 Jur. 679, n.; 2 W. R. 160.

—— Bringing Traffic to other Lines.]—A railway connected with and rented by another railway in a different parish, cannot be rated at an increased amount, in respect of its contributive value in bringing traffic to the other line, but can only be rated upon its value within the rating parish. G. W. Ry. v. Pontypridd Union, 38 L. J., M. C. 93; L. R. 4 Q. B. 354; 20 L. T. 364; 17 W. R. 671.

The Ely Valley Railway, the greater part of which was within the rating parish, supplied traffic to the South Wales Railway, which was beyond the parish. The South Wales Railway was the property of the Great Western, which was also the occupier of the Ely Valley at a fixed rent:—Held, that the Great Western could not be rated as the occupier of the Ely Valley Railway at an increased amount in respect of its value as a feeder, and in supplying traffic to other parts of their line. Ib.

Long Lease of Line—Rent and Annuities.]—The Reigate Railway Company leased their line, which joined the South Eastern Railway Company, at a certain rent, for 1,000 years; and the South Eastern became, under the lease, the occupiers of the line, working it in connection with their own railway. The Reigate Company was afterwards incorporated with the South Eastern by act of parliament, under which the amalgamated company was to pay to the shareholders of the Reigate Company annuities equivalent to and in lieu of the above rent; and the Reigate line then became part of the South Eastern line. On an appeal against two poor-rates assessed upon the South Eastern as occupiers of so much of the Reigate line as passed through the parish of D.:—Held, that the rent in the one case, and the annuities in the other, were not to be taken as the sole or conclusive criterion of the rateable value. S. E. Ry. v. Dorking Overseers, 7 Railw. Cas. 877; 3 El. & Bl. 491; 2 C. L. R. 633; 23 L. J., M. C. 84; 18 Jur. 672.

General Earnings and Profits at Particular Stations.]—A railway company maintained at each of the stations and termini on their line a staff of servants and appliances which were employed chiefly for the purposes of the goods traffic, but partly for the accommodation of passengers. They made a gross charge of so much per ton to their customers for goods carried on the line, but from the amount so charged certain sums were deducted and set apart as the earnings of the staff and appliances at each station. To these sums the name of terminal charges was given:—Held, that these terminal charges were to be considered as part of the general earnings of the line, and not of the stations. Reg. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 4 B. & S. 58; 32 L. J., M. C. 174; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1339; 8 L. T. 419; 11 W. R. 694.

In calculating, therefore, the amount of the gross earnings and expenses of the line in a parish, the terminal charges must be included. Ib.

The rateable value of a portion of a railway, consisting of the nett annual profits from the traffic upon the portion rated, cannot be increased by any part of the profits earned by the same traffic upon other portions of the line. G. E. Ry. v. Haughley Overseers, 35 L. J., M. C. 229; L. R. 1 Q. B. 666; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 14 L. T. 548; 14 W. R. 779.

Rateable Value of Line in different Parishes.]—A line of railway passed through a parish, and great accessions of traffic took place on another part of the line beyond the parish; in such case the railway company is assessable in the parish only for the earnings in the parish, i.e. the gross yearly earnings in the parish, subject to expenses and deductions fairly applicable to that part of the railway which is in the parish, and the profits on the other parts of the line are not to be taken into account as contributive value enhancing the value in the parish. Ib.

Part of a line of railway passed through a district where there were two other competing lines, for the carriage of passengers and goods. The gross earnings in the parish, a part of this district, were more than absorbed by the expenses chargeable for the working thereof, plus the deduction allowed by the Parochial Assessment Act; but on the basis of the receipts derived from the enhancement of the traffic on the other parts of the system, the rateable value of the line in the parish was equal to 45 per cent. of the gross receipts:—Held, that the railway company was rightly rated at this amount. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Irthlingborough Overseers, 35 L. T. 327.

The legal principle of rating by ascertaining the value of the land occupied in the parish, after the due allowances, is applicable to all cases where the same party, whether a company or an individual, occupies in different parishes land forming one entire property, though the profits may be earned in different proportions, and with a different rate of outgoings in each. Reg. v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 15 Q. B. 313; 6 Railw. Cas. 440; 20 L. J., M. C. 124; 15 Jur. 372.

In imposing the rate upon a railway company, the rateable value of the portion of the line occupied in any particular parish is to be deduced from a comparison between the particulars of profit and the outgoings arising in that parish, and not by treating the whole line of railway (trunk and branches) as one entire subject-matter, and the whole rateable value, however constituted, as entire, and then dividing it among the several parishes, according to the distance which the line passes through each. Ib.

Any expenses, wherever arising, which the company can shew to be necessary for keeping the hereditament which is the subject of the assessment at the value which is made the measure of such assessment, may properly be taken into consideration, but not the amount at which the company is rated in another parish. Ib.

With regard to the rating in a particular parish, the line is to be rated, not in the proportion which the length of the line therein bears to the whole line, but in the proportion that the receipts in such parish for traffic bear to the receipts throughout the whole line. Reg. v. L. & S. W. Ry., 1 Q. B. 558; 2 Railw. Cas. 692; 11 L. J., M. C. 93; 6 Jur. 686.

Increase of Earnings in one Parish—Occupation in another.]—The Reigate line brought a great deal of additional traffic to the main line of the South Eastern, and that company derived benefit from the Reigate line. If in the market, it might be an object of competition between the South Eastern and other railway companies, the traffic on the main lines of which would be increased by the possession and control of the Reigate line:—Held, that these were matters giving additional value to the occupation of the Reigate line in the parish of D., which, though lying in other parishes, ought to be taken into account in rating the line in that parish; but held, by Erle, J., that the earnings in other parishes, though increased by the occupation of the Reigate line in the parish of D., ought to be rated in those other parishes, and not in D. S. E. Ry. v. Dorking Overseers, supra, col. 1659.

—— Liability to make good Deficiency in Rates by reason of Lands taken.]—The East London Railway Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. li.), authorised the making of several small railways, and the taking possession of lands for that purpose. Each of these railways passed through more than one parish. The 128th clause of the act declared, "That if and while the company is possessed under this act of any lands assessed, or liable to be assessed, to any sewers rate, consolidated rate, poor rate, police rate, main drainage rate, church rate, or other parochial or ward rate, they shall from time to time, until the railway or the works thereof are completed and assessed, or liable to be assessed, be liable to make good the deficiency in the assessment for such rates by reason of those lands being taken or used for the purposes of the railway or works; and the deficiency shall be computed according to the rental at which those lands with any buildings thereon are now rated." A portion of one of these railways was completely constructed in one parish, and was worked there. Till its completion there, the directors had paid in that parish the deficiency rate as provided in this clause. On its completion there, they claimed that they should be relieved from the deficiency rate:—Held, that the rate was properly a parochial rate, and that, on the completion of that portion of the railway in that parish, the title of the parish officers to claim the deficiency rate there had ceased. East London Ry. v. Whitechurch, 43 L. J., M. C. 159; L. R. 7 H. L. 81; 30 L. T. 412; 22 W. R. 665.

By a railway act it was enacted that "while the company is possessed under this act of any lands assessed, or liable to be assessed, to any poor rate," and certain other rates, "they shall from time to time, until the railways or the works are completed and assessed, or liable to be assessed, be liable to make good the deficiency in the assessment for such rates by reason of these lands being taken or used for the purposes of the railway or other works by this act authorised; and the deficiency shall be computed according to the rental at which those lands with any buildings thereon were rated at the time of the passing of this act." The company was empowered under the act to make certain railways and works forming one entire system, and they took and used land in a parish for making a part of the railways and works. The part of the railways and works in the parish were completed and opened for traffic; but other parts of the entire system were not completed. The assessment of the land with the railway and works to the poor-rates and other rates in the parish was below the assessment of the land with buildings thereon before the act was passed:—Held, that the company was liable to make good the deficiency in the assessment until the entire system of railways was completed. Reg. v. Metropolitan District Ry., 40 L. J., M. C. 113; L. R. 6 Q. B. 698.

Effect of Branch Lines.]—A railway company had become possessed of a branch line communicating with its main line, on the terms that the shareholders of the company by whom the line was made should become stockholders in the company to an amount calculated at the expense of making the line. This branch line communicated with the lines of three other companies, and the company worked the branch at very low fares, in order to divert the traffic from the other lines on to its own line; the consequence was that the sum actually earned on the branch line was very small. If the branch line was in the market, either of the three other companies would, in consequence of the traffic which it would bring to their line, be willing to acquire it upon the same terms in every respect as those upon which the company held it, and would then work it in a similar manner to that in which it was worked by the company:—Held, in assessing to the poor-rate a part of the branch line passing through the parish, that the fact that three other companies would be willing to pay what was equivalent to a large rent for it was to be taken into account as an element in ascertaining the rent at which it might reasonably be expected to let from year to year. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., Kempston Rate, In re, L. R. 9 Q. B. 134; 29 L. T. 910; 22 W. R. 263. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Bedford Assessment Committee, 43 L. J., M. C. 81.

—— Increased Traffic on Main Line.]—The rateable value of land in a parish may be increased by its producing a return to the occupiers out of the parish, as where a branch railway occupied by a company owning a main line into which it runs, produces a profit by virtue of the traffic which it causes over such main line. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Cannock Overseers, 9 L. T. 325.

—— Right to Consider.]—In assessing a branch line of railway, which branch is leased to the owners of a main line into which it runs, the parish authorities are not entitled to take into consideration in the assessment the value of the line to such owners of the main line, in addition to the nett profits as derived from the traffic passing through the parish. G. W. Ry. v. Pontypridd Union, 38 L. J., M. C. 93; L. R. 4 Q. B. 354; 20 L. T. 364; 17 W. R. 671.

—— Payment made in Lieu of Profits.]—The N. company, being empowered to make a branch line from their railway to join the E. railway, an agreement was entered into by the companies (confirmed by act of parliament), by which it was mutually agreed that the N. company should complete the branch (which was likely to prove beneficial to the E. company), and that whenever, after the opening of the branch, the nett earnings of the N. company's whole line should not be sufficient to pay a divident of 3 per cent. per annum on their share capital, the E. company should pay to them such a sum (not to exceed 3,705*l.*) as would be sufficient to make up that dividend. There were stipulations for the interchange of traffic. The agreement to be in force for ninety-nine years from the opening of the branch. The branch was accordingly completed by the N. company, and worked by them at a loss; and, in a certain year, the nett earnings of their whole line falling short of a dividend of 3*l.* per cent., the E. company paid 3,705*l.* under the agreement to make up that dividend:—Held, that this payment of 3,705*l.* ought not to be taken into account in ascertaining the rateable value of the N. company's railways. Newmarket Ry. v. St. Andrew-the-Less, Cambridge, Overseers, 7 Railw. Cas. 858; 3 El. & Bl. 94; 2 C. L. R. 621; 23 L. J., M. C. 76; 18 Jur. 572; 2 W. R. 701.

Railways with Running Powers.]—Mere running powers enjoyed by one railway company over the line of another do not constitute an occupation, so as to subject the holders of the privilege to rateability. Midland Ry. v. Badgworth Overseers, 34 L. J., M. C. 25; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 14; 11 L. T. 303; 13 W. R. 202.

A line of railway connecting two towns belonged to two companies, each holding a moiety of the line in fee-simple, and enjoying running powers over its entire length. The overseers of a parish through which that portion of the railway belonging to one company passed, having rated the other company:—Held, that the rate was bad. Ib.

The principle is not altered by the circumstance that other parties also are carriers on the railway, some providing for themselves locomotive power, carriages, stations and watering-places, and paying tolls only to the company, and others finding carriages only, and hiring power, &c., from the company. Reg. v. Grand Junction Ry., 4 Q. B. 18; 4 Railw. Cas. 1; D. & M. 237; 13 L. J., M. C. 94; 8 Jur. 508.

—— Fixed Rent.]—The special act which authorised the making of a railway by the C. company, provided that the L. company should have the right to run their traffic over a part of the line, on payment of a fixed annual rent to the C. company. The rent was much less than the actual value of the traffic passed over that part of the line by the L. company:—Held, that the C. company could not be rated for poor-rate in respect of that traffic at a higher sum than the fixed rent. Altrincham Union v. Cheshire Lines Committee, 15 Q. B. D. 597; 50 J. P. 85—C. A.

—— When no Payments made.]—A railway was constructed from G. to C.; half belonged to the Great Western, and half to the Midland; each company had running powers over the half belonging to the other company, but neither company was liable to pay tolls to the other. The Midland Company's traffic over the railway was much larger and more profitable than that of the Great Western. The Great Western being rightly assessed to the poor-rate of B. as sole occupier of the part of their half of the railway in that parish, the rateable value of this occupation was arrived at by taking the amount of the Great Western's profits in the parish, and adding the sum which the Midland, if they had not had the right of running free, would have had to pay to the Great Western in respect of that part of the railway:—Held, that this was wrong, and that the rateable value of the Great Western's occupation in B. was the amount of their own profits in that parish, enhanced only by the value to them of their right to run free over the Midland Company's half of the railway. G. W. Ry. v. Badgworth, 36 L. J., M. C. 33; L. R. 2 Q. B. 251; 15 W. R. 579.

—— Deduction of Sums received for another Railway.]—By an agreement between two separate railway companies (forming together a continuous line), it was stipulated that the former should be at liberty to convey such of their passengers as had taken tickets for the entire distance, over the line of the latter, paying for each passenger a certain sum by way of toll to the latter company:—Held, that in estimating for the purposes of a poor-rate the gross receipts earned by one railway company, in respect of portions of their line running through different parishes, the company was at liberty to deduct such sums as had been received by them and paid over to the other company in pursuance of the agreement; and that the residue, after such deduction, was the rateable value of the line. Reg. v. St. Pancras Vestry, 3 B. & S. 810; 32 L. J., M. C. 146; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1102; 8 L. T. 273; 11 W. R. 615.

—— Rent for Station let to another Company.]—The Eastern Counties Railway Company, owners of a station at P., in 1848 entered into an agreement with the North-Western Railway Company, by which the latter company was for 999 years to have the joint use of the station for their traffic, they binding themselves to pay for such use of the station according to certain terms stipulated in the agreement. Another railway having been opened, a considerable portion of the traffic of the North Western line was in consequence abstracted, and the station became of so much less value to the North Western Railway Company, that the rent which they would be willing to pay for the use of the station would barely amount to a third part of the sum actually paid. Upon appeal against a poor-rate, and a case, which stated that the Eastern Counties Railway Company were to be deemed to be the persons rateable in respect of the whole occupation of the station:—Held, that in estimating the value of the occupation to the hypothetical tenant contemplated by the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, the continuance of those circumstances which constituted the value to the existing occupiers was to be assumed, and thenceforth the sum of money payable to the appellants by the North Western Railway Company under the agreement ought to form part of the rateable value of the station. Reg. v. Fletton Overseers, 3 El. & El. 450; 30 L. J., M. C. 89; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 518; 3 L. T. 689; 9 W. R. 309.

The Eastern Counties Railway Company were the sole owners of a railway station, and in 1848, by an agreement by deed, the North Western Railway Company were for 999 years to have exclusive use of part of the station, and the joint use with the Eastern Counties Company of another part, at a certain sum per annum. The occupation of the station afterwards became of much less value to the North Western Company than the annual sum to be paid by them to the other company under the agreement:—Held, that the effect of the deed (as regarded the part of the station jointly occupied) was only to give to the North Western Company the right to the joint occupation, and that the Eastern Counties Company were rateable as the sole occupiers of this part of the station, and that in rating them for such occupation, the sum paid by the North Western Company must be considered as part of the profits. Reg. v. Sherard, 33 L. J., M. C. 5.

—— Payment under Working Agreement.]—A payment to one railway company by another, under agreement, of such a sum, if any, as may be necessary to make up a certain dividend on the cost of the line, in consideration of the making of a part of it, and of working it for the benefit of the latter company, is not a profit arising out of the occupation of the railway, and is not to be taken into account in assessing its rateable value. Newmarket Ry. v. St. Andrew, Cambridge, Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 94; 2 C. L. R. 621; 7 Railw. Cas. 858; 23 L. J., M. C. 76; 18 Jur. 572; 2 W. R. 701.

Deductions—General Principle—Estimate of Expenses.]—A company formed a line of railway, of which they were owners. They were also lessees of two branch lines, but were not liable to repair them; by each of these branch lines the company incurred an annual loss, but these lines caused an increase of traffic on the main line. The company had been in the exclusive occupation of these three lines as carriers. In order to ascertain the sum at which the company was to be rated, i.e. the rent which a tenant might be found to give from year to year, the parish officers ascertained the gross receipts of one mile in a parish, where there was no station, and deducted therefrom the expenses of the three lines, under the following heads, viz.:—1. Maintenance of way; 2. Locomotive account; 3. Carrying account; 4. Charges for salaries of superintendents and clerks, advertising, stationery, &c.; 5. Repairs and alterations of stations; 6. Compensation for fire and other accidents; 7. Government duty on passengers; 8. Rates and taxes of all kinds actually paid (other than the property tax); 9. Direction and office expenses; and also a sum for the annual depreciation of the plant necessary for working the railway. Further allowances were made of a percentage as interest on the first cost of the plant, and as a tenant's profits, including profits of trade. The balance was taken to represent the rateable value of one mile in the parish, and was found so to do by the sessions. The stations and buildings on the three lines were rated separately from the railway. The company claimed the following additional deductions:—1. The rateable value of the stations and buildings appurtenant to the three lines, and necessary for their profitable enjoyment; 2. The depreciation and wear and tear of the rails and sleepers on the main line, hitherto defrayed out of the capital; 3. A percentage on the sum expended in forming the company, obtaining the act, and raising the capital; 4. The income tax paid by the company; 5. Additional parochial assessments which might become payable; 6. The annual total loss on the two branch lines:—Held, that a further deduction ought to be made for the stations and buildings, but not on account of any of the other claims made by the company. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 2 New Sess. Cas. 205; 6 Q. B. 179; 15 L. J., M. C. 80; 10 Jur. 134.

A railway company is entitled to a deduction from the rateable value, in order to countervail the depreciation which takes place in the value of the permanent way, and to maintain it in a state to command the supposed rent, which is the measure of the assessment; and such deduction is not provided for by a deduction under the head of "working expenses." Reg. v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 15 Q. B. 313; 6 Railw. Cas. 440; 20 L. J., M. C. 124; 15 Jur. 372.

A company is not disentitled to such deduction because it has not incurred the expense, nor laid by from its receipts any sum to meet it when it should arise, although it ought to set apart the sum which it claims to deduct; and whenever the time comes for actually making the restoration, it will be estopped from claiming more than that deduction. Ib.

—— Allowance for Depreciation.]—In estimating the amount of allowance for depreciation of the rolling stock, the proper mode is not to value the stock at the beginning and end of each year, and deduct the difference, but to assume that the stock will last its natural life; in other words, it may be reasonably assumed that the tenancy will continue for several years, and so that the depreciation in that view will be less than if the tenancy was to last only one year. G. E. Ry. v. Haughley Churchwardens, 35 L. J., M. C. 229; L. R. 1 Q. B. 666; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 14 L. T. 548; 14 W. R. 779.

—— Annual Repair and Ultimate Renewal.]—A railway company was assessed for two miles and a half of railway in a parish, being part of a line originally intended to form an independent and entire railway, but purchased by the company and incorporated with their line. This branch was worked by the company as part of their entire railway; but a certain number of engines and carriages was appropriated to it, and a certain number of officers and servants employed exclusively on it. No separate account of receipts and expenditure in respect of it was kept. The branch could be worked as a separate railway under independent management, but that would require a larger movable stock and a greater expenditure. The actual expenses were not in the proportion of the actual gross receipts, either on the branch or throughout the entire railway; nor were such gross receipts or such expenses at one uniform rate per mile throughout the entire railway. The profits of the company were wholly derived from the carriage of passengers and goods; and none but the company's engines and carriages ran on the line. The overseers and the company agreed as to the total gross annual receipts from the whole line, including both trunk and branch, and as to the total gross annual receipts from the two miles and a half. As to the deductions to be made, in order to ascertain the net rateable value of the whole line:—Held, that the company, in addition to deductions for annual repair of rails and framework, and of movable stock, was entitled to be allowed two specific sums for their ultimate renewal and reproduction, where the allowance for annual repairs did not equal in amount the sum of the allowances which the company claimed under the two heads of "annual repair" and "ultimate renewal." Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 130; 15 Q. B. 1085; 21 L. J., M. C. 84; 16 Jur. 217.

—— Expenses of small Portion of Line.]—In order to ascertain the net rateable value of the two miles and a half, the deductions from the total gross revenue, which constitute the difference between it and the total net rateable value, are to be apportioned on the parochial principle. But this principle does not preclude a consideration of charges and expenses, wherever arising locally, which are necessary for keeping the subject of assessment at the value which is made the measure of that assessment. And when such charges and expenses apply equally to every mile of a railway, it is a convenient and allowable mode to arrive, by a mileage division, at the proportionable part to be assigned to the miles in any particular parish. Ib.

—— Division of Expenses on Mileage Principle.]—The company separated the branch from the trunk, except as to a small portion of the general expenses of the entire railway, being those of central superintendence, printing and advertising, and then dividing the expenses of the branch thus separated on the mileage principle:—Held, that such division was not necessarily a departure from the true principle of apportionment; but that, there being nothing to distinguish the branch from the trunk, the mode of ascertaining the rateable value by considering it as a distinct whole was incorrect. Ib.

Held, also, incorrect to take the deductions at the same rate for every mile of the railway. Ib.

—— Interest on Capital and Tenants' Profits.]—In assessing a railway company in respect of their line of railway, and the stations, buildings and sidings, the percentage amount to be allowed for interest on capital and tenants' profits is to be calculated upon the actual value of the rolling stock at the time when the rate is made, and not upon its cost price. Reg. v. North Staffordshire Ry., 3 El. & El. 392; 30 L. J., M. C. 68; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 363; 3 L. T. 554; 9 W. R. 235.

—— Movable Articles.]—A railway company was obliged to provide, in addition to their rolling stock, turn-tables, cranes, weighing machines, stationary steam-engines, lathes, electric telegraph and apparatus, office and station furniture, and gasworks used for supplying the stations with gas:—Held, that the company was entitled to a deduction in respect of such of these articles as were movable, but not in respect of such as were so attached to the freehold as to become part of it; nor in respect of such as though capable of being removed, were yet so far attached as that it was intended that they should remain permanently connected with the railway, or the premises used with it, and remain permanent appendages to it as essential to its working. Ib.

—— Floating Capital to provide against Emergencies.]—It was also necessary that the company should have in hand, at command, a sum of money, by way of floating capital, for the purpose of providing surplus stores, to be used in case of accident on the line or other emergency, and partly in paying the wages of servants of the company, and in other current expenses:—Held, that whether the company was entitled to a deduction for interest and tenants' profits, or either of them, upon this floating capital, must depend on whether, on the whole capital employed, a greater delay occurred in realising the returns than was ordinarily incidental to the employment of capital. Ib.

—— Station Buildings and Sidings.]—Held, also, that the deduction to be allowed in respect of stations, buildings and sidings along the line of railway must be calculated on the actual value at which they ought to be assessed, and not on the original cost of construction. Ib.

Partial Exemption—Public Health Act.]—By s. 88 of the Public Health Act, 1848, the occupier of land "used only as a railway" is to be assessed only at one-fourth of the net annual value:—Held, that this partial exemption extends to the line of railway, and to so much of any platform, &c., as constitutes the side of the railway and to land used as sidings, turn-tables, &c., but that stations, offices, and warehouses, which are ancillary to the railway properly so called, although necessary for the convenient working of traffic upon it, ought to be assessed at their full net annual value. South Wales Ry. v. Swansea Board of Health, 24 L. J., M. C. 30; 3 C. L. R. 18; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 326; 3 W. R. 23.

Deficiency in Course of Undertaking—Lands Occupied but not Used.]—The promoters of a line of railway purchased lands beyond the limits of deviation afterwards authorised by the company's special act, in order to get rid of the opposition of the owners to the passing of the act:—Held, in an action by overseers to recover deficiencies in the poor-rates under the 133rd section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, that the promoters could not escape their liability by setting up their illegal act in purchasing the lands without statutory powers, and that they must be taken for this purpose to have become possessed of the lands by virtue of their act, and were liable to make good the deficiencies. Putney Overseers v. L. & S. W. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 438; [1891] 1 Q. B. 440; 64 L. T. 280; 39 W. R. 291; 55 J. P. 422—C. A.

Some of the lands were unoccupied at the time they were purchased by the promoters:—Held, that, as the deficiency was, by the section, to be ascertained according to the rental at which the lands were valued or rated at the time of the passing of the special act, and did not, on the true construction of the section, depend upon the amount of the rates which were being paid at the time, the non-occupation of the lands at the time they were purchased did not relieve the promoters from liability for deficiencies of poor-rates in respect of them. Ib.

—— "General Purposes Rate," Meaning of.]—Sect. 14 of the London and South Western Railway Act, 1883, provides that, while the company are possessed of any land assessed or liable to be assessed to any sewers rate, main-drainage rate, or general purposes rate, they shall from time to time, until the railway or the works thereof are completed and assessed or liable to be assessed to the respective rates, be liable to make good the deficiency in the assessment for the respective rates:—Held, that the expression "general purposes rate" in this section was intended by the legislature to apply to all rates made for general purposes, viz., for purposes in which the great majority of parishioners have a common interest, and that under this term the company were bound to make good the deficiency in the assessment for the metropolitan consolidated rate, the lighting rate, and the public libraries rate respectively. Burrup v. L. & S. W. Ry., 64 L. T. 112.

23. TRAMWAYS.

Rateability—Occupation of Road.]—A tramway company, formed under the Tramways Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78), laid down a tramway in a highway, the soil of which was vested in the district board. Sect. 34 gives the exclusive use to the company of the tramway for carriages with flange wheels or other wheels suitable only to run on the rail. By s. 57, the company is not to acquire any right other than that of user of any road in which their tramways are laid; and by s. 62, nothing in the act is to abridge the right of the public to pass along or across every part of any road in which the tramways are laid with carriages not having flange wheels or wheels suitable only to run on the rail; and by s. 25, the rails must be laid level with the road:—Held, that the company was rateable to the poor-rate in respect of their occupation of the road by their tramways. Pimlico Tramway Co. v. Greenwich Union, 43 L. J., M. C. 29; L. R. 9 Q. B. 9; 29 L. T. 605; 22 W. R. 87.

Mode of Assessment in regard to different Parishes.]—In assessing the rateable value of tramways, the annual gross traffic receipts earned over the entire system must be taken as the basis of the estimate of the rent, and the net receipts in each parish as the criterion of the rateable value in each parish. London Tramways Co. v. Lambeth Assessment Committee, 31 L. T. 319.

When a tramway route begins and ends in the same parish, the net receipts of that route is the value upon which the tramway owners must be rated. Ib.

When a tramway route extends through two or more parishes, the fairest practicable mode of apportioning is by dividing the receipts from each distinct service route in proportion to the lineal mileage of such route in each parish respectively. Ib.

The general expenses, except horse expenses, allowed proportionately to the number of miles run over by the cars in each parish, upon each of the several distinct service routes therein. Ib.

24. TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE COMPANIES.

Posts fixed in the Ground—Occupation.]—An electric telegraph company, incorporated by statute for transmitting messages between distant places by means of electric currents, laid down along the lines of a railway company an apparatus for that purpose, on terms agreed on between the companies. This apparatus consisted of posts fixed in the ground, with telegraphic wires suspended from post to post, the posts being, however, subject to removal to some other place at the option of the railway company, if their working or position interfered with the operations of the railway:—Held, that the telegraph company was rateable in the parish in which the posts were fixed. Electric Telegraph Co. v. Salford Overseers, 11 Ex. 181; 24 L. J., M. C. 146; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 733; 3 W. R. 518.

Telephone Company's Wires—Occupation of Land by Company.] — A telephone company were possessed of an exchange by means of which subscribers could communicate by telephone with each other, and also of wires and telephone apparatus unconnected with the exchange for the use of persons renting them. For the purpose of this business they laid wires from their office to the business premises of their subscribers, and also erected wires for the use of those who rented them. All these wires were overhead wires and were carried from the office of the company to the different premises, being supported and steadied either by poles fixed in the ground, or by being attached to the roofs, chimneys, or walls of some of the buildings over which they passed. The attachments were made in the case of a single wire by an iron spike driven into the building, or by a bolt screwed into the ridge, or by an iron bracket nailed to the corner of the chimney to which the wire was attached, or in the case of a number of wires by means of standards or ridge-saddles attached to the roofs of the buildings and fastened by iron bolts or stays. The consent of the owners or occupiers of the land or buildings was given by agreements in which the company undertook to pay an annual rent and remove the wires and attachments, upon a certain notice. The company had no key of the outside doors, and could only obtain access to the roofs by the permission of the occupiers:—Held, that upon these facts there was proof of an occupation of land by the wires of the company, and that they were rateable. Lancashire Telephone Co. v. Manchester Overseers, 54 L. J., M. C. 63; 14 Q. B. D. 267; 52 L. T. 793; 33 W. R. 203; 49 J. P. 724—C. A.

Telegraph Wires — Exclusive Occupation — Licence of Exclusive Use.] — By agreement between a telegraph company and the postmaster-general, the latter covenanted with the company that he would provide, and thenceforth during the continuance of the agreement keep appropriated and maintain for the exclusive use of the company certain telegraph wires, called in the agreement "special wires," between the landing-place of a foreign telegraphic cable near the Land's End and an office of the company at Penzance, and thence to their office in London, with the necessary translators for working them, and a pneumatic tube; such wires, &c., to remain the property of the postmaster-general—the postmaster-general to repair all accidental defects or interruptions to the working of the wires, &c., but to be paid for making good any damage to the wires occasioned by the neglect or default of the company or their servants; the company not to use the wires for the transmission of any except certain specified messages. And, in consideration of the appropriation and maintenance by the postmaster-general of the wires, translators, batteries, and pneumatic tube, the company covenanted to pay him certain rents; and they also covenanted not to part with the possession of the special wires or any of them, or underlet or assign the benefit of the agreement, without the consent of the postmaster-general; and that, in the event of their doing so, the postmaster-general was to be at liberty to determine the contract by notice; and it was further provided that, upon the expiration or determination of the agreement, it should be lawful for the postmaster-general to resume the possession of the special wires, &c.

The telegraph posts remained the property of the postmaster-general, and carried between Penzance and London several wires beyond those appropriated to the use of the company:—Held (Lord Coleridge, C.J., doubting), that this agreement did not give the company such an exclusive occupation of the special wires as to make them rateable to the relief of the poor in respect thereof, even in the parish where the special wires were the only wires affixed to the posts. Paris and New York Telegraph Co. v. Penzance Union, 53 L. J., M. C. 189; 12 Q. B. D. 552; 50 L. T. 790; 32 W. R. 859; 48 J. P. 693.

Telegraph Acts—Posts and Wires—Liability of Postmaster-General.]—A vestry applied by mandamus to compel the postmaster-general to pay poor-rates upon the rateable value of telegraph posts and wires, as fixed by an assessment committee. The postmaster-general had tendered a smaller amount, proportionately to an assessment fixed by the commissioners of the Treasury, which the vestry had refused:—Held, that by the Telegraph Acts, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 110) and 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 73), no duty is cast upon the postmaster-general to pay the rates imposed by those acts; and that there is no remedy by mandamus against him to enforce the payment of rates fixed by an assessment committee. Reg. (or Marylebone Vestry) v. Postmaster-General, 28 L. T. 337; 21 W. R. 459.

Purchase of Premises by Postmaster-General—Rateable Value at Date of Purchase.]—The Telegraph Act, 1868, empowers the postmaster-general to purchase, for the purposes of the act, the undertaking (including land and property) of any telegraph company, and s. 22 provides that all land, property, and undertakings so purchased shall be assessable and rateable to parochial rates at sums not exceeding the rateable value at which such land, property and undertakings were properly assessed at the time of such purchase. In 1870 the postmaster-general purchased the undertaking of a telegraph company, including a house held by the company under a lease for twenty-one years from September, 1867. At the time of the purchase a portion of the house was subject to an underlease granted by the company to H. for the remainder of the term less one day, and containing a covenant by the company to pay all parochial rates. The postmaster-general occupied and used, for telegraphic purposes only, the portion of the house not comprised in the underlease until the year 1878, when he demised that portion to others, and thenceforth no part of the house was occupied or used for telegraphic purposes. The rateable annual value at which the portion comprised in the underlease could properly have been assessed, as a separate tenement at the time of the purchase, was 108*l.* In 1880 the assessment committee of the district separately assessed that portion in respect of parochial rates at the rateable annual value of 334*l.*:—Held, that s. 22 applied notwithstanding that all use of the house for telegraphic purposes had ceased, and therefore that the occupier of the premises comprised in the underlease was not liable to be assessed in any sum exceeding the rateable value at which these premises could have been properly assessed at the time of the purchase. St Gabriel, Fenchurch v. Williams, 55 L. J., M. C. 14; 16 Q. B. D. 649; 54 L. T. 270; 34 W. R. 256; 50 J. P. 533.

25. Mines and Quarries.

What are Rateable.]—Iron mines are not rateable under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, coal mines being the only mines mentioned in the statute. Morgan v. Crawshay, 40 L. J., M. C. 202; L. R. 5 H. L. 304; 24 L. T. 889; 20 W. R. 554.

Iron mines are not rateable; and being rated conjointly with coal mines, the coal whereof was raised by the owner of the lands for his own use in smelting the iron, an order of sessions confirming such rate generally, without ascertaining the proportion at which each was rated, was quashed. Rex v. Cunningham, 5 East, 478.

The express mention in 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, of coal mines, is a virtual exclusion of all other mines, and consequently other mines are not rateable. Rex v. Sedgley, 2 B. & Ad. 63; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 61.

Lead mines are not rateable. Lead Co. v. Richardson, 3 Burr. 1341; 1 W. Bl. 389. S. P., Rowls v. Gells, Cowp. 453; 1 Dougl. 304; and Talargoch Mining Co. v. St. Asaph, post, col. 1676.

Where, on a question as to the rateability of a freestone work, the sessions in a case called it a quarry, but stated all the facts respecting the mode of working for the opinion of the court, without determining the question whether it was a mine or not, the court sent the case back to be reheard, saying that the question of mine or no mine was a question of pure fact, which the sessions ought to determine. Rex v. Dunsford, 4 N. & M. 349; 2 A. & E. 568; 1 H. & W. 93; 4 L. J., M. C. 59.

The method of working, and not the nature of the substance obtained, is the criterion to determine the question of mine or no mine, so as to exempt from poor-rates. Ib.

Lime works are rateable in the hands of the occupier, though there be risk and expense in the working, and the profits are uncertain. Rex v. Alderbury Overseers, 1 East, 534.

Where limestone was obtained and raised by sinking shafts perpendicularly down to the stratum, which lay forty or fifty yards below the surface of the ground, and the stratum was worked by roads and gateheads, and the stone, raised to the surface by machinery, or carried under ground to a tunnel:—Held, that the property was a limestone mine, and therefore not rateable. Rex v. Sedgley, 2 B. & Ad. 63; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 61.

So, where glass-house, pot clay, and fire-brick clay were extracted from the earth by perpendicular shafts, in the same method that is used in coal mines:—Held, that the works were clay mines, and therefore not rateable. Rex v. Brettell, 3 B. & Ad. 424; 1 L. J., M. C. 46.

The occupier of a manganese mine is not liable to be rated. Rex v. Tremayne, 1 N. & M. 194; 4 B. & Ad. 162; 2 L. J., M. C. 17.

The occupier of a clay pit is rateable for the same. Rex v. Brown, 8 East, 528.

A slate work (or, as improperly called, a slate mine) is rateable. Rex v. Woodland, 2 East, 164.

Lighting and Watching Rate—"Houses, Buildings, and Property other than Land."]—Coal mines are not "land," but are "property (other than land) rateable to the relief of the poor," within the meaning of s. 33 of the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, and are, therefore, liable to be rated under that section at the higher rate. Thursby v. Brierecliffe with Entwistle Overseers, 64 L. J., M. C. 66; [1895]

A. C. 32; 11 R. 38; 71 L. T. 849; 59 J. P. 180—H. L. (E.)

Liability as Owner or Occupier.]—The lessee under the crown of lead mines is rateable for the profits arising from lot and cope; which are duties paid him by the adventurers, without any risk on his part. Rowls v. Gells, Cowp. 451; 1 Dougl. 304.

The lessees, under the lord of the manor, of lot and free share of all calamine raised within the manor, are liable to be rated as occupiers of land in the parish where the manor lies, none of them being resident in the parish. Rex v. Baptist Mill Co., 1 M. & S. 612.

The lords of the manor's lessee granted liberty to enter a tin mine and to dig and carry away tin on payment of a shilling in the pound on the value of the tin gotten:—Held, that the shilling reserved was rent and not a share in the produce of the mine, and that the lord's lessee was not rateable in respect of it as occupier. Reg. v. Crease, 11 A. & E. 677; 9 L. J., M. C. 38.

Where, however, a person receives without risk part of the produce extracted from the bowels of the earth, he is an occupier of land. Ib.

The Duke of Cleveland, being owner of the waste in the township of Middleton, and of the mines and minerals under the same, demised unto a company all the mines, veins, &c., opened or to be opened, together with all houses, &c., thereto belonging, with full power to enter and do all things necessary for working the mines, saving and reserving to himself, his heirs and assigns, full liberty, &c., to enter for the purpose of viewing the same, to have and to hold the same for twenty-one years, yielding and paying, rendering and delivering, during the continuance of the demise, to the duke, one full fifth part, share and proportion of all the ore won or gotten out of and from the demised premises, well and sufficiently cleansed, dressed, washed, and made merchantable and fit for the smelting mill, at the costs and charges of the company:—Held, that the duke was rateable as an occupier of the ore. Reg. v. Todd, 4 P. & D. 335; 12 A. & E. 816; 1 Arn. & H. 100; 10 L. J., M. C. 14; 5 Jur. 407.

The Duke of Cornwall being entitled as lord of a manor to tin ore, raised by the bound owners within the manor, which was rendered by them to him in an unmanufactured state, demised this toll:—Held, that the lessee, though not an inhabitant of the parish in which the tin was raised, was rateable to the poor-rate there, as occupier of the tin toll under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1. Crease v. Sawle, 2 Q. B. 862; 2 G. & D. 812—Ex. Ch.

The rate being made upon him as occupier of the toll, the court refused to inquire, in an action for levying the rate by distress, whether a part of the rate was or was not for tin toll not in the lessee's occupation, some tin toll appearing to be in his occupation, and the amount being only matter of appeal. Ib.

In an action by the galee of iron mines in the Forest of Dean, against the overseers of the parish, for having seized his goods as a distress for a poor-rate:—Held, that the galee was an occupier, and not a mere licensee of the mines, the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, having enacted that a gale of these mines shall be deemed to confer "an interest of the nature of real estate" on the grantee. Morgan v. Crawshay, 40 L. J., M. C. 202; L. R. 5 H. L. 304; 24 L. T. 889; 20 W. R. 554.

The owners granted for twenty-one years, to certain grantees, full liberty, licence and power to dig shafts, and work and raise, and make saleable, and sell, the minerals under certain limits, and to erect within the limits such sheds and other buildings as should be necessary for the above purposes. A cost-book mine company was established under the grant, and certain buildings, machinery, tramways, &c., were erected on part of the surface within the limits:—Held, that it was immaterial what title, if any, was conferred by the grant; the partners in the company were, by their servants and agents, the sole occupiers of that part of the surface on which the buildings were erected, and were rateable to the poor-rate in respect of such occupation. Kittow v. Liskeard Union, 44 L. J., M. C. 23; L. R. 10 Q. B. 7; 31 L. T. 601; 23 W. R. 72.

A cost-book company, not being incorporated, is a mere partnership; and consequently, any of the shareholders in the company may be entered upon the rate-books. Ib.

The lessee of a coal mine is rateable though he derives no profit from the mine. Rex v. Parrott, 5 Term Rep. 593.

—— Reservation of Rent or Ore.]—A landlord and owner of soil not residing within a parish, having granted a licence by indenture for twenty-one years to certain adventurers, to dig for tin and other ore under a close, reserving to himself one-eighth share of the ore, in an improved and merchantable state, and granting to the adventurers the exclusive occupation of the mine for the purpose of procuring the ores, is rateable for the relief of the poor of the parish in which the mine is situate, in respect of such reserved proportion or eighth share; and in respect thereof, is to be considered as an occupier of the lands by the hand of the adventurers; the reservation operating as an exception out of the demise, and not being in the nature of a rent. Rex v. St. Austell, 1 D. & R. 351; 5 B. & Ald. 693; 24 R. R. 534.

Where a rate was imposed upon an owner of the lead ore in certain lead mines, in respect of the duty lead reserved in a lease of the mines, being one-fifth share of the lead to be smelted from the ore raised from the mines:—Held, that this reservation was in the nature of a rent, and therefore not rateable. Rex v. Pomfret (Earl), 5 M. & S. 139.

The trustees under the will of a person seised in fee of two third parts of a manor, subject to certain leases to a company of adventurers of the mines of lead, tin, and copper ore, and other minerals under the moors, commons or wastes of the manor, at a rent certain, are not rateable for such rent. Rex v. Welbank, 4 M. & S. 222.

A person entitled to toll tin and farm dues (which are certain portions of the tin raised by the adventurers in the tin mines) is liable to be rated in respect thereof. Rex v. St. Agnes, 3 Term Rep. 480.

A lead mine was held under three leases, two of which granted the minerals to the lessees for the purpose of being worked. Within the land comprised in one of them, the shafts were sunk which communicated with the surface and the underground workings, and ore was gotten from underneath such land, and the royalty or dues were reserved in kind, or at the option of the lessors, in lieu thereof the full value in money.

No ore was got from under the land comprised in the other lease, of which the reservation was a dead rent, in addition to a like reservation to the one above mentioned. The lessors were different persons. The minerals comprised in the two leases adjoined one another. The lessees were rated in respect of the engines, machinery, workshops and buildings, and surface of land connected with the mine, and the lessor of the land whereon the shaft was opened and whereunder the minerals were worked was rated for a lead mine, whereof the royalty or dues were reserved wholly in kind:—Held, that the Rating Act, 1874, s. 13, which provided that nothing in that act should apply to a mine of which the royalty or dues were for the time being wholly reserved in kind applied to this case, and rendered the old law applicable; that the mine as rated was a mine distinct from the holding under the latter lease, and that the reservation of the royalty or dues was wholly in kind, notwithstanding the lessor's option; that the rate therefore was correct. Van Mining Co. v. Llanidloes Overseers, 45 L. J., M. C. 138; 1 Ex. D. 310; 34 L. T. 692.

An owner of the soil granting a lease or let of a manganese mine, reserving a money render per ton of mineral raised, it is not rateable as an occupier. Rex v. Tremayne, 1 N. & M. 194; 4 B. & Ad. 162; 2 L. J., M. C. 17.

Landlords not resident within the parish, having leased lead mines, and other minerals, with liberty to the tenants to dig, &c., reserving a certain annual rent, and also certain proportions of the ore which should be raised, are at any rate not assessable to the relief of the poor for such certain rent, no ore being raised; whatever the question might be as to the proportion of ore reserved when in fact any should be raised. Rex v. Rochester (Bishop), 12 East, 353.

Mode of Assessment.]—An owner of iron mines rented two acres and a-half of surface land partly over and partly adjoining the mines; he occupied the mines and land together, using the surface for the purpose of working the mines and getting the ore, and he had erected thereon buildings, machinery, workshops and tramways. The surface land, buildings, &c., without the mines, would be practically valueless:—Held, that he was rateable to the poor-rate in respect of the surface land with the buildings, machinery, workshops, and tramways, although they were occupied in connection with a non-rateable subject-matter, viz. an iron mine. That the way to ascertain the rateable value was to assume the mines and surface to be in different hands, and then to calculate what rent the occupier of the mine would have to pay for the surface with the buildings erected thereon. Guest v Eastdean Overseers, 41 L. J., M. C. 129; L. R. 7 Q. B. 334; 26 L. T. 422; 20 W. R. 332.

The lessee and occupier of a coal mine is rateable for the full annual value of the mine, though increased by improvements, such as the erection of engines made at his own expense. Rex v. Granville (Lord), 4 M. & Ry. 171; 9 B. & C. 188; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 89.

An engine erected and used by the owner and occupier of an iron-stone mine, solely for the purpose of drawing water from the mine, is parcel of the mine itself, and not rateable. Rex v. Bilston, 8 D. & R. 734; 5 B. & C. 851; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 32.

The owner and occupier of coal mines is rateable at the sum for which the mine would let, subject to outgoings; the lessee of coal mines is rateable for the amount of royalty or rent which he pays; and in neither case is any allowance to be made for money expended on rendering the mines productive. Rex v. Attwood, 6 B. & C. 277; 9 D. & R. 328; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 47; 30 R. R. 280.

—— Actual Profits.]—The occupiers of cement works and also of a chalk pit situated close by were assessed separately as to their works and their pit. There were other equally good chalk pits in the neighbourhood, the chalk from which was used only for ballast and other purposes not so profitable as that of manufacturing cement, for which the occupiers used theirs. They appealed against the assessment of the chalk pit, and the counsel who supported the rate proposed to ask their manager as to the profits they obtained from the chalk, but the quarter sessions refused to admit evidence upon that subject:—Held, that the quarter sessions were right, and that although the convenience and situation of the chalk pit were to be considered in estimating what rent a tenant would reasonably pay, the actual profits derived by the occupiers were not material in forming that estimate. Reg. v. Aylesford Union, 26 L. T. 618.

—— Use of a Watercourse.]—A company for the purpose of working the machinery connected with a lead mine, diverted a stream from its natural course, paying the owners for such diversion, and paying certain small sums for the occupation of the land by the watercourse. The watercourse was about a mile and a half in length, being partly open, partly tunnelled, and for about 350 yards in pipes:—Held, that the company was rateable to the poor-rate in respect of the occupation of the watercourse at the value of the land enhanced by its capability of conveying water; and that it was not exempt from rateability by reason of its connection with a lead mine, though that is not rateable under 43 Eliz. c. 2. Talargoch Mining Co. v. St. Asaph Union, 9 B. & S. 210; 37 L. J., M. C. 149; L. R. 3 Q. B. 478; 18 L. T. 711; 16 W. R. 860.

—— What Works Included.]—A company occupied a lead mine held under a lease, which comprised land and works in a neighbouring union, the mine and most of the works being out of that union. After the ore was crushed and washed, it was taken by a tramway about half a mile to a smelting house, occupied under the same lease, in the neighbouring union, where the ore was converted into lead for sale. The company was rated under the Rating Act, 1874, s. 7, for their mine in the union at the amount of the whole of the dues payable in respect of the mine under the lease during the previous years. They were separately rated for part of the tramway to, and a chimney from, the smelting house, which were situated in the union; and were also rated by the neighbouring union for the land, works and smelting house there situated:—Held, that all these crushing, washing and smelting works were included under the definition in s. 7, as in connection with and for the purposes of the mine; and that a deduction should be made from the gross dues in respect of the rateable premises out of the union, in order to obtain the rateable value of the mine in the union. Snailbeach Mine Co. v. Forden Guardians, 35 L. T. 514.

—— When Mine Unproductive.]—Where a coal mine, becoming unproductive, ceases to be worked, the lessee is no longer liable to be rated, although he may be still bound by his covenant to pay the rent reserved to his landlord. Aliter, where the mine is itself productive, although worked at a loss by the lessee, after deducting the proportion of the gross value of the produce reserved to the owner. Rex v. Bedworth, 8 East, 387; 9 R. R. 476.

A coal company was the owner and occupier of a coal mine which had been drowned out some years back, and was wholly unproductive. They constructed an engine and boilers, together with an engine house and boiler sheds, on lands they had taken for that purpose, and also made a railway on part of such lands for conveying coals for the boilers. The whole of the boilers, engines and plant were used only for the purpose of endeavouring to pump out the water from the mine; but since 1870 the water had remained at about the same level, and no coal had as yet been worked:—Held, that though the company was rateable to the relief of the poor for the surface lands they occupied, they were not so rateable for the buildings, boilers, engine and plant, and railway, as these were only part of a valueless colliery, and were not shewn to have any value apart from such colliery. Tyne Coal Co. v. Wallsend Overseers, 46 L. J., M. C. 185; 35 L. T. 854.

The lessee of a coal mine is rateable though he derives no profit from the mine. Rex v. Parrott, 5 Term Rep. 593.

—— In different Parishes.]—A coal mine lying in several parishes is rateable in each of those parishes, although the adit and the machinery are in one parish only. Rex v. Foleshill, 4 N. & M. 360; 2 A. & E. 593; 1 H. & W. 71; 4 L. J., M. C. 63.

By an inclosure act it was declared, that all the allotments to be set out to the several persons having right of common upon a moor should be deemed to be situate within the same townships and places respectively wherein the land lay in respect of which such allotments should be made; and it was provided that nothing in the act should affect the right of P. to certain coal mines under the moor:—Held, that the first clause affected only those portions of the soil which were allotted to the commissioners, and not the coal mines under those allotments, and therefore, that such coal mines were rateable in the parish in which they were actually situate, as they were before the act passed, though the allotments became rateable elsewhere. Rex v. Pitt, 5 B. & Ad. 565; 3 L. J., M. C. 4.

Deduction by Tenant—Covenant to Pay Rates.]—A covenant, in a lease of iron mines, to pay a certain rent "free of all rates, taxes and deductions whatsoever, parliamentary, parochial or of any other nature," is not a "specific contract to pay the poor-rate, in the event of the abolition of the exemption," of iron mines, within s. 8 of the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54); and the lessee is therefore entitled under that section to deduct half the poor-rate from the rent. Devonshire (Duke) v. Barrow Hæmatite Steel Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 435; 2 Q. B. D. 286; 36 L. T. 355; 25 W. R. 469—C. A.

A lease of an iron mine, made in 1855 (not being then liable to poor-rate), contained covenants for the payment of certain rents and royalties, and these payments were to be made free and clear of all rates and taxes imposed by parliament or otherwise . . . "free from all deductions whatsoever"; and there was a covenant to pay "all manner of taxes, &c., which now are or which shall at any time hereafter, during the continuance of this demise, be imposed," landlord's property tax excepted. By the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), s. 3, the 43 Eliz. c. 2, was extended to mines "of every kind not mentioned in the recited act"; but s. 8 provided that where the lessee of a mine was, at the commencement of the act, exempt from the payment of poor-rate, which was afterwards made payable, he might deduct one-half from the rent (unless he had specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of the abolition of the said exemption):—Held, that under this section the tenant here might deduct half of the rate from his rent, for that he had not, within the words of the section, "specifically contracted" to pay such rate. Chaloner v. Bolckow, 47 L. J., C. P. 562; 3 App. Cas. 933; 39 L. T. 134; 26 W. R. 541—H. L. (E.)

26. Gas Works.

General Principle.]—The profits arising from the sale of gas, manufactured from coal, and conveyed through pipes and trunks under the pavement for the purpose of lighting a town, are not rateable, but the company is only rateable in a sum equal in amount to that for which the premises would let to other persons willing to carry on the same business. Rex v. Birmingham Gas Light and Coke Co., 2 D. & R. 735; 1 B. & C. 506; 25 R. R. 483.

Rateable Occupation—Pipes.]—Fixing pipes in the ground for the conveyance of gas to light a town, is a rateable occupation of land, and the occupiers are rateable to the extent of the increased value of the land so used, as long as it is applied to the purposes of a pipe-way. Rex v. Brighton Gas Light and Coke Co., 8 D. & R. 308; 5 B. & C. 466; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 213; 29 R. R. 290.

By an act for paving, lighting and watering, the trustees for carrying it into effect were empowered to rate the tenants and occupiers of all the houses, shops, malt-houses, granaries, warehouses, coach-houses, yards, gardens, grounds, stables, cellars, vaults, wharfs and other buildings and hereditaments within certain limits, meadow and pasture excepted:—Held, that this exception shewed the word "hereditaments" to be used not merely with reference to things ejusdem generis with those before enumerated, but in a more extended sense, comprehending land in general; and therefore that a gas-light company was rateable under the act for the ground occupied by their pipes and other apparatus. Rex v. Shrewsbury Gas Co., 3 B. & Ad. 216; 1 L. J., M. C. 18.

Mains and Pipes—Exclusive Use—Easement.]—A corporation was empowered to supply gas within a certain township, the local board of which had the exclusive right of laying gas mains in the township, and were compelled to keep the gas mains in repair, and to allow the corporation to use them for the supply of gas within the township:—Held, that the corporation was not in occupation of, but had a mere easement in, the mains, and was, therefore, not liable to be rated in respect of them. Southport Corporation

v. Ormskirk Assessment Committee, 63 L. J., Q. B. 250 ; [1894] 1 Q. B. 196 ; 9 R. 46 ; 69 L. T. 852 ; 42 W. R. 153 ; 58 J. P. 212—C. A.

Articles Rateable—Meters Excluded.]—A gas company was rated in respect of the following articles : meters soldered to the leaden service-pipes on the premises of consumers, but not fixed in any way so as to interfere with their removal ; retorts, or instruments for the production of gas, distinct and severable from the foundation or basement floor of the company's premises, but attached to the floor by hardened fire-clay ; purifiers, or massive iron vessels standing on a brick base, but not fixed to it, though connected on one side with pipes passing through the soil from the retorts ; steam-engines fastened by screw bolts to a stone base, fixed in the soil and capable of being detached by unscrewing the bolts ; boilers set in brickwork fixed in the soil ; gas-holders, or vessels of plate-iron for storing gas, not fixed in any way, but placed so as to rise and fall in circular tanks excavated beneath the soil, and easily moved for the purpose of repairs. According to the practice and course of business in letting gas-works, the tenant would have to take to and find capital for all the articles above enumerated : — Held, that the retorts, purifiers, steam-engines, boilers, and the movable part of the gas-holders, appeared to be attached to the inheritance for the permanent improvement of it, and ought to be included in the value of the premises for the purpose of rating, but that the meters must be excluded, as they could not be considered as part of the gas-works, and never were so attached to the houses as to lose the character of chattels. Reg. v. Lee, 35 L. J., M. C. 105 ; L. R. 1 Q. B. 241 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 225 ; 13 L. T. 704 ; 14 W. R. 311.

—— Fixed Machinery, Pipes and Gas-Holders.] — By a local act, the guardians of a parish were directed to value all houses, tenements and hereditaments within the parish, for the purpose of rating to the relief of the poor. By the customary mode of rating under this act, fixed machinery, erected for the purposes of manufacture, was not rated, nor were buildings containing it rated according to their value as increased by that machinery. A gas company supplying the town with gas, but having their gas manufactory out of the parish, was rated "for their gas-holder and premises in the street, and mains and pipes within the parish." The company had no property in the soil of the streets under which their mains and pipes were laid, but a mere licence from the commissioners for paving and lighting the town, in whom that property was vested. The gas-holder was valued, for the purpose of the rate, as a warehouse or a building, at what it was worth to let by the year. The mains and pipes, and the land they occupied, were valued by ascertaining the quantity of land through which they were laid, and valuing that land with reference to the value of the adjoining lands, taking into consideration the purposes for which it was used. The mains and pipes were also valued separately, at an annual rental to let, in the same manner as the houses, with an allowance for wear and tear :—Held, that such a rate was bad for inequality, on the ground of omission to rate other property of a similar nature. Rex v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gas Light Co., 1 N. & P. 691 ; 6 A. & E. 634 ; 6 L. J., M. C. 92.

Mode of Assessment.]—The works of a gas company are to be rated upon an estimate of the rent which would be given for them by a hypothetical tenant, after proper deductions, even though such principle may not be theoretically right, and it may be practically impossible to apply it satisfactorily to that kind of property. Sheffield United Gas Light Co. v. Sheffield Overseers, 4 B. & S. 135 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 169 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 623 ; 8 L. T. 692 ; 11 W. R. 1064.

—— Pipes in Several Parishes.]—When the mains and pipes of a gas company are distributed through several parishes, the proper criterion for the assessment of the company to each parish is not the amount of receipts for gas supplied therein, but a proportional part of the rent at which, after deduction for the wear and tear of machinery, the works of the company would let, calculated according to the improved value of the land, from the apparatus and works of the company laid down therein. Reg. v. Cambridge Gas Light Co., 3 N. & P. 362 ; 8 A. & E. 73 ; 7 L. J., M. C. 50.

A gas company in a town, which consisted of several parishes, in which were situated numerous colleges, which were extra-parochial, supplied gas in mains and pipes to these colleges, and was rated, therefore, to the parishes in which the colleges were locally situated :—Held, that the rate was bad, the company being rateable in respect, not of its receipts, but of the land occupied. Ib.

—— Deduction.]—The proper deduction to be made from the rent of a company's works to form the basis of an assessment, is such an annual sum as will be sufficient to replace the works when worn out. Ib.

Exemption for "Public Purposes."]—Commissioners who are authorised by acts of parliament to supply gas, provided that the profits be applied to the purposes of the acts, are not rateable to the poor-rate in respect of such profit. Rex v. Beverley Gas Works, 6 A. & E. 695 ; 1 N. & P. 646 ; 6 L. J., M. C. 84.

The corporation of Limerick having, under the powers of their special act, purchased the Limerick gas works, manufactured and sold gas ; and the surplus profits, after providing for certain charges and expenses, were applied, in pursuance of the provisions of the special act, in reducing the town improvement rate :—Held, that the gas works were not occupied for a "public purpose," and were not, therefore, exempt from being rated. Limerick Corporation v. Valuation Commissioner, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 420.

27. Stock in Trade and Personal Property.

Rateability.]—The 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, did not alter the law as to the rateability of personal property ; therefore a poor-rate made after that statute, and omitting stock in trade which yielded a profit in the parish, was liable to be quashed on appeal. Reg. v. Lumsdaine or Lamsdaine, 2 P. & D. 219 ; 10 A. & E. 157 ; 1 W. W. & H. 587 ; 8 L. J., M. C. 69 ; 3 Jur. 360.

Stock in trade, if the property of the person in possession, and productive, was rateable. Rex v. Darlington, 6 Term Rep. 468. S. P., Reg. v. Bridgewater, 2 P. & D. 586 ; 10 A. & E. 711 ; 8 L. J., M. C. 72.

Notwithstanding it had never been rated in the parish, unless there were some circumstances to take it out of the general rule. Rex v. Ambleside, 16 East, 380.

Silk throwsters, working up in their mills the silk of their employers sent to them for that purpose, were not liable to be rated in that respect, as for their stock in trade. Rex v. Sherborne, 8 East, 537.

Fixtures—Tanks and Heavy Articles in a Distillery.]—The premises of a distillery contained tanks which formed the roofs of rooms and houses, boiling backs and mash tuns, lying on brick piers against the walls, which formed the floors of some of the rooms and were connected by pipes to other houses, reservoirs, and other articles necessary for the process of distilling. They were all heavy, and either unattached, except by the communicating pipes, to the walls or piers upon which they stood, or fastened only by screws for the purpose of being steadier. Each was to be bought and sold as a separate article, and if all were removed the premises might be used for other manufacturing purposes:—Held, that these articles were not fixtures, and could not be property rated in the assessment of the premises to the poor-rate. Chidley v. West Ham Overseers, 32 L. T. 486.

—— Machinery.]—A house and an engine for carding cotton, which are rented as one entire subject and described by the general name of an engine-house, are rateable. Rex v. Hogg, 1 Term Rep. 721; 1 R. R. 375.

The profits of a weighing-machine house are rateable. Rex v. St. Nicholas, Gloucester, 1 Term Rep. 723, n.

In assessing shipbuilding premises to the poor-rate, the value of machinery attached to the premises is to be taken into consideration in ascertaining their rateable value where such machinery, though some of it may be capable of being removed without injury to itself or the freehold, is essentially necessary to the shipbuilding business to which the premises are devoted, and intended to remain permanently attached to them so long as they are applied to their present purpose. Laing v. Bishopwearmouth Overseers, 47 L. J., M. C. 41; 3 Q. B. D. 299; 37 L. T. 781; 26 W. R. 351.

Ships.]—Where, by a local act, the guardians of the poor of a town were authorised to levy rates "by taxation of every inhabitant, and of all lands, houses, tithes impropriate, appropriation of tithes, and all stock and estates in the town, in equal proportions, according to their respective worths and values":—Held, that all personal property, including shipping, was rateable, whether the owners were or were not resident within the town. Rex v. Hull Dock Co., 5 D. & R. 359; 3 B. & C. 516.

The owners of a coasting vessel were liable to be rated in respect of the profits accruing therefrom, in that parish where they themselves resided, and where the ship was registered, and where her cargoes were usually received and delivered, and her freight paid, and which was the home of the vessel when unemployed, although at the time of making the rate the ship was not actually within the parish. But they were not liable to be rated for a ship which was never locally within the parish, although the profits were there received by the owners. Rex v. Shepherd, 1 B. & Ald. 109.

Household Furniture.]—Household furniture is not rateable. Rex v. White, 4 Term Rep. 771.

28. Woods and Woodlands.

Saleable Underwoods.]—Saleable underwoods are rateable annually in proportion to their value, though they should happen not to be cut down more than once in twenty-one years; and their annual value may be estimated according to the value they may be worth to rent for a lease of the duration of their intended growth. Rex v. Mirfield, 10 East. 219.

Saleable underwood, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, means such shoots from old stools as are capable of reproduction, and of being treated by the wood-owner so as to yield a succession of profits, and the circumstances to determine this question are matters of fact for the sessions. Reg. v. Narberth, (North), 1 P. & D. 590; 9 A. & E. 815; 8 L. J., M. C. 46.

Timber—Exemption of.]—If beech is timber by the custom of the country, it is not rateable. Rex v. Minchin, 3 Burr. 1308.

Where fir and larch were planted with oak and ash trees, principally for the purpose of affording a screen or shelter to the latter in their infancy, and were cut from time to time, as such oak and ash required more room to spread, and when once cut did not spring again:—Held, that although when sold they yielded a profit, they were not saleable underwood, as the primary object in planting them was not to derive a profit by sale; and consequently not rateable. Rex v. Ferrybridge, 2 D. & R. 634; 1 B. & C. 375; 25 R. R. 411.

The test of saleable underwood is not whether the tree is timber, either by the general law or the custom of the country, but whether it is managed in such a way as to produce a renewable profit, though it may not be available for many years. Fitzhardinge (Lord) v. Prichett, 8 B. & S. 216; 36 L. J., M. C. 49; L. R. 2 Q. B. 135; 15 L. T. 502; 15 W. R. 640.

Herbage and Prunage.]—It is not settled whether the herbage and prunage of a forest are rateable. Jones v. Mawnsell, 1 Dougl. 302.

Woods Rateable as Waste Lands.]—B. was rated in respect of woods and shooting in his occupation. Appeal against the rate on the ground of its being excessive. According to the Rating Act, 1874, the woods ought to have been rated as if the land was let and occupied in its natural and unimproved state, that is, as mere waste, irrespective of the value of the right of sporting thereon:—Held, that the objections were valid, and rate accordingly decreased. Baker v. Beyford Overseers, 33 L. T. 755.

Woodlands were assessed by quarter sessions at their rateable value if occupied in their natural and unimproved state, but it was found as a fact that they might be rendered worth a much larger sum to a tenant from year to year if a certain expenditure was incurred for grubbing up woods, draining, and road-making:—Held, that the quarter sessions were right, and that under the Rating Act, 1874, s. 4, woods were not to be rated on any assumption of their improved value upon alteration into land of a different description. Westmoreland (Earl) v. Southwick Overseers, 36 L. T. 108.

29. RIGHTS CONNECTED WITH LAND.

Incorporeal Hereditaments generally.]—An incorporeal hereditament cannot be made rateable by virtue of a local act, except by clear and express words. Colebrooke v. Tickell, 4 A. & E. 916; 6 N. & M. 483; 2 H. & W. 23; 5 L. J., K. B. 180.

Sporting Severed from the Land.]—The owner of a tenement with dwelling-house and other buildings, containing about nineteen acres, leased to a person occupying the same, excepting plantations and all timber, and all mines, "and also excepting all manner of game, hares, rabbits, and wild fowl, with liberty of hunting, fowling and fishing, over and through the premises at all times during the term":—Held, that this lease reserved to the owner a right of sporting which was severed from the occupation of the land, and therefore rateable within the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54) ss. 2 & 6. Rogers v. St. Germans Union, 35 L. T. 332.

Under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 6, sub-s. 2, where the owner of land lets the right of sporting over part of the land which he retains in his own occupation, the lessee may be rated in respect of the right of sporting. Kenrick v. Guilsfield Overseers, 49 L. J., M. C. 27; 5 C. P. D. 41; 41 L. T. 624; 28 W. R. 372. See also Eyton v. Mold Overseers, 6 Q. B. D. 13; 43 L. T. 472; 29 W. R. 122; 45 J. P. 54.

An incorporeal hereditament, as a right of shooting, is not in itself the subject of a poor-rate. It can only be brought into account when it improves and enhances the value of the land to which it belongs. Hilton and Walkerfield Overseers v. Bowes Overseers, 35 L. J., M. C. 137; L. R. 1 Q. B. 359; 13 L. T. 512; 14 W. R. 368.

An owner of land who is himself the occupier, but lets the right to take game to another, is assessable in respect of his occupation, as being enhanced in value by the right to take game. Reg. v. Battle Union, 8 B. & S. 12; 36 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 2 Q. B. 8; 15 L. T. 180; 15 W. R. 57.

A yearly tenant occupied pasture land under a parol demise, the lessor reserving to himself the right to enter and kill and take the game. The rateable value of the land, assuming it to be held as pasture land only, was 11*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*, and assuming that the occupier exercised the right to kill and take the game, was 26*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* On an appeal by the tenant against a poor-rate, in which he was rated upon the greater amount, the sessions reduced the rate to a rate upon the lesser amount:—Held, that the reduction was right, the effect of the reservation in the demise, taken together with 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, being to separate the right of killing and taking the game from the lessee's occupation. Reg. v. Thurlestone, 1 El. & El. 502; 28 L. J., M. C. 106; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 820; 7 W. R. 192.

Right of Common.]—A mere right of common is not rateable; therefore, where certain persons, as burgesses of a town, and occupiers of ancient messuages within it, had a right to turn cattle upon certain lands, at certain periods of the year, to the exclusion of the owners of the soil:—Held, that they had a mere right of common, in respect of which they were not rateable. Rex v. Churchill, 6 D. & R. 635; 4 B. & C. 750; 28 R. R. 473.

Where a corporation was seised in fee of lands, which by the custom were annually meted out under their control by a leet jury, according to a certain stint, to such of the resident burgesses who chose to stock the same, they paying 19*s.* 4*d.* to each of the other burgesses who did not stock:—Held, that the stocking of the lands was rateable. Rex v. Watson, 5 East 480; 2 Smith, 144. And see Rex v. Tewkesbury Corporation, 13 East, 155; Rex v. Sudbury Corporation, 2 D. & R. 651; 1 B. & C. 389; 25 R. R. 423.

Where freemen, and the widows of deceased freemen, of a municipal corporation enjoyed the right of depasturing on an uninclosed moor, of digging turfs, clay, sand, and marl, of cutting whins and furzes, of getting limestones and slates from the quarries, and sowing grass-seeds on the moor, according to regulations framed by the corporation, and the corporation had inclosed a part of the common one hundred years back, which they still retained in severalty; but it appeared that the rights of the freemen originated in grants of right of common and turbary, and that there was no evidence to shew that any larger right had ever been granted to them, and that a rent of 2*s.* per annum, which had been reserved on the grant of the right of turbary, was still paid to the lord of the manor:—Held, that the freemen only possessed a right of common, though with large and unusual enjoyments, and that therefore it was an incorporeal tenement, not rateable. Reg. v. Alnwick (Chamberlains), 1 P. & D. 343; 9 A. & E. 444; 8 L. J., M. C. 50.

Right of Fishing.]—The lessee of all those fishing or the halves and halvendoles, with the appurtenants to the halves due and accustomed within the river Severn, between certain limits within a manor bordering on the river, and of all royal fishes taken between the limits, put and wheel fishing excepted, under an annual rent, is liable to be rated for such fishery. Rex v. Ellis, 1 M. & S. 652.

Fishery—"Expenses necessary to command Rent."]—By a local fishery act, passed for the preservation and increase of salmon, commissioners were empowered to raise a rate from every owner of a fishery in a large district for the purposes of the act. The appellant was tenant of a fishery, for which he paid a rent of 305*l.*, and a rate of 61*l.* to the commissioners:—Held, that in ascertaining the rateable value of his property, the amount of the rate should be deducted, for that it was an "expense necessary to maintain the property in a state to command such rent," and so allowed to be deducted under s. 1 of the Parochial Assessment Act, 1834. Reg. v. Smith, 55 L. J., M. C. 49; 54 L. T. 431; 50 J. P. 215.

Land Improved by a Spring.]—Land, of which the annual value is improved by a spring rising within it, may be rated at such improved value, although the owners of the land, who are also occupiers, do not receive any of the profits derived from the spring, nor does any part become due in the parish where the land lies. Rex v. New River Co., 1 M. & S. 503; 14 R. R. 514.

If one rents a quantity of land, together with a mineral spring thereout arising, at a gross yearly rent, he is rateable in respect of the whole of such rent; though in fact the annual value of the land, independently of the spring, is only in proportion of two to eight of the reserved rents. Rex v. Miller, Cowp. 619.

Profits of a Manor.]—Neither quit-rents, nor heriots, nor other casual profits of a manor are rateable. Rex v. Vanderwall, 2 Burr. 991; 1 W. Bl. 212.

30. Tithes, Corn and Commuted Rent-charges.

Tithe—Mode of Assessment.]—Tithes are hereditaments within the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, and a tithe-owner is rateable at their annual value, i.e. such a sum as the tithes might reasonably be expected to let for from year to year, free of the usual tenant's rates and taxes, and deducting the amount of ecclesiastical dues payable in respect thereof. Reg. v. Capel, 4 P. & D. 87; 12 A. & E. 382; 9 L. J., M. C. 65; 4 Jur. 886.

Corn-rents.]—By an inclosure act, allotments were made to the parson, as a compensation for the uninclosed glebe lands of his rectory, and for all rights of common belonging to the rectory; and it was enacted, that the commissioner for inclosure should ascertain the yearly value of all the tithes on the lands to be inclosed, and the ancient inclosed lands, and that the tithes should be deemed equal in value severally to one-fifth, one-seventh, and one-eighth of the annual net value of different classes of lands respectively, and a corn-rent be assigned to the parson, equivalent to the annual value of the tithes:—Held, that the parson was rateable in respect of such corn-rent. Rex v. Wistow, 5 A. & E. 250; 6 N. & M. 567; 2 H. & W. 95; 5 L. J., M. C. 122.

Where the tithes of a parish were extinguished by act of parliament, and in lieu thereof certain annual corn-rents issuing out of the lands in the parish were substituted, payable to the rector quarterly with a power of distress and sale to enforce payment:—Held, that the money when paid, was rateable in the hands of the rector. Rex v. Boldero, 6 D. & R. 557; 4 B. & C. 467; 28 R. R. 330.

—— Mode of Assessment.]—A corn-rent in lieu of tithes should be rated upon the same principle as a farm, the criterion being "for how much a year would it let to a tenant." Allowance should be made for the trouble and expense of collection, and the danger of loss by insolvency, and for the ecclesiastical dues payable by the incumbent to the bishop, but not for the expense of providing for the performance of the church duties. Rex v. Joddrell, 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 26.

Rent-charge.]—An act enacted that the tithes of a parish should be held in fee by A., who was owner of part of the lands in the parish, and that all A.'s lands in the parish should be charged with an annuity payable to the vicar for the time being, who had previously enjoyed the small tithes, and who, by an agreement recited in the act, was to receive such annuity in lieu of all his vicarial dues:—Held, that the vicar was not rateable for such annuity, as the tithes were not extinguished. Rex v. Great Hambleton, 1 A. & E. 145.

An act of the legislature imposed a rate on lands "and other real estate":— Held, that although these words were large enough to include a rent-charge in lieu of tithes, they would not necessarily do so if it appeared from the general wording of the act that it was not intended to apply to incorporeal rights. Kerr v. Wilkie, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 383; 1 L. T. 501; 8 W. R. 286—H. L.

By an inclosure act it was enacted, that an annual rent of 90*l.* should be vested in the rector, charged upon all the land to be inclosed, and should be paid "free and clear of and from all deductions, defalcations or abatements for or in respect of reprises or outgoings whatsoever," other than such proportion of the land-tax as the annual rent of 90*l.* should be to the yearly value of the lands charged with it. It also enacted, that the annual rent of 90*l.* should be in lieu and satisfaction of, and compensation for, all tithes arising within the fields to be inclosed, and all other tithes and payments to the rector, except in respect of two orchards, and all the houses to which no lands in the common fields belonged:—Held, that the rector was not rateable in respect of the annual rent-charge. Reg. v. Shaw, 3 New Sess. Cas. 170; 12 Q. B. 419; 17 L. J., M. C. 137; 12 Jur. 651.

By an inclosure act, reciting that A., as lay impropriator, was entitled to the great, and B., as vicar, to the small tithes: the commissioners were empowered to set out certain lands as the value of and which should be taken as a full satisfaction and compensation for the tithes both great and small, and, out of the lands so to be set out in lieu of tithes, they were to allot thirty acres to B., and all the remainder to A., subject to the payment of a corn-rent (to be ascertained in the usual way), which should, with the thirty acres, in their judgment be a fair compensation for the vicarial tithes and payments in lieu of tithes payable to the vicar, which rent or sum of money should be payable and paid to the vicar and his successors quarterly, clear of all parochial taxes, rates, dues and assessments whatsoever; and it was enacted that the tithes in lieu whereof the thirty acres of land were so directed to be allotted, and such rent was to be paid, should cease and be for ever extinguished:—Held, that the land so allotted to A. in lieu of the vicarial tithes, and so charged with such rent, was liable to be assessed. Hackett v. Long Bennington Overseers, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 38; 33 L. J., M. C. 137; 9 L. T. 769; 12 W. R. 433.

—— Mode of Assessment.]—A tithe rent-charge is to be assessed to the poor-rate, like all other property, according to the sum for which it might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, and in deciding upon such an amount it must be considered whether in each particular case anything over the expenses for collecting and the allowances for bad debts and legal and other expenses would be necessary to induce a tenant to take it. St. Asaph (Dean) v. Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant Overseers, 66 L. J., Q. B. 267; [1897] 1 Q. B. 511; 76 L. T. 42; 45 W. R. 374; 61 J. P. 213—C. A.

Commutation for fixed annual Payment—Payment in Lieu of Tithes.]—By 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, provision was made for payment to the clergy of the city of London and their successors of a rate made upon the inhabitants and calculated upon the rent of the houses in the city. In this and several subsequent statutes these payments were described as tithes. A special act passed in 1881 provided that all tithes and sums of money in lieu of tithes arising or growing due in a parish in London should cease and be extinguished, and the tithe-owner should receive in lieu and satisfaction thereof a fixed annual sum, to be levied and collected in the same manner as the poor-rates. Neither the above-mentioned tithes nor the fixed annual sum in lieu thereof, had ever been assessed for the relief of the poor :—Held, that the owner was not rateable to the poor-rate in respect of this fixed annual sum, as such sum was a personal payment, and was not a payment in lieu of tithes rateable under 43 Eliz. c. 2. Esdaile v. City of London Union, 56 L. J., M. C. 149; 19 Q. B. D. 431; 57 L. T. 749; 35 W. R. 722; 51 J. P. 564—C. A.

By a local act the parish of F. was constituted a separate parish, and it was provided that the parson should receive the tithes within the limit of the parish. It was further provided that the corporation of the town of F., which was in the parish, should levy a rate called "the rector's rate" on all houses, shops, warehouses, cellars, and outhouses, with the appurtenances, then being, or which should at any time thereafter be built in the town, after the rate of sixteenpence in the pound, and pay the same to the parson of the parish. When houses, shops, warehouses, cellars, and outhouses, with the appurtenances, had been built on land liable to tithe, tithe had not been collected in respect thereof. The defendant, the parson of the parish, was rated to the relief of the poor in respect of the rector's rate :—Held, that although under 43 Eliz. c. 2, a parson is rateable as an inhabitant in respect of tithes and money payments in lieu of tithes, yet the defendant was not liable in respect of the rector's rate, which was not a payment in lieu of tithes, inasmuch as it was levied on land which would not, on default of payment of the rector's rate, be liable to tithes. Reg. v. Christopherson, 55 L. J., M. C. 1; 16 Q. B. D. 7; 53 L. T. 804; 34 W. R. 86; 50 J. P. 212—C. A.

Quære, whether a rector who lets his tithes by parol to the occupiers of the lands in respect of which the tithes arise, and receives a half-yearly composition in the nature of rent can be treated as the occupier of tithes within the meaning of the General Highway Act, 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 34, and rateable to the highways of the parish. Rex v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 2 D. & R. 689; 1 B. & C. 485.

Tithes for which compositions have been entered into by the respective occupiers may be rated in the hands of the rector in one entire sum. Rex v. Sussex JJ. or Hasler, 3 N. & M. 263; 3 L. J., M. C. 56.

Grant by Deed—Security in Land.]—A rector of a parish granted to the incumbent (and his successors) of a district formed under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94; and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, out of several parishes, of which his parish was one, "one clear yearly rent-charge of 150*l.*, to be payable half-yearly, issuing out of and charged upon or being part of the rectory or parsonage, and the glebe lands, tithes or tithe commutation rent-charge, hereditaments, and all other emoluments to the rectory or parsonage belonging." The deed gave power to the grantee, in case it should be in arrear, to enter upon the rectory and parsonage, glebe lands, hereditaments, or any part thereof, and to distrain, or to receive and take the tithes or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, until satisfaction of such arrears. This power had never been exercised, the money having been regularly paid. The grantee did not reside in the parish :—Held, that he was not rateable to the poor-rate in respect of the annual sum granted by the deed. Frend v. Tolleshunt Knights, 1 El. & El. 753; 28 L. J., M. C. 169; 7 W. R. 454.

Deductions—Rent-charge on a Tithe Rent-charge.]—An incumbent, owner of a tithe rent-charge, who voluntarily endows a district parish formed, for spiritual purposes, out of a part of his own parish, by granting to the minister of such new district parish a rent-charge on the tithe rent-charge, is not entitled to claim a deduction from the total amount of tithe rent-charge in respect of the portion which he has thus granted away. Lawrence v. Tolleshunt Knights Overseers, 2 B. & S. 533; 31 L. J., M. C. 148; 10 W. R. 620.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, being owner of the impropriate rectory and tithe rent-charge of a parish of H., and of land thereto appertaining, granted, under 29 Car. 2, c. 8, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, to the perpetual curate of P. (a separate and distinct parish from H.), an annual rent of 40*l.*, to be charged upon and yearly issuing out of the rectory, tithe rent-charge and land. Subsequently to this grant, the archbishop leased the rectory, tithe rent-charge, and land to G., a clergyman, for twenty-one years, G. to pay yearly, during the term, to the archbishop, 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, and also 6*l.* 16*s.* for redeemed land-tax; and also to the perpetual curate of T. the sum of 40*l.* in augmentation of the revenues of the curacy :—Held, that in assessing G. to the poor-rate of H., as occupier of the tithe rent-charge of H., no allowance was to be made to him in respect of his yearly payment of the 40*l.*, for that the whole of the rent-charge was included in the demise to him, and the 40*l.* was part of the rent paid by him for the occupation of the whole, not so much of the whole withdrawn from his occupation. Reg. v. Groves, 2 El. & El. 793; 29 L. J., M. C. 179; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1014; 8 W. R. 434.

—— Expenses of Collection.]—A deduction is allowed for expenses of collection including law expenses and losses by ultimate nonpayment. Reg. v. Goodchild, El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 233; 6 W. R. 800.

—— Rates and Taxes.]—And for poor-rate, tenant's property tax and ecclesiastical dues, but not for landlord's property tax or land tax. Ib.

—— Tenant's Profits.]—A deduction by way of tenant's profits is not necessarily to be made. Ib.

—— Repair of Chancel.]—Upon an appeal to quarter sessions by the owners of a rectorial tithe rent-charge from the decision of an assessment committee as to the rateable value thereof, the court of quarter sessions allowed deductions from the gross estimated rental in respect of the remuneration of a collector, legal costs and out-of-pocket expenses, bad debts, and irregularity in payments, and tenant's taxes, and also for tenant's profits and for the repair of the chancel of the parish church :—Held, on appeal—first, that in the absence of a finding of fact that the amount allowed for the expenses of collection, bad debts, and legal and other expenses was insufficient to induce a tenant to take the tithe rent-charge without a further allowance, the court of quarter sessions were wrong in allowing a deduction for tenant's profits; and, secondly, that, as it did not appear that a tenant could be charged with the repair of the chancel of the church, the deduction upon that ground was also wrong. Reg. v. Goodchild (El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 233) followed. St. Asaph (Dean) v. Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant Overseers, 66 L. J., Q. B. 267; [1897] 1 Q. B. 511; 76 L. T. 42; 45 W. R. 374; 61 J. P. 213—C. A.

—— Money for Queen Anne's Bounty.]—In assessing the commutation tithe rent-charge and parsonage-house of a benefice, no deduction is to be allowed in order to ascertain the rateable value in respect of a sum paid annually by the incumbent to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty as interest and part principal of money borrowed by him to rebuild the house, such payment being secured by a mortgage on the profits of the benefice. Reg. v. Hawkins, El. Bl. & El. 2; 27 L. J., M. C. 248; 6 W. R. 367.

—— Stipend to Curate.]—Lay impropriators of the tithes of a parish, B., granted a lease of their tithe rent-charge, at a nominal rent, to W., for twenty-one years, if he should so long remain the vicar of the adjoining parish, he covenanting to serve the cure of B., either by himself or a curate. In order to the proper discharge of the duties of the two parishes, it was necessary to employ a curate for B.:—Held, that in assessing W. to the poor-rate of B., as occupier of the tithe rent-charge, he was not entitled to any deduction in respect of the stipend which he paid the curate. Wheeler v. Burmington Overseers, 1 B. & S. 709; 31 L. J., M. C. 57; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 5 L. T. 345; 10 W. R. 57.

Where a beneficed clergyman is compellable by his bishop to appoint a curate, or under a sense of religious, independent of legal obligation, appoints one, he is entitled in assessing his tithe commutation rent-charge to the poor-rate under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, to deduct the salary of the curate from the amount of the rent-charge. Williams v. Llangeinwen Overseers, 1 B. & S. 699; 31 L. J., M. C. 54; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 313; 5 L. T. 309; 10 W. R. 14. S. P., Reg. v. Goodchild, El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 233; 6 W. R. 800.

Where the income of the incumbent of a parish is made up of a tithe rent-charge glebe land and interest of a sum invested in the public funds, and the incumbent necessarily employs a curate to assist him in assessing the rent-charge to the poor-rate, the salary of the curate must be set against the whole income, and a proportionate sum only deducted from the amount of the rent-charge. Scriven-with-Tentergate Overseers v. Fawcett, 32 L. J., M. C. 161; 11 W. R. 689.

—— Benefice of Three Parishes.]—The vicar of one benefice composed of three parishes was rated in each parish in respect of his vicarial tithe commutation rent-charge; he received that rent-charge for the three parishes as well as the other profits arising within the same. For one of the parishes he appointed a curate, who resided there and was licensed by the bishop, and received from the vicar an annual stipend for discharging the ecclesiastical duties of it. In another the like arrangement subsisted. The vicar himself performed the duties and resided in the third:—Held, that in ascertaining the rateable value of the tithe commutation rent-charges of the several parishes he was not entitled to be allowed a deduction in respect of the stipends paid to the curates. Reg. v. Sherford, 8 B. & S. 596; 36 L. J., M. C. 113; L. R. 2 Q. B. 503; 16 L. T. 663; 15 W. R. 1035.

Exemptions.]—See sub tit. STATUTORY EXEMPTIONS, infra, col. 1697.

31. TOLLS.

Rateability of Toll-house—Exemption.]—Tolls are not rateable in themselves, but a toll-house is increasedly rateable by reason of the facilities which it affords for the collection of the tolls. Williams v. Bedminster Assessment Committee, 45 L. J., M. C. 117; 34 L. T. 795.

W. was lessee of a toll-house, and of certain tolls levied on passengers over a bridge on the site of an ancient ferry. The value of the tolls was about 800*l.* per annum; the value of the toll-house as a building was 12*l.* A rate was laid generally on the toll-house and tolls, stating the "gross estimated value, 800*l.*," and "rateable value, 700*l.*":—Held, that although the tolls were not themselves rateable, yet the toll-house was; and in assessing the latter, its value, as enhanced by the facility it afforded for collecting the tolls, was to be taken into account. Ib.

A toll-house erected for the purpose of taking tolls at a gate across a highway which has never been used by the public except on paying a certain sum for passing through is liable to be rated according to the amount of the tolls received; and the expressed amount of the rate is to be divided in proportions between the parishes in which the road is situated over which the right of passage is acquired, by payment of such toll. Reg. v. St. George the Martyr, Southwark, 3 W. R. 515.

Canal Tolls.]—Canal tolls, per se, are not rateable. Rex v. St. Mary's, Leicester, 6 M. & S. 400.

Tolls of a Lock upon a Canal.]—An act having empowered the Duke of Bridgewater to erect a lock upon the Rochdale canal, and to receive at such lock certain rates or tolls upon goods in vessels navigated from that canal into his own, as a compensation for the profits arising to him from certain wharves at Manchester, which were sacrificed for the public benefit in that navigation:—Held, that a poor-rate on his trustees, occupiers of the "Rochdale canal, lock, tunnel, dues or rates" (which dues or rates were only other names for the lock rated therewith), was good. Rex v. Macdonald, 12 East, 324; 11 R. R. 396.

Tonnage Dues of a Dock.]—By an act the dock company at Hull received a grant of land from the crown, and of 15,000*l.* from the revenues of the customs, and were empowered to make a basin or a dock, wharves, &c.; and, in consideration of the expense of making and maintaining the same, dues were made payable to them for every ship or vessel coming into, or going out of, the harbour, basin, or docks, within the port of Hull, or unlading or lading any of their cargo within the port. By another act the company was empowered to increase their docks. The port of Hull consisted of the river Hull, or harbour, and of a portion of the river Humber, neither of which was the property of the dock company, and of three docks and a basin, which were the property of the company. All vessels frequenting the port of Hull passed through that portion of the river Humber which is within the port of Hull, paid tonnage duties, and might be divided into five classes: first, those which discharge their cargo in the river Humber without entering the river Hull, basin or docks; secondly, those which discharge their cargo in the river Hull without entering the basin or docks; thirdly, those using the basin without going into the docks; fourthly, those passing through the river Hull into the docks; and fifthly, those passing through the basin into the docks. The tonnage dues were all collected at the custom-house:—Held, that the company was not rateable for their tonnage dues upon the first and second classes, but that they were rateable for the remaining classes. Reg. v. Hull Dock Co., 1 New Sess. Cas. 621; 7 Q. B. 2; 14 L. J., M. C. 114; 9 Jur. 442.

Harbour Dues—Additional Duty for Use of Wet Dock.]—Commissioners were appointed by a local act of parliament for the improvement of a harbour, with power to impose tonnage dues upon all ships using the harbour, and other dues called shore dues on goods shipped from or landed on the quays. The soil of the harbour did not belong to the commissioners, but that of the quays was vested in them, and they were accordingly rated to the poor-rate in respect of the shore dues, but not in respect of the tonnage dues. By a subsequent act the commissioners were empowered to construct a wet dock, and fresh dues were substituted for those previously authorised, the shore dues on goods being much the same as those which previously existed, except that additional dues were payable on completion of the wet dock on goods loaded or discharged in the dock, or exported or imported in vessels of a tonnage of 100 tons or upwards, and new tonnage dues for vessels entering or leaving the harbour; those for vessels under 100 tons being practically the same as those previously imposed, and those for vessels above 100 tons being higher, and it was also provided that for every vessel entering the wet dock there should be an additional tonnage duty:—Held, that in assessing the commissioners to the poor-rate in respect of the dock the additional dues paid by ships entering the dock ought only to be taken into account, and not the harbour duty payable by such vessels exclusive of the additional dues. Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Hull Docks (7 Q. B. 2) distinguished. Reg. v. Berwick Assessment Committee, 55 L. J., M. C. 84; 16 Q. B. D. 493; 54 L. T. 159; 5 Asp. M. C. 532; 50 J. P. 71.

Not paid in respect of the Use of Land.]—A borough extended along a part of the shore of the harbour. On the shore, within the borough, were quays and wharves, (1) occupied by, and the property of the corporation; (2) the property of the corporation, occupied by their lessees under an indenture, reserving to the corporation the right to enter and take all dues payable to the corporation, with a covenant by the lessee not to allow the landing or shipping of goods until the dues payable to the corporation should be satisfied; and (3) property of B. The only mode of landing goods in the borough, or shipping them from the borough, was by using one of these three classes of quays or wharves. For all goods so landed or shipped, by means of quays or wharves of any of the three classes, the corporation received, by immemorial usage, the origin of which was not known, dues, sometimes called town dues and quayage, sometimes quayage only:—Held, that it appeared that the dues were not paid in respect of the use of land, but were incorporeal and in gross, and that neither the corporation nor any one to whom the dues were let by the corporation was rateable in respect of any part of the dues. Lewis v. Swansea Overseers, 5 El. & Bl. 508; 25 L. J., M. C. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1108; 4 W. R. 13.

A port began at the bar at the mouth of a river, extended to a bridge, comprehended the whole space of the river from low-water mark on the north side to low-water mark on the south side, and was in five contiguous parishes or townships on both sides, usque ad medium filum aquæ. The soil and freehold of the port between low-water mark on each side were in the Bishop of Durham, and the party rated held under a lease from the bishop for twenty-one years. Every ship entering the port might have to cast anchor therein, or to be moored to some moorings affixed in the river, or on the shores adjacent. The bishop and his lessees maintained the beacons and moorings in the river. Before the appointment of the ecclesiastical commissioners the port was managed by the bishop and his lessees, and by them beacons were set up, mooring buoys, posts, and rings were placed and fixed within the port for the use and benefit of ships entering the port, and other works were done for the maintenance of the port, and the use and benefit of the ships resorting thereto. The tolls rated had been paid immemorially to the bishop and his lessees, and were called anchorage and beaconage tolls, being 1*s.* 2*d.* for every ship which entered the port:—Held, that as the use of the soil was part of the consideration for the payment of the tolls, the tolls were connected with the occupation and use of the soil, and not being tolls in gross, were rateable. Reg. v. Durham (Earl), 2 El. & El. 230; 28 L. J., M. C. 232; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1306; 7 W. R. 732.

Held, also, that the tolls were rateable in all the townships and parishes in which any part of the port was situate, and into which ships paying the tolls came; and that they ought to be rated upon a calculation of the number of ships paying the tolls, and coming into those parts of the port which were in the townships respectively. Ib.

—— Quays in Occupation of Harbour Commissioners—Dues payable irrespective of Use of Quays—Land occupied for Gratuitous Use of Persons paying Tolls.]—Where harbour commissioners in whom the soil of the harbour is not vested, but who occupy the adjoining quays, are authorised to levy dues upon all ships entering the harbour, and the same dues are payable whether the quays are used or not, the fact that many of the ships use and are attracted to the harbour by the existence of the quays does not so connect the dues paid by such ships on entering the harbour with the occupation of the quays as to entitle the rating authority to take such dues into account, as enhancing the rateable value of that occupation. Blyth Harbour Commissioners v. Newsham and South Blyth Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 274; [1894] 2 Q. B. 675; 9 R. 618; 71 L. T. 34; 59 J. P. 4—C. A.

—— Dues reserved to Landlord.]—The owners of docks and wharves let the wharves to a railway company. The company was the sole occupier of the wharves, but by the agreement wharfage dues payable on all goods shipped or unshipped at the wharves were reserved to the landlords, and were paid direct to them by the owners or consignees of the goods :—Held, that the railway company, as a sole occupier of the premises, was liable to be assessed to the poor-rate in respect of the full rateable value of the premises, including the wharfage dues, without regard to the amount of benefit which the company itself derived from the occupation. Reg. v. Rhymney Ry. Co., 10 B. & S. 198 ; 38 L. J., M. C. 75 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 276 ; 17 W. R. 530.

Rateable Occupation of Tramway.] — The respondents rated the appellants to the relief of the poor of the borough of Plymouth, as occupiers of the harbour or pool of Sutton, and as receivers of the tolls, profits, and dues in respect thereof : —Held, upon a claim made by the respondents to take into account, in ascertaining the rateable value of Sutton Pool, the rent received by the appellants from the railway for the use of certain tramways constructed by the appellants, but worked, managed, and maintained exclusively by the railway company, subject to the berthing, loading, and unloading, of ships by the appellants alongside the quay, and the lawful duties of the harbour-master for the time being, that the railway were the proper persons to be rated, and not the appellants. Sutton Harbour Co. v. Plymouth Union, 63 L. T. 772 ; 55 J. P. 232.

Tunnel—Railway Company—Toll in fact not taken.]—A railway company empowered by act of parliament to take a toll upon certain goods passing through a tunnel did not take the toll lest the carriage of the goods should be altogether lost to them :—Held, that as the toll was not in fact taken, the company could not be assessed to the poor-rate in respect of it. Reg. v. Stockton and Darlington Ry., 8 L. T. 422.

Market Tolls.]—Where a local act directed a rate to be levied in respect of messuages, dwelling-houses, warehouses, or other buildings, or of any other tenements :—Held, that a rate in respect of market sites, streets, lands, and tenements, and the tolls due in respect thereof, was bad. Rex v. Mosley, 3 D. & R. 385 ; 2 B. & C. 227 ; 26 R. R. 328.

The lessee of market tolls in gross not incident to the soil is not rateable in respect of his occupancy. Rex v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 221 ; 17 R. R. 315.

—— Liability of Owner as Occupier.]—By a paving and lighting act, the tenants and occupiers of all messuages, houses, &c., and other tenements situate within certain towns respectively, were liable to be rated for the purposes of the act :—Held, however, that the lord of the manor, being owner of the markets kept in the streets of that town, was not liable under the act to be so rated in respect of his occupation thereof and the tolls arising therefrom, as the occupier of a tenement. Rex v. Mosley, 3 D. & R. 385 ; 2 B. & C. 227 ; 26 R. R. 328.

—— Distinguished from Stallage.] — Tolls authorised to be taken by an act of parliament in respect of cattle brought into a market for sale which became due as soon as the cattle were brought into the market-place, and before the cattle were put into a pen or tied up, are mere market tolls, and not in the nature of stallage or tolls taken in respect of the use of the soil, and in assessing the lessee of the market and tolls to the poor-rate in respect of the occupation of the market-place such tolls cannot be taken into account as enhancing the value of the occupation. Caswell v. Wolverhampton Overseers, 41 L. J., M. C. 108 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 328 ; 26 L. T. 574 ; 20 W. R. 624.

Where an open market is divided under the provision of an act of parliament into parts, each of which is appropriated to a special purpose, such as potato stands, fruit market, and flower stands, and by the act tolls or rents are reserved to the owner of the market from those who use the several divisions of the market, such tolls arise out of a use of the soil, and are in the nature of stallage tolls, so as to be rateable for the relief of the poor. Bedford (Duke) v. St. Paul, Covent Garden, 51 L. J., M. C. 41 ; 45 L. T. 616 ; 30 W. R. 411 ; 46 J. P. 581.

—— Tolls on Goods Sold.]—Appellants were rated on the "market-house, with the grounds belonging, used and occupied for the tolls of the markets and fairs." It was admitted that under this description they were in fact rated not only for the market-house, but also for the tolls on merchandise sold in the market, and for payments made to the lord and his lessees for goods not sold but exposed for sale on stalls and otherwise, which payments, from time immemorial, were charged according to the situation of the stalls and other circumstances, according to the discretion of the lord and his lessees ; and also for payments made for leave to use temporary theatres and shows. None of the stalls, &c., were in any way affixed to the soil. The lord was owner of the soil of the market. The appellants were lessees for a term of years under the lord :—Held, that the tolls on the goods sold were not the subject of a rate, and that the fact that such tolls were paid in the market-house made no difference ; but that the other payments were in the nature of compensation for the use of the soil, and that they and the market-place were properly rated. Roberts v. Aylesbury Overseers, 1 El. & Bl. 432 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 34 ; 17 Jur. 236.

—— Tolls for Admittance.]—P. was rated as the occupier of tolls, lands, and buildings situated in the Ashford cattle market ; and among the gross receipts upon which the valuation was estimated were items for the sheep, cattle, pigs, and horses admitted into the market during the year at a fixed sum per head. In 1671, Charles II. granted by charter to Lord Strangford, his heirs and assigns, a market to be holden every alternate Tuesday within or near to the town of Ashford, together with the tolls and profits thereof. No evidence was to be found of the actual establishment of a market under this charter ; but in 1784 a stock market was established, and for some time afterwards held upon every fourth Tuesday. From 1793 to 1856 a stock and cattle market was held on every alternate Tuesday in the main street of Ashford, the lord of the manor and the inhabitants receiving certain payments for the use of such pens as either of them supplied respectively, but no tolls appeared to have been levied upon animals sold at the market. After many mesne assignments, in 1856, P.'s lessors, incorporated as a limited company, obtained a conveyance in fee of a piece of land in the manor, and "all the tolls, stallages, dues, profits, or emoluments whatsoever arising from all markets and fairs held in the town of Ashford," except the meat, fish, and vegetable market. In 1874, P. hired from the company, at a fixed annual rent, certain fixed tolls of the cattle market, the lands belonging thereto, and the fairs and other perquisites. The land occupied by the market was fenced in, and kept locked when not used for market or other purposes. Some pens in the market were appropriated to particular owners and salesmen, and others were free for any animals in the market. All animals, however, paid toll for admittance to the market:—Held, that the tolls for admittance to the market were incident to the soil so as to be taken into consideration as increasing the value of the occupation, and were not mere market tolls which could not be rated. Percy v. Ashford Union, 34 L. T. 579.

—— Deduction for Annual Rent.]—By a local act a company was incorporated and authorised to regulate the market-places belonging to the corporation of Brecon, and to receive all tolls payable therefrom, which were thereby vested in them. They were, however, by another section, to pay to the corporation 210*l.* a year, to be charged on the scheduled tolls, markets, and market-places, by the act vested in the company, and to be a first charge on those tolls next after the expense of recovering them. This annual sum was to be devoted by the corporation to the payment of incumbrances incurred by the building of the old market-place. The company, under the authority of the act, constructed new market-places on land vested in them, and collected tolls from the old and new markets:—Held, that the company was not entitled to a deduction of this 210*l.* from the net annual value of their tolls in their assessment to the poor-rate. Brecon Markets Co. v. St. Mary's, Brecon, 36 L. T. 109.

—— Tolls for Foreign Animals landing at a Market Wharf.]—By the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, ss. 2, 3, 24, and 25, it was provided that the local authority might provide wharves, lairs, sheds, market-houses, and places for the landing, reception, sale, and slaughter of foreign animals, such place to be deemed a market, and might charge for the use of such wharf, &c., such sums as by by-laws they might appoint. By the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, s. 4, the act of 1869 was repealed, saving all existing acquired rights; but by s. 39 the provisions of ss. 23–25 of that act were practically re-enacted, adding that the said charges should be deemed "tolls." In 1871 the corporation of London, as the local authority, built a market at D. for the reception, &c., of foreign animals. By certain by-laws, a fixed charge per head for wharfage, lairage, market dues, and charges was levied on all animals landed, such charge becoming due on the animals being landed. These charges included lairage until the animals were slaughtered. No consignee of any animals had any right to put his animals in any particular part of the market. The appellants were rated in respect of these charges as tolls in respect of the use and occupation of the soil. They appealed against such assessment, and contended that the tolls were only taken in respect of the franchise of the market:—Held, on appeal, that such charges were tolls made in respect of the user and occupation of the soil, and so were rateable. London Corporation v. Greenwich Union, 48 L. T. 437; 47 J. P. 420.

Turnpike Tolls.]—A lessee of toll traverse, and of a toll-house (which he occupies), is not rateable for the tolls, but for the toll-house only. Rex v. Snowden, 1 N. & M. 459; 4 B. & Ad. 713; 2 L. J., M. C. 60.

The 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 51, which exempts all persons from assessment to the poor-rate in respect of tolls or toll-houses, applies to the trustees of the tolls of a road made under a local act, although they are beneficially interested in the receipt of the tolls, and although some of the provisions of the local act are inconsistent with the general act. Rex v. Great Dover Street Road Trustees, 1 N. & P. 157; 5 A. & E. 692; 2 H. & W. 423; 6 L. J., M. C. 25.

—— Exemption.]—The General Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, which took away the liability of tolls to be rated for the relief of the poor, did not extend that exemption to a road which was expressly excluded from the operation of the act. Reg. v. Commercial Road Trustees, 2 W. R. 423.

Railway Tolls.]—See ante, col. 1656.

32. Other Cases.

Ambassador—Attaché—Liability for Rates on Private Residence.]—An attaché to an ambassador of a foreign state residing in this country is not liable for rates assessed on his private residence. Parkinson v. Potter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 153; 16 Q. B. D. 152; 53 L. T. 818; 34 W. R. 215; 50 J. P. 470.

Officers' Pay.]—The pay of officers in the navy, or of merchants' ships, is not rateable. Rex v. White, 4 Term Rep. 771.

Nor are the salaries of officers of the customs, or of merchants' clerks. Ib.

Profits of a Profession.]—Nor is an attorney in respect of the profits of his profession. Rex v. Startifant, 7 Term Rep. 60.

Nor a person on account of salary only. Rex v. Shalfleet, 4 Burr. 2011.

Money.]—Neither is money, whether at interest or not. Ib.

Stocks.]—Stocks or annuities in the public funds are not rateable. Rex v. St. John, Maddermarket, 6 East, 182; 2 Smith, 270.

33. Statutory Exemptions.

Rule of Construction.]—It is not necessary, in order to create a statutory exemption from poor-rates, that the act should, in express terms, exempt from such particular rates; but it is sufficient, if, by fair construction of the words of the act, the exemption clearly appears. Rex v. Barnby Dun, 4 N. & M. 436; 2 A. & E. 551; 1 H. & W. 89; 4 L. J., M. C. 78.

—— Local Act.]—When certain lands and buildings were under a local act to be used for the benefit of the poor of Worcester and were, for the purposes of that act, to be free from all assessment beyond the amount at which the land was assessed at the time of the purchase :—Held, that purchasers of these lands and premises from the purchasers under the local act were not entitled to the exemptions under the local act. Reg. v. Worcester Guardians, 1 W. R. 146.

By 7 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 85, the trustees of the river Lea are to apply their funds in certain ways therein specified, and to no other purpose or object whatsoever :—Held, that these words do not justify the trustees in refusing to pay a poor-rate levied upon them in respect of such funds. Reg. v. River Lea Trustees, 3 W. R. 210.

Under a private act the Warwick canal was made and was cut into the Birmingham canal, the proprietors whereof were authorised to take tolls on goods passing into that branch. The act proceeded to make provisions for tolls on the Warwick canal, and in a subsequent section enacted that the said tolls and duties should be exempted from the payment of all assessments : —Held, that the tolls receivable by the Birmingham canal were exempt from poor-rates. Reg. v. Birmingham Canal Co., 7 L. J., M. C. 57.

Local and General Act.]—A partial exemption from the payment of rates for borough improvement purposes, conceded by a local act, is not taken away by the mere passing of public general acts for similar purposes. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 35 L. T. 626 ; 25 W. R. 59.

"Free and Clear of all Rates."]—By an inclosure act, the tithes of a parish were abolished, and in lieu a yearly money payment by way of compensation (to be calculated with reference to the annual value of the tithes and the price of corn for a certain number of bygone years) directed to be made to the vicar quarterly, "free and clear of all rates, taxes and deductions whatsoever" :—Held, that these latter words exempted the vicar from poor-rates in respect of the money so directed to be paid to him. Chatfield v. Ruston, 5 D. & R. 675 ; 3 B. & C. 863.

A corn-rent given to the rector by an inclosure act in lieu of tithes, payable "free from all taxes and other deductions whatsoever, except the land tax," is exempt from payment of poor-rates. Mitchell v. Fordham, 9 D. & R. 335 ; 6 B. & C. 274 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 79.

An exemption in a private statute of lands given to charitable purposes "from all public taxes, charges, and assessments whatsoever, civil or military," extends to the poor-rate. Rex v. Scott, 3 Term Rep. 602.

Where a statute empowered the proprietors of a canal to make rates in respect of vessels navigating the same, and expressly exempted such rates from the payment of all taxes, rates, &c. :—Held, that the land occupied by the canal was also thereby exempted. Rex v. Calder and Hebble Navigation Co., 1 B. & Ald. 263. S. P., Erewash Canal v. Eastwood, 4 W. R. 494.

Houses built on lands, embanked from the Thames, in pursuance of 7 Geo. 3, c. 37, which vests those lands in the owners, "free from all taxes and assessments whatsoever," are not rateable. Rex v. London Gaslight and Coke Co., 2 M. & Ry. 12 ; 8 B. & C. 54 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 113.

Where, by a local act, property situate in M. and held in trust for the benefit of the township of M., is made not liable to the poor-rate :—Held, that a section in the act enabling the trustees to apply part of the profits of such property to the advantage of the borough of which M. forms a part does not render the property rateable to the township of M. Manchester Corporation v. Manchester Overseers, 2 W. R. 64.

Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 — Market Gardens — Glasshouses.]—By s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, "the occupier of agricultural land in England shall be liable, in the case of every rate to which this act applies, to pay one-half only of the rate in the pound payable in respect of buildings and other hereditaments" ; and by s. 9 of the same act "the expression 'agricultural land' means any land used as . . . market gardens." The owner and occupier of a certain market garden of about four acres in extent had upon them about two acres of glasshouses, which were used for the purpose of producing fruit and vegetables. The question raised was whether these houses were "agricultural land," and so subject to the exemption under the act :—Held, that they were so exempt, being land used as a market garden. Worthing Overseers v. Richmond, 77 L. T. 161 ; 61 J. P. 710.

Certificate of Exemption.]—The certificate of a barrister that a society is entitled to the benefit of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 1, although a condition precedent to the claim of exemption, is not conclusive proof of a right thereto. Reg. v. Phillips, 3 New Sess. Cas. 134 ; 8 Q. B. 745 ; 17 L. J., M. C. 83 ; 12 Jur. 431.

After a society has obtained a certificate of the barrister, and the society is afterwards rated to the poor-rate, the remedy is by appeal to the quarter sessions. Birmingham Overseers v. Shaw, 10 Q. B. 868 ; 18 L. J., M. C. 89.

C. PROCEEDINGS.

1. COLLECTION.

Amount Payable—Fraction of a Farthing.]—When, owing to the mode in which a poor-rate has been made, the assessment is carried out so as to include in the sum demanded the fraction of a farthing, the ratepayer is not bound to pay the whole farthing. Morton v. Bremmer, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 791 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 218 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 211 ; 2 L. T. 600.

Payment to Collector—Acceptance of Bill in Satisfaction.]—At the hearing of a summons for nonpayment of poor-rate against B., he set up the defence of payment to the assistant overseer by accepting bills of exchange, and on an account stated, though the assistant overseer had never paid over the proceeds to the overseers :—Held, that this was not a legal payment of poor-rates. Smith v. Barham, 51 J. P. 581.

Proof in Bankruptcy.]—Arrears of poor-rates due from a bankrupt before his bankruptcy are provable under the fiat, and the certificate is a bar to the levying the amount under 43 Eliz. c. 2, by distress and sale of his subsequently-acquired goods. Wetherell, In re, 19 L. J., M. C. 115. S. C., nom. Burwash Overseers, Ex parte, 1 L. M. & P. 60 ; 4 New Sess. Cas. 93.

Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy.]—The Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, does not give any priority to parochial or other local rates as against debenture holders or other secured creditors. Richards v. Kidderminster Overseers, 65 L. J., Ch. 502; [1896] 2 Ch. 212; 74 L. T. 483; 44 W. R. 505.

From whom collected—Change of Occupation—Company—Debentures—Receiver.]—Where a receiver enters into possession and carries on the business of a company on behalf of debenture-holders under the express provisions of a covering deed authorising his appointment, there is a change of occupation of the company's premises within the Poor-rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, s. 16, although the covering deed expressly provides that "the receiver shall be deemed to be the agent of the company, and shall as such agent for all purposes be deemed to be in exactly the same position as a receiver duly appointed by the mortgagee under the Conveyancing Act, 1881." Ib.

The appointment of a receiver and manager of the property of a company by an order which does not direct the company to give up possession does not create a change of occupancy within s. 16 of the Poor-rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869. Richards v. Kidderminster Overseers, supra, distinguished. Marriage, Neave & Co., In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 839; [1896] 2 Ch. 663; 75 L. T. 169; 45 W. R. 42; 60 J. P. 805—C. A.

—— Tithe Rent-Charge.]—Where the owner of a tithe rent-charge does not pay the rates to which he is assessed in respect thereof, the amount is recovered from one or more of the occupiers of the land out of which such rent-charge issues, and not from the owner of such rent charge. Lamplough v. Norton, 52 J. P. 505. Affirmed, 58 L. J., Q. B. 279; 22 Q. B. D. 452; 37 W. R. 422; 53 J. P. 389—C. A.

Equitable Jurisdiction.]—A person assessed to a rate may file a bill on behalf of himself and all others assessed to the rate for the purpose of preventing payment of it from being enforced if the propriety of enforcing the payment of the rate is in itself the subject of equitable jurisdiction. Att.-Gen. v. Heelis, 2 Sim. & St. 67; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 189; 25 R. R. 153.

Recovery of Rates from Company—Restraining Proceedings for.]—See COMPANY.

2. DISTRESS.

Enforcement of Rates by Distress.]—An inclosure act which empowered commissioners under it to perform certain works, required them to direct by their award "by whom and at whose expense, at what time and in what manner," such works were to be made and thereafter repaired and maintained. The award directed that the works should be repaired, &c., "by means of a rate or an assessment to be levied or recovered by such ways and means as parish rates or assessments are by law recovered within the same parish," viz., by distress:—Held, that an action did not lie to recover the amount of a rate assessed under the award. Danby v. Watson, 46 L. J., M. C. 179; 36 L. T. 412; 25 W. R. 464.

When the purpose for which a rate was imposed by a local statute, and leviable by distress, has long fallen into disuse, and is not intended to be renewed, the rate is no longer leviable. Clay v. Rotundo Lying-in Hospital, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 105.

A distress made for several rates, some of which are leviable and others not, is not illegal. Ib.

If a distress is made for several rates, some of which are leviable and others not, and the party distrained tenders the sum actually due for the rates which are leviable, the distrainors are liable for the detention of the goods subsequent to the tender. Ib.

As long as any one of several purposes for which a rate was imposed is capable of accomplishment, the legal right to levy continues, although the other purposes have ceased to exist. Ib.

Summons to enforce Demand.]—A demand of payment of a poor-rate by a collector, appointed by the overseers and assistant overseer for the purpose of assisting in collecting the poor-rate, is sufficient to entitle the collector to proceed by summons before a magistrate, to enforce payment in the usual mode by distress. Yewdall v. Craven, 11 L. T. 368.

Under a local act, power was given to summon for nonpayment of rates if parties should neglect to pay for fourteen days after demand in writing. Whilst a rate was due a demand was made, but the date when the rate was made was misdescribed in the demand:—Held, that the misdescription was immaterial. Reg. v. Stretfield, 32 L. J., M. C. 236; 11 W. R. 736.

An act required that before any action should be brought to recover certain rates, a demand in writing should be made at the place of abode of the persons charged, or left on the premises charged:—Held, that a demand served on the chairman of a public company at a duly convened meeting was good, or a demand fixed on the premises charged. Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 314.

Sufficiency of Demand.]—A demand note for a year's rates was served upon the respondent, who objected to pay the whole, on the ground that the house in respect of which he had been rated had been let to him for a term not exceeding three months. He paid the amount of the rate due for one quarter:—Held, that a second demand note in respect of the succeeding quarter was not necessary, and that a distress warrant ought to issue. Walton-on-the-Hill Overseers v. Jones, 62 L. J., M. C. 123; [1893] 2 Q. B. 175; 5 R. 422; 69 L. T. 319; 42 W. R. 32; 57 J. P. 552.

Tender.]—If a landlord tenders the poor-rate for his tenant the overseers must receive it, and a warrant ought not to be granted to distrain upon the tenant. Rex v. Cosens, 2 Dougl. 426.

Where, after a rule nisi for a mandamus to justices to issue a distress warrant for a poor-rate had been obtained, a tender of the amount was made by a third party to the overseers and refused:—Held, that it was no ground for discharging the rule. Rex v. Wilson, 5 N. & M. 119; 1 H. & W. 507.

If a distress is made for several rates, some of which are leviable and others not, and the party distrained tenders the sum actually due for the rates which are leviable, the distrainors are liable for detention of the goods subsequent to the tender. Clay v. Rotundo Lying-in Hospital, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 105.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Rate good upon the Face of it.]—Under two local acts, by which the rates of a parish were regulated, an appeal was given against any rate to the next quarter sessions, and it was to be enforced by summons before two justices, who were to order the payment, and (if necessary) grant a warrant of distress, if the person summoned "did not prove to them that he was not chargeable with or liable to pay such rate":—Held, that this only gave the justices a power similar to that in enforcing a poor-rate, and that they had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of a rate good on the face of it, and that they had no jurisdiction to determine anything in a summary way, within 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, so as to give them power to state a case under that act. May, Ex parte, 2 B. & S. 426; 31 L. J., M. C. 161.

—— Neglect to Appeal.]—An appellant against a distress warrant, issued to enforce payment of poor-rates, cannot, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 7, avail himself of any objection which he might have urged against the rate itself on appeal to the sessions. Nor will the court grant a mandamus to justices to hear such appeal against the warrant, if the application discloses no grounds of appeal other than the grounds which might have been urged against the rate. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 16 L. T. 672.

—— Question of Amount.]—The owner of several small tenements was assessed to a poor-rate of 4*d.* in the pound; the exact amount of the assessment on the aggregate of the several rateable values as they appeared on the rate would have been 10*s.* 11¾*d.* and a fraction of a farthing, instead of which 11*s.* was entered on the rate. This larger sum was demanded, and not being paid, a warrant was granted and a distress levied for that amount on his goods, on which he brought an action against the persons executing the warrant:—Held, that an action would not lie, as the sum demanded was the sum appearing on the rate, and the objection, if any, was that the party was overrated, for which an appeal was the proper remedy. Bavin v. Hutchinson, 31 L. J., M. C. 229; 6 L. T. 504; 10 W. R. 807—Ex. Ch.

By a local act of 1827 the owners of certain abbey lands in Essex were empowered to make rates in respect of their lands, and to apply them to the repair of the roads, causeways and bridges which they had to maintain. They might enforce rates charged or imposed by virtue of the act by distress warrant upon a defaulter provided he was first summoned to appear before a justice to shew cause for his neglect or refusal to pay such rates. They might make a composition with the neighbouring trustees of roads for the payment of a certain sum of money annually or otherwise for repairing so much of the said roads as were in their district. Any person aggrieved by the rates might appeal to quarter sessions, and justices might amend without quashing the rate. By a local act of 1876 these owners were empowered to pay a large sum of money to a local board for the future repair of the roads in its district; and upon such payment and that of all other liabilities the owners were to be discharged from their duties to repair these roads, and the previous act was to be repealed. A month before the passing of the last act, the owners made a rate for an amount to cover certain liabilities under the act of 1827, and also the money to be paid to the local board; but there was nothing in the rate itself to shew it included this latter sum of money. The demand for payment referred to both the local acts, but did not give the date of the latter. The rate was not appealed against, but justices refused to issue a distress warrant against a defaulter on the ground that the rate was invalid:—Held, that the objection to the rate was not one which the justices could entertain, and that mere excess in amount was, under the circumstances, no ground for refusing a warrant. Reg. v. Essex JJ., 36 L. T. 554.

—— Retrospective Rate.]—An objection that a rate is retrospective is ground of appeal; and, where the party objecting has not appealed, cannot be urged as an objection to a rule calling on justices to shew cause why they should not issue their warrant of distress for the rate. Reg. v. Stretfield, 32 L. J., M. C. 236; 11 W. R. 736.

A poor-rate, good on the face of it, had not been appealed against. On an application before justices to issue a distress warrant to enforce payment of the rate, it was made to appear that there were substantial grounds for contending that the rate was retrospective and therefore bad. The justices refused to issue their warrant. On an application to the court for a rule to command them to issue the warrant:—Held, that the justices were not justified in inquiring whether there was a ground of appeal against the rate, and refusing their warrant on that ground, and the court made the rule absolute. Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Thames JJ., El. Bl. & El. 256; 27 L. J., M. C. 199; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 758; 6 W. R. 551.

—— Statutory Exemption.]—A poor-rate made upon the occupier of the premises used by a literary society, exempt from payment of rates by virtue of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, was duly published and allowed, but no appeal was made by the party rated:—Held, that he could not set up the statutory exemption as a ground for refusing to pay the rate, and that the magistrates were bound to issue a warrant to enforce payment of it. Birmingham Overseers v. Shaw, 10 Q. B. 868; 3 New Sess. Cas. 445; 18 L. J., M. C. 89; 13 Jur. 357.

—— Local Act.]—Ratepayers, liable under a local act to the payment of rates in respect of houses and gardens, cannot, when summoned before justices for nonpayment, resist the issue of distress warrants, because, at the making of the rate, warehouses and other property, not rateable under the act, were improperly included in the assessment. The proper remedy is by appeal to the sessions, where the error can be corrected, and, if this is not adopted, the rate may be enforced. Reg. v. Twopeny, 17 L. T. 266.

A local act empowered a select vestry, chosen from the inhabitants, to make a rate, and gave power to four justices to issue their warrant to levy the rates by distress. The act gave to any person who should find himself aggrieved by any assessment or distress a right of appeal to the quarter sessions within three months after such distress made. A rate was made by a vestry consisting of thirteen persons, all of whom occupied shops in the parish, but nine of them slept in another parish. On an application to the justices to issue their warrant, it was objected that the rate was invalid, as the vestrymen were not inhabitants, and that the objection might be taken before the justices as no appeal was given till after distress made:—Held, that the appeal to the quarter sessions was given either before or after distress, and therefore the justices had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the rate. Wilson v. Sunderland Overseers, 13 W. R. 85.

A local act gave power to commissioners to raise money for paving, lighting and watching a town, by rating and assessing the proprietors of houses according to the value at which the houses were taxed to the poor. It also empowered them to assess and levy a rate on certain proprietors, for the purpose of certain improvements, such rate to be levied and assessed in the same manner as the other rates. In default of payment, a justice was authorised to issue a distress warrant. The act also provided that in case any person thought himself aggrieved by any rate or assessment, he might appeal to the commissioners, who were authorised to give relief, and further, that anyone who thought himself aggrieved by anything done in pursuance of the act, might appeal to the quarter sessions. The commissioners assessed a proprietor to a rate, levied for the purpose of the improvements, at an annual value above that at which he was assessed to the poor:—Held, that, on his refusing to pay, a justice might be required by mandamus to issue a distress warrant, the proprietor not having appealed. Rex v. Trevothick, 2 A. & E. 405.

—— Publication of Rate—Evidence of.]—When proceedings are taken before justices for the nonpayment of a highway rate, the mere production of the book purporting to contain the rate is no evidence of the due publication of such rate. Bird v. Adcock, 47 L. J., M. C. 123; 26 W. R. 634.

—— Occupier—Evidence to contradict Rate-book.]—When a person whose name appears on the rate-book is summoned to shew cause why a distress warrant should not issue against him for nonpayment of rates, evidence to shew that he was not the occupier is admissible. Reg. v. Simmonds, 62 L. J., M. C. 106; 5 R. 546.

—— "Occupation" of Property—Power of Justices to inquire as to Quantum.]—On a summons before justices to enforce a poor-rate of a parish, the justices have jurisdiction, before issuing a warrant of distress, to inquire whether the person affected by the rate is in reality the principal person in occupation of the rated property. Reg. v. Bagshawe, 75 L. T. 513.

—— Nature of Occupation.]—If, at the hearing by justices of a summons against A. for nonpayment of a poor-rate, it appears that the rate is good on its face and unappealed against, and that A. is actually the occupier of the rated property in the rated parish, the justices are bound to issue a distress warrant to enforce the rate; and have no jurisdiction to inquire whether A.'s occupation is or is not beneficial, the nature of the occupation being ground only for appeal to the quarter sessions against the rate. Reg. v. Bradshaw, 2 El. & El. 836; 29 L. J., M. C. 176; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 629; 8 W. R. 435.

Exemption on the ground that the occupation is not beneficial is a ground for appeal to quarter sessions and an action of replevin for a levy made to enforce the rate cannot be maintained. Mersey Docks Trustees v. Cameron, 4 L. T. 53.

On an application for a summons for nonpayment of a poor-rate, the overseer engaged before the justices to procure evidence of a beneficial occupation. On the hearing, he failed to do so, and the justices, deciding against the validity of the rate on that ground, refused to issue a distress warrant:—Held, that without a further application, after stating that the occupation need not be beneficial, a mandamus could not be granted. Rex v. Wilson, 5 N. & M. 119; 1 H. & W. 507.

A company acquired certain land which they laid out for exhibition purposes. On part of the land buildings were erected. The exhibition was opened in June, 1895, and remained so until it was closed in the following October. A provisional list under the Metropolis Valuation Act, 1869, was approved by the assessment committee of the parish, in which list the company were rated at gross 13,833*l.* and rateable value 10,000*l.*, and payment of the rates made on October 26th, 1895, was demanded, and the rates were paid as if made on that basis, for the proportion of the time till the closing of the exhibition in October. On the closing of the exhibition the company separated off certain portions of the premises which they did not intend to use during the winter months, and they gave notice to the overseers to prepare a fresh provisional list on the basis that they were not in rateable occupation of the unused portion of the premises. This the overseers did, but the assessment committee refused to approve the list. The overseers thereupon demanded payment of the remaining portion of the rate made on October 26th, 1895, not already paid, and failing to obtain payment, took out a summons for a distress warrant. The justices refused to grant a distress warrant, on the ground that there was no beneficial occupation of the separated-off part of the premises:—Held, that the justices were wrong; that the assessment having been made, and not appealed against, the duty of the magistrates was purely ministerial. Reg. v. Sinclair, 60 J. P. 551.

—— Lands not in Occupation of Person assessed.]—Upon a summons before justices to enforce a poor-rate against a railway company, it appeared that property occupied by the company had been assessed by the description "offices and land with rails," but that in estimating the amount of the rate the overseers had treated certain buildings as being in the occupation of the company which were not in fact in their occupation. The company had not appealed against the rate:—Held, that the objection being matter of appeal and the rate good on the face of it, the justices were bound to issue a distress warrant. Crease v. Sawle (2 Q. B. 862) followed. Reg. or Manchester Overseers v. Headlam, 57 L. J., M. C. 89; 21 Q. B. D. 96; 52 J. P. 517.

Distress Warrant—Property claimed to be in two Parishes.]—J. was rated as occupier of premises in the D. parish, and also in G. parish, and paid the rates to D. He did not appeal against the rate made by G. parish, and on an application by the G. overseers for a distress warrant, the justices having declined, and a rule being moved by way of mandamus under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5:—Held, that the rule must be made absolute, but without costs, and that J.'s proper course was to appeal against the next rate to quarter sessions, when the question of boundary could be decided conclusively. Reg. v. Jefferson, 48 J. P. 393.

—— Rating Authority not properly Constituted.]—The court will grant a mandamus to compel a justice to grant a warrant for the payment of a rate made by a local board of health when payment of the rate is refused on the ground that the board is not properly constituted. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 4 W. R. 118.

—— Name Inserted after Rate made.]—Where a poor-rate was made for a parish, and the name of a party who occupied lands for which he was rated in another parish was inserted after the rate was made, the court refused to grant a mandamus to magistrates to issue a summons and grant a distress warrant for nonpayment of the rates. Reg. v. Cardiganshire JJ., 1 H. & W. 274.

—— Rates Recoverable by other Means.]—The court will not issue a mandamus to compel magistrates to issue a distress warrant to enforce the payment of poor-rates, where it is doubtful whether the warrant would be legal, and the rates are recoverable by another mode of proceeding. Rex v. Hall, 4 N. & M. 546; S. C., nom. Rex v. Dyer, 2 A. & E. 606.

—— Application for Mandamus—Form of.]—Although there are more than two magistrates at petty sessions, all of whom take part in a decision by which the issuing of a distress warrant to levy poor-rates is refused, it is not necessary that, upon application for a mandamus, all who were present and took part in the decision should be included in the rule; but if the court saw that any two had been selected, or that any of the justices so acting had been omitted for any improper purpose, all would be required to be joined. Reg. v. Ellis, 2 D. (N.S.) 361; 12 L. J., M. C. 20; 7 Jur. 108.

—— Where Magistrate a Trustee.]—Where, upon an application for a mandamus to justices, to issue their warrant of distress to levy a poor-rate, it appeared that the property in respect of which the rate was sought to be obtained was trust property left by a testator for the purpose of a free school, and that one of the justices refusing to grant his warrant was a trustee of the estate:—Held, that, notwithstanding his character of such trustee, he was liable to a mandamus. Ib.

Recovery of Arrears—Demand and Payment of less than proper amount—Mistake—Allowance in Account.]—The provisions of the Public Libraries Act, 1855, having been adopted by the parish of Wandsworth, a rate of 1*d.* in the pound was duly made and demanded of the London and South Western Railway Company, assessed upon the full rateable value of certain lands occupied by them in the parish for railway purposes. The railway company thereupon claimed under s. 13 of that act to be assessed on only one-third of the rateable value, on the ground that the property was "land." The vestry clerk omitted to observe that only "lands used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground, or as woodlands or market-gardens or nursery-grounds," were exempted under this section from assessment at more than one-third of their full rateable value, and allowed the abatement; he also entered in the rate-book the amount of rate assessed on the remaining two-thirds of the company's property as "irrecoverable." The same abatement was given and a similar entry was made for three years. The new overseers of the parish, having discovered the mistake that had been made, demanded the arrears of rate on the two-thirds of the full rateable value; but these the company declined to pay, and upon the hearing of the summons taken out by the overseers the justices declined to issue a distress warrant for the amount:—Held, upon an application for a mandamus to the justices to issue their warrant, that the sums unpaid on the two-thirds of the full rateable value of the railway company's property were recoverable as arrears, and that the overseers were entitled to obtain a distress warrant for the loss of these arrears under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, ss. 7 and 11, notwithstanding that a mistake of law had been made in the original demands and in the entry in the rate-book. Reg. v. Blenkinsop, 61 L. J., M. C. 45; [1892] 1 Q. B. 43; 66 L. T. 187; 40 W. R. 272; 56 J. P. 246.

—— Contribution to Rural Sanitary Authority—Precept of Guardians to Overseers.]—The guardians of a union claimed and received sums from the overseers of a township under precepts based upon the then existing valuation list. It was subsequently decided, on an appeal against a rate by colliery owners, who represented two-thirds of the township, that the valuation list was too high. The overseers did not appeal against the valuation list under the 32nd section of the Parochial Assessment Act, 1862, but having refunded the amount overpaid by the colliery owners, claimed credit for the excess paid by them to the guardians:—Held, that the guardians might give credit for the sums overpaid by the overseers, even though the latter had not appealed against the valuation list; and that justices might refuse to enforce by distress warrant the guardians' precept for a general rate based on the old valuation list when it appeared that such sums had already been paid in excess by the overseers. Tynemouth Union v. Backworth Overseers, 57 L. J., M. C. 53; 59 L. T. 178; 52 J. P. 357.

Hearing.]—The granting of warrants of distress for a poor-rate by magistrates to churchwardens is a judicial, and not a ministerial act; and they ought first to summon the party and hear what he has to say in his defence. Harper v. Carr, 7 Term Rep. 270; 4 R. R. 440.

—— When Bonâ fide Objections taken.]—The jurisdiction of justices to enforce payment of a rate made for the repayment of money under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, is the same as with respect to a church-rate; they therefore have no power to order payment when the party assessed, and refusing to pay, takes bonâ fide objections before them to the validity and legality of the rate. Batkin, In re, 25 L. J., M. C. 126.

—— Power to State Case.]—Under s. 13, sub-s. 11, of the Interpretation Act, 1889, which repeals and re-enacts s. 7 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884, justices sitting to hear an application for the issue of a distress warrant for the nonpayment of poor-rates are not necessarily exercising a ministerial duty, but are authorised to inquire into the validity of the objections taken by the party summoned, and to state a case for the opinion of the high court. Fourth City Mutual Building Society v. East Ham, [1892] 1 Q. B. 661; 56 J. P. 440.

—— Summary Jurisdiction Act not Applying.]—The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), does not affect or apply to proceedings for the recovery of poor-rates and other rates recoverable in the same manner as poor-rates; and a distress warrant in respect of such rates may be issued as before the act. Reg. v. Price, 49 L. J., M. C. 49; 5 Q. B. D. 300; 42 L. T. 439; 28 W. R. 615; 44 J. P. 248.

—— Before what Justices.]—By an act for lighting the parish of B., rates might be imposed on the occupiers of tenements within B.; and it was enacted that the "rates shall be paid by such occupiers, and they are required to pay the same." By a subsequent section, rates not paid might, on proof before a justice for the county of S., be levied by distress. At the time when the local act passed, the parish of B., which is in the county of S., was partly within the borough of B. (in the charter of which is a non-intromittant clause), and partly in the county at large; under the operation of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the whole parish of B. was included in the borough, which obtained a separate court of quarter sessions:—Held, that the nonpayment of rates was an offence within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 31; and that the jurisdiction to hear complaints as to such nonpayment was transferred by that statute from the justice of the county of S. to the justice of the borough. Reg. v. Sutcliffe, Bathwick, In re, 13 Q. B. 833; 3 New Sess. Cas. 634; 18 L. J., Q. B. 301; 13 Jur. 840.

Form of Warrant.]—Before 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, a warrant of distress was issued for 104*l.* 17*s.*, due for several rates, one of which was quashed on the ground that the party was not an occupier within the parish where he was rated:—Held, that as one of the rates was quashed the warrant was void, and that the precise sum due for poor-rates should have been demanded from him previously to issuing the warrant. Hurrell v. Wink, 2 Moore, 417; 6 Taunt. 369; 20 R. R. 485.

—— Where some Rates Irregular.]—Where some poor-rates had not been duly published on the Sunday following the allowance, according to 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1, and a warrant of distress issued for a single sum made up of these rates, and of others which were regular:—Held, that the warrant was wholly bad, and that replevin lay for a distress taken under it. Sibbald v. Roderick, 11 A. & E. 38; 3 P. & D. 106; 9 L. J., M. C. 76.

—— Statements in Warrant.]—A warrant of distress for poor-rates need not in terms state that the refusal to pay the rate was proved upon oath; it is enough to state that it was duly proved. Ormerod v. Chadwick, 16 M. & W. 367; 2 New Sess. Cas. 697; 16 L. J., M. C. 143; S. P., Reg. v. Bidwell, 1 Den. C. C. 222; 2 Car. & K. 564; 17 L. J., M. C. 99.

The misrecital in a warrant of distress for poor-rates, of the date of the rate, is not material. Ib.

A warrant of distress for a church-rate which does not specify the time at which the distress is to be sold, is bad, and the rescue of a distress taken under such warrant is no criminal offence. Reg. v. Williams, 2 Car. & K. 1001; 4 New Sess. Cas. 137; 1 Den. C. C. 529; T. & M. 235; 19 L. J., M. C. 126; 14 Jur. 115.

A defect in the enumeration of some of the property in a poor-rate is no ground for refusing a mandamus to justices to issue a distress warrant. Rex v. Wilson, 5 N. & M. 119; 1 H. & W. 507.

Execution—Power of Justices to Delay.]—Justices, in issuing a distress warrant for the recovery of poor-rates, have no power to order that there shall be any delay in the execution of the warrant. Reg. v. Handsley, 7 Q. B. D. 398.

—— Resistance—Authority of Debtor's Wife.]—A constable in executing a distress warrant for a general district rate went to the door of the debtor's house. The debtor's wife resisted his entry and assaulted him when entering against her will:—Held, that the wife had implied authority to admit or exclude a constable executing civil process, and was justified in using force to exclude him. Rossiter v. Conway, 58 J. P. 350.

Persons Liable—Tenants in Common.]—A distress warrant may issue against any one of a number of tenants in common refusing to pay the amount of a rate assessed on all of them. Paynter v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 908; 16 L. J., M. C. 136; 11 Jur. 973—Ex. Ch.

—— Churchwarden.]—The goods of one churchwarden are liable to be seized under a distress made by order of the other churchwarden and the overseers, for a poor-rate due from him, where the rate has been legally demanded and payment of it refused; but if such churchwarden has charged himself in his account with the rate as received to apply it to parochial purposes, the justices (who act judicially in such cases), in the exercise of their discretion, may refuse to grant a warrant. Skingley v. Surridge, 11 M. & W. 503; 12 L. J., M. C. 122; 7 Jur. 773.

—— Lodger.]—By a local act, the rates directed by that act to be made should and might, on refusal or neglect to pay the same by any person or persons liable thereto, be recovered in such manner as the rates made for the relief of the poor are directed to be recovered; and it was provided that any person, whether landlord or tenant, who should let out his or her house in separate apartments or ready-furnished to a lodger or lodgers, should be deemed to be the occupier thereof, and might be rated or assessed accordingly, and should be liable to the payment of the sum so rated; and that the goods and chattels of each and every person renting or occupying any separate part or apartment in such house or building, or renting or occupying any ready-furnished house, or any part thereof, should be liable to be distrained and sold for the payment of the said rates:—Held, that under that act the goods of a lodger were liable to be distrained and sold for poor-rates assessed upon and due from the landlord, under a warrant directing the churchwardens and overseers to take the goods of the landlord. Peppercorn v. Hofman or Hopman, 9 M. & W. 618; 12 L. J., Ex. 270.

—— Owner of Tithe Rent-Charge.]—Poor-rate assessed upon the owner of tithe rent-charge under 1 Vict. c. 69, s. 8, is not recoverable by distress warrant against such owner. Lamplough v. Norton, 58 L. J., Q. B. 279; 22 Q. B. D. 452; 37 W. R. 422; 53 J. P. 389—C. A.

—— Administrator.]—An administrator is not liable to pay a poor-rate for the intestate; at least he is not distrainable without a summons. Stevens v. Evans, 1 W. Bl. 284; 2 Burr. 1152.

—— Servant of Ambassador.]—When a British-born subject employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador's chapel, with a salary, rented and occupied a house, and let part of it in lodgings, and a distress was levied on his goods for a poor-rate:—Held, that his goods were not protected by 7 Ann. c. 12, even assuming that he was the domestic servant of an ambassador. Novello v. Toogood, 2 D. & R. 833; 1 B. & C. 554; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 181; 25 R. R. 507.

—— Liquidator of Company.]—The liquidator of a company was inserted in the rate-book as owner and occupier. He did not appeal against the rate:—Held, that in default of payment the justices were right in issuing a distress warrant against him, as the rate was good on the face of it. Dent v. Commondale Overseers, 56 J. P. 519.

—— Company—Equitable Charge.]—The goods of a company on which debenture-holders have an equitable charge are still the goods of the company, and are liable to be distrained on for the company's rates. Marriage, Neare & Co., In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 839; [1896] 2 Ch. 663; 75 L. T. 169; 45 W. R. 42; 60 J. P. 805—C. A.

—— Priority.]—Rates are payable out of the proceeds of sale of a distress in priority to equitable charges on the property distrained upon. Ib.

Property Liable.]—Money may be distrained as well as goods. East India Co. v. Skinner, 1 Bott's P. L. 249.

Averiæ carucæ are distrainable. Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 579; 2 Ld. Ken. 204.

Second Distress for same Rates.]—A beanstack of the plaintiff being distrained for rates due from the defendant was afterwards sold by auction, and a valid contract of sale effected, but on the purchaser subsequently proceeding to remove it, he was forcibly prevented by the plaintiff, and never had an opportunity of taking it away. The purchaser not having paid for the stack, a second distress was made for the rates and other things distrained under it:—Held, that such second distress was lawful. Lee v. Cooke, 3 H. & N. 203; 27 L. J., Ex. 337; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 168; 6 W. R. 284—Ex. Ch.

By whom Executed.]—The overseer of a township may execute by deputy a warrant directed to him to levy a rate, such an act being purely of a ministerial character. Walsh v. Southworth, 6 Ex. 150; 2 L., M. & P. 91; 20 L. J., M. C. 165.

A joint warrant to two persons to distrain for drainage-rates, under an act for draining fens and improving the navigation of a river, may be well executed by one of them. Lee v. Vessey, 1 H. & N. 90; 25 L. J., Ex. 271; 4 W. R. 554.

Warrants of Commitment—Adjudication.]—A warrant of commitment for nonpayment of a poor-rate should shew an adjudication by the same justices before whom the complaint is heard. Ramsden, In re, 3 D. & L. 748; 1 B. C. Rep. 133; 2 New Sess. Cas. 427; 15 L. J., M. C. 113; 10 Jur. 879.

—— Nature of.]—A commitment by justices for nonpayment of poor-rates is in the nature of civil process, and the proper prison for a person so committed by the justices of Middlesex is the prison in Whitecross street. Reg. v. Whitecross street (Governor), 6 B. & S. 371; 34 L. J., M. C. 193; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 970; 12 L. T. 543; 13 W. R. 1017; 10 Cox, C. C. 134.

—— Married Woman — Rated as Owner — Agreement.]—A married woman rated as owner of hereditaments under s. 4 of the Poor Rate Assessment Act, 1869, is liable to be imprisoned on nonpayment of parochial rates, in default of sufficient goods being found whereon to levy distress. The notice given by an owner under s. 4 does not constitute an agreement between such owner and the overseers. Allen (Elizabeth), In re, 63 L. J., M. C. 267; [1894] 2 Q. B. 924; 10 R. 514; 43 W. R. 141; 59 J. P. 229.

Costs and Charges.]—The 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4, which gave a remedy for the levying of money assessed for poor-rates, did not extend to costs. Clark v. Woods, 2 Ex. 395; 17 L. J., Ex. 189.

—— To whom Payable.]—Under this statute, the party applying for the warrant is the person to whom the costs of such application are to be paid. Walsh v. Southworth, 6 Ex. 150; 2 L., M. & P. 91; 20 L. J., M. C. 165.

—— Amount.]—The broker's charges only are the damages to be trebled under 43 Eliz. c. 3, s. 19, in replevin, on a distress made for a poor-rate. Newman v. Bernard, 3 M. & Scott, 728; 10 Bing. 274.

On a distress for arrears of a poor-rate, under 50 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 3:—Held, that, although the warrant made no mention of the costs of the previous summons, the reasonable costs of such summons might be levied under it, and that one shilling was a reasonable sum in that behalf. Clarke or Davies v. Pedley, 4 M. & Scott, 321; 3 L. J., C. P. 120.

Remedy for Wrongful Levy.]—A distress for a poor-rate for lands not in the occupation of the plaintiff may be replevied, notwithstanding the sessions on an appeal confirmed the rate: for determining that a man may be assessed for what he does not occupy, is an excess of jurisdiction. Milward v. Caffin, 2 W. Bl. 1330.

When one assessment is made in respect of property of which part is occupied and part is not occupied by the person rated, the question can be raised in replevin. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Buckmaster, 44 L. J., M. C. 180; L. R. 10 Q. B. 444; 33 L. T. 329; 24 W. R. 16.

An apothecary, being an inhabitant, was rated in respect of his stock-in-trade:—Held, that being liable to be rated as an inhabitant, his mode of impeaching the validity of the rate was by appeal to the sessions, not by replevin. Marshall v. Pitman, 2 M. & Scott, 745; 9 Bing. 595; 2 L. J., M. C. 33.

Where a party is rated in respect of property not in his occupation, he is not bound to appeal, but may replevy any distress taken for such poor-rate. Bristol Overseers v. Wait, 3 N. & M. 359; 1 A. & E. 264; 3 L. J., M. C. 71.

So, if part of the premises included in the rate is not occupied by him. Ib.

But if one distress is taken under a warrant to levy the amount of a rate, void by reason of such non-occupation, and also under a separate warrant to levy another good rate, the validity of such distress cannot be questioned in an action of trespass or replevin. Ib.

If more goods are seized than would be a reasonable distress for the good rate, the remedy of the distrainee is an action for an excessive distress. Ib.

The Statute of Marlbridge extends to goods distrained for a poor-rate. Sabourin v. Marshall, 3 B. & Ad. 440.

—— Trespass.]—If a person rated has any objection to the rate (e.g.) that it is made for six months, he must appeal to the next sessions; and if he does not appeal, he cannot bring trespass against those who distrain on him for nonpayment of the rate. Durrant v. Boys, 6 Term Rep. 580; 3 R. R. 268.

—— Delay by Reference to Arbitration.]—An assessment committee made a poor-rate upon the property of a waterworks company in excess of the amount which they considered to be the rateable value. The company gave notice of appeal. Both parties then agreed to refer the matter to arbitration, and to be bound by the decision of the umpire. The umpire did not make his award for three years, during which time the company was compulsorily obliged to pay the poor-rate. The umpire made his award and declared that the company was overrated, and that the overseers should repay to them the sums in excess which they had been obliged to pay under compulsion. The overseers refused to consider the award as valid, and when the next rate was made distrained upon the company under a magistrate's warrant. The company replevied, and afterwards moved that the replevin bond might be delivered up:—Held, that the proceedings of the overseers were against good faith, they having agreed to be bound by the award, and that the replevin bond might be given up at the instance of the company. Leicester Waterworks Co. v. Cropstone Overseers, 44 L. J., M. C. 92; 32 L. T. 567. Compare L. & N. W. Ry. v. Bedford, 17 Q. B. 978.

Protection of Justices.]—Formerly an action of trespass lay against magistrates for granting a warrant to levy poor-rates, if the party distrained upon had no land in the parish in which the rate was made. Weaver v. Price, 3 B. & Ad. 409; 1 L. J., M. C. 90.

A local act gave power to certain persons to rate for the repair of bridges in the district, and empowered a justice, on demand and refusal to pay such rate, to enforce payment by a distress warrant, to be directed to the collector; and a right of appeal was given against a rate to any person claiming exemption by reason of his lands being "abbey lands," and the decision of the quarter sessions on such appeal was to be final. The plaintiff was rated, and refused to pay, and a justice granted a distress warrant, directed to the collector, who served and executed it. In an action of trespass by the plaintiff against the justice and collector:—Held, that the plaintiff was not confined for his remedy to the appeal to the quarter sessions; that the justice had acted without jurisdiction, and was not protected by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44; and that the collector, in the circumstances, was to be considered an officer of the law, and protected by 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6. Pedley v. Davis, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 492; 30 L. J., C. P. 374; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 263; 5 L. T. 253.

Protection of Overseers and Officers (17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 8).]—The bailiff of an overseer who distrains for poor-rates upon goods under a distress for rent is not within the protection of the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6, which requires a previous demand of the perusal and copy of the warrant. Whitley v. Roberts, M'Clel. & Y. 107; 25 R. R. 755.

Under a warrant against the goods of A., an overseer took goods already in the hands of the bailiff of A.'s landlord, as a distress for rent:—Held, that he was not protected by 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6. Kay v. Grover, 7 Bing. 312; 3 M. & P. 634; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 112. S. P., Kay v. Grace, 5 M. & P. 140.

In an action for wrongfully and maliciously taking goods of the value of 600*l.* as a distress under a warrant for 141*l.* for a poor-rate:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to demand a copy of the warrant pursuant to 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6, before commencing his action, as the overseers had not acted in obedience to the warrant, and no action would have lain against the justices. Sturch v. Clarke, 1 N. & M. 671; 4 B. & Ad. 113; 2 L. J., M. C. 29. S. P., Cotton v. Kadwell, 2 N. & M. 399.

Where an act authorises a justice on oath made that a party refuses to pay his rates to issue a summons calling on him to shew cause why he refuses, oath being first made by the officer that he has demanded the rate and that it is due and in arrear, and authorises a warrant of distress to be issued on neglect to shew good cause, it must be shewn in any pleading or special case on the part of the officer who justifies a distress that there had been a demand and refusal previously to the summons, and if one warrant be issued for two separate rates, a demand of both and refusal of one is not sufficient to support the warrant. Jay v. Halksworth, 2 C. L. R. 1776.

An action will not lie at the suit of the sheriff against overseers of a parish for taking goods under a warrant of distress for poor's-rates, when he has allowed the defendant, notwithstanding the execution, to continue to be the ostensible owner of the property. Spicer v. Tidy, 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 10.

3. Inspection of Rate-Books.

Custody of Rate-Book—Refusal to Produce—Liability.]—An assistant overseer having, by virtue of his office, the poor-rate book in his custody, is liable to a penalty under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 16, for refusing to produce it to an inhabitant, when lawfully demanded. Edwards v. Bennett, 6 Bing. 230; 3 M. & P. 749; 3 Y. & J. 458; 8 B. & C. 702; 2 M. & Ry. 482; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 49; 31 R. R. 403. Affirming 7 B. & C. 586; 1 M. & Ry. 482; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 71; 31 R. R. 267.

By a local act for certain incorporated parishes, guardians of the poor were appointed, and were authorised to appoint a clerk, and to make rates; and all poor-rates and books purporting to be rates, made for the parishes, and all papers relating to the settlement of the poor, were to be delivered by the churchwardens and overseers to the clerk of the guardians for the time being, who was to cause the same to be preserved and filed. The clerk to the guardians paid the casual and out-poor weekly, and transacted some other matters relating to the poor, and had the custody of the books:—Held, that he was not a person liable to the penalty imposed by 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 3, on churchwardens, overseers or other persons authorised to take care of the poor, for not permitting an inhabitant to inspect the rates. Whitchurch v. Chapman, 3 B. & Ad. 693 ; 1 L. J., M. C. 69.

A rated inhabitant of a parish cannot sue an overseer for the penalty for refusing an inspection of the rate-books, unless he shews that he has been injured by the refusal. Spenceley v. Robinson, 5 D. & R. 572 ; 3 B. & C. 658 ; 27 R. R. 460.

Proper Demand, what is.]—The demand of an inspection must be made at a reasonable time and place ; therefore, where the demand was made at a parishioner's own house at eight o'clock in the evening, and not at the house of the overseer :—Held, that the overseer incurred no penalty by refusing. Ib.

A demand to inspect a rate made on the overseer by a rated inhabitant in the presence of his attorney is a lawful demand ; and the refusal to produce the rate upon a lawful demand constitutes the inhabitant a party aggrieved ; and a demand to see the rate is sufficiently specific, there being only one rate in esse at the time. Edwards v. Bennett, supra.

When a demand to inspect a rate was made upon an overseer on his own premises not far from his house, and he refused to allow the inspection, but not on the ground that it was inconvenient to go to his house for that purpose : —Held, that this was a reasonable demand within the statute. Parker v. Edwards, 7 B. & C. 594 ; 3 M. & P. 761.

Right to have a Copy.]—The 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, which, by s. 2, prescribes the form in which a poor-rate is to be made, and, by s. 5, empowers persons rated to take copies thereof, and imposes a penalty of 5*l.* for refusal, does not repeal so much of 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, as requires the overseers to give copies of the rate to any inhabitant forthwith upon demand, and subjects them to a penalty of 20*l.* for refusal. Tennant v. Craston or Creston, 2 New Sess. Cas. 425 ; 8 Q. B. 707 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 105 ; 10 Jur. 660.

A parishioner is entitled to have, on demand, a copy of the rate forthwith delivered to him, upon paying 6*d.* for every twenty-four names :— Held, that the overseer is entitled to a reasonable time to make the copy. Spenceley v. Robinson, supra.

Action for Penalty.]—In a declaration against an overseer for the penalty for refusing inspection of a poor-rate, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to describe himself as an inhabitant of the parish, without stating that he is a rated inhabitant. Batchelor v. Hodges, 6 N. & M. 75 ; 4 A. & E. 592 ; 5 L. J., M. C. 52.

To such a declaration, it is no plea that the rate, at the time of the demand for inspection, was not a subsisting rate. Ib.

—— Who may Sue.]—A churchwarden or an overseer is not an inhabitant or a parishioner within 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, so as to be entitled to sue a co-churchwarden or overseer for penalties for refusing to permit him to inspect or to give him a copy of a rate. Wethered v. Calcutt, 5 Scott (N.R.) 409 ; 4 Man. & G. 566 ; 11 L. J., M. C. 123 ; 6 Jur. 487.

—— Questions for the Jury.]—In an action against an overseer for not giving to an inhabitant a copy of a rate forthwith, upon demand and offer of payment, the complaint being that the overseer had used undue delay :—Held, that it was not the judge's duty to tell the jury, as a direction in point of law on the facts proved, that the copy was or was not given forthwith, but that he was right in leaving it to them to say whether, under the circumstances, it had or had not been given in reasonable time, and therefore, according to reasonable construction, forthwith. Tennant v. Bell, 9 Q. B. 684 ; 16 L. J., M. C. 31 ; 10 Jur. 946.

Right to Compel.]—The court cannot compel the officers of a parish to permit the ratepayers of a parish to take copies or extracts from a book containing all parochial rates and accounts of all moneys received for parochial purposes, but not containing any account of parochial disbursements kept under the directions of a local act, although the parish has adopted the provisions of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60 (the Vestry Act). Reg. v. St. Marylebone Vestry, 6 N. & M. 600 ; 5 A. & E. 268 ; 6 L. J., M. C. 159.

The right of a ratepayer to inspect or take copies from parish accounts is only a private right ; and to entitle him to a mandamus ordering such inspection to be granted, he must shew grounds of a special and public nature in support of his application. Briggs, Ex parte, 1 El. & El. 881 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 272 ; 7 W. R. 445.

4. Appeal against Rates and Reserved Cases.

a. When Appeal Lies.

The simple fact of being left out of a poor-rate where no improper motives are shewn for making the omission, is no ground of appeal against the rate. Rex v. George, 1 N. & P. 451 ; 6 A. & E. 305 ; W. W. & D. 32 ; 6 L. J., M. C. 34 ; 1 Jur. 39.

A defect in the enumeration of some of the property in a poor-rate is ground of appeal. Rex v. Wilson, 5 N. & M. 119 ; 1 H. & W. 507.

An objection that a rate is retrospective is ground of appeal. Reg. v. Stretfield, 32 L. J., M. C. 236 ; 11 W. R. 736.

An objection to a rate on account of the uncertainty of specification of the property rated is ground of appeal only, and is not a bar to an action for the rate. Curtis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 7 B. & C. 314 ; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 106.

Where an inhabitant is rated for certain stock-in-trade which may not be rateable, his remedy is by appeal to the quarter sessions, not by replevin. Marshall v. Pitman, 2 M. & Scott, 745 ; 9 Bing. 595 ; 2 L. J., M. C. 33.

The justices at the sessions are the proper judges of the equality of poor-rates. Rex v. Aire and Calder Navigation, 2 Term Rep. 660 ; 1 R. R. 579.

The following order of sessions was removed by certiorari : "Whereas E. L., of, &c., in the parish of St. B., in the city of L., has presented his petition and appeal, setting forth, that by a certificate, &c., the barrister did certify that the L. Literary and Scientific Institution was entitled to the benefit of an act passed in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of, &c., by which certificate the petitioner, as a parishioner and ratepayer of the parish of St. B., in the city of L., in which parish the institution is situate, conceived himself aggrieved, and appealed against the certificate ; now upon hearing the petition and appeal of E. L. against the certificate, in the presence and hearing of all parties concerned, &c., it is ordered that the certificate be annulled": —Held, first, that it was sufficiently alleged that E. L. was a ratepayer; that the allegation that he was a ratepayer was equivalent to an allegation that he was assessed, and therefore he was entitled to appeal against the certificate of the barrister, and that it was not necessary to set out the rate to which he was assessed. Reg. v. Stacy, 14 Q. B. 789; 19 L. J., M. C. 177; 14 Jur. 549.

Held, secondly, that the sessions having annulled the certificate because the statute mentioned in it was described as passed in the sixth and seventh years of the reign, the decision could not be reviewed by the court. Ib.

Local Act—Who may Appeal.]—By a local act guardians were empowered to ascertain what sum each parish in the city of Norwich should contribute towards the expenses of maintaining the poor, and to certify the same to two justices, who were to issue their warrant to the proper officers to rate and assess the amount; any person, parish, &c., unequally assessed might appeal at the next sessions held after such assessment made and demanded:—Held, that the churchwardens and overseers of an over-assessed hamlet might appeal against both the certificate and the warrant. Rex v. Norwich Corporation, 3 D. & R. 42.

Arbitration by Agreement—Breach of Faith.]—A vestry constituted under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, but exercising powers under a local act (which gave the vestry all the authorities of a public vestry), made a poor-rate, whereby certain amounts were charged upon a railway company in respect of various properties within the parish. By the local act, a party aggrieved by any assessment might appeal to the vestry at any meeting within one month after demand of the rate, and the vestry might give relief; and the appellant, if not satisfied with the determination, might, within three months after it, appeal to the sessions. The company appealed to the vestry, and by agreement (September 14th, 1850), between the company and the vestry (who authorised their chairman to sign it), the question whether or not the property had been overrated was referred to an arbitrator, who was to have the powers of a court of quarter sessions on appeal; and the company having paid the rate, it was agreed that if the assessment should be reduced, the amount overpaid should be credited to them on account of the next rate; that the award should regulate the assessment to all future rates up to its date; and that all payments on such future rates should be credited to the company in the same manner as the payment already made. Pending the reference, a second rate was made (September 21st, 1850), and a third in March following, both on the same rateable value as the first, and the company paid the second. The parties attended before the arbitrator, and he made his award, assessing the company's properties at reduced values, and fixing the entire rateable value at an amount lower than that in dispute by 573*l.* Taking the total as correct, the company was a creditor, upon the three rates, to the amount of 418*l.*, but by an error of figures the total stated in the award exceeded by a few pounds the aggregate of the sums assessable on the several properties, according to the arbitrator's finding. The vestry clerk proposed to refer the matter back to the arbitrator. The company objected, but offered to discard the total sum and take the assessment according to the valuations on the several parcels. This was not agreed to, but no proceeding was taken to set the award aside. The vestry, of whom forty had come into office in place of forty who retired, after the making of the award refused to consider it as valid, and distrained upon the company under a magistrate's warrant for the third rate on the original scale of assessment. The company replevied, and afterwards moved the court that proceedings might be stayed and the replevin bond delivered up:—Held, that whether the award was binding on the vestry or not, their proceeding by summons and distress was against good faith, the company having, by their agreement with the vestry, been led into a course of proceeding which had deprived them of an appeal to sessions, and that the proceedings of the company in replevin might be stayed, and their bond given up at their own instance. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Bedford, 17 Q. B. 978.

b. To what Court.

Quarter Sessions—"Failed to obtain Relief."]—A ratepayer, aggrieved by his assessment to the poor-rate, gave notice of objection to the assessment committee, under the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 39), s. 1. The committee, considering that a case then pending in a superior court would govern this case, adjourned their decision. The ratepayer thereupon appealed against the rate to the quarter sessions:—Held, that he had not "failed to obtain relief" from the assessment committee within the above section; and that the quarter sessions had consequently no jurisdiction. Reg. or Williams v. Bedminster Union, 45 L. J., M. C. 117; 1 Q. B. D. 503; 34 L. T. 795.

—— Parish under Special Act.]—A metropolitan parish was regulated by a local act, under which a rate for the relief of the poor and other parish purposes was to be made by the vestrymen, and any person aggrieved by the rate was to apply to the guardians for relief, and if dissatisfied with their decision, might then appeal to the quarter sessions, giving notice to the guardians. A valuation list for the parish was made by the overseers and finally settled by the assessment committee under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, in which certain property occupied by the appellants was newly assessed, but no notice was given to them by the overseers as required by s. 9. The appellants appealed direct to the quarter sessions, proceeding as in an appeal against a poor-rate under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38:—Held, that the rate was still made under the local act, though the valuation was to be in conformity with the valuation list under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67; and that the proceedings not having been in conformity with the local act the quarter sessions had no jurisdiction. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., L. R. 7 Q. B. 653; 26 L. T. 902; 20 W. R. 774.

County Sessions—Rate in Borough.]—A parish contained a borough, which was not co-extensive with the parish, and which before the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), had a quarter sessions with jurisdiction over the whole parish. The borough had not six justices, and therefore the parish had the power of appealing to the county sessions against a rate under 1 Geo. 4, c. 36. The Municipal Corporations Act threw the outlying parts of the parish into the county jurisdiction :—Held, that s. 3 did not take away the power of an inhabitant in the outlying parts of the parish to appeal against a poor-rate to the county sessions, and that the sessions might amend or quash the whole rate. Reg. v. Bridgewater, 2 P. & D. 586 ; 10 A. & E. 711 ; 8 L. J., M. C. 72 ; 3 Jur. 1123.

Queen's Bench—Preliminary Questions.]—On an appeal against a poor-rate the sessions granted an application to enter and respite the appeal, subject to a case for the opinion of the court of queen's bench ; the reservation at the end of the case being, if the court should be of opinion that the quarter sessions ought not to have granted the application, the entry of the appeal is to be struck out :—Held, that the point being raised on an order which did not finally dispose of the appeal, the court would not entertain the case. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., or Sutton Coldfield Overseers, 43 L. J., M. C. 57; L. R. 9 Q. B. 153; 29 L. T. 840 ; 22 W. R. 324.

—— Appeal from.]—The jurisdiction of the queen's bench upon questions relating to the validity of local rates is not purely consultative but judicial, and the decisions of that court upon such matters are therefore open to appeal. A decision of the queen's bench on such a matter, though given in the form of discharging a rule for quashing an order of sessions, is an "order" within the 19th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, and is therefore subject to appeal. Walsall Overseers v. L. & N. W. Ry., 48 L. J., M. C. 65 ; 4 App. Cas. 30 ; 39 L. T. 453 ; 27 W. R. 189—H. L. (E.)

Next Sessions—General Rule.]—An appeal against a poor-rate to the justices at a special petty sessions, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6, must be either to the next practicable special sessions after the making of the rate, or within a reasonable time. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 4 New Sess. Cas. 130 ; 19 L. J., M. C. 199 ; 14 Jur. 552. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Trafford, 15 Q. B. 200.

An appeal against a poor-rate to the special sessions cannot be made to a later sessions than the second after the publication of the rate. Reg. v. Hammond, 4 New Sess. Cas. 316.

A poor rate was made on the 9th, allowed on the 11th, and published on the 14th, the sessions commencing on the 15th of April :—Held, that an appeal against the rate need not be entered until the sessions next but one after the publication of the rate. Rex v. Hendon, 2 D. & R. 249.

Where a rate is published on May 30 an appeal to the Michaelmas quarter sessions is not an appeal to the next practicable sessions. Reg. v. Weedon Beck Churchwardens, 1 W. R. 385.

—— Failure to obtain Relief.]—Though, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, an appeal against a poor-rate must be to the next practicable sessions after publication, it is now, by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, a condition precedent to the right to appeal that the party shall have failed to obtain relief from the assessment committee on the hearing of his objections to the valuation list. Lawes v. Arlsey Overseers, 18 W. R. 293.

Where, therefore, a rate was published on the 30th of May, and notice of objection was given to the assessment committee on the 11th of June, but the committee did not sit to hear the objections till the day of holding the Midsummer quarter sessions :—Held, that an appeal against the rate might be entered and respited at the October sessions. Ib.

On August 3rd a gas company failed to obtain relief against a poor-rate from an assessment committee, and on October 5th they gave notice of appeal to the sessions to be held on October 26th. Meanwhile sessions had been held on September 1st :—Held, as from August 3rd to September 1st there were seven days beyond the twenty-one days requisite for notice under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, that the September sessions were the next practicable sessions within 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4 ; and that, therefore, the appeal could not be entered at the October sessions. Liverpool United Gas Light Co. v. Everton Overseers, 40 L. J., M. C. 104 ; L. R. 6 C. P. 414 ; 23 L. T. 813 ; 19 W. R. 412.

A poor-rate was made for a parish in a county and published on May 30th. On the 11th of June L. gave notice of objection to the union assessment committee. The committee at its next meeting on the 30th of June refused to grant him relief. The Midsummer quarter sessions for the county were held on the same day. L. appealed to the Michaelmas sessions, and the justices allowed the appeal to be entered : —Held, on a motion for a prohibition against L. and the justices to stay all further proceedings in connection with the appeal, that L. could not be said to have failed to obtain relief from the union assessment committee until June 30th, when the committee heard his case, and refused to allow his objections. Reg. v. Biggleswade Union, 21 L. T. 494.

Held, also, that L. would not have been right in giving notice of appeal to the sessions until he had so failed before the union assessment committee. Ib.

Held, also, that as L. was, under the circumstances, prevented by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, from appealing to the Midsummer sessions, it was not too late for him to appeal to the Michaelmas sessions. Ib.

—— In London or Middlesex.]—An appeal against a poor-rate in London or Middlesex must be made, as in all other counties, to the next (i.e. next practicable) general quarter sessions ; though the 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, in its terms gives the appeal to the next general or quarter sessions ; it appearing from other parts of the act as well as from other acts in pari materiâ, that those terms are used synonymously ; and though in the two counties named there are four general as well as four general quarter sessions. Rex v. London JJ., 15 East, 632 ; 13 R. R. 540.

Claim of Exemption—Appeal within Four Months.]—A society obtained a barrister's certificate which was filed, after which an assessment of rates was made under a local act ; afterwards notice of the filing was given to the collector of rates, and to the trustees under that act ; after which another assessment was made : —Held, that an appeal, made within four calendar months next after the assessment first mentioned, was in time within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, s. 6, as being made within four calendar months next after the first assessment after such exemption shall have been claimed by such society. Reg. v. Pocock, 8 Q. B. 729 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 132 ; 10 Jur. 662.

c. Notice of Appeal.

Necessity of—Action for Excessive Rate.]—On the 15th August, 1828, an increased poor-rate was assessed on certain premises, against which an appeal was entered at the October sessions, and respited to the following sessions in January. On the 15th December, 1828, the overseers distrained for the increased rate; but, to prevent a sale, the amount was paid under protest, and the distress relinquished. The rate was subsequently reduced, in consequence of the decision of the court on a case sent up by the justices on the hearing of the appeal. It did not appear that any notice in writing of the appeal had been given to the overseers pursuant to 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 2, before the levy. In an action by the party on whom the increased rate was made, against one of the overseers, at the time of the levy, to recover back the excess above the last effective rate:—Held, that, as no notice of appeal had been given to the overseers, the action could not be maintained. Priestly v. Watson, 2 C. & M. 621; 4 Tyr. 916; 3 L. J., M. C. 113.

One Notice by Several Persons.]—Several parties having a joint grievance, such as the omission of persons in the rate who ought to be rated, may join in giving one notice of appeal. Rex v. Sussex JJ., 15 East, 206; 13 R. R. 447.

To whom given.]—Notice of appeal against a rate served upon one of the churchwardens of the parish, and the two overseers, is good service under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96. Rex v. Weedon Beck Overseers, 1 W. R. 385.

Where there is an appeal on the ground that some person is omitted who ought to be rated, the justices cannot hear the appeal unless notice of it has been given to the party said to have been improperly omitted. Rex v. Brooke, 9 B. & C. 915; 4 M. & Ry. 719; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 33.

By a local act the management of the poor of a town was vested in certain persons, who were empowered to make rates, and an appeal was given to the party aggrieved to the town sessions against every such rate; and a further appeal, if necessary, to the county sessions. An appeal against four rates being entered at the January town sessions, four grounds of appeal were specified in the notice; the party being dissatisfied, made a further appeal to the county sessions, and two other grounds of appeal were added; the fourth being that the party was rated in respect of his lands in a higher proportion than all the other inhabitants mentioned in the rate:—Held, that it was not necessary to give notice of appeal to all the inhabitants named in the rate. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 1 B. & Ald. 640.

Entry of Recognizances.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6, the decision of the special petty sessions shall be binding unless notice of appeal be given within fourteen days after the decision, and a recognizance be entered into within five days of such notice before some justice of the peace. Where recognizances were duly entered into within five days, and a minute of the recognizances was entered in the minute-book by the clerk of the peace, but the recognizance itself was not then drawn up and signed by a justice of the peace: the court held that the words of the statute were satisfied. Reg. v. St. Albans' JJ., 1 P. & D. 148; 8 A. & E. 932; 8 L. J., M. C. 33.

d. Notice of Objections.

Necessity of.]—Under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, it is a condition precedent to the right of appeal against each and every rate made in conformity with the valuation list, that the appellant should give a notice of objection against the list to the assessment committee; and that notwithstanding an appeal against the next preceding rate by the appellant is pending, and the figures in the valuation list are the same, so far as the appellant is concerned. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 10 B. & S. 318; 38 L. J., M. C. 89; L. R. 4 Q. B. 323; 20 L. T. 481; 17 W. R. 670.

Under the authority of their local act, 25 Geo. 3, c. xli., the vestry of Richmond had made a rate for the relief of the poor within that parish, for which the appellant had been assessed upon a valuation of 150*l.* made by the vestry. The assessment committee of the Richmond Union had also made a valuation list, under which the appellant's premises were assessed at 102*l.* The appellant appealed against the vestry's rate to the special sessions held under the provisions of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96; but the justices held that they had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, on the ground that he had not given notice to the union assessment committee of any objection to the valuation list approved by them, which was made a condition precedent to an appeal by s. 1 of the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864:—Held, that the justices were wrong, inasmuch as the provisions for an appeal against a poor-rate given under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, were applicable to poor-rates, whether made under local or general acts, whereas the requirements as to notice of objection under s. 1 of the Union Committee Assessment Amendment Act, 1864, applied only to valuations made under the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, and that, therefore, the rule for the mandamus must be made absolute. Reg. v. Price, Cole, Ex parte, 62 L. J., M. C. 71; 68 L. T. 171; 57 J. P. 294.

Fresh Notice after Rate made.]—An appellant who has given notice of objection to the valuation list, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, and failed to obtain relief before a rate is made in conformity with the list, is not bound by the above enactment to give a fresh notice of objection to the list after the rate is made in order to be entitled to appeal. Reg. v. Wiltshire JJ., 48 L. J., M. C. 142; 4 Q. B. D. 326; 40 L. T. 681.

A valuation list having been duly made in accordance with the provisions of the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 103), the appellants gave notice of objection to the list. A rate was made in conformity with the list, and subsequently the objection of the appellants was heard by the assessment committee, who made a deduction from the amount at which the property of the appellants was valued, and altered the valuation list accordingly. The rate was then amended in conformity with the amended list. The appellants being dissatisfied with the deduction, gave the requisite notice of appeal against the original rate, but did not give to the assessment committee any further notice of objection to the valuation list, or any notice of appeal against the rate founded upon it:—Held, that the appellants had done all that was contemplated by the statute, and that it was not a condition precedent to their right of appeal that they should give fresh notice of objection to the amended list, or notice of appeal against the amended rate. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 25 L. T. 43; 19 W. R. 934.

A person who has once given to the assessment committee notice of objection against a valuation list and failed to obtain such relief as he deems just, may appeal to quarter sessions against any subsequent poor-rate made in conformity with the list, and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, does not make it a condition precedent of such appeal that previously thereto he should repeat his application to the committee for relief. Reg. v. Denbighshire JJ., 54 L. J., M. C. 142; 15 Q. B. D. 451; 53 L. T. 389; 33 W. R. 784.

Failure to obtain Relief.]—The 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, makes it in all cases a condition precedent to the right of appeal to the quarter sessions against a poor-rate made in conformity with the valuation list approved of by the assessment committee, that the appellant should have given to the assessment committee notice of the objection against the list, and shall have failed to obtain relief. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 43 L. J., M. C. 116; 30 L. T. 403; 22 W. R. 648. See cases ante, cols. 1717, 1718.

Contents of Notice.]—The notice required by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, to be given to the assessment committee, before an appeal to quarter sessions against a rate, must contain all the grounds of appeal, though on some of those grounds the assessment committee may be unable to give relief. Williams v. Bedminster Union, 30 L. T. 710; 22 W. R. 943.

The court of quarter sessions has no power to quash a rate for a defect not pointed out in the notice of appeal, though apparent on the face of the rate. Rex v. Bromyard, 2 M. & Ry. 280; 8 B. & C. 240; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 100.

Service of, on one Overseer.]—In order to entitle a person to be heard before justices at special sessions, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6, against a rate, it is only necessary to prove service of notice of objection on one of the overseers or other persons by whom such rate was made. Reg. v. Devon JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 96.

—— To Person omitted from the List.]—Where there is an appeal, on the ground that some person is omitted who ought to be rated, the justices at the sessions cannot hear the appeal, unless notice of the appeal and the ground of it have been given to the party said to have been improperly omitted. Rex v. Brooke, 9 B. & C. 915; 4 M. & Ry. 719; 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 33.

e. Practice at Sessions.

Disqualification of Justice.]—When the judge (deputy recorder), presiding at the trial of an appeal against an assessment to a poor-rate, was the registered owner of five shares in a company which was a party to the appeal:—Held, that he was interested in the appeal, and that the order of sessions in the appeal must be quashed. Reg. v. Storks, 5 W. R. 563.

Sect. 1 of 16 Geo. 2, c. 18, has not been repealed by s. 6 of the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864. Justices in special sessions can, therefore, hear appeals against rates made by a parish though they are themselves ratepayers in the same parish. Reg. v. Bolingbroke, 62 L. J., M. C. 180; [1893] 2 Q. B. 347; 5 R. 536; 69 L. T. 717; 42 W. R. 128; 58 J. P. 118.

A justice is not disqualified from acting at special sessions in the determination of a rating appeal by reason of the fact that he is a ratepayer in the parish in which the rate appealed against was made. Reg. v. Bolingbroke (supra) followed. Workington Overseers, Ex parte, [1894] 1 Q. B. 416; 9 R. 135; 70 L. T. 143; 42 W. R. 177; 58 J. P. 381—C. A.

One Appeal against Four Rates — Fresh Grounds of Objection.] — By a local act, the management of the poor of a town was vested in certain persons, who were empowered to make rates, and an appeal was given to the party aggrieved to the town sessions against every such rate; and a further appeal, if required, to the county sessions. An appeal against four rates being entered at the January town sessions, four grounds of appeal were specified in the notice; the party being dissatisfied, made a further appeal to the county sessions, and two other grounds of appeal were added; the fourth being, that the party was rated in respect of his lands in a higher proportion than all the other inhabitants mentioned in the rate:—Held, first, that one appeal against the four rates was sufficient. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 1 B. & Ald. 640.

Held, also, that the appellant must, at the county sessions, be confined to the original grounds of appeal at the town sessions. Ib.

Divisibility of Appeals.]—M. being dissatisfied with his assessment, on the ground that he was overrated, and that other ratepayers, viz. W., T. and P., were underrated, and that he was unequally rated having regard to the ratings of his neighbours, W., T. and P., gave notice to the assessment committee, and to the parties whose assessments were objected to, stating the grounds of such objections, and attended before the assessment committee pursuant to such notice. That body affirmed his rating on its former basis, and thereby refused relief on the first ground, and only made a nominal addition to the assessment of T., and thereupon M. withdrew, and did not proceed with his objections against the assessments of W. and P. The assessment committee having declined to amend the valuation list (except in so far as the nominal increase of T.'s assessment involved alteration), M. appealed to the quarter sessions. At the appeal M. offered to abandon his objection against W., and withdrew, as regarded him (P. did not appear), but claimed his right to prosecute his appeal against the decision of the assessment committee in respect of his own assessment and that of T. The justices, however, held, that the appeal was not divisible, and, therefore, dismissed it altogether:—Held, that they were wrong, and that M., on offering to abandon his objections to the rating of W., should have been allowed to do so, and to proceed with his appeal against the decision of the assessment committee in the cases of himself and T. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 40 L. J., M. C. 76; L. R. 6 Q. B. 132; 19 W. R. 205.

Power to allow Abandonment of Particular Ground.]—The respondents objected that, in respect of one of the grounds of appeal, it was necessary, under 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 6, that notice of the appeal should have been given to the persons therein named. The appellants denied that the ground of appeal came within that section. The sessions, however, decided that a notice was necessary to be given. The appellants then offered to abandon that ground of appeal, and proceed with others in respect of which no notice at all was required. The sessions refused to permit them to do so, and dismissed the appeal:—Held, that the sessions had power to decide whether they would permit the appellants to abandon that particular ground of appeal and proceed with the others. Reg. v. Cambridgeshire JJ., 1 L. M. & P. 47; 19 L. J., M. C. 130; 4 New Sess. Cas. 87.

When Amount in Dispute.]—Where an appellant disputes before the sessions the quantum of the rate, as well as the rateability of the property for which he is assessed (which was tithe rents and compositions under an inclosure act), it is not enough for the parish officers to shew that he was in receipt of such rents (assuming the property to be rateable), of the probable amount of which, as rated, they gave no evidence. Rex v. Topham, 12 East, 546.

Onus Probandi.]—On an appeal, on the ground that the appellant was overrated, the practice at the sessions required the appellant to begin by proving his case, which the appellant refused to do; and the appeal was dismissed: the court refused a mandamus to the sessions to rehear the appeal on this objection. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 6 M. & S. 57.

If a party appeals on the ground that he has no rateable property in the parish, the respondents must first establish their case. Rex v. Newbury, 4 Term Rep. 475.

—— Property omitted from Rate.]—If the ground of appeal is, that certain rateable property has been altogether omitted, the onus does not lie upon the appellant to give the sessions the means of amending the rate, it being the duty of the parish officers to include all rateable property in the rate, and take what means they can to ascertain its value. Rex v. Hull Dock Co., 5 D. & R. 359; 3 B. & C. 516.

Second Rate—Fresh Application for Relief.]—When an appeal has been made to the sessions against a rate, after failure to obtain relief from the assessment committee, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, it is necessary, before appealing against a second rate, to make a fresh application for relief to the assessment committee, although the list upon which the second rate is made contains precisely the same valuation of the appellant's property as that in the list which has been previously objected to. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 10 B. & S. 318; 38 L. J., M. C. 89; L. R. 4 Q. B. 323; 20 L. T. 481; 17 W. R. 670.

Adjourning and Respiting Appeals.]—The 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, does not make it imperative on justices to hear and determine an appeal at the sessions next following the publication of the rate, but they may adjourn it to the next sessions. Rex v. Wilts JJ., 8 B. & C. 380; 2 M. & Ry. 401; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 97.

After an appeal has been respited at the instance of the respondents, the appellant cannot be called upon to prove his notice of appeal. Rex v. Hertfordshire JJ., 1 N. & M. 331; 4 B. & Ad. 561; 2 L. J., M. C. 41.

A ground of appeal was, that persons who occupied property in the parish were omitted to be rated. Notice of appeal, addressed to the parish officers and to the other persons, was duly given to the parish officers, but not to the other persons. The respondents objected that proof of such notice was necessary. The appellant then applied to the sessions to adjourn the appeal, which they refused to do, and dismissed it with costs:—Held, that under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, and 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 6, they were bound to adjourn the appeal until the next sessions. Reg. v. Eyre, 6 El. & Bl. 992; 26 L. J., M. C. 14; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1207; 5 W. R. 55.

Afterwards the appellant served a fresh notice on the parish officers, addressed to them only, containing substantially the same grounds of appeal as the former notice. The sessions dismissed the appeal:—Held, that the fresh notice altered the character of the appeal, and therefore it was too late, and the sessions were right in dismissing it. Reg. v. Eyre, 7 El. & Bl. 619; 26 L. J., M. C. 125; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 912; 5 W. R. 533.

A notice, accompanied by grounds of appeal, was served on the parish officers fourteen days before the sessions, stating an intention to enter, and not to try the appeal, but to petition for a respite to the next following sessions. The respondents gave a counter-notice that they should appear and oppose a respite. The appeal was entered, and motion made that it should be respited, which the respondents opposed; and the sessions, being of opinion that no sufficient ground had been stated for respiting it, called upon the appellant to proceed, and on his declining, dismissed the appeal with costs:—Held, that it was discretionary with the sessions whether they would permit the appeal to be respited. Reg. v. Eyre, 7 El. & Bl. 609; 26 L. J., M. C. 121; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 910; 5 W. R. 532.

Abandonment of Rate.]—Where a poor-rate has been made, allowed, and published, and a party has appealed against it, the overseers cannot abandon it, but the appellant is entitled to have the rate quashed at the sessions. Rex v. Cambridge JJ., 2 A. & E. 370; 4 N. & M. 238; 4 L. J., M. C. 8.

Although parish officers cannot abandon a poor-rate, after it has been allowed and published, so as to render it no longer a subsisting rate, yet they may so far abandon it as to refuse to incur expense in supporting it on appeal; and they have no right, as matter of law, independently of the discretion of the justices, to have the expense of contesting such an appeal allowed them in their accounts. Reg. v. Fouch, 1 G. & D. 585; 2 Q. B. 308; 11 L. J., M. C. 1.

Evidence—Rateable Value—Public-house.]—Upon an appeal to quarter sessions by the tenant of a public-house in a town against the rateable value put upon his premises, the appellant's witnesses cannot be cross-examined, and evidence in chief cannot be given on behalf of the respondents, as to the takings of the appellant's business, the rateable value having no relation to the takings of the particular tenant, but being measured by the rent which might be expected to be obtained in the market for that public-house, having regard to the rent paid for similar public-houses in that town. Dodds v. South Shields Assessment Committee, 64 L. J., Q. B. 508; [1895] 2 Q. B. 133; 14 R. 422; 72 L. T. 645; 43 W. R. 532; 59 J. P. 452—C. A.

f. Amending, Quashing and Reducing Rate.

Power of Amendment.]—On appeal, because particular persons are or particular property is omitted in the rate, the sessions ought not to quash the whole rate, but should amend it in such particular. Rex v. Ringwood, Cowp. 326.

The 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 1, does not give the court of king's bench power of amending a poor-rate, as such statute confines the amendment to the quarter sessions. Rex v. Milton, 3 B. & Ald. 112; 22 R. R. 317.

—— Contents of Rate Book.]—When the subject-matter of a rate is improperly described in a rate-book, the rate is not to be quashed by striking out the name of the person rated, but amended by altering the description of the property rated. Reg. or Williams v. Bedminster Union, 45 L. J., M. C. 117; 1 Q. B. D. 503; 34 L. T. 795.

Amendment of Rate when Person Overcharged.]—When a person is overcharged, the sessions may relieve him on appeal, and amend the rate, by lessening the sum assessed on him, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 6. Rex v. Cheshunt, 2 Term Rep. 623; 1 R. R. 559.

Quashing Rate.]—The court will not quash a poor-rate, unless it is unequal upon the face of it. Rex v. Hardy, Cowp. 579. S. P., Rex v. Tomlinson, 9 B. & C. 163; 4 M. & Ry. 169; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 64.

An order of quarter sessions, made on an appeal against the whole of a poor-rate, and directing the rate to be quashed, is not bad because it does not also order the overseers to make a new rate, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 6. Reg. v. Hampshire JJ., 33 L. J., M. C. 104; 9 L. T. 730; 12 W. R. 441.

Justices, upon appeal from a rate to the quarter sessions, cannot make a new, but only quash the subsisting rate. Rex v. St. Andrew's, Holborn, 3 Burr. 1458.

The court of quarter sessions has no power to quash a rate for a defect not pointed out in the notice of appeal, though apparent on the face of the rate. Rex v. Bromyard, 2 M. & Ry. 280; 8 B. & C. 240; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 100.

—— Validity of Order.]—An order of sessions, quashing a rate, upon appeal generally, without assigning any reasons, is good. Rex v. Cornwall JJ., 4 Burr. 2102.

Power to reduce Rate.]—Where, by a local act, power is given to two justices to relieve an applicant aggrieved by a poor-rate, they have power to relieve in an individual case, by reducing the amount in which the party was assessed, although the ground upon which they consider him entitled to relief is, that the whole rate is made according to an erroneous principle. Rex v. St. James, Westminster, 4 N. & M. 252; 2 A. & E. 241; 4 L. J., M. C. 15.

Credit for Excess Payment.]—Under 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 8, if a rate is appealed against, and reduced, but the party rated has, during the appeal, paid on the unreduced assessment, the parish officers may in subsequent rates credit him for the excess paid, without an order of sessions. Reg. v. Parker, 7 El. & Bl. 155; 26 L. J., M. C. 199; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 771; 5 W. R. 234, 681.

Payment of Quashed Rate.]—A poor-rate was made in January, and quashed on appeal, but was levied, the amount to be taken as payment on account of the next effective rate on the parish. The next effective rate was made in June; but, the parish being in want of money, it was arranged between the ratepayers generally and the overseers, that the same rate should be levied in full, the payments of the quashed rate being allowed in the collection of the next rate; a rate being subsequently made in October, the overseers, being apprehensive that they might be surcharged if they carried out this arrangement, applied for a distress warrant to levy the October rate in full against an occupant of a house, whose predecessor had paid the quashed rate. The justices refused to issue their warrant on a rule to order them so to do:—Held, by Lord Campbell, J., and Wightman, J., that the payment of the quashed rate was to be taken as payment on account of the next effective rate, which was that made in June, and could not be taken as payment. By Erle and Compton, JJ., that under the circumstances it would be unjust to enforce the payment in full, and that the court in its discretion ought to refuse to make the order absolute. Reg. v. Kingston-on-Thames JJ., El., Bl. & El. 259; 27 L. J., M. C. 199; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 759; 6 W. R. 551.

Recovery of Excess Payment.]—An application for an order, under 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 8, to refund money paid for a poor-rate after it has been reduced on appeal, must be made to the same court of general quarter sessions which heard the appeal, or, at least, to that court which ordered the rate to be lowered. Rex v. St. Peter's, York, JJ., 4 B. & Ad. 342; 1 N. & M. 108; 2 L. J., M. C. 46.

g. Costs.

Power to Order and Enforce.]—An order of sessions dismissing an appeal against a poor-rate, and ordering costs to be paid by the appellant to the respondent, was removed into the queen's bench, and execution was issued thereon, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18:—Held, that the order was valid, because s. 18 did not take away the power of awarding costs given by 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, but gave an additional remedy for enforcing the order. Reg. v. Huntley, 3 El. & Bl. 172; 2 C. L. R. 246; 23 L. J., M. C. 106; 18 Jur. 745.

If a person gives notice of his intention to appeal, but does not enter his appeal, the sessions cannot award costs to the other party under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4. Rex v. Essex JJ., 8 Term Rep. 583.

Where an appeal was entered at the Midsummer, and respited until the Michaelmas sessions, and then further respited, at the instance of the appellant, till the Epiphany sessions, four days previously to which the respondents gave notice that they would not oppose the appeal, and it was accordingly allowed without opposition:—Held, that the appellant was entitled to costs as upon an appeal which had been heard and determined, within 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4. Rex v. Causton, 4 D. & R. 445.

Where an appeal is entered, and the appellant does not appear to support his appeal, the sessions have power to hear the appeal, and make an order for the respondent's costs on the appellant. Rex v. Essex JJ., 1 D. P. C. 539.

On an appeal being entered and abandoned, the respondents are entitled to costs under 17 Geo. 3, c. 38, s. 4, up to the time of abandonment. Holloway, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 26.

—— Non-appearance—Assessment Committee Respondents.]—Where an assessment committee, which has been served with notice of appeal as a respondent, does not appear at the hearing of the appeal at quarter sessions, an order for costs cannot be made against it. Reg. v. Salop JJ., 60 J. P. 552.

—— Appearance—Consent of Guardians.]—An assessment committee of a union are not entitled to costs incurred by them in respect of their appearance as respondents unless the conditions precedent imposed by s. 2 of the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864, have been fulfilled and the consent of the guardians of the union, after notice has been sent to every guardian to so appear, has been first obtained. West Ham Union v. Essex JJ., 65 L. J., M. C. 231; [1896] A. C. 443; 75 L. T. 1; 60 J. P. 756—H. L. (E.)

—— Agricultural Rates Act, 1896.]—The occupier, being entitled to be heard at quarter sessions, will be heard on appeal to the High Court, but will not be allowed costs, as only one set will be allowed. Worthing Overseers v. Richmond, 77 L. T. 161; 61 J. P. 710.

Order for Taxed Costs.]—Upon the hearing of an appeal against a poor-rate for a parish within a union, at borough sessions, the recorder decided that the rate should be amended with costs. The costs were not then taxed; and at the sessions following, the deputy recorder made an order for the amount of the taxed costs, he being at the time a ratepayer within another of the parishes in the same union:—Held, that the order for costs, being a judicial act, was void, on the ground that the deputy recorder was interested in the matter of the appeal. Reg. v. Cambridge (Recorder), 8 El. & Bl. 637; 27 L. J., M. C. 160; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 334; 6 W. R. 80.

When a rate was quashed with costs, and the costs having been subsequently taxed, the order for them was made at an adjourned session:—Held, that the order was good. Reg. v. Hampshire JJ., 33 L. J., M. C. 104; 9 L. T. 730; 12 W. R. 441.

Against Overseers — Change of Overseers meanwhile.]—A poor-rate was made in September, 1858. An appeal against the rate at the January sessions, in 1859, was adjourned, on the application of the respondents, until the April sessions; and it was ordered that the respondents should pay full costs to that time to the appellants. At the April sessions the respondents did not appear, and the quarter sessions quashed the rate, and, reciting the order of January as to costs, ordered full costs to be paid to the appellants "by the respondents." In December the appellants applied for payment of the costs, and the costs not being paid, in March, 1860, they obtained an order of a judge to remove the order for the purpose of enforcing it. The overseers who made the rate, and were the respondents in the appeal, went out of office on the 29th March, 1859, and new overseers were appointed. On an application to set aside the order of sessions and the order of the judge on the ground that the existing overseers were not parties to the appeal, and therefore not liable to the costs, the court refused the application, both orders being good on the face of them. Fletton Overseers, Ex parte, 2 El. & El. 712; 29 L. J., M. C. 205; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 822; 2 L. T. 174; 8 W. R. 432.

Order of Reference—Jurisdiction.]—On an appeal against a poor-rate, the sessions ordered the appeal to be entered and respited, and referred the matter in dispute to an arbitrator under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, the order of reference being silent as to costs. The appeal was regularly adjourned from sessions to sessions until the arbitrator, having duly heard the parties to the appeal, made his award, whereby he adjudged that the appeal should be dismissed with costs as against the appellants. The court of queen's bench, at the instance of the appellants, directed that the award should be referred back to the arbitrator, and that he should amend that part of it relating to the costs, inasmuch as the order of sessions referring the appeal to his arbitration gave him no jurisdiction over them. The arbitrator, having amended his award accordingly, the sessions ordered the same to be entered as the judgment of the court, but refused to add to their judgment that the appellants should be ordered to pay to the respondents their costs of the appeal:—Held, that the sessions were right in so refusing to add to their judgment; that their duty was ministerial only, and that the award was a judgment, and not merely a report; that the reference was under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, which did not give to any sessions holden subsequently to that at which the order of reference was made jurisdiction over the costs of the reference. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., West London Extension Ry. v. Fulham Assessment Committee, 40 L. J., M. C. 109; L. R. 6 Q. B. 220; 24 L. T. 131; 19 W. R. 744.

—— Costs Payable by Assessment Committee—Action for.]—An assessment committee being respondents in an appeal against a poor-rate, an agreement was entered into which was expressed to be made between the appellants and the assessment committee for and on behalf of the guardians, and was signed by the chairman of committee, by which the rateable value of the subject-matter of the rate was referred to arbitration, the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrators. The award was in favour of the appellants, and directed the "other party" to pay the appellants' costs of the reference and the costs of the award:—Held, that an action against the chairman and vice-chairman of the committee would not lie to recover these costs. Leicester Waterworks Co. v. Barrow Union, 48 L. J., M. C. 41; 4 Q. B. D. 18; 39 L. T. 624; 27 W. R. 364.

Costs of Arbitration—"Such Costs as they may be entitled to."]—Upon a poor-rate appeal to quarter sessions there was a reference to arbitration under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, and the respondents succeeded. The quarter sessions made an order for "such costs as they might be entitled to," and they claimed the costs of the arbitration. The clerk, however, deeming those costs not within the statute declined to tax them:—Held, that mandamus could not go to the sessions to hear and determine the application for those costs, as it could not be put as a case in which they had declined jurisdiction, nor as a case in which they were clearly wrong. Sheffield Gas Co. v. Sheffield Overseers, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 162.

Quære whether the respondents are entitled to costs of arbitration. Ib.

—— Award Silent as to Costs.]—On an appeal at quarter sessions against a poor-rate, an order, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, was made by consent, respiting the appeal, in order that the opinion of the court of queen's bench might be taken to ascertain the principle on which the property should be rated; and when that was ascertained, the matter should be referred to an arbitrator, to certify whether the appellants had been rated properly. The order was silent as to costs, and the case was respited from sessions to sessions. The court having laid down the principle on which the property should be rated, the arbitrator found that the appellants had not been rated too high:—Held, that a subsequent court of quarter sessions had no power to allow the respondents the costs of the reference and award. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 6 B. & S. 531; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 162.

Enforcing Order—Validity.]—When, upon an appeal to the sessions against a poor rate, the court, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, directs the party against whom it is decided to pay to the other party his costs, such costs are to be recovered in the manner pointed out by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, and an order of sessions, directing such costs to be paid to the clerk of the peace, to be by him paid over to the party entitled to them, is good. Gay v. Mattheus, 4 B. & S. 425; 33 L. J., M. C. 14; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 716; 8 L. T. 674; 11 W. R. 922—Ex. Ch.

h. Reserved Cases.

Power to State.]—The 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, does not apply to the hearing of an appeal against a poor-rate at special sessions, and the magistrates sitting at such sessions have no power to state a case for the opinion of the court upon a point of law raised on such an appeal; but the case should, if necessary, be stated under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11. Wheeler v. Burmington Overseers, 29 L. J., M. C. 175, n.; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 698; 2 L. T. 171; 8 W. R. 412.

Right to Begin.]—According to the practice of the court of exchequer, on appeals upon cases stated under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, the respondent is entitled to begin. Liverpool Library v. Liverpool Corporation, 5 H. & N. 526.

Jurisdiction of Court.]—The court is not precluded, by the sessions stating in the case "that the party rated is the occupier," from examining into the propriety of that conclusion, if the sessions also state all the circumstances of the case, and desire to have the opinion of the court upon the whole. Rex v. Field, 5 Term Rep. 587.

Alternative Findings — Arbitration.]—A special case stated by an arbitrator upon an appeal against an assessment to poor-rates set out two alternative modes, neither contrary to law, for ascertaining the value of the tenements assessed:—Held, that the arbitrator must find the facts affirmatively, and not in the alternative. Case remitted to be restated. North and South Western Junction Ry. v. Brentford Union, 58 L. J., M. C. 95; 13 App. Cas. 592; 60 L. T. 274—H. L. (E.)

II. COUNTY RATES.

A. JURISDICTION.

Borough and County Justices.]—A charter granting jurisdiction to borough justices over a district not within the borough, without words of exclusive jurisdiction, does not exclude the county justices from rating the district to a county rate. Bates v. Winstanley, 4 M. & S. 429.

Parish in two Counties.]—Before 1856, Deeping St. Nicholas was extra-parochial, and for secular purposes was situate partly in H. county and partly in K. county. In that year an act was passed which provided that Deeping St. Nicholas should form a parish and be deemed to be altogether in H., and that the laws for the time being in force for the relief and employment of the poor in England should be executed and put in force within the said parish in like manner as in other parishes; but a proviso was added that the county rate should continue to be paid and payable to the respective treasurers of the said rates for K. and H., within which the lands were situated. The guardians of the union in which the parish was situated received precepts for county rates from the county councils of H. and K., and issued a precept to the churchwardens for rates, including the county rate. The plaintiff claimed that the county rates for H. and K. ought not to be paid by a rate levied equally on the whole parish, but that each part of the parish should pay its respective share to its own county:—Held, that the County Rates Act, 1852, was incorporated in the act of 1856, and that s. 34 of the former act applied; that the rating powers of the respective justices were preserved by the proviso; and that each part of the parish must pay the county rate only of the county in which it was situated. Att.-Gen. v. Deeping St. Nicholas, 62 L. J., Ch. 188; 68 L. T. 278; 57 J. P. 196.

—— In what Cases—New Gaol.]—Under 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, two justices of a town, and county of a town, mentioned in Schedule A. to that act, may rate the inhabitants for rebuilding the gaol of such town and county on a new site. Thompson v. Raikes, 1 A. & E. 863.

When a presentment has been made as to the propriety of changing the site of a gaol, and the justices in sessions have taken such presentment into consideration, giving the notices required by 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 45, and have resolved that the site ought to be changed, such justices may at their next sessions confirm the resolution, and contract for building the new gaol, without having given fresh notices. Ib.

Under 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 68, the justices of a town and county might have power to raise money on the inhabitants in general for the purposes of building a gaol, though other persons might have been liable at the time of passing the act, and might continue liable to the expense of repairing and maintaining such gaol. Rex v. Kingston-upon-Hull JJ., 1 A. & E. 880.

B. LIABILITY OF BOROUGH.

Borough meaning County.]—A borough was incorporated by royal charter and had a separate commission of the peace, with a non-intromittant clause, and held a separate court of quarter sessions. It had never contributed to or paid the rates for the county at large. Sessions had been regularly held by the borough justices, but the only business done was the presentment of nuisances. Offenders were sent to the county gaol for trial at the assizes or county sessions, and the cost of maintaining such offenders had been sometimes paid by the corporation out of the borough poor-rate:—Held, that the borough fell within the meaning of the word county in 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 51, and that although no rates in the nature of county rates had been levied in the borough, there was no reason why they should not be levied, and that therefore the borough was not liable to be assessed to the rate for the county at large. Reg. v. East Looe, 3 B. & S. 20; 31 L. J., M. C. 245; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1128; 6 L. T. 748; 10 W. R. 866.

Borough with Separate Quarter Sessions.]—B., an ancient borough, situate in a county, had, as was found in an inquisition in the reign of Edward I., "a gallows, pillory, and tumbril, pleas of withernam," &c. By a charter of James I., the mayor, burgesses, and recorder should thenceforth be justices of the peace therein, with full power and authority to inquire concerning whatsoever trespasses, misprisions, and other minor offences, which might be inquired into before any justices of the peace in any county, so, nevertheless, that they do not in any manner proceed to the determination of any treason, murder, or felony, or of any other matter touching the loss of life or limb. There were also a grant and confirmation "of the same and similar courts of record, customs, liberties, privileges, franchises, immunities," &c., which the borough had heretofore holden and enjoyed. The borough justices had always held quarter sessions, and tried felonies and misdemeanors to the same extent and in the same manner as the justices of the county, and the latter justices had never interfered in any manner within the limits of the borough, which also maintained its own police:—Held, that the borough, in the absence of a non-intromittant clause, the existence of which could not, under the circumstances, be inferred, was liable to be assessed to the county rate, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, and also to the police rate. Were v. Devon (Clerk of the Peace), 6 B. & S. 7; 34 L. J., M. C. 47; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 322; 11 L. T. 626; 13 W. R. 313.

Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 112, 117, when a borough, which before that statute was contributory to the county rate, is incorporated, and receives the grant of a separate court of quarter sessions, it remains contributory to the county rate as to all expenses, except the costs in regard to prisoners tried at the county assizes: it being provided by s. 113, that it shall pay all the costs in regard to prisoners committed from it for trial there. Reg. v. Hilton, 13 Jur. 1093. See 12 & 13 Vict. c. 82.

Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 117, a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions is not exempt from contributing a proportion of the money expended by the county in the purchase of a gaol pursuant to the provision of a particular statute. Birmingham Corporation v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 116; 18 L. J., M. C. 176—Ex. Ch.

The parish of R. was subject to the jurisdiction of quarter sessions of S., but not to those of the county in which it was situate. In 1878 R., with a part of the county called the "added area" was put under commission for paving, &c., by a local act, which provided that if a charter were granted to the whole district, the quarter sessions of S. should have jurisdiction over the "added area," and that the "added area" should cease to be liable to county rates. In 1884 a charter was granted, which incorporated the whole district as the borough of R.:—Held, that the borough of R. was a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions, and that the "added area" was no longer liable to county rates. A separate court of quarter sessions in s. 150 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, means a court separate from that of the county. St. Lawrence Overseers v. Kent JJ., 51 J. P. 262.

Parishes partly Within and partly Without Borough.]—The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, ss. 32, 34 and 35, which provide for the collection of the county rate in parishes situate partly within boroughs and partly without, apply only to boroughs "not subject to contribute to the county rate;" and therefore, where a parish is situate partly within a borough which contributes to the country rate, a separate rate towards the expenses of the county police cannot be made upon the part without the borough, though the part within it is governed by a local act, under which police constables are appointed and paid. Reg. v. Huddersfield Overseers, 1 B. & S. 961; 31 L. J., M. C. 131; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 697; 7 L. T. 157; 10 W. R. 351.

—— Main Roads.]—By a local act, passed in 1874, the limits of the borough of Middlesborough were extended, and all lands, &c., within the extended area, and all persons in respect of the same, were exempted "from all county rates, save only in respect of the purposes for which any county rates are now leviable within the existing borough;" and the act further provided that the urban sanitary authority should be liable to the maintenance and repair of all streets and roads being public highways within the extended area, and that the inhabitants should not, in respect of any lands, &c., within that area, be liable to any payment in respect of the making or repairing of any highway beyond the limits thereof. At the time of the passing of the act general county rates were leviable within the existing borough for all purposes for which general county rates could be levied in any part of the riding, but those purposes did not include the maintenance of any main or other roads outside the limits of the borough. By s. 13 of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, any road which has ceased to be a turnpike-road in manner described by the act, shall be deemed to be a "main road," and one half of the expense incurred by the highway authority in the maintenance of such road shall, as to every part thereof within any highway area, be contributed out of the county rate:—Held, that the provisions of the local act did not exempt the inhabitants of the extended area of the borough from liability to pay county rates, under s. 13 of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, in respect of the maintenance of main roads outside the limits of the extended area. Middlesborough Overseers v. Yorkshire JJ., 12 Q. B. D. 239; 32 W. R. 671.

—— Highways.]—By a local act, power was given to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses to make and levy a highway rate upon the occupiers of all messuages, houses, &c., lands, tenements, and hereditaments within the borough, when sewered and otherwise completed, and such of the present and future streets as shall from time to time be declared public highways as aforesaid, and the main sewers under the same." The borough consisted of a part of one of the four divisions of the parish of Ashton-under-Lyne, and the whole of another of such divisions, the latter being subdivided into two districts; and before the passing of the act each of such districts separately maintained its own highways and had its own surveyor. The greater part of one district was a county district. After the passing of the act the mayor, &c., acting as surveyor, laid a rate on each rateable property within each of the districts exclusively for the repair of such highways within them as had not been sewered, drained, levelled, paved, flagged, and otherwise completed, to the satisfaction of the mayor, &c.:—Held, that under the local act, taken in connection with 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, ss. 48, 49, the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough were empowered to make two general rates within the borough, one for the repair of the urban streets within the local act, and the other for the repair of the usual ways not within that act, and therefore that the rate was bad. Reg. v. Slater, 18 Q. B. 398; 21 L. J., M. C. 185; 16 Jur. 992.

Highway Rates.]—See WAY.

C. PERSONS AND PROPERTY LIABLE.

County Gaol.]—By local acts, improvement commissioners were appointed to act in and for a town in a county, and were authorised to levy annually within the town, for the purposes of the act, a certain rate upon all gaols situated within the town. A subsequent local act, after reciting that it was expedient that the county should be relieved and exonerated from any taxes in respect of any of the gaols of the county, enacted that "no rate, tax, or assessment whatsoever, parliamentary or parochial, should be raised, assessed, or levied on, or be payable by, the county for or on account of the gaols, or any or either of them":—Held, that this latter act exempted a county gaol, situated in the town, from assessment to the annual rate leviable by the improvement commissioners. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 2 El. & El. 911; 29 L. J., M. C. 191; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 894; 2 L. T. 353; 8 W. R. 496.

By an act passed for the purpose of keeping the streets of a town in repair and lighted, a sum was to be assessed upon all halls, gaols, churchyards, &c., within the town, "for every yard running measure of the length in front of such halls, gaols," &c.:—Held, that, notwithstanding the 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 48, the county gaol was liable to the payment of the rate, and that every part of the building which abutted on a public street was to be included in the measurement. Beds JJ. v. Bedford Commissioners, 7 Ex. 658; 21 L. J., M. C. 224.

—— Unoccupied Houses.]—By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 2, the basis or standard for the county rate is to be founded and prepared according to the full and fair annual value of the property rateable to the relief of the poor in every parish within the county:—Held, that unoccupied houses capable of being rated were to be included in the valuation. Reg. v. Hammersmith, 7 W. R. 524.

—— Tenants in Ancient Demesne.]—The exemption of tenants in ancient demesne from parliamentary taxes and tallages is limited to taxes granted by parliament to the crown, and does not extend to local taxation levied under the authority of an act of parliament upon and for the benefit of particular portions of the community. Tenants in ancient demesne are not therefore, as such, exempt from payment of county rates. Reg. v. Aylesford, 2 El. & El. 538; 29 L. J., M. C. 83; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 297; 1 L. T. 328; 8 W. R. 185.

Mode of Assessment—Parish traversed by Canal.]—A local act enacted that a canal company should be rated to all parliamentary and parochial taxes and assessments for its lands and buildings in the same proportion as other lands and buildings lying near should be rated, and as the lands and buildings of the company would be rateable if they were the property of individuals in their natural capacity:—Held, that a parish in Buckinghamshire was to be assessed to the county rate on an estimate in which the company's lands and buildings were assessed as directed by the statute. Reg. v. Aylesbury-with-Walton, 9 Q. B. 261; 4 Railw. Cas. 315.

—— Equality of Rates.]—Where before 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, the county rates had been assessed upon the entire district or place of Hartishead-with-Clifton, but the two townships of H. and C. separately maintained their own poor, and were used to contribute towards the county rates in certain fixed proportions between themselves: yet, as that statute only establishes the accustomed proportions of contributions to the county rates as between the entire districts which were before assessed to such rates within the limits of the respective counties, and does not meddle with the proportions which had been used to be observed as between the subdivisions of those districts, this case was held to fall within the third section, which provides that, where there is no poor-rate in the parish, township, or place assessed to the county rates (by which must be understood no entire poor-rate co-extensive with the place or district assessed to the county rates), the county rates shall be raised by the petty constables in such manner as by law the poor-rate is to be assessed and levied, that is, by an equal rate on all the inhabitants. Rex v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 12 East, 117. And see Rex v. Austen, D. & R., N. P. C. 24.

D. PURPOSE OF RATES.

Legal Proceedings.]—If a fine is imposed on a county which the justices at the sessions think illegal, they may order the treasurer to defray the expenses of litigating the question out of the county stock. Rex v. Essex, 4 Term Rep. 591; 2 R. R. 470.

But they cannot order the costs of a prosecution for a misdemeanour carried on under the direction of magistrates to be allowed out of the county rates. Rex v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 7 Term Rep. 377.

Repayment of Loans.]—An order of sessions for assessing and levying a specific sum of money to enable a county treasurer to repay persons who had advanced money for county purposes, on the credit of the county rates, is bad on the face of it, inasmuch as it is a rate to reimburse, which the sessions have no authority to make. Rex v. Flintshire JJ., 5 B. & Ald. 761; 1 D. & R. 470; 24 R. R. 548. S. P., Rex v. Flintshire JJ., 2 D. & R. 843.

Damages for Riot—Exemption.]—By a local act for raising 21,000*l.* to pay the damages recovered of a hundred for the partial destruction of Nottingham Castle by rioters, the justices of the peace for the county were empowered to borrow the required sum by mortgage, or a sale of annuities secured on the proportion of the county rate chargeable on the inhabitants of the hundred. By s. 5, the justices were required to charge the proportion of the county rate to be raised upon the inhabitants of the hundred, not only with the interest of the money borrowed, but also with the payment of such further sum as should ensure the payment of the sum borrowed within seven years, or with the payment of such annuities for the like period as should be agreed to be paid or granted in respect of any part of the money so borrowed; and such sums should be assessed and recovered on the hundred in such manner as county rates are directed to be assessed and recovered, and should be paid and applied under the direction of the justices in discharge of the interest, and so many of the principal sums secured, or of such annuities, as such money would extend to discharge in each year, until the whole of the money should be paid. The 8th section provided a method for each parish to exempt itself from the operation of the act by paying its quota in the first instance, and for that purpose directed the justices, after ascertaining the amount to be borrowed, to specify and declare the sum to be paid or contributed by each parish as the quota or share of the whole sum so ascertained, and also to appoint a day on or before which the churchwardens or overseers of any such parish, desirous of paying the full amount of its quota, might pay the same to the person appointed as receiver under the act; and upon payment such parish should be discharged from all future payments relating to the integral sum whereof such quota should have been so paid, and from the interest, and from any expenses, &c.; and s. 9 enabled the churchwardens and overseers to raise the sum required as the quota of such parish by loan on the security of their parochial rates, to be repaid within seven years. In pursuance of s. 8, the justices fixed the quota of each parish in the hundred. Four availed themselves of the option of paying their quota. The parish of R. and thirty more did not; and the justices raised the required sum, after allowing for these payments, by granting annuities of 3,600*l.* per annum for seven years:—Held, that the effect of ss. 8 and 9 was to exempt from the operation of s. 5 those parishes only which paid their ascertained quota; that the annuities granted by the justices to pay the remainder were to be secured upon the portion of the county rate raised upon the hundred with the exception of those parishes which had paid; and that the county rate, with those exceptions, was liable in the aggregate to the incumbrance which was to be raised, in addition to the ordinary county rate, by order of the justices, in the same way in all respects as the other county rate is levied. Walker v. Sherwin, 9 M. & W. 266.

New Shire Hall.]—An act for building a new shire hall for a county enacted, that when the hall should be completed it should be for ever insured, supported, and maintained at the expense of the county and town, in the proportions following: that one-tenth part of the charges should be paid by the borough, and the remainder by the inhabitants of the county; that it should be lawful for the county justices to order the hall to be insured, supported, maintained, and repaired as they should think fit, and that they should and might order the expenses of the insurance and repairs to be paid in the proportion before mentioned. After the completion of the hall, 1,000*l.* was, in pursuance of the act, and of an order of county justices, expended in insuring and supporting the hall, and a tenth part thereof ordered to be paid by the borough, and the remainder by the inhabitants of the county. Subsequently a further sum of 28*l.* 2*s.* was ordered by the county justices to be laid out in repairing the hall and a tenth part of that sum was ordered to be paid by the borough, and the remainder by the inhabitants of the county:—Held, first, that the borough was bound to pay the proportion of the 1,000*l.* actually expended, although the borough had not been summoned to oppose the order of justices, nor had any notice that it was to be made. Hinckley v. Stafford Corporation, 6 Ex. 279; 20 L. J., Ex. 171.

Held, secondly, that the borough was bound to pay the proportion of the 28*l.* 2*s.*, although that sum had not been expended before action. Ib.

E. COUNTY TREASURER.

Security for Office.]—The 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, s. 6, does not make the giving the security a condition precedent to a person's becoming treasurer, or being responsible or accountable to the justices, but the appointment is complete without such security being given. Rex v. Patteson, 4 B. & Ad. 9; 1 N. & M. 612; 2 L. J., K. B. 33.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that the obligor had been nominated treasurer and receiver of the rates and assessments made for the county, upon giving security to the clerk of the peace for the due and faithful execution of the trusts reposed in him according to 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, was, that the obligor should, when he was thereto required by the justices of the peace assembled at quarter sessions, or the major part of them, or by any committee of the magistrates duly appointed for that purpose, by any order of the court of quarter sessions now made or hereafter to be made, well and truly account for all sums of money received by him by reason or on account of his office, and also should faithfully perform all the trusts reposed in him by virtue of the appointment:—Held, that, by the condition of this bond, the county treasurer was bound to account for moneys received by him in discharge of duties imposed by the act of parliament passed subsequently to 12 Geo. 2, c. 29. Farr v. Hollis, 9 B. & C. 315; 4 M. & Ry. 230; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 11.

Payments by—Allowance of.]—Where a sum of money not legally payable out of county rate was paid by a county treasurer under an order of two justices, made under colour of rules sanctioned by the sessions, authorising them to draw on the treasurer:—Held, that the sessions properly disallowed such payment, and that an order of a subsequent sessions, rescinding the previous order and allowing the payment, was bad on several grounds. Reg. v. Saunders, 2 C. L. R. 1689; 3 El. & Bl. 763; 24 L. J., M. C. 45; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 86; 2 W. R. 492.

Liability to make Payments—Police Expenses—Metropolitan District.]—Under 27 Geo. 2, c. 3; 10 Geo. 4, c. 44; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, and 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, if a prisoner is committed for trial for felony to a county gaol for an offence committed in the county within the metropolitan police district, the committal being by a county magistrate within such county and district, and the warrant is delivered to a metropolitan police constable, a county magistrate may order repayment by the county treasurer to the metropolitan police constable of the expenses incurred by him in conveying the prisoner to the gaol, the prisoner himself having no funds available for that purpose; and the county treasurer is liable to an action if he refuses to pay under such order. Leverick v. Mercer, 14 Q. B. 759; 22 L. J., M. C. 81; 1 W. R. 180.

So in the case of a committal for misdemeanor. Ib.

So in the case of summary conviction and sentence of fine and imprisonment in default of payment, and committal upon such default by order, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 23. Ib.

So in the case of a remand on a charge of felony or misdemeanor, whether the prisoner is ultimately committed for trial or not. Ib.

So where the warrant of commitment is directed only to the keeper of the county gaol. Ib.

So where the magistrate who issues the warrant is a police magistrate sitting in a metropolitan police court under 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71. Ib.

So where the magistrate who makes the order on the treasurer is such a police magistrate. Ib.

So where there is no express direction of the warrant. Ib.

So where the committal is for a refusal to enter into recognizances to appear at sessions, and to keep the peace in the meantime. Ib.

So where the committal is for further examination on a charge of felony or misdemeanor, but the prisoner is afterwards summarily convicted of misdemeanor. Ib.

——When Constable not entitled.]—But where a prisoner is remanded for examination and the keeper of the gaol delivers such prisoner to a constable to be conveyed before the magistrates, the constable is not entitled to be remunerated from the county rate for the expense of such conveyance. Though he would be so entitled if he conveyed him before the magistrate, by order of the magistrate. Ib.

——County Surveyor's Bill—Mandamus—Discretion of Justices.]—The court will not grant a mandamus to compel county justices to make an order on the county treasurer for the payment of the amount of the county surveyor's bill for estimates and expenses after deducting the items objected to by the finance committee, the costs and charges to be allowed being in the magistrates' discretion. Reg. v. Southampton JJ., 2 W. R. 409.

F. PROCEEDINGS.

1. Before the Assessment Committee.

Conduct of Business.]—All business relating to the assessment, application and management of the county rate, must be transacted by the justices in open court; but no ratepayer, or person not being a member of the court, is entitled in any way to interfere with the exercise of the jurisdiction of the justices, in respect of such assessment. Rex v. Nottingham JJ., 5 N. & M. 160; 3 A. & E. 500; 1 H. & W. 318; 4 L. J., M. C. 113.

Power to Summon Witnesses.]—Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 7, the committee has power to summon and examine private persons, and to require them to produce any documents in their possession which are necessary to enable the committee to ascertain the value of the property. Dickson v. Doubleday, 3 El. & El. 501; 30 L. J., M. C. 99; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 705; 3 L. T. 663; 9 W. R. 272.

2. Production and Inspection of Accounts.

Mandamus for.]—A mandamus will not go to inspect the accounts relating to county rates, on an application made to the court of quarter sessions for the inspection, whilst the court was in actual discussion upon the accounts. Rex v. Nottingham JJ., 5 N. & M. 160; 3 A. & E. 500; 1 H. & W. 318; 4 L. J., M. C. 113.

A mandamus was granted, commanding the justices and clerk of the peace of a borough to permit the attorney on behalf of several persons who contributed to the county rates, to inspect and take copies of the last two rates made by the justices, and all orders made for the expenditure of the same and the several orders of sessions, made thereon, and other proceedings and documents relating thereto. Rex v. Leicester JJ., 7 D. & R. 370; 4 B. & C. 891.

But before such writ can be obtained, an application for such inspection must be made to the justices assembled at quarter sessions. Ib.

Who Entitled to.]—The ratepayers of a county have neither at common law nor by statute any right to inspect and copy the bills of charges of county officers, when they are deposited with the clerk of the peace among the county records, in pursuance of 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, s. 8. The right of inspection is confined to the justices of the peace for the county. Rex v. Staffordshire JJ., 1 N. & P. 260; 6 A. & E. 84; 6 L. J., M. C. 65.

3. Appeal.

Time for.]—An appeal against a county rate might be made at any time under 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 14, though the rate was made under a prior local act, which required the appeal to be made within a certain time. Rex v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 7 B. & C. 3; 9 D. & R. 777; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 93.

Notice of.]—It is not necessary in a notice of appeal against a county rate to specify the grounds of appeal; but, if the appellant states in his notice, as causes of appeal, matters which are not so, the court of quarter sessions ought to adjourn the appeal, if they think the respondents have been misled, or, otherwise, to hear it. Rex v. Westmoreland JJ., 10 B. & C. 226; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 70.

Grounds for.]—It is no ground of appeal against a county rate, that individuals in one parish are rated in higher proportion than in another. Ib.

In an appeal against a county rate, the party appealing must, in his notice of appeal, state that he is aggrieved, or state that from which it follows of necessity that he is so; and where a notice of appeal against such a rate stated, as the ground of appeal, that the county rate was unequal and defective, inasmuch as the appellant parish was charged and assessed in the rate at a higher proportion of the pound sterling, according to the fair annual value of the rateable property, than the respondent parish; and the sessions, upon the hearing of the appeal, received the evidence of surveyors as to the annual value of the rateable property of both parishes, and amended the rate by altering the assessment according to the annual value of the two parishes according to the evidence so taken, but leaving the statement of the annual value of the two to remain as before:—Held, that the sessions were not warranted by the notice of appeal in so amending the rate. Rex v. Blackawton, 10 B. & C. 792; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 123.

Rate in Fixed Proportions—Right of Appeal.]—A power of appeal was given by 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 14, against a county rate made in fixed proportions, and invariably adopted for a series of years. Rex v. York JJ., 2 B. & C. 771.

—— Power to Vary.]—The sessions have no power to vary the proportion in which the county rate has usually been assessed on the several parishes. Rex v. St. Paul's, Covent Garden. Cald. 158.

A forged instrument cannot be ratified by the person whose name is forged, and he cannot adopt it so as to make himself liable thereon. Ib.

There can be no ratification of an invalid transaction where the person performing the supposed act of ratification has been kept, by the conduct of the party in whose favour it is made, unaware of the invalidity of the first transaction, and has not, at the time of the supposed ratification, the means of forming an independent judgment. Sweeny v. King, 5 H.
